

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. You can search through the full text of this book on the web at <http://books.google.com/>

NYPL RESEARCH LIBRARIES

3 3433 00604889 0

The New York Public Library
ASTOR LENOX AND TILDEN FOUNDATIONS

IFD
63-011

FRIEDRICH SCHILLER.

COMPLETE WORKS
OF
T H O M A S
C A R L Y L E

The Life of
Friedrich Schiller

Comprehending an Examination of his Works

I L L U S T R A T E D

NEW YORK
P: F: COLLIER & SON
: M C M I :

CONTENTS.

FRIEDRICH SCHILLER.

Part I.

	PAGE
SCHILLER'S YOUTH (1759-1784)	3

Part II.

FROM SCHILLER'S SETTLEMENT AT MANNHEIM TO HIS SETTLE- MENT AT JENA (1783-1790)	42
---	----

Part III.

FROM HIS SETTLEMENT AT JENA TO HIS DEATH (1790-1805) . .	98
--	----

SUPPLEMENT OF 1872.

SAUPE'S "SCHILLER AND HIS FATHER'S HOUSEHOLD."

I. THE FATHER	203
II. THE MOTHER	248
III. THE SISTERS	267

APPENDIX.

	PAGE
1. DANIEL SCHUBART	279
2. LETTERS OF SCHILLER	289
3. FRIENDSHIP WITH GOETHE	304
4. DEATH OF GUSTAVUS ADOLPHUS	306

INDEX	311
-----------------	-----

FRIEDRICH SCHILLER.

PART I.

SCHILLER'S YOUTH.

1759-1784.

Among the writers of the concluding part of the last century there is none more deserving of our notice than Friedrich Schiller. Distinguished alike for the splendor of his intellectual faculties, and the elevation of his tastes and feelings, he has left behind him in his works a noble emblem of these great qualities: and the reputation which he thus enjoys, and has merited, excites our attention the more, on considering the circumstances under which it was acquired. Schiller had peculiar difficulties to strive with, and his success has likewise been peculiar. Much of his life was deformed by inquietude and disease, and it terminated at middle age; he composed in a language then scarcely settled into form, or admitted to a rank among the cultivated languages of Europe: yet his writings are remarkable for their extent and variety as well as their intrinsic excellence; and his own countrymen are not his only, or perhaps his principal admirers. It is difficult to collect or interpret the general voice; but the World, no less than Germany, seems already to have dignified him with the reputation of a classic; to have enrolled him among that select number whose works belong not wholly to any age or nation, but who, having instructed their own contemporaries, are claimed as instructors by the great family of mankind, and set apart for many centuries from the common oblivion which soon overtakes the mass of authors, as it does the mass of other men.

Such has been the high destiny of Schiller. His history and character deserve our study for more than one reason. A natural and harmless feeling attracts us towards such a subject; we are anxious to know how so great a man passed through the world, how he lived, and moved, and had his being; and the question, if properly investigated, might yield advantage as well as pleasure. It would be interesting to discover by what gifts and what employment of them he reached the eminence on which we now see him; to follow the steps of his intellectual and moral culture; to gather from his life and works some picture of himself. It is worth inquiring, whether he, who could represent noble actions so well, did himself act nobly; how those powers of intellect, which in philosophy and art achieved so much, applied themselves to the every-day emergencies of life; how the generous ardor, which delights us in his poetry, displayed itself in the common intercourse between man and man. It would at once instruct and gratify us if we could understand him thoroughly, could transport ourselves into his circumstances outward and inward, could see as he saw, and feel as he felt.

But if the various utility of such a task is palpable enough, its difficulties are not less so. We should not lightly think of comprehending the very simplest character, in all its bearings; and it might argue vanity to boast of even a common acquaintance with one like Schiller's. Such men as he are misunderstood by their daily companions, much more by the distant observer, who gleans his information from scanty records, and casual notices of characteristic events, which biographers are often too indolent or injudicious to collect, and which the peaceful life of a man of letters usually supplies in little abundance. The published details of Schiller's history are meagre and insufficient; and his writings, like those of every author, can afford but a dim and dubious copy of his mind. Nor is it easy to decipher even this, with moderate accuracy. The haze of a foreign language, of foreign manners, and modes of thinking strange to us, confuses and obscures the sight, often magnifying what is trivial, softening what is rude, and sometimes hiding or distorting what is beautiful. To take the dimensions of Schiller's mind were a hard enterprise, in any case; harder still with these impediments.

Accordingly we do not, in this place, pretend to attempt it: we have no finished portrait of his character to offer, no formal estimate of his works. It will be enough for us if, in glancing over his life, we can satisfy a simple curiosity, about the fortunes and chief peculiarities of a man connected with us by a bond so kindly as that of the teacher to the taught, the giver to the receiver of mental delight; if, in wandering through his intellectual creation, we can enjoy once more the magnificent and fragrant beauty of that fairy land, and express our feelings, where we do not aim at judging and deciding.

Johann Christoph Friedrich Schiller was a native of Marbach, a small town of Würtemberg, situated on the banks of the Neckar. He was born on the 10th of November, 1759, — a few months later than our own Robert Burns. Schiller's early culture was favored by the dispositions, but obstructed by the outward circumstances of his parents. Though removed above the pressure of poverty, their station was dependent and fluctuating; it involved a frequent change of place and plan. Johann Caspar Schiller, the father, had been a surgeon in the Bavarian army; he served in the Netherlands during the Succession War. After his return home to Würtemberg, he laid aside the medical profession, having obtained a commission of ensign and adjutant under his native Prince. This post he held successively in two regiments; he had changed into the second, and was absent on active duty when Friedrich was born. The Peace of Paris put an end to his military employment; but Caspar had shown himself an intelligent, unassuming and useful man, and the Duke of Würtemberg was willing to retain him in his service. The laying out of various nurseries and plantations in the pleasure-grounds of Ludwigsburg and Solitude was intrusted to the retired soldier, now advanced to the rank of captain: he removed from one establishment to another, from time to time; and continued in the Duke's pay till death. In his latter years he resided chiefly at Ludwigsburg.

This mode of life was not the most propitious for educating such a boy as Friedrich; but the native worth of his parents did more than compensate for the disadvantages of their worldly condition and their limited acquirements in knowledge. The benevolence, the modest and prudent integrity, the true devoutness of these good people shone forth at an after period, expanded and beautified in the character of their son; his heart was nourished by a constant exposure to such influences, and thus the better part of his education prospered well. The mother was a woman of many household virtues; to a warm affection for her children and husband, she joined a degree of taste and intelligence which is of much rarer occurrence. She is said to have been a lover of poetry; in particular an admiring reader of Utz and Gellert, writers whom it is creditable for one in her situation to have relished.¹ Her kindness and tenderness of heart peculiarly endeared her to Friedrich. Her husband appears to have been a person of great probity and meekness of temper, sincerely desirous to approve himself a useful member of society, and to do his duty conscientiously to all men. The seeds of many valuable qualities had been sown in him by nature; and though his early life had been unfavorable for their cultivation, he at a late period labored, not without success, to remedy this disadvantage. Such branches of science and philosophy as lay within his reach, he studied with diligence, whenever his professional employments left him leisure; on a subject connected with the latter he became an author.² But what chiefly distinguished him was the practice of a sincere piety, which seems to have diffused itself over all his feelings, and given to his clear and honest character that calm elevation which, in such a case, is its natural result. As his religion mingled itself with every motive and action of his life, the wish which in all his wanderings lay nearest his heart, the wish for the education of his son, was likely to be deeply tinged with it. There is yet preserved, in his handwriting, a prayer composed in advanced age, wherein he mentions how, at the child's birth, he had entreated the great Father of all, "to supply in strength of spirit what must needs be wanting in outward instruction." The gray-haired man, who had lived to see the maturity of his boy, could now express his solemn thankfulness, that "God had heard the prayer of a mortal."

¹ She was of humble descent and little education, the daughter of a baker in Kodweis.

² His book is entitled Die Baumzucht im Grossen (the Cultivation of Trees on the Grand Scale); it came to a second edition in 1806.

Friedrich followed the movements of his parents for some time; and had to gather the elements of learning from various masters. Perhaps it was in part owing to this circumstance, that his progress, though respectable, or more, was so little commensurate with what he afterwards became, or with the capacities of which even his earliest years gave symptoms. Thoughtless and gay, as a boy is wont to be, he would now and then dissipate his time in childish sports, forgetful that the stolen charms of ball and leap-frog must be dearly bought by reproaches: but occasionally he was overtaken with feelings of deeper import, and used to express the agitations of his little mind in words and actions, which were first rightly interpreted when they were called to mind long afterwards. His schoolfellows can now recollect that even his freaks had sometimes a poetic character; that a certain earnestness of temper, a frank integrity, an appetite for things grand or moving, was discernible across all the caprices of his boyhood. Once, it is said, during a tremendous thunderstorm, his father missed him in the young group within doors; none of the sisters could tell what was become of Fritz, and the old man grew at length so anxious that he was forced to go out in quest of him. Fritz was scarcely past the age of infancy, and knew not the dangers of a scene so awful. His father found him at last, in a solitary place of the neighborhood, perched on the branch of a tree, gazing at the tempestuous face of the sky, and watching the flashes as in succession they spread their lurid gleam over it. To the reprimands of his parent, the whimpering truant pleaded in extenuation, "that the light ning was very beautiful, and that he wished to see where it was coming from!" — Such anecdotes, we have long known, are in themselves of small value : the present one has the additional defect of being somewhat dubious in respect of authenticity. We have ventured to give it, as it came to us, notwithstanding. The picture of the boy Schiller, contemplating the thunder, is not without a certain interest, for such as know the man.

Schiller's first teacher was Moser, pastor and schoolmaster in the village of Lorch, where the parents resided from the sixth to the ninth year of their son. This person deserves mention for the influence he exerted on the early history of his pupil: he seems to have given his name to the Priest "Moser" in the Robbers; his spiritual calling, and the conversation of his son, himself afterwards a preacher, are supposed to have suggested to Schiller the idea of consecrating himself to the clerical profession. This idea, which laid hold of and cherished some predominant though vague propensities of the boy's disposition, suited well with the religious sentiments of his parents, and was soon formed into a settled purpose. In the public school at Ludwigsburg, whither the family had now removed, his studies were regulated with this view; and he underwent, in four successive years, the annual examination before the Stuttgart Commission, to which young men destined for the Church are subjected in that country. Schiller's temper was naturally devout; with a delicacy of feeling which tended towards bashfulness and timidity, there was mingled in him a fervid impetuosity, which was ever struggling through its concealment, and indicating that he felt deeply and strongly, as well as delicately. Such a turn of mind easily took the form of religion, prescribed to it by early example and early affections, as well as nature. Schiller looked forward to the sacred profession with alacrity: it was the serious day-dream of all his boyhood, and much of his youth. As yet, however, the project hovered before him at a great distance, and the path to its fulfilment offered him but little entertainment. His studies did not seize his attention firmly; he followed them from a sense of duty, not of pleasure. Virgil and Horace he learned to construe accurately; but is said to have taken no deep interest in their poetry. The tenderness and meek beauty of the first, the humor and sagacity and capricious pathos of the last, the matchless elegance of both, would of course escape his inexperienced perception; while the matter of their writings must have appeared frigid and shallow to a mind so susceptible. He loved rather to meditate on the splendor of the Ludwigsburg theatre, which had inflamed his imagination when he first saw it in his ninth year, and given shape and materials to many of his subsequent reveries.¹ Under these circumstances, his progress, with all his natural ability was not so very striking: the teachers did not feel how and when to visit him with their severities; yet still there was a respectful silence in his presence, which, joined to his modest and well taught manner, made him appear well of him. The Stuttgart Jesuits have marked him in their records with the respectful formula of reverend, or, at worst, of illustrious. They usually designate him as "a boy of good hope," juvis bonæ spei.

¹ The first display of his poetic gifts occurred also in his ninth year, but took its rise in a much humbler and less common source than the inspiration of the stage. His biographers have recorded this small event with a conscientious accuracy, second only to that of Boswell and Hawkins in regard to the Lichfield duck. "The little tale," says one of them, "is worth relating; the rather that, after an interval of more than twenty years, Schiller himself, on meeting with his early comrade (the late Dr. Elwert of Kantstadt) for the first time since their boyhood, reminded him of the adventure, recounting the circumstances with great minuteness and glee. It is as follows. Once in 1768, Elwert and he had to repeat their catechism together on a certain day publicly in the church. Their teacher, an ill-conditioned, narrow-minded pietist, had previously threatened them with a thorough flogging if they missed even a single word. To make the matter worse, this very teacher chanced to be the person whose turn it was to catechise on the appointed day. Both the boys began their answers with dismayed hearts and faltering tongues; yet they succeeded in accomplishing the task; and were in consequence rewarded by the mollified pedagogue with two kreutzers apiece. Four kreutzers of ready cash was a sum of no common magnitude; how it should be disposed of formed a serious question for the parties interested. Schiller moved that they should go to Harteneck, a hamlet in the neighborhood, and have a dish of curds-and-cream: his partner assented; but alas! in Harteneck no particle of curds or cream was to be had. Schiller then made offer for a quarter-cake of cheese; but for this four entire kreutzers were demanded, leaving nothing whatever in reserve for bread! Twice baffled, the little gastronomes, unsatisfied in stomach, wandered on to Neckarweihingen; where, at length, though not till after much inquiry, they did obtain a comfortable mess of curds-and-cream, served up in a gay platter, and silver spoons to eat it with. For all this, moreover, they were charged but three kreutzers; so that there was still one left to provide them with a bunch of St. John grapes. Exhilarated by such liberal cheer, Schiller rose into a glow of inspiration: having left the village, he mounted with his comrade to the adjacent height, which overlooks both

This good hope was not, however, destined to be realized in the way they expected. Numerous reasons which changed the direction of Schiller's passions, and threatened for a time to prevent the success of them altogether. The Duke of Württemberg had lately founded a Free Seminary for certain branches of professional education: it was first set up at Schönbach, one of his hunting residences, and had now been transferred to Stuttgart, where, under an improved form, and with the name of Frei-Seminar, we believe it still exists. The Duke proposed to give the sons of his military officers a preferable claim to the benefits of this institution: and having formed a good opinion both of Schiller and his father, he invited the former to profit by this opportunity. The offer occasioned great embarrassment: the young man and his parents were alike determined in favor of the Church, a project with which this new one was inconsistent. Their embarrassment was but increased when the Duke, on learning the nature of their scruples, desired them to think well before they decided. It was out of fear and with reluctance that his proposal was accepted. Schiller enrolled himself in 1773; and turned, with a heavy heart from freedom and cherished hopes, to Greek, and seclusion, and Law.

His anticipations proved to be but too just: the six years which he spent in this establishment were the most harassing and comfortless of his life. The Stuttgart system of education seems to have been formed on the principle, not of cherishing and correcting nature, but of rooting it out, and supplying its place with something better. The process of teaching and living was conducted with the stiff formality of military drilling; everything went on by statute and ordinance, there was no scope for the exercise of free-will, no allowance for the varieties of original structure. A scholar might possess what instincts or capacities he pleased; the "regulations of the school" took no account of this; he must fit himself into the common mould, which, like the old Giant's bed, stood there, appointed by superior authority, to be filled alike by the great and the little. The same strict and narrow course of reading and composition was marked out for each beforehand, and it was by stealth if he read or wrote anything beside. Their domestic economy was regulated in the same spirit as their preceptorial: it consisted of the same sedulous exclusion of all that could border on pleasure, or give any exercise to choice. The pupils were kept apart from the conversation or sight of any person but their teachers; none ever got beyond the precincts of despotism to snatch even a fearful joy; their very amusements proceeded by the word of command.

Hartneck and Neckarweilungen: and there in a truly poetic effusion he pronounced his malediction on the creamless region, bestowing with the same solemnity his blessing on the one which had afforded him that savory refreshment." Friedrich von Schiller's Leben. Hambourg, 1817, p. 11.

How grievous all this must have been, it is easy to conceive. To Schiller it was more grievous than to any other. Of an ardent and impetuous yet delicate nature, whilst his discontentment devoured him internally, he was too modest and timid to give it the relief of utterance by deeds or words. Locked up within himself, he suffered deeply, but without complaining. Some of his letters written during this period have been preserved: they exhibit the ineffectual struggles of a fervid and busy mind veiling its many chagrins under a certain dreary patience, which only shows them more painfully. He pored over his lexicons and grammars, and insipid tasks, with an artificial composure; but his spirit pined within him like a captive's, when he looked forth into the cheerful world, or recollected the affection of parents, the hopes and frolicsome enjoyments of past years. The misery he endured in this severe and lonely mode of existence strengthened or produced in him a habit of constraint and shyness, which clung to his character through life.

The study of Law, for which he had never felt any predilection, naturally grew in his mind to be the representative of all these evils, and his distaste for it went on increasing. On this point he made no secret of his feelings. One of the exercises, yearly prescribed to every scholar, was a written delineation of his own character, according to his own views of it, to be delivered publicly at an appointed time: Schiller, on the first of these exhibitions, ventured to state his persuasion, that he was not made to be a jurist, but called rather by his inclinations and faculties to the clerical profession. This statement, of course, produced no effect; he was forced to continue the accustomed course, and his dislike for Law kept fast approaching to absolute disgust. In 1775, he was fortunate enough to get it relinquished, though at the expense of adopting another employment, for which, in different circumstances, he would hardly have declared himself. The study of Medicine, for which a new institution was about this time added to the Stuttgart school, had no attractions for Schiller: he accepted it only as a galling servitude in exchange for one more galling. His mind was bent on higher objects; and he still felt all his present vexations aggravated by the thought, that his fairest expectations from the future had been sacrificed to worldly convenience, and the humblest necessities of life.

Meanwhile the youth was waxing into manhood, and the fetters of discipline lay heavier on him, as his powers grew stronger, and his eyes became open to the stirring and varied interests of the world, now unfolding itself to him under new and more glowing colors. As yet he contemplated the scene only from afar, and it seemed but the more gorgeous on that account. He longed to mingle in its busy current, and delighted to view the image of its movements in his favorite poets and historians. Plutarch and Shakspeare;¹ the writings of Klopstock, Lessing, Garve, Herder, Gerstenberg, Goethe, and a multitude of others, which marked the dawning literature of Germany, he had studied with a secret avidity: they gave him vague ideas of men and life, or awakened in him splendid visions of literary glory. Klopstock's Messias, combined with his own religious tendencies, had early turned him to sacred poetry: before the end of his fourteenth year, he had finished what he called an "epic poem," entitled Moses. The extraordinary popularity of Gerstenberg's Ugolino, and Goethe's Götz von Berlichingen, next directed his attention to the drama; and as admiration in a mind like his, full of blind activity and nameless aspirings, naturally issues in imitation, he plunged with equal ardor into this new subject, and produced his first tragedy, Cosmo von Medicis, some fragments of which he retained and inserted in his Robbers. A mass of minor performances, preserved among his papers, or published in the Magazines of the time, serve sufficiently to show that his mind had already dimly discovered its destination, and was striving with a restless vehemence to reach it, in spite of every obstacle.

¹ The feeling produced in him by Shakspeare he described long afterwards: it throws light on the general state of his temper and tastes. "When I first, at a very early age," he says, "became acquainted with this poet, I felt indignant at his coldness, his hardness of heart, which permitted him in the most making pathos to utter jests, — to mar, by the introduction of a fool, the soul-

Such obstacles were in his case neither few nor small. Schiller felt the mortifying truth, that to arrive at the ideal world, he must first gain a footing in the real; that he might entertain high thoughts and longings, might reverence the beauties of nature and grandeur of mind, but was born to toil for his daily bread. Poetry he loved with the passionateness of a first affection; but he could not live by it; he honored it too highly to wish to live by it. His prudence told him that he must yield to stern necessity, must "forsake the balmy climate of Pindus for the Greenland of a barren and dreary science of terms;" and he did not hesitate to obey. His professional studies were followed with a rigid though searching scenes of Hamlet, Lear, and other pieces; which now kept him still where my sensibilities hastened forward, now drove him carelessly onward where I would so gladly have lingered. . . . He was the object of my reverence and zealous study for years before I could love himself. I was not yet capable of comprehending Nature at first-hand: I had but learned to admire her image, reflected in the understanding, and put in order by rules." Werke, Bd. viii. 2, p. 77.

reluctant fidelity ; it was only in leisure gained by superior diligence that he could yield himself to more favorite pursuits. Genius was to serve as the ornament of his inferior qualities, not as an excuse for the want of them.

But if, when such sacrifices were required, it was painful to comply with the dictates of his own reason, it was still more so to endure the harsh and superfluous restrictions of his teachers. He felt it hard enough to be driven from the enchantments of poetry by the dull realities of duty ; but it was intolerable and degrading to be hemmed in still farther by the caprices of severe and formal pedagogues. Schiller brooded gloomily over the constraints and hardships of his situation. Many plans he formed for deliverance. Sometimes he would escape in secret to catch a glimpse of the free and busy world to him forbidden : sometimes he laid schemes for utterly abandoning a place which he abhorred, and trusting to fortune for the rest. Often the sight of his class-books and school-apparatus became irksome beyond endurance ; he would feign sickness, that he might be left in his own chamber to write poetry and pursue his darling studies without hindrance. Such artifices did not long avail him ; the masters noticed the regularity of his sickness, and sent him tasks to be done while it lasted. Even Schiller's patience could not brook this ; his natural timidity gave place to indignation ; he threw the paper of exercises at the feet of the messenger, and said sternly that "here he would choose his own studies."

Under such corroding and continual vexations an ordinary spirit would have sunk at length, would have gradually given up its loftier aspirations, and sought refuge in vicious indulgence, or at best have sullenly harnessed itself into the yoke, and plodded through existence, weary, discontented, and broken, ever casting back a hankering look upon the dreams of youth, and ever without power to realize them. But Schiller was no ordinary character, and did not act like one. Beneath a cold and simple exterior, dignified with no artificial attractions, and marred in its native amiableness by the incessant obstruction, the isolation and painful destitutions under which he lived, there was concealed a burning energy of soul, which no obstruction could extinguish. The hard circumstances of his fortune had prevented the natural development of his mind; his faculties had been cramped and misdirected; but they had gathered strength by opposition and the habit of self-dependence which it encouraged. His thoughts, unguided by a teacher, had sounded into the depths of his own nature and the mysteries of his own fate; his feelings and passions, unshared by any other heart, had been driven back upon his own, where, like the volcanic fire that smoulders and fuses in secret, they accumulated till their force grew irresistible.

Hitherto Schiller had passed for an unprofitable, a discontented and a disobedient Boy: but the time was now come when the gyves of school discipline could no longer cripple and distort the giant might of his nature: he stood forth as a Man, and wrenched asunder his fetters with a force that was felt at the extremities of Europe. The publication of the Robbers forms an era not only in Schiller's history, but in the Literature of the World; and there seems no doubt that, but for so mean a cause as the perverted discipline of the Stuttgart school, we had never seen this tragedy. Schiller commenced it in his nineteenth year; and the circumstances under which it was composed are to be traced in all its parts. It is the production of a strong untutored spirit, consumed by an activity for which there is no outlet, indignant at the barriers which restrain it, and grappling darkly with the phantoms to which its own energy thus painfully imprisoned gives being. A rude simplicity, combined with a gloomy and overpowering force, are its chief characteristics; they remind us of the defective cultivation, as well as of the fervid and harassed feelings of its author. Above all, the latter quality is visible; the tragic interest of the Robbers is deep throughout, so deep that frequently it borders upon horror. A grim inexpiable Fate is made the ruling principle: it envelops and overshadows the whole; and under its lowering influence, the fiercest efforts of human will appear but like flashes that illuminate the wild scene with a brief and terrible splendor, and are lost forever in the darkness. The unsearchable abysses of man's destiny are laid open before us, black and profound and appalling, as they seem to the young mind when it first attempts to explore them : the obstacles that thwart our faculties and wishes, the deceitfulness of hope, the nothingness of existence, are sketched in the sable colors so natural to the enthusiast when he first ventures upon life, and compares the world that is without him to the anticipations that were within.

Karl von Moor is a character such as young poets always delight to contemplate or delineate ; to Schiller the analogy of their situations must have peculiarly recommended him. Moor is animated into action by feelings similar to those under which his author was then suffering and longing to act. Gifted with every noble quality of manhood in overflowing abundance, Moor's first expectations of life, and of the part he was to play in it, had been glorious as a poet's dream. But the minor dexterities of management were not among his endowments ; in his eagerness to reach the goal, he had forgotten that the course is a labyrinthic maze, beset with difficulties, of which some may be surmounted, some can only be evaded, many can be neither. Hurried on by the headlong impetuosity of his temper, he entangles himself in these perplexities ; and thinks to penetrate them, not by skill and patience, but by open force. He is baffled, deceived, and still more deeply involved ; but injury and disappointment exasperate rather than instruct him. He had expected heroes, and he finds mean men ; friends, and he finds smiling traitors to tempt him aside, to profit by his aberrations, and lead him onward to destruction : he had dreamed of magnanimity and every generous principle, he finds that prudence is the only virtue sure of its reward. Too fiery by nature, the intensity of his sufferings has now maddened him still farther : he is himself incapable of calm reflection, and there is no counsellor at hand to assist him ; none, whose sympathy might assuage his miseries, whose wisdom might teach him to remedy or to endure them. He is stung by fury into action, and his activity is at once blind and tremendous. Since the world is not the abode of unmixed integrity, he looks upon it as a den of thieves ; since its institutions may obstruct the advancement of worth, and screen delinquency from punishment, he regards the social union as a pestilent nuisance.

the mischiefs of which it is fitting that he in his degree should do his best to repair, by means however violent. Revenge is the mainspring of his conduct; but he ennobles it in his own eyes, by giving it the color of a disinterested concern for the maintenance of justice, — the abasement of vice from its high places, and the exaltation of suffering virtue. Single against the universe, to appeal to the primary law of the stronger, to "grasp the scales of Providence in a mortal's hand," is frantic and wicked; but Moor has a force of soul which makes it likewise awful. The interest lies in the conflict of this gigantic soul against the fearful odds which at length overwhelm it, and hurry it down to the darkest depths of ruin.

The original conception of such a work as this betrays the inexperience no less than the vigor of youth: its execution gives a similar testimony. The characters of the piece, though traced in glowing colors, are outlines more than pictures: the few features we discover in them are drawn with elaborate minuteness; but the rest are wanting. Everything indicates the condition of a keen and powerful intellect, which had studied men in books only; had, by self-examination and the perusal of history, detected and strongly seized some of the leading peculiarities of human nature; but was yet ignorant of all the minute and more complex principles which regulate men's conduct in actual life, and which only a knowledge of living men can unfold. If the hero of the play forms something like an exception to this remark, he is the sole exception, and for reasons alluded to above: his character resembles the author's own. Even with Karl, the success is incomplete: with the other personages it is far more so. Franz von Moor, the villain of the Piece, is an amplified copy of Iago and Richard; but the copy is distorted as well as amplified. There is no air of reality in Franz: he is a villain of theory, who studies to accomplish his object by the most diabolical expedients, and soothes his conscience by arguing with the priest in favor of atheism and materialism; not the genuine villain of Shakspeare and Nature, who employs his reasoning powers in creating new schemes and devising new means, and conquers remorse by avoiding it,— by fixing his hopes and fears on the more pressing emergencies of worldly business. So reflective a miscreant as Franz could not exist: his calculations would lead him to honesty, if merely because it was the best policy.

Amelia, the only female in the piece, is a beautiful creation; but as imaginary as her persecutor Franz. Still and exalted in her warm enthusiasm, devoted in her love to Moor, she moves before us as the inhabitant of a higher and simpler world than ours. "He sails on troubled seas," she exclaims, with a confusion of metaphors, which it is easy to pardon, "he sails on troubled seas, Amelia's love sails with him; he wanders in pathless deserts, Amelia's love makes the burning sand grow green beneath him, and the stunted shrubs to blossom; the south scorches his bare head, his feet are pinched by the northern snow, stormy hail beats round his temples — Amelia's love rocks him to sleep in the storm. Seas, and hills, and horizons, are between us; but souls escape from their clay prisons, and meet in the paradise of love!" She is a fair vision, the beau idéal of a poet's first mistress; but has few mortal lineaments.

Similar defects are visible in almost all the other characters. Moor, the father, is a weak and fond old man, who could have arrived at gray hairs in such a state of ignorance nowhere but in a work of fiction. The inferior banditti are painted with greater vigor, yet still in rugged and ill-shapen forms; their individuality is kept up by an extravagant exaggeration of their several peculiarities. Schiller himself pronounced a severe but not unfounded censure, when he said of this work, in a maturer age, that his chief fault was in "presuming to delineate men two years before he had met one."

His skill in the art of composition surpassed his knowledge of the world; but that too was far from perfection. Schiller's style in the Robbers is partly of a kind with the incidents and feelings which it represents; strong and astonishing, and sometimes wildly grand; but likewise inartificial, coarse, and grotesque. His sentences, in their rude emphasis, come down like the club of Hercules; the stroke is often of a crushing force, but its sweep is irregular and awkward. When Moor is involved in the deepest intricacies of the old question, necessity and free-will, and has convinced himself that he is but an engine in the hands of some dark and irresistible power, he cries out: "Why has my Perillus made of me a brazen bull to roast men in my glowing belly?" The stage-direction says, "shaken with horror:" no wonder that he shook!

Schiller has admitted these faults, and explained their origin, in strong and sincere language, in a passage of which we have already quoted the conclusion. "A singular miscalculation of nature," he says, "had combined my poetical tendencies with the place of my birth. Any disposition to poetry did violence to the laws of the institution where I was educated, and contradicted the plan of its founder. For eight years my enthusiasm struggled with military discipline; but the passion for poetry is vehement and fiery as a first love. What discipline was meant to extinguish, it blew into a flame. To escape from arrangements that tortured me, my heart sought refuge in the world of ideas, when as yet I was unacquainted with the world of realities, from which iron bars excluded me. I was unacquainted with men; for the four hundred that lived with me were but repetitions of the same creature, true casts of one single mould, and of that very mould which plastic nature solemnly disclaimed. . . . Thus circumstanced, a stranger to human characters and human fortunes, to hit the medium line between angels and devils was an enterprise in which I necessarily failed. In attempting it, my pencil necessarily brought out a monster, for which by good fortune the world had no original, and which I would not wish to be immortal, except to perpetuate an example of the offspring which Genius in its unnatural union with Thralldom may give to the world. I allude to the Robbers."¹

Yet with all these excrescences and defects, the unbounded popularity of the Robbers is not difficult to account for. To every reader, the excitement of emotion must be a chief consideration; to the mass of readers it is the sole one: and the grand secret of moving others is, that the poet be himself moved. We have seen how well Schiller's temper and circumstances qualified him to fulfil this condition: treatment, not of his choosing, had raised his own mind into something like a Pythian frenzy; and his genius, untrained as it was, sufficed to communicate abundance of the feeling to others. Perhaps more than abundance: to judge from our individual impression, the perusal of the Robbers produces an effect powerful even to pain; we are absolutely wounded by the catastrophe; our minds are darkened and distressed, as if we had witnessed the execution of a criminal. It is in vain that we rebel against the inconsistencies and crudities of the work: its faults are redeemed by the living energy that pervades it. We may exclaim against the blind madness of the hero; but there is a towering grandeur about him, a whirlwind force of passion and of will, which catches our hearts, and puts the scruples of criticism to silence. The most delirious of enterprises is that of Moor, but the vastness of his mind renders even that interesting. We see him leagued with desperadoes directing their savage strength to actions more and more audacious; he is in arms against the conventions of men and the everlasting laws of Fate: yet we follow him with anxiety through the forests and desert places, where he wanders, encompassed with peril, inspired with lofty daring, and torn by unceasing remorse; and we wait with awe for the doom which he has merited and cannot avoid. Nor amid all his frightful aberrations do we ever cease to love him: he is an "archangel though in ruins;" and the strong agony with which he feels the present, the certainty of that stern future which awaits him, which his own eye never loses sight of, makes us lenient to his crimes. When he pours forth his wild recollections, or still wilder forebodings, there is a terrible vehemence in his expressions, which overpowers us, in spite both of his and their extravagance. The scene on the hills beside the Danube, where he looks at the setting sun, and thinks of old hopes, and times "when he could not sleep if his evening prayer had been forgotten," is one, with all its improprieties, that ever clings to the memory. "See," he passionately continues, "all things are gone forth to bask in the peaceful beam of the spring: why must I alone inhale the torments of hell out of the joys of heaven? That all should be so happy, all so married together by the spirit of peace! The whole world one family, its Father above; that Father not mine! I alone the castaway, I alone struck out from the company of the just; not for me the sweet name of child, never for me the languishing look of one whom I love; never, never, the embracing of a bosom friend! Encircled with murderers; serpents hissing around me; riveted to vice with iron bonds; leaning on the bending reed of vice over the gulf of perdition; amid the flowers of the glad world, a howling Abaddon! Oh, that I might return into my mother's womb;—that I might be born a beggar! I would never more—O Heaven, that I could be as one of these day-laborers! Oh, I would toil till the blood ran down from my temples, to buy myself the pleasure of one noontide sleep, the blessing of a single tear. There was a time too, when I could weep—O ye days of peace, thou castle of my father, ye green lovely valleys!—O all ye Elysian scenes of my childhood! will ye never come again, never with your balmy sighing cool my burning bosom? Mourn with me, Nature! They will never come again, never cool my burning bosom with their balmy sighing. They are gone! gone! and may not return!"

¹ Deutsches Museum v. Jahr 1794, cited by Doering.

No less strange is the soliloquy where Moor, with the instrument of self-destruction in his hands, the "dread key that is to shut behind him the prison of life, and to unbolt before him the dwelling of eternal night,"—meditates on the gloomy enigmas of his future destiny. Soliloquies on this subject are numerous,—from the time of Hamlet, of Cato, and downwards. Perhaps the worst of them has more ingenuity, perhaps the best of them has less awfulness than the present. St. Dominick himself might shudder at such a question, with such an answer as this: "What if thou shouldst send me companionless to some burnt and blasted circle of the universe; which thou hast banished from thy sight; where the lone darkness and the motionless desert were my prospects—forever? I would people the silent wilderness with my fantasies; I should have Eternity for leisure to examine the perplexed image of the universal woe."

Strength, wild impassioned strength, is the distinguishing quality of Moor. All his history shows it; and his death is of a piece with the fierce splendor of his life. Having finished the bloody work of crime, and magnanimity, and horror, he thinks that, for himself, suicide would be too easy an exit. He has noticed a poor man toiling by the way-side, for eleven children; a great reward has been promised for the head of the Robber; the gold will nourish that poor drudge and his boys, and Moor goes forth to give it them. We part with him in pity and sorrow; looking less at his misdeeds than at their frightful expiation.

The subordinate personages, though diminished in extent and varied in their forms, are of a similar quality with the hero; a strange mixture of extravagance and true energy. In perusing the work which represents their characters and fates, we are alternately shocked and inspired; there is a perpetual conflict between our understanding and our feelings. Yet the latter on the whole come off victorious. The Robbers is a tragedy that will long find readers to astonish, and, with all its faults, to move. It stands, in our imagination, like some ancient rugged pile of a barbarous age; irregular, fantastic, useless; but grand in its height and massiveness and black frowning strength. It will long remain a singular monument of the early genius and early fortune of its author.

The publication of such a work as this naturally produced an extraordinary feeling in the literary world. Translations of the Robbers soon appeared in almost all the languages of Europe, and were read in all of them with a deep interest, compounded of admiration and aversion, according to the relative proportions of sensibility and judgment in the various minds which contemplated the subject. In Germany, the enthusiasm which the Robbers excited was extreme. The young author had burst upon the world like a meteor; and surprise, for a time, suspended the power of cool and rational criticism. In the ferment produced by the universal discussion of this single topic, the poet was magnified above his natural dimensions, great as they were: and though the general sentence was loudly in his favor, yet he found detractors as well as praisers, and both equally beyond the limits of moderation.

One charge brought against him must have damped the joy of literary glory, and stung Schiller's pure and virtuous mind more deeply than any other. He was accused of having injured the cause of morality by his work; of having set up to the impetuous and fiery temperament of youth a model of imitation which the young were too likely to pursue with eagerness, and which could only lead them from the safe and beaten tracks of duty into error and destruction. It has even been stated, and often been repeated since, that a practical exemplification of this doctrine occurred, about this time, in Germany. A young nobleman, it was said, of the fairest gifts and prospects, had cast away all these advantages; betaken himself to the forests, and, copying Moor, had begun a course of active operations, — which, also copying Moor, but less willingly, he had ended by a shameful death.

It can now be hardly necessary to contradict these theories; or to show that none but a candidate for Bedlam as well as Tyburn could be seduced from the substantial comforts of existence, to seek destruction and disgrace, for the sake of such imaginary grandeur. The German nobleman of the fairest gifts and prospects turns out, on investigation, to have been a German blackguard, whom debauchery and riotous extravagance had reduced to want; who took to the highway, when he could take to nothing else, — not allured by an ebullient enthusiasm, or any heroical and misdirected appetite for sublime actions, but driven by the more palpable stimulus of importunate duns, an empty purse, and five craving senses. Perhaps in his later days, this philosopher may have referred to Schiller's tragedy, as the source from which he drew his theory of life: but if so, we believe he was mistaken. For characters like him, the great attraction was the charms of revelry, and the great restraint, the gallows, — before the period of Karl von Moor, just as they have been since, and will be to the end of time. Among motives like these, the influence of even the most malignant book could scarcely be discernible, and would be little detrimental, if it were.

Nothing, at any rate, could be farther from Schiller's intention than such a consummation. In his preface, he speaks of the moral effects of the Robbers in terms which do honor to his heart, while they show the inexperience of his head. Ridicule, he signifies, has long been tried against the wickedness of the times, whole cargoes of hallebore have been expended, — in vain; and now, he thinks, recourse must be had to more pungent medicines. We may smile at the simplicity of this idea; and safely conclude that, like other specifics, the present one would fail to produce a perceptible effect: but Schiller's vindication rests on higher grounds than these. His work has on the whole furnished nourishment to the more exalted powers of our nature; the sentiments and images which he has shaped and uttered, tend, in spite of their alloy, to elevate the soul to a nobler pitch: and this is a sufficient defence. As to the danger of misapplying the inspiration he communicates, of forgetting the dictates of prudence in our zeal for the dictates of poetry, we have no great cause to fear it. Hitherto, at least, there has always been enough of dull reality, on every side of us, to abate such fervors in good time, and bring us back to the most sober level of prose, if not to sink us below it. We should thank the poet who performs such a service; and forbear to inquire too rigidly whether there is any "moral" in his piece or not. The writer of a work, which interests and excites the spiritual feelings of men, has as little need to justify himself by showing how it exemplifies some wise saw or modern instance, as the doer of a generous action has to demonstrate its merit, by deducing it from the system of Shaftesbury, or Smith, or Paley, or whichever happens to be the favorite system for the age and place. The instructiveness of the one, and the virtue of the other, exist independently of all systems or saws, and in spite of all.

But the tragedy of the Robbers produced, some inconveniences of a kind much more sensible than these its theoretical mischiefs. We have called it the signal of Schiller's deliverance from school tyranny and military constraint; but its operation in this respect was not immediate; at first it seemed to involve him more deeply and dangerously than before. He had finished the original sketch of it in 1778; but for fear of offence, he kept it secret till his medical studies were completed.¹ These, in the mean time, he had pursued with sufficient assiduity to merit the usual honors;² in 1780, he had, in consequence, obtained the post of surgeon to the regiment Augé, in the Würtemberg army. This advancement enabled him to complete his project, to print the Robbers at his own expense, not being able to find any bookseller that would undertake it. The nature of the work, and the universal interest it awakened, drew attention to the private circumstances of the author, whom the Robbers, as well as other pieces of his writing, that had found their way into the periodical publications of the time, sufficiently showed to be no common man. Many grave persons were offended at the vehement sentiments expressed in the Robbers; and the unquestioned ability with which these extravagances were expressed, but made the matter worse. To Schiller's superiors, above all, such things were inconceivable: he might perhaps be a very great genius, but was certainly a dangerous servant for his Highness the Grand Duke of Würtemberg. Officious people mingled themselves in the affair: nay, the graziers of the Alps were brought to bear upon it. The Grisons magistrates, it appeared, had seen the book: and were mortally huffed at being there spoken of, according to a Swabian adage, as common highwaymen.¹ They complained in the Hamburg Correspondent; and a sort of Jackal, at Ludwigsburg, one Walter, whose name deserves to be thus kept in mind, volunteered to plead their cause before the Grand Duke.

¹ On this subject Doering gives an anecdote, which may perhaps be worth translating. "One of Schiller's teachers surprised him on one occasion reciting a scene from the Robbers, before some of his intimate companions. At the words, which Franz von Moor addresses to Moser: Ha, what! thou knowest none greater? Think again! Death, heaven, eternity, damnation, hovers in the sound of thy voice! Not one greater? — the door opened, and the master saw Schiller stamping in desperation up and down the room. 'For shame,' said he, 'for shame to get into such a passion, and curse so!' The other scholars tittered covertly at the worthy inspector; and Schiller called after him with a bitter smile, 'A noodle' (ein confusirter Kerl)!"

² His Latin Essay on the Philosophy of Physiology was written in 1778, and never printed. His concluding thesis was published according to custom: the subject is arduous enough, "the connection between the animal and spiritual nature of man," — which Dr. Cabanis has since treated in so offensive a fashion. Schiller's tract we have never seen. Doering says it was long "out of print," till Nasse reproduced it in his Medical Journal (Leipzig, 1820): he is silent respecting its merits.

Informed of all these circumstances, the Grand Duke expressed his disapprobation of Schiller's poetical labors in the most unequivocal terms. Schiller was at length summoned to appear before him; and it then turned out, that his Highness was not only dissatisfied with the moral or political errors of the work, but scandalized moreover at its want of literary merit. In this latter respect, he was kind enough to proffer his own services. But Schiller seems to have received the proposal with no sufficient gratitude; and the interview passed without advantage to either party. It terminated in the Duke's commanding Schiller to abide by medical subjects: or at least to beware of writing any more poetry, without submitting it to his inspection.

We need not comment on this portion of the Grand Duke's history: his treatment of Schiller has already been sufficiently avenged. By the great body of mankind, his name will be recollected, chiefly, if at all, for the sake of the unfriended youth whom he now schooled so sharply, and afterwards afflicted so cruelly: it will be recollected also with the angry triumph which we feel against a shallow and despotic "noble of convention," who strains himself to oppress "one of nature's nobility," submitted by blind chance to his dominion, and—finds that he cannot! All this is far more than the Prince of Württemberg deserves. Of limited faculties, and educated in the French principles of taste, then common to persons of his rank in Germany, he had perused the Robbers with unfeigned disgust; he could see in the author only a misguided enthusiast, with talents barely enough to make him dangerous. And though he never fully or formally retracted this injustice, he did not follow it up; when Schiller became known to the world at large, the Duke ceased to persecute him. The father he still kept in his service, and nowise molested.

¹ The obnoxious passage has been carefully expunged from subsequent editions. It was in the third scene of the second act; Spiegelberg discouraging with Rasmann, observes, "An honest man you may form of windlestraws; but to make a rascal you must have grist: besides, there is a national genius in it, a certain rascal climate, so to speak." In the first edition, there was added: "Go to the Grisons, for instance: that is what I call the thief's Athens." The patriot who stood forth on this occasion for the honor of the Grisons, to deny this weighty charge, and denounce the crime of making it, was not Dogberry or Verges, but "one of the noble family of Salis."

In the mean time, however, various mortifications awaited Schiller. It was in vain that he discharged the humble duties of his station with the most strict fidelity, and even, it is said, with superior skill: he was a suspected person, and his most innocent actions were misconstrued, his slightest faults were visited with the full measure of official severity. His busy imagination aggravated the evil. He had seen poor Schubart¹ wearing out his tedious eight years of durance in the fortress of Asperg, because he had been "a rock of offence to the powers that were." The fate of this unfortunate author appeared to Schiller a type of his own. His free spirit shrank at the prospect of wasting its strength in strife against the pitiful constraints, the minute and endless persecutions of men who knew him not, yet had his fortune in their hands; the idea of dungeons and jailers haunted and tortured his mind; and the means of escaping them, the renunciation of poetry, the source of all his joy, if likewise of many woes, the radiant guiding-star of his turbid and obscure existence, seemed a sentence of death to all that was dignified, and delightful, and worth retaining, in his character. Totally ignorant of what is called the world; conscious too of the might that slumbered in his soul, and proud of it, as kings are of their sceptres; impetuous when roused, and spurning unjust restraint; yet wavering and timid from the delicacy of his nature, and still more restricted in the freedom of his movements by the circumstances of his father, whose all depended on the pleasure of the court, Schiller felt himself embarrassed, and agitated, and tormented in no common degree. Urged this way and that by the most powerful and conflicting impulses; driven to despair by the paltry shackles that chained him, yet forbidden by the most sacred considerations to break them, he knew not on what he should resolve; he reckoned himself "the most unfortunate of men."

¹ See Appendix, No. 1

Time at length gave him the solution; circumstances occurred which forced him to decide. The popularity of the Robbers had brought him into correspondence with several friends of literature, who wished to patronize the author, or engage him in new undertakings. Among this number was the Freiherr von Dalberg, superintendent of the theatre at Mannheim, under whose encouragement and countenance Schiller remodelled the Robbers, altered it in some parts, and had it brought upon the stage in 1781. The correspondence with Dalberg began in literary discussions, but gradually elevated itself into the expression of more interesting sentiments. Dalberg loved and sympathized with the generous enthusiast, involved in troubles and perplexities which his inexperience was so little adequate to thread: he gave him advice and assistance; and Schiller repaid this favor with the gratitude due to his kind, his first, and then almost his only benefactor. His letters to this gentleman have been preserved, and lately published; they exhibit a lively picture of Schiller's painful situation at Stuttgart, and of his unskilful as well as eager anxiety to be delivered from it.¹ His darling project was that Dalberg should bring him to Mannheim, as theatrical poet, by permission of the Duke: at one time he even thought of turning player.

Neither of these projects could take immediate effect, and Schiller's embarrassments became more pressing than ever. With the natural feeling of a young author, he had ventured to go in secret, and witness the first representation of his tragedy, at Mannheim. His incognito did not conceal him; he was put under arrest during a week, for this offence: and as the punishment did not deter him from again transgressing in a similar manner, he learned that it was in contemplation to try more rigorous measures with him. Dark hints were given to him of some exemplary as well as imminent severity: and Dalberg's aid, the sole hope of averting it by quiet means, was distant and dubious. Schiller saw himself reduced to extremities. Beleaguered with present distresses, and the most horrible forebodings, on every side; roused to the highest pitch of indignation, yet forced to keep silence, and wear the face of patience, he could endure this maddening constraint no longer. He resolved to be free, at whatever risk; to abandon advantages which he could not buy at such a price; to quit his stepdame home, and go forth, though friendless and alone, to seek his fortune in the great market of life. Some foreign Duke or Prince was arriving at Stuttgart; and all the people were in movement, occupied with seeing the spectacle of his entrance: Schiller seized this opportunity of retiring from the city, careless whither he went, so he got beyond the reach of turnkeys, and Grand Dukes, and commanding officers. It was in the month of October, 1782.

¹ See Appendix, No. 2.

This last step forms the catastrophe of the publication of the Robbers: it completed the deliverance of Schiller from the grating thralldom under which his youth had been passed, and decided his destiny for life. Schiller was in his twenty-third year when he left Stuttgart. He says "he went empty away, — empty in purse and hope." The future was indeed sufficiently dark before him. Without patrons, connections, or country, he had ventured forth to the warfare on his own charges; without means, experience, or settled purpose, it was greatly to be feared that the fight would go against him. Yet his situation, though gloomy enough, was not entirely without its brighter side. He was now a free man, free, however poor; and his strong soul quickened as its fetters dropped off, and gloried within him in the dim anticipation of great and far-extending enterprises. If, cast too rudely among the hardships and bitter disquietudes of the world, his past nursing had not been delicate, he was already taught to look upon privation and discomfort as his daily companions.

If he knew not how to bend his course among the perplexed vicissitudes of society, there was a force within him which would triumph over many difficulties; and a "light from Heaven" was about his path, which, if it failed to conduct him to wealth and preferment, would keep him far from baseness and degrading vices. Literature, and every great and noble thing which the right pursuit of it implies, he loved with all his heart and all his soul: to this inspiring object he was henceforth exclusively devoted; advancing towards this, and possessed of common necessities on the humblest scale, there was little else to tempt him. His life might be unhappy, but would hardly be disgraceful.

Schiller gradually felt all this, and gathered comfort, while better days began to dawn upon him. Fearful of trusting himself so near Stuttgart as at Mannheim, he had passed into Franconia, and was living painfully at Oggersheim, under the name of Schmidt: but Dalberg, who knew all his distresses, supplied him with money for immediate wants; and a generous lady made him the offer of a home. Madam von Wolzogen lived on her estate of Bauerbach, in the neighborhood of Meinungen; she knew Schiller from his works, and his intimacy with her sons, who had been his fellow-students at Stuttgart. She invited him to her house; and there treated him with an affection which helped him to forget the past, and look cheerfully forward to the future.

Under this hospitable roof, Schiller had leisure to examine calmly the perplexed and dubious aspect of his affairs. Happily his character belonged not to the whining or sentimental sort: he was not of those, in whom the pressure of misfortune produces nothing but unprofitable pain; who spend, in cherishing and investigating and deploring their miseries, the time which should be spent in providing a relief for them. With him, strong feeling was constantly a call to vigorous action: he possessed in a high degree the faculty of conquering his afflictions, by directing his thoughts, not to maxims for enduring them, or modes of expressing them with interest, but to plans for getting rid of them; and to this disposition or habit, — too rare among men of genius, men of a much higher class than mere sentimentalists, but whose sensibility is out of proportion with their inventiveness or activity, — we are to attribute no small influence in the fortunate conduct of his subsequent life. With such a turn of mind, Schiller, now that he was at length master of his own movements, could not long be at a loss for plans or tasks. Once settled at Bauerbach, he immediately resumed his poetical employments; and forgot, in the regions of fancy, the vague uncertainties of his real condition, or saw prospects of amending it in a life of literature. By many safe and sagacious persons, the prudence of his late proceedings might be more than questioned; it was natural for many to forebode that one who left the port so rashly, and sailed with such precipitation, was likely to make shipwreck ere the voyage had extended far: but the lapse of a few months put a stop to such predictions. A year had not passed since his departure, when Schiller sent forth his Ver schwörung des Fiesco and Kabale und Liebe; tragedies which testified that, dangerous and arduous as the life he had selected might be, he possessed resources more than adequate to its emergencies. Fiesco he had commenced during the period of his arrest at Stuttgart; it was published, with the other play, in 1783; and soon after brought upon the Mannheim theatre, with universal approbation.

It was now about three years since the composition of the Robbers had been finished; five since the first sketch of it had been formed. With what zeal and success Schiller had, in that interval, pursued the work of his mental culture, these two dramas are a striking proof. The first ardor of youth is still to be discerned in them; but it is now chastened by the dictates of a maturer reason, and made to animate the products of a much happier and more skilful invention. Schiller's ideas of art had expanded and grown clearer, his knowledge of life had enlarged. He exhibits more acquaintance with the fundamental principles of human nature, as well as with the circumstances under which it usually displays itself; and far higher and juster views of the manner in which its manifestations should be represented.

In the Conspiracy of Fiesco we have to admire not only the energetic animation which the author has infused into all his characters, but the distinctness with which he has discriminated, without aggravating them; and the vividness with which he has contrived to depict the scene where they act and move. The political and personal relations of the Genoese nobility; the luxurious splendor, the intrigues, the feuds, and jarring interests, which occupy them, are made visible before us: we understand and may appreciate the complexities of the conspiracy; we mingle, as among realities, in the pompous and imposing movements which lead to the catastrophe. The catastrophe itself is displayed with peculiar effect. The midnight silence of the sleeping city, interrupted only by the distant sounds of watchmen, by the low hoarse murmur of the sea, or the stealthy footsteps and disguised voice of Fiesco, is conveyed to our imagination by some brief but graphic touches; we seem to stand in the solitude and deep stillness of Genoa, awaiting the signal which is to burst so fearfully upon its slumber. At length the gun is fired; and the wild uproar which ensues is no less strikingly exhibited. The deeds and sounds of violence, astonishment and terror; the volleying cannon, the heavy toll of the alarm-bells, the acclamation of assembled thousands, "the voice of Genoa speaking with Fiesco,"—all is made present to us with a force and clearness, which of itself were enough to show no ordinary power of close and comprehensive conception, no ordinary skill in arranging and expressing its results.

But it is not this felicitous delineation of circumstances and visible scenes that constitutes our principal enjoyment. The faculty of penetrating through obscurity and confusion, to seize the characteristic features of an object, abstract or material; of producing a lively description in the latter case, an accurate and keen scrutiny in the former, is the essential property of intellect, and occupies, in its best form a high rank in the scale of mental gifts: but the creative faculty of the poet, and especially of the dramatic poet, is something superadded to this; it is far rarer, and occupies a rank far higher. In this particular, Fiesco, without approaching the limits of perfection, yet stands in an elevated range of excellence. The characters, on the whole, are imagined and portrayed with great impressiveness and vigor. Traces of old faults are indeed still to be discovered: there still seems a want of pliancy about the genius of the author; a stiffness and heaviness in his motions. His sublimity is not to be questioned; but it does not always disdain the aid of rude contrasts and mere theatrical effect. He paints in colors deep and glowing, but without sufficient skill to blend them delicately: he amplifies nature more than purifies it; he omits, but does not well conceal the omission. Fiesco has not the complete charm of a true though embellished resemblance to reality; its attraction rather lies in a kind of colossal magnitude, which requires it, if seen to advantage, to be viewed from a distance. Yet the prevailing qualities of the piece do more than make us pardon such defects. If the dramatic imitation is not always entirely successful, it is never very distant from success; and a constant flow of powerful thought and sentiment counteracts, or prevents us from noticing, the failure. We find evidence of great philosophic penetration, great resources of invention, directed by a skilful study of history and men; and everywhere a bold grandeur of feeling and imagery gives life to what study has combined. The chief incidents have a dazzling magnificence; the chief characters, an aspect of majesty and force which corresponds to it. Fervor of heart, capaciousness of intellect and imagination, present themselves on all sides: the general effect is powerful and exalting.

Fiesco himself is a personage at once probable and tragically interesting. The luxurious dissipation, in which he veils his daring projects, softens the rudeness of that strength which it half conceals. His immeasurable pride expands itself not only into a disdain of subjection, but also into the most lofty acts of magnanimity: his blind confidence in fortune seems almost warranted by the resources which he finds in his own fearlessness and imperturbable presence of mind. His ambition participates in the nobleness of his other qualities; he is less anxious that his rivals should yield to him in power than in generosity and greatness of character, attributes of which power is with him but the symbol and the fit employment. Ambition in Fiesco is indeed the common wish of every mind to diffuse its individual influence, to see its own activity reflected back from the united minds of millions: but it is the common wish acting on no common man. He does not long to rule, that he may sway other wills, as it were, by the physical exertion of his own: he would lead us captive by the superior grandeur of his qualities, once fairly manifested; and he aims at dominion, chiefly as it will enable him to manifest these. "It is not the arena that he values, but what lies in that arena:" the sovereignty is enviable, not for its adventitious splendor, not because it is the object of coarse and universal wonder; but as it offers, in the collected force of a nation, something which the loftiest mortal may find scope for all his powers in guiding. "Spread out the thunder," Fiesco exclaims, "into its single tones, and it becomes a lullaby for children: pour it forth together in one quick peal, and the royal sound shall move the heavens." His affections are not less vehement than his other passions: his heart can be melted into powerlessness and tenderness by the mild persuasions of his Leonora; the idea of exalting this amiable being mingles largely with the other motives to his enterprise. He is, in fact, a great, and might have been a virtuous man; and though in the pursuit of grandeur he swerves from absolute rectitude, we still respect his splendid qualities, and admit the force of the allurements which have led him astray. It is but faintly that we condemn his sentiments, when, after a night spent in struggles between a rigid and a more accommodating patriotism, he looks out of his chamber, as the sun is rising in its calm beauty, and gilding the waves and mountains, and all the innumerable palaces and domes and spires of Genoa, and exclaims with rapture: "This majestic city — mine! To flame over it like the kingly Day; to brood over it with a monarch's power; all these sleepless longings, all these never satiated wishes to be drowned in that unfathomable ocean!" We admire Fiesco, we disapprove of him, and sympathize with him: he is crushed in the ponderous machinery which himself put in motion and thought to control : we lament his fate, but confess that it was not undeserved. He is a fit "offering of individual free-will to the force of social conventions."

Fiesco is not the only striking character in the play which bears his name. The narrow fanatical republican virtue of Verrina, the mild and venerable wisdom of the old Doria, the unbridled profligacy of his Nephew, even the cold, contented, irreclaimable perversity of the cut-throat Moor, all dwell in our recollections : but what, next to Fiesco, chiefly attracts us, is the character of Leonora his wife. Leonora is of kindred to Amelia in the Robbers, but involved in more complicated relations, and brought nearer to the actual condition of humanity. She is such a heroine as Schiller most delights to draw. Meek and retiring by the softness of her nature, yet glowing with an ethereal ardor for all that is illustrious and lovely, she clings about her husband, as if her being were one with his. She dreams of remote and peaceful scenes, where Fiesco should be all to her, she all to Fiesco : her idea of love is, that "her name should lie in secret behind every one of his thoughts, should speak to him from every object of Nature ; that for him, this bright majestic universe itself were but as the shining jewel, on which her image, only hers, stood engraved." Her character seems a reflection of Fiesco's, but refined from his grosser strength, and transfigured into a celestial form of purity, and tenderness, and touching grace. Jealousy cannot move her into anger ; she languishes in concealed sorrow, when she thinks herself forgotten. It is affection alone that can rouse her into passion ; but under the influence of this, she forgets all weakness and fear. She cannot stay in her palace, on the night when Fiesco's destiny is deciding ; she rushes forth, as if inspired, to share in her husband's dangers and sublime deeds, and perishes at last in the tumult.

The death of Leonora, so brought about, and at such a time, is reckoned among the blemishes of the work : that of Fiesco, in which Schiller has ventured to depart from history, is to be more favorably judged of. Fiesco is not here accidentally drowned ; but plunged into the waves by the indignant

Verrina, who forgets or stifles the feelings of friendship, in his rage at political apostasy. "The nature of the Drama," we are justly told, "will not suffer the operation of Chance, or of an immediate Providence. Higher spirits can discern the minute fibres of an event stretching through the whole expanse of the system of the world, and hanging, it may be, on the remotest limits of the future and the past, where man discerns nothing save the action itself, hovering unconnected in space. But the artist has to paint for the short view of man, whom he wishes to instruct; not for the piercing eye of superior powers, from whom he learns."

In the composition of Fiesco, Schiller derived the main part of his original materials from history; he could increase the effect by gorgeous representations, and ideas pre-existing in the mind of his reader. Enormity of incident and strangeness of situation lent him a similar assistance in the Robbers. Kabale und Liebe is destitute of these advantages; it is a tragedy of domestic life; its means of interesting are comprised within itself, and rest on very simple feelings, dignified by no very singular action. The name, Court-Intriguing and Love, correctly designates its nature; it aims at exhibiting the conflict, the victorious conflict, of political manœuvring, of cold worldly wisdom, with the pure impassioned movements of the young heart, as yet unsullied by the tarnish of everyday life, inexperienced in its calculations, sick of its empty formalities, and indignantly determined to cast off the mean restrictions it imposes, which bind so firmly by their number, though singly so contemptible. The idea is far from original: this is a conflict which most men have figured to themselves, which many men of ardent mind are in some degree constantly waging. To make it, in this simple form, the subject of a drama, seems to be a thought of Schiller's own; but the praise, though not the merit of his undertaking, considerable rather as performed than projected, has been lessened by a multitude of worthless or noxious imitations. The same primary conception has been tortured into a thousand shapes, and tricked out with a thousand tawdry devices and meretricious ornaments, by the Kotzebues, and other "intellectual Jacobins," whose productions have brought what we falsely call the "German Theatre" into such deserved contempt in England. Some portion of the gall, due only to these inflated, flimsy, and fantastic persons, appears to have acted on certain critics in estimating this play of Schiller's. August Wilhelm Schlegel speaks slightly of the work: he says, "it will hardly move us by its tone of overstrained sensibility, but may well afflict us by the painful impressions which it leaves." Our own experience has been different from that of Schlegel. In the characters of Louisa and Ferdinand Walter we discovered little overstraining; their sensibility we did not reckon very criminal; seeing it united with a clearness of judgment, chastened by a purity of heart, and controlled by a force of virtuous resolution, in full proportion with itself. We rather admired the genius of the poet, which could elevate a poor music-master's daughter to the dignity of a heroine; could represent, without wounding our sense of propriety, the affection of two noble beings, created for each other by nature, and divided by rank; we sympathized in their sentiments enough to feel a proper interest in their fate, and see in them, what the author meant we should see, two pure and lofty minds involved in the meshes of vulgar cunning, and borne to destruction by the excess of their own good qualities and the crimes of others.

Ferdinand is a nobleman, but not convinced that "his patent of nobility is more ancient or of more authority than the primeval scheme of the universe:" he speaks and acts like a young man entertaining such persuasions: disposed to yield everything to reason and true honor, but scarcely anything to mere use and wont. His passion for Louisa is the sign and the nourishment rather than the cause of such a temper: he loves her without limit, as the only creature he has ever met with of a like mind with himself; and this feeling exalts into inspiration what was already the dictate of his nature. We accompany him on his straight and plain path; we rejoice to see him fling aside with a strong arm the artifices and allurements with which a worthless father and more worthless associates assail him at first in vain: there is something attractive in the spectacle of native integrity, fearless though inexperienced, at war with selfishness and craft; something mournful, because the victory will seldom go as we would have it.

Louisa is a meet partner for the generous Ferdinand: the poet has done justice to her character. She is timid and humble; a feeling and richly gifted soul is hid in her by the unkindness of her earthly lot; she is without counsellors except the innate holiness of her heart, and the dictates of her keen though untutored understanding; yet when the hour of trial comes, she can obey the commands of both, and draw from herself a genuine nobleness of conduct, which second-hand prudence, and wealth, and titles, would but render less touching. Her filial affection, her angelic attachment to her lover, her sublime and artless piety, are beautifully contrasted with the bleakness of her external circumstances: she appears before us like the "one rose of the wilderness left on its stalk," and we grieve to see it crushed and trodden down so rudely.

The innocence, the enthusiasm, the exalted life and stern fate of Louisa and Ferdinand give a powerful charm to this tragedy: it is everywhere interspersed with pieces of fine eloquence, and scenes which move us by their dignity or pathos. We recollect few passages of a more overpowering nature than the conclusion, where Ferdinand, beguiled by the most diabolical machinations to disbelieve the virtue of his mistress, puts himself and her to death by poison. There is a gloomy and solemn might in his despair; though overwhelmed, he seems invincible: his enemies have blinded and imprisoned him in their deceptions; but only that, like Samson, he may overturn his prison-house, and bury himself, and all that have wronged him, in its ruins.

The other characters of the play, though in general properly sustained, are not sufficiently remarkable to claim much of our attention. Wurm, the chief counsellor and agent of the unprincipled, calculating Father, is wicked enough; but there is no great singularity in his wickedness. He is little more than the dry, cool, and now somewhat vulgar miscreant, the villanous Attorney of modern novels. Kalb also is but a worthless subject, and what is worse, but indifferently handled. He is meant for the feather-brained thing of tags and laces, which frequently inhabits courts; but he wants the grace and agility proper to the species; he is less a fool than a blockhead, less perverted than totally inane. Schiller's strength lay not in comedy, but in something far higher. The great merit of the present work consists in the characters of the hero and heroine; and in this respect it ranks at the very head of its class. As a tragedy of common life, we know of few rivals to it, certainly of no superior.

The production of three such pieces as the Robbers, Fiesco, and Kabale und Liebe, already announced to the world that another great and original mind had appeared, from whose maturity, when such was the promise of its youth, the highest expectations might be formed. These three plays stand related to each other in regard to their nature and form, as well as date: they exhibit the progressive state of Schiller's education; show us the fiery enthusiasm of youth, exasperated into wildness, astonishing in its movements rather than sublime; and the same enthusiasm gradually yielding to the sway of reason, gradually using itself to the constraints prescribed by sound judgment and more extensive knowledge. Of the three, the Robbers is doubtless the most singular, and likely perhaps to be the most widely popular: but the latter two are of more real worth in the eye of taste, and will better bear a careful and rigorous study.

With the appearance of Fiesco and its companion, the first period of Schiller's literary history may conclude. The stormy confusions of his youth were now subsiding; after all his aberrations, repulses, and perplexed wanderings, he was at length about to reach his true destination, and times of more serenity began to open for him. Two such tragedies as he had lately offered to the world made it easier for his friend Dalberg to second his pretensions. Schiller was at last gratified by the fulfilment of his favorite scheme; in September 1783, he went to Mannheim, as poet to the theatre, a post of respectability and reasonable profit, to the duties of which he forthwith addressed himself with all his heart. He was not long afterwards elected a member of the German Society established for literary objects in Mannheim; and he valued the honor, not only as a testimony of respect from a highly estimable quarter, but also as a means of uniting him more closely with men of kindred pursuits and tempers: and what was more than all, of quieting forever his apprehensions from the government at Stuttgart. Since his arrival at Mannheim, one or two suspicious incidents had again alarmed him on this head; but being now acknowledged as a subject of the Elector Palatine, naturalized by law in his new country, he had nothing more to fear from the Duke of Würtemberg.

Satisfied with his moderate income, safe, free, and surrounded by friends that loved and honored him, Schiller now looked confidently forward to what all his efforts had been a search and hitherto a fruitless search for, an undisturbed life of intellectual labor. What effect this happy aspect of his circumstances must have produced upon him may be easily conjectured. Through many years he had been inured to agitation and distress; now peace and liberty and hope, sweet in themselves, were sweeter for their novelty. For the first time in his life, he saw himself allowed to obey without reluctance the ruling bias of his nature; for the first time inclination and duty went hand in hand. His activity awoke with renovated force in this favorable scene; long-thwarted, half-forgotten projects again kindled into brightness, as the possibility of their accomplishment became apparent: Schiller glowed with a generous pride when he felt his faculties at his own disposal, and thought of the use he meant to make of them. "All my connections," he said, "are now dissolved. The public is now all to me, my study, my sovereign, my confidant. To the public alone I henceforth belong; before this and no other tribunal will I place myself; this alone do I reverence and fear. Something majestic hovers before me, as I determine now to wear no other fetters but the sentence of the world, to appeal to no other throne but the soul of man."

These expressions are extracted from the preface to his Thalia, a periodical work which he undertook in 1784, devoted to subjects connected with poetry, and chiefly with the drama. In such sentiments we leave him, commencing the arduous and perilous, but also glorious and sublime duties of a life consecrated to the discovery of truth, and the creation of intellectual beauty. He was now exclusively what is called a Man of Letters, for the rest of his days.

PART II

FROM SCHILLER'S SETTLEMENT AT MANNHEIM TO HIS SETTLEMENT AT JENA.

1783-1790.

It to know wisdom were to practise it ; if fame brought true dignity and peace of mind ; or happiness consisted in nourishing the intellect with its appropriate food, and surrounding the imagination with ideal beauty, a literary life would be the most enviable which the lot of this world affords. But the truth is far otherwise. The Man of Letters has no immutable, all-conquering volition, more than other men ; to understand and to perform are two very different things with him as with every one. His fame rarely exerts a favorable influence on his dignity of character, and never on his peace of mind : its glitter is external, for the eyes of others ; within, it is but the aliment of unrest, the oil cast upon the ever-gnawing fire of ambition, quickening into fresh vehemence the blaze which it stills for a moment. Moreover, this Man of Letters is not wholly made of spirit, but of clay and spirit mixed : his thinking faculties may be nobly trained and exercised, but he must have affections as well as thoughts to make him happy, and food and raiment must be given him or he dies. Far from being the most enviable, his way of life is perhaps, among the many modes by which an ardent mind endeavors to express its activity, the most thickly beset with suffering and degradation. Look at the biography of authors ! Except the Newgate Calendar, it is the most sickening chapter in the history of man. The calamities of these people are a fertile topic ; and too often their faults and vices have kept pace with their calamities. Nor is it difficult to see how this has happened. Talent of any sort is generally accompanied with a peculiar fineness of sensibility; of genius this is the most essential constituent; and life in any shape has sorrows enough for hearts so formed. The employments of literature sharpen this natural tendency; the vexations that accompany them frequently exasperate it into morbid soreness. The cares and toils of literature are the business of life; its delights are too ethereal and too transient to furnish that perennial flow of satisfaction, coarse but plenteous and substantial, of which happiness in this world of ours is made. The most finished efforts of the mind give it little pleasure, frequently they give it pain; for men's aims are ever far beyond their strength. And the outward recompense of these undertakings, the distinction they confer, is of still smaller value: the desire for it is insatiable even when successful; and when baffled, it issues in jealousy and envy, and every pitiful and painful feeling. So keen a temperament with so little to restrain or satisfy, so much to distress or tempt it, produces contradictions which few are adequate to reconcile. Hence the unhappiness of literary men, hence their faults and follies.

Thus literature is apt to form a dangerous and discontenting occupation even for the amateur. But for him whose rank and worldly comforts depend on it, who does not live to write, but writes to live, its difficulties and perils are fearfully increased. Few spectacles are more afflicting than that of such a man, so gifted and so fated, so jostled and tossed to and fro in the rude bustle of life, the buffetings of which he is so little fitted to endure. Cherishing, it may be, the loftiest thoughts, and clogged with the meanest wants; of pure and holy purposes, yet ever driven from the straight path by the pressure of necessity, or the impulse of passion; thirsting for glory, and frequently in want of daily bread; hovering between the empyrean of his fancy and the squalid desert of reality; cramped and foiled in his most strenuous exertions; dissatisfied with his best performances, disgusted with his fortune, this Man of Letters too often spends his weary days in conflicts with obscure misery: harassed, chagrined, debased, or maddened; the victim at once of tragedy and farce; the last forlorn outpost in the war of Mind against Matter. Many are the noble souls that have perished bitterly, with their tasks unfinished, under these corroding woes! Some in utter famine, like Otway; some in dark insanity, like Cowper and Collins; some, like Chatterton, have sought out a more stern quietus, and turning their indignant steps away from a world which refused them welcome, have taken refuge in that strong Fortress, where poverty and cold neglect, and the thousand natural shocks which flesh is heir to, could not reach them any more.

Yet among these men are to be found the brightest specimens and the chief benefactors of mankind! It is they that keep awake the finer parts of our souls; that give us better aims than power or pleasure, and withstand the total sovereignty of Mammon in this earth. They are the vanguard in the march of mind; the intellectual Backwoodsmen, reclaiming from the idle wilderness new territories for the thought and the activity of their happier brethren. Pity that from all their conquests, so rich in benefit to others, themselves should reap so little! But it is vain to murmur. They are volunteers in this cause; they weighed the charms of it against the perils: and they must abide the results of their decision, as all must. The hardships of the course they follow are formidable, but not all inevitable; and to such as pursue it rightly, it is not without its great rewards. If an author's life is more agitated and more painful than that of others, it may also be made more spirit-stirring and exalted: fortune may render him unhappy; it is only himself that can make him despicable. The history of genius has, in fact, its bright side as well as its dark. And if it is distressing to survey the misery, and what is worse, the debasement of so many gifted men, it is doubly cheering on the other hand to reflect on the few, who, amid the temptations and sorrows to which life in all its provinces and most in theirs is liable, have travelled through it in calm and virtuous majesty, and are now hallowed in our memories, not less for their conduct than their writings. Such men are the flower of this lower world: to such alone can the epithet of great be applied with its true emphasis. There is a con-gruity in their proceedings which one loves to contemplate: "he who would write heroic poems, should make his whole life a heroic poem."

So thought our Milton; and, what was more difficult, he acted so. To Milton, the moral king of authors, a heroic multitude, out of many ages and countries, might be joined; a "cloud of witnesses," that encompass the true literary man throughout his pilgrimage, inspiring him to lofty emulation, cheering his solitary thoughts with hope, teaching him to struggle, to endure, to conquer difficulties, or, in failure and heavy sufferings, to

. "arm th' obdured breast
With stubborn patience as with triple steel."

To this august series, in his own degree, the name of Schiller may be added.

Schiller lived in more peaceful times than Milton; his history is less distinguished by obstacles surmounted, or sacrifices made to principle; yet he had his share of trials to encounter; and the admirers of his writings need not feel ashamed of the way in which he bore it. One virtue, the parent of many others, and the most essential of any, in his circumstances, he possessed in a supreme degree; he was devoted with entire and unchanging ardor to the cause he had embarked in. The extent of his natural endowments might have served, with a less eager character, as an excuse for long periods of indolence, broken only by fits of casual exertion: with him it was but a new incitement to improve and develop them. The Ideal Man that lay within him, the image of himself as he should be, was formed upon a strict and curious standard; and to reach this constantly approached and constantly receding emblem of perfection, was the unwearied effort of his life. This crowning principle of conduct, never ceasing to inspire his energetic mind, introduced a consistency into his actions, a firm coherence into his character, which the changeful condition of his history rendered of peculiar importance. His resources, his place of residence, his associates, his worldly prospects, might vary as they pleased; this purpose did not vary; it was ever present with him to nerve every better faculty of his head and heart, to invest the chequered vicissitudes of his fortune with a dignity derived from himself. The zeal of his nature overcame the temptations to that loitering and indecision, that fluctuation between sloth and consuming toil, that infirmity of resolution, with all its tormenting and enfeebling consequences, to which a literary man, working as he does at a solitary task, uncalled for by any pressing tangible demand, and to be recompensed by distant and dubious advantage, is especially exposed. Unity of aim, aided by ordinary vigor of character, will generally insure perseverance; a quality not ranked among the cardinal virtues, but as essential as any of them to the proper conduct of life. Nine-tenths of the miseries and vices of mankind proceed from idleness: with men of quick minds, to whom it is especially pernicious, this habit is commonly the fruit of many disappointments and schemes oft baffled; and men fail in their schemes not so much from the want of strength as from the ill-direction of it. The weakest living creature, by concentrating his powers on a single object, can accomplish something: the strongest, by dispersing his over many, may fail to accomplish anything. The drop, by continual falling, bores its passage through the hardest rock; the hasty torrent rushes over it with hideous uproar, and leaves no trace behind. Few men have applied more steadfastly to the business of their life, or been more resolutely diligent than Schiller.

The profession of theatrical poet was, in his present circumstances, particularly favorable to the maintenance of this wholesome state of mind. In the fulfilment of its duties, while he gratified his own dearest predilections, he was likewise warmly seconded by the prevailing taste of the public. The interest excited by the stage, and the importance attached to everything connected with it, are greater in Germany than in any other part of Europe, not excepting France, or even Paris. Nor, as in Paris, is the stage in German towns considered merely as a mental recreation, an elegant and pleasant mode of filling up the vacancy of tedious evenings: in Germany, it has the advantage of being comparatively new; and its exhibitions are directed to a class of minds attuned to a far higher pitch of feeling. The Germans are accused of a proneness to amplify and systematize, to admire with excess, and to find, in whatever calls forth their applause, an epitome of a thousand excellencies, which no one else can discover in it. Their discussions on the theatre do certainly give color to this charge. Nothing, at least to an English reader, can appear more disproportionate than the influence they impute to the stage, and the quantity of anxious investigation they devote to its concerns.

With us, the question about the moral tendency of theatrical amusements is now very generally consigned to the meditation of debating clubs, and speculative societies of young men under age; with our neighbors it is a weighty subject of inquiry for minds of almost the highest order. With us, the stage is considered as a harmless pastime, wholesome because it occupies the man by occupying his mental, not his sensual faculties; one of the many departments of fictitious representation; perhaps the most exciting, but also the most transitory; sometimes hurtful, generally beneficial, just as the rest are; entitled to no peculiar regard, and far inferior in its effect to many others which have no special apparatus for their application. The Germans, on the contrary, talk of it as of some new organ for refining the hearts and minds of men; a sort of lay pulpit, the worthy ally of the sacred one, and perhaps even better fitted to exalt some of our nobler feelings; because its objects are much more varied, and because it speaks to us through many avenues, addressing the eye by its pomp and decorations, the ear by its harmonies, and the heart and imagination by its poetical embellishments, and heroic acts and sentiments. Influences still more mysterious are hinted at, if not directly announced. An idea seems to lurk obscurely at the bottom of certain of their abstruse and elaborate speculations, as if the stage were destined to replace some of those sublime illusions which the progress of reason is fast driving from the earth; as if its pageantry, and allegories, and figurative shadowing-forth of things, might supply men's nature with much of that quickening nourishment which we once derived from the superstitions and mythologies of darker ages. Viewing the matter in this light, they proceed in the management of it with all due earnestness. Hence their minute and painful investigations of the origin of dramatic emotion, of its various kinds and degrees; their subdivisions of romantic and heroic and romantico-heroic, and the other endless jargon that encumbers their critical writings. The zeal of the people corresponds with that of their instructors. The want of more important public interests naturally contributes still farther to the prominence of this, the discussion of which is not forbidden, or sure to be without effect. Literature attracts nearly all the powerful thought that circulates in Germany; and the theatre is the great nucleus of German literature.

It was to be expected that Schiller would participate in a feeling so universal, and so accordant with his own wishes and prospects. The theatre of Mannheim was at that period one of the best in Germany; he felt proud of the share which he had in conducting it, and exerted himself with his usual alacrity in promoting its various objects. Connected with the duties of his office, was the more personal duty of improving his own faculties, and extending his knowledge of the art which he had engaged to cultivate. He read much, and studied more. The perusal of Corneille, Racine, Voltaire, and the other French classics, could not be without advantage to one whose exuberance of power, and defect of taste, were the only faults he had ever been reproached with; and the sounder ideas thus acquired, he was constantly busy in exemplifying by attempts of his own. His projected translations from Shakspeare and the French were postponed for the present: indeed, except in the instance of Macbeth, they were never finished: his Conradin von Schwaben, and a second part of the Robbers, were likewise abandoned: but a number of minor undertakings sufficiently evinced his diligence: and Don Carlos, which he had now seriously commenced, was occupying all his poetical faculties.

Another matter he had much at heart was the setting forth of a periodical work, devoted to the concerns of the stage. In this enterprise, Schiller had expected the patronage and co-operation of the German Society, of which he was a member. It did not strike him that any other motive than a genuine love of art, and zeal for its advancement, could have induced men to join such a body. But the zeal of the German Society was more according to knowledge than that of their new associate: they listened with approving ear to his vivid representations, and wide-spreading projects, but declined taking any part in the execution of them. Dalberg alone seemed willing to support him. Mortified, but not disheartened by their coldness, Schiller reckoned up his means of succeeding without them. The plan of his work was contracted within narrower limits; he determined to commence it on his own resources. After much delay, the first number of the Rheinische Thalia, enriched by three acts of Don Carlos, appeared in 1785. It was continued, with one short interruption, till 1794. The main purpose of the work being the furtherance of dramatic art, and the extension and improvement of the public taste for such entertainments, its chief contents are easy to be guessed at; theatrical criticisms, essays on the nature of the stage, its history in various countries, its moral and intellectual effects, and the best methods of producing them. A part of the publication was open to poetry and miscellaneous discussion.

Meditating so many subjects so assiduously, Schiller knew not what it was to be unemployed. Yet the task of composing dramatic varieties, of training players, and deliberating in the theatrical senate, or even of expressing philosophically his opinions on these points, could not wholly occupy such a mind as his. There were times when, notwithstanding his own prior habits, and all the vaunting of dramaturgists, he felt that their scenic glories were but an empty show, a lying refuge, where there was no abiding rest for the soul. His eager spirit turned away from their paltry world of paste-board, to dwell among the deep and serious interests of the living world of men. The Thalia, besides its dramatic speculations and performances, contains several of his poems, which indicate that his attention, though officially directed elsewhere, was alive to all the common concerns of humanity; that he looked on life not more as a writer than as a man. The Laura, whom he celebrates, was not a vision of the mind; but a living fair one, whom he saw daily, and loved in the secrecy of his heart. His Gruppe aus dem Tartarus (Group from Tartarus), his Kindesmörderinn (Infanticide), are products of a mind brooding over dark and mysterious things. While improving in the art of poetry, in the capability of uttering his thoughts in the form best adapted to express them, he was likewise improving in the more valuable art of thought itself; and applying it not only to the business of the imagination, but also to those profound and solemn inquiries, which every reasonable mortal is called to engage with.

In particular, the Philosophische Briefe, written about this period, exhibits Schiller in a new, and to us more interesting point of view. Julius and Raphael are the emblems of his own fears and his own hopes; their Philosophic Letters unfold to us many a gloomy conflict that had passed in the secret chambers of their author's soul. Sceptical doubts on the most important of all subjects were natural to such an understanding as Schiller's; but his heart was not of a temper to rest satisfied with doubts; or to draw a sorry compensation for them from the pride of superior acuteness, or the vulgar pleasure of producing an effect on others by assailing their dearest and holiest persuasions. With him the question about the essence of our being was not a subject for shallow speculation, charitably named scientific; still less for vain jangling and polemical victories: it was a fearful mystery, which it concerned all the deepest sympathies and most sublime anticipations of his mind to have explained. It is no idle curiosity, but the shuddering voice of nature that asks: "If our happiness depend on the harmonious play of the sensorium; if our conviction may waver with the beating of the pulse?" What Schiller's ultimate opinions on these points were, we are nowhere specially informed. That his heart was orthodox, that the whole universe was for him a temple, in which he offered up the continual sacrifice of devout adoration, his works and life bear noble testimony; yet, here and there, his fairest visions seem as if suddenly sicklied over with a pale cast of doubt; a withering shadow seems to flit across his soul, and chill it in his loftiest moods. The dark condition of the man who longs to believe and longs in vain, he can represent with a verisimilitude and touching beauty, which shows it to have been familiar to himself. Apart from their ingenuity, there is a certain severe pathos in some of these passages, which affects us with a peculiar emotion. The hero of another work is made to express himself in these terms : —

“What went before and what will follow me, I regard as two black impenetrable curtains, which hang down at the two extremities of human life, and which no living man has yet drawn aside. Many hundreds of generations have already stood before them with their torches, guessing anxiously what lies behind. On the curtain of Futurity, many see their own shadows, the forms of their passions enlarged and put in motion ; they shrink in terror at this image of themselves. Poets, philosophers, and founders of states, have painted this curtain with their dreams, more smiling or more dark, as the sky above them was cheerful or gloomy ; and their pictures deceive the eye when viewed from a distance. Many jugglers too make profit of this our universal curiosity : by their strange mummeries, they have set the outstretched fancy in amazement. A deep silence reigns behind this curtain ; no one once within it will answer those he has left without ; all you can hear is a hollow echo of your question, as if you shouted into a chasm. To the other side of this curtain we are all bound : men grasp hold of it as they pass, trembling, uncertain who may stand within it to receive them, quid sit id quod tantum morituri vident. Some unbelieving people there have been, who have asserted that this curtain did but make a mockery of men, and that nothing could be seen because nothing was behind it : but to convince these people, the rest have seized them, and hastily pushed them in.”¹

The Philosophic Letters paint the struggles of an ardent, enthusiastic, inquisitive spirit to deliver itself from the harassing uncertainties, to penetrate the dread obscurity, which overhangs the lot of man. The first faint scruples of the Doubter are settled by the maxim : “Believe nothing but thy own reason; there is nothing holier than truth." But Reason, employed in such an inquiry, can do but half the work: she is like the Conjuror that has pronounced the spell of invocation, but has forgot the counter-word; spectres and shadowy forms come crowding at his summons; in endless multitudes they press and hover round his magic circle, and the terror-struck Black-artist cannot lay them. Julius finds that on rejecting the primary dictates of feeling, the system of dogmatical belief, he is driven to the system of materialism. Recoiling in horror from this dead and cheerless creed, he toils and wanders in the labyrinths of pantheism, seeking comfort and rest, but finding none; till, baffled and tired, and sick at heart, he seems inclined, as far as we can judge, to renounce the dreary problem altogether, to shut the eyes of his too keen understanding, and take refuge under the shade of Revelation. The anxieties and errors of Julius are described in glowing terms; his intellectual subtleties are mingled with the eloquence of intense feeling. The answers of his friend are in a similar style; intended not more to convince than to persuade. The whole work is full of passion as well as acuteness; the impress of a philosophic and poetic mind striving with all its vast energies to make its poetry and its philosophy agree. Considered as exhibiting the state of Schiller's thoughts at this period, it possesses a peculiar interest. In other respects there is little in it to allure us. It is short and incomplete; there is little originality in the opinions it expresses, and none in the form of its composition. As an argument on either side, it is too rhetorical to be of much weight; it abandons the inquiry when its difficulties and its value are becoming greatest, and breaks off abruptly without arriving at any conclusion. Schiller has surveyed the dark Serbonian bog of Infidelity: but he has made no causeway through it: the Philosophic Letters are a fragment.

¹ Der Geisteserker, Schillers Werke, B. iv. p. 350.

Amid employments so varied, with health, and freedom from the coarser hardships of life, Schiller's feelings might be earnest, but could scarcely be unhappy. His mild and amiable manners, united to such goodness of heart, and such height of accomplishment, endeared him to all classes of society in

Mannheim ; Dalberg was still his warm friend ; Schwann and Laura he conversed with daily. His genius was fast enlarging its empire, and fast acquiring more complete command of it ; he was loved and admired, rich in the enjoyment of present activity and fame, and richer in the hope of what was coming. Yet in proportion as his faculties and his prospects expanded, he began to view his actual situation with less and less contentment. For a season after his arrival, it was natural that Mannheim should appear to him as land does to the shipwrecked mariner, full of gladness and beauty, merely because it is land. It was equally natural that, after a time, this sentiment should abate and pass away ; that his place of refuge should appear but as other places, only with its difficulties and discomforts aggravated by their nearness. His revenue was inconsiderable here, and dependent upon accidents for its continuance ; a share in directing the concerns of a provincial theatre, a task not without its irritations, was little adequate to satisfy the wishes of a mind like his. Schiller longed for a wider sphere of action ; the world was all before him ; he lamented that he should still be lingering on the mere outskirts of its business ; that he should waste so much time and effort in contending with the irascible vanity of players, or watching the ebbs and flows of public taste ; in resisting small grievances, and realizing a small result. He determined upon leaving Mannheim. If destitute of other holds, his prudence might still have taught him to smother this unrest, the never-failing inmate of every human breast, and patiently continue where he was : but various resources remained to him, and various hopes invited him from other quarters. The produce of his works, or even the exercise of his profession, would insure him a competence anywhere ; the former had already gained him distinction and good-will in every part of Germany. The first number of his Thalia had arrived at the court of Hessen-Darmstadt while the Duke of Sachsen-Weimar happened to be there : the perusal of the first acts of Don Carlos had introduced the author to that enlightened prince, who expressed his satisfaction and respect by transmitting him the title of Counsellor. A less splendid but not less truthful or pleasing testimonial had lately reached him from Leipzig.

"Some days ago," he writes, "I met with a very flattering and agreeable surprise. There came to me, out of Leipzig, from unknown hands, four parcels, and as many letters, written with the highest enthusiasm towards me, and overflowing with poetical devotion. They were accompanied by four miniature portraits, two of which are of very beautiful young ladies, and by a pocket-book sewed in the finest taste. Such a present, from people who can have no interest in it, but to let me know that they wish me well, and thank me for some cheerful hours, I prize extremely; the loudest applause of the world could scarcely have flattered me so agreeably."

Perhaps this incident, trifling as it was, might not be without effect in deciding the choice of his future residence. Leipzig had the more substantial charm of being a centre of activity and commerce of all sorts, that of literature not excepted; and it contained some more effectual friends of Schiller than these his unseen admirers. He resolved on going thither. His wishes and intentions are minutely detailed to Huber, his chief intimate at Leipzig, in a letter written shortly before his removal. We translate it for the hints it gives us of Schiller's tastes and habits at that period of his history.

"This, then, is probably the last letter I shall write to you from Mannheim. The time from the fifteenth of March has hung upon my hands, like a trial for life; and, thank Heaven! I am now ten whole days nearer you. And now, my good friend, as you have already consented to take my entire confidence upon your shoulders, allow me the pleasure of leading you into the interior of my domestic wishes.

"In my new establishment at Leipzig, I purpose to avoid one error, which has plagued me a great deal here in Mannheim. It is this: No longer to conduct my own housekeeping, and also no longer to live alone. The former is not by any means a business I excel in. It costs me less to execute a whole conspiracy, in five acts, than to settle my domestic arrangements for a week; and poetry, you yourself know, is but a dangerous assistant in calculations of economy. My mind is drawn different ways; I fall headlong out of my ideal world, if a holed stocking remind me of the real world.

"As to the other point, I require for my private happiness to have a true warm friend that would be ever at my hand, like my better angel; to whom I could communicate my nascent ideas in the very act of conceiving them, not needing to transmit them, as at present, by letters or long visits. Nay, when this friend of mine lives beyond the four corners of my house, the trifling circumstance, that in order to reach him I must cross the street, dress myself, and so forth, will of itself destroy the enjoyment of the moment, and the train of my thoughts is torn in pieces before I see him.

"Observe you, my good fellow, these are petty matters; but petty matters often bear the weightiest result in the management of life. I know myself better than perhaps a thousand mothers' sons know themselves; I understand how much, and frequently how little, I require to be completely happy. The question therefore is: Can I get this wish of my heart fulfilled in Leipzig?

"If it were possible that I could make a lodgment with you, all my cares on that head would be removed. I am no bad neighbor, as perhaps you imagine; I have pliancy enough to suit myself to another, and here and there withal a certain knack, as Yorick says, at helping to make him merrier and better. Failing this, if you could find me any person that would undertake my small economy, everything would still be well.

"I want nothing but a bedroom, which might also be my working room; and another chamber for receiving visits. The house-gear necessary for me are a good chest of drawers, a desk, a bed and sofa, a table, and a few chairs. With these conveniences, my accommodation were sufficiently provided for.

"I cannot live on the ground-floor, nor close by the ridge-tile; also my windows positively must not look into the churchyard. I love men, and therefore like their bustle. If I cannot so arrange it that we (meaning the quintuple *alliance*¹) shall mess together, I would engage at the table d'hôte of the inn; for I had rather fast than eat without company, large, or else particularly good.

"I write all this to you, my dearest friend, to forewarn you of my silly tastes; and, at all events, that I may put it in your power to take some preparatory steps, in one place or another, for my settlement. My demands are, in truth, confoundedly naive, but your goodness has spoiled me.

"The first part of the Thalia must already be in your possession; the doom of Carlos will ere now be pronounced. Yet I will take it from you orally. Had we five not been acquainted, who knows but we might have become so on occasion of this very Carlos?"

Schiller went accordingly to Leipzig; though whether Huber received him, or he found his humble necessities elsewhere, we have not learned. He arrived in the end of March, 1785, after eighteen months' residence at Mannheim. The reception he met with, his amusements, occupations, and prospects are described in a letter to the Kammerrath Schwann, a bookseller at Mannheim, alluded to above. Except Dalberg, Schwann had been his earliest friend; he was now endeared to him by subsequent familiarity, not of letters and writing, but of daily intercourse; and what was more than all, by the circumstance that Laura was his daughter. The letter, it will be seen, was written with a weightier object than the pleasure of describing Leipzig: it is dated 24th April, 1785.

"You have an indubitable right to be angry at my long silence; yet I know your goodness too well to be in doubt that you will pardon me.

"When a man, unskilled as I am in the busy world, visits Leipzig for the first time, during the Fair, it is, if not excusable, at least intelligible, that among the multitude of strange things running through his head, he should for a few days lose recollection of himself. Such, my dearest friend, has till to-day been nearly my case; and even now I have to steal from many avocations the pleasing moments which, in idea, I mean to spend with you at Mannheim.

¹ Who the other three were is nowhere particularly mentioned.

"Our journey hither, of which Herr Götz will give you a circumstantial description, was the most dismal you can well imagine; Bog, Snow and Rain were the three wicked foes that by turns assailed us; and though we used an additional pair of horses all the way from Vach, yet our travelling, which should have ended on Friday, was spun out till Sunday. It is universally maintained that the Fair has visibly suffered by the shocking state of the roads; at all events, even in my eyes, the crowd of sellers and buyers is far beneath the description I used to get of it in the Empire.

"In the very first week of my residence here, I made innumerable new acquaintances; among whom, Weisse, Oeser, Hiller, Zollikofer, Professor Huber, Jünger, the famous actor Reinike, a few merchants' families of the place, and some Berlin people, are the most interesting. During Fair-time, as you know well, a person cannot get the full enjoyment of any one; our attention to the individual is dissipated in the noisy multitude.

"My most pleasant recreation hitherto has been to visit Richter's coffee-house, where I constantly find half the world of Leipzig assembled, and extend my acquaintance with foreigners and natives.

"From various quarters I have had some alluring invitations to Berlin and Dresden; which it will be difficult for me to withstand. It is quite a peculiar case, my friend, to have a literary name. The few men of worth and consideration who offer you their intimacy on that score, and whose regard is really worth coveting, are too disagreeably counterweighed by the baleful swarm of creatures who keep humming round you, like so many flesh-flies; gape at you as if you were a monster, and condescend moreover, on the strength of one or two blotted sheets, to present themselves as colleagues. Many people cannot understand how a man that wrote the Robbers should look like another son of Adam. Close-cut hair, at the very least, and postilion's boots, and a hunter's whip, were expected.

"Many families are in the habit here of spending the summer in some of the adjacent villages, and so enjoying the pleasures of the country. I mean to pass a few months in Gohlis, which lies only a quarter of a league from Leipzig, with a very pleasant walk leading to it, through the Rosenthal. Here I purpose being very diligent, working at Carlos and the Thalia; that so, which perhaps will please you more than anything, I may gradually and silently return to my medical profession. I long impatiently for that epoch of my life, when my prospects may be settled and determined, when I may follow my darling pursuits merely for my own pleasure. At one time I studied medicine con amore; could I not do it now with still greater keenness?

"This, my best friend, might of itself convince you of the truth and firmness of my purpose; but what should offer you the most complete security on that point, what must banish all your doubts about my steadfastness, I have yet kept secret. Now or never I must speak it out. Distance alone gives me courage to express the wish of my heart. Frequently enough, when I used to have the happiness of being near you, has this confession hovered on my tongue; but my confidence always forsook me, when I tried to utter it. My best friend! Your goodness, your affection, your generosity of heart, have encouraged me in a hope which I can justify by nothing but the friendship and respect you have always shown me. My free, unconstrained access to your house afforded me the opportunity of intimate acquaintance with your amiable daughter; and the frank, kind treatment with which both you and she honored me, tempted my heart to entertain the bold wish of becoming your son. My prospects have hitherto been dim and vague; they now begin to alter in my favor. I will strive with more continuous vigor when the goal is clear; do you decide whether I can reach it, when the dearest wish of my heart supports my zeal.

"Yet two short years and my whole fortune will be determined. I feel how much I ask, how boldly, and with how little right I ask it. A year is past since this thought took possession of my soul; but my esteem for you and your excellent daughter was too high to allow room for a wish, which at that time I could found on no solid basis. I made it a duty with myself to visit your house less frequently, and to dissipate such feelings by absence; but this poor artifice did not avail me.

"The Duke of Weimar was the first person to whom I disclosed myself. His anticipating goodness, and the declaration that he took an interest in my happiness, induced me to confess that this happiness depended on a union with your noble daughter; and he expressed his satisfaction at my choice. I have reason to hope that he will do more, should it come to the point of completing my happiness by this union.

"I shall add nothing farther: I know well that hundreds of others might afford your daughter a more splendid fate than I at this moment can promise her; but that any other heart can be more worthy of her, I venture to deny. Your decision, which I look for with impatience and fearful expectation, will determine whether I may venture to write in person to your daughter. Fare you well, forever loved by —
Your —

"FRIEDRICH SCHILLER."

Concerning this proposal, we have no farther information to communicate; except that the parties did not marry, and did not cease being friends. That Schiller obtained the permission he concludes with requesting, appears from other sources. Three years afterwards, in writing to the same person, he alludes emphatically to his eldest daughter; and what is more ominous, apologizes for his silence to her. Schiller's situation at this period was such as to preclude the idea of present marriage; perhaps, in the prospect of it, Laura and he commenced corresponding; and before the wished-for change of fortune had arrived, both of them, attracted to other objects, had lost one another in the vortex of life, and ceased to regard their finding one another as desirable.

Schiller's medical project, like many which he formed, never came to any issue. In moments of anxiety, amid the fluctuations of his lot, the thought of this profession floated through his mind, as of a distant stronghold, to which, in time of need, he might retire. But literature was too intimately interwoven with his dispositions and his habits to be seriously interfered with; it was only at brief intervals that the pleasure of pursuing it exclusively seemed over-balanced by its inconveniences. He needed a more certain income than poetry could yield him; but he wished to derive it from some pursuit less alien to his darling study. Medicine he never practised after leaving Stuttgart.

In the mean time, whatever he might afterwards resolve on, he determined to complete his Carlos, the half of which, composed a considerable time before, had lately been running the gauntlet of criticism in the Thalia.¹ With this for his chief occupation, Gohlis or Leipzig for his residence, and a circle of chosen friends for his entertainment, Schiller's days went happily along. His Lied an die Freude (Song to Joy), one of his most spirited and beautiful lyrical productions, was composed here: it bespeaks a mind impetuous even in its gladness, and overflowing with warm and earnest emotions.

But the love of change is grounded on the difference between anticipation and reality, and dwells with man till the age when habit becomes stronger than desire, or anticipation ceases to be hope. Schiller did not find that his establishment at Leipzig, though pleasant while it lasted, would realize his ulterior views: he yielded to some of his "alluring invitations," and went to Dresden in the end of summer. Dresden contained many persons who admired him, more who admired his fame, and a few who loved himself. Among the latter, the Appellationsrath Körner deserves especial mention.² Schiller found a true friend in Körner, and made his house a home. He parted his time between Dresden and Löschwitz, near it, where that gentleman resided: it was here that Don Carlos, the printing of which was meanwhile proceeding at Leipzig, received its completion and last corrections.¹ It was published in 1786.

¹ Wieland's rather harsh and not too judicious sentence on it may be seen at large in Gruber's Wieland Geschildert, B. ii. s. 571.

² The well-written life, prefixed to the Stuttgart and Tübingen edition of Schiller's works, is by this Körner. The Theodor Körner, whose Lyre and Sword became afterwards famous, was his son.

The story of Don Carlos seems peculiarly adapted for dramatists. The spectacle of a royal youth condemned to death by his father, of which happily our European annals furnish but another example, is among the most tragical that can be figured; the character of that youth, the intermixture of bigotry and jealousy, and love, with the other strong passions, which brought on his fate, afford a combination of circumstances, affecting in themselves, and well calculated for the basis of deeply interesting fiction. Accordingly they have not been neglected: Carlos has often been the theme of poets; particularly since the time when his history, recorded by the Abbé St. Réal, was exposed in more brilliant colors to the inspection of every writer, and almost of every reader.

The Abbé St. Réal was a dexterous artist in that half-illicit species of composition, the historic novel: in the course of his

¹ In vol. x. of the Vienna edition of Schiller are some ludicrous verses, almost his sole attempt in the way of drollery, bearing a title equivalent to this: "To the Right Honorable the Board of Washers, the most humble Memorial of a downcast Tragic Poet, at Löschwitz;" of which Doering gives the following account. "The first part of Don Carlos being already printed, by Göschel, in Leipzig, the poet, pressed for the remainder, felt himself obliged to stay behind from an excursion which the Körner family were making, in a fine autumn day. Unluckily, the lady of the house, thinking Schiller was to go along with them, had locked all her cupboards and the cellar. Schiller found himself without meat or drink, or even wood for fuel; still farther exasperated by the dabbling of some washer-maids beneath his window, he produced these lines." The poem is of the kind which cannot be translated; the first three stanzas are as follows:—

"Die Wäsche klatscht vor meiner Thür,
Es plärrt die Küchensofe,
Und mich, mich führt das Flügelthier
Zu König Phillips Hofe.

"Ich eile durch die Gallerie
Mit schnellem Schritt, belausche
Dort die Prinzessin Eboli
Im süßen Liebesrausche.

"Schon ruft das schöne Weib: Triumph!
Schon hör' ich — Tod und Hölle!
Was hör' ich — einen nasen Strumpf Geworfen in die Welle."

operations, he lighted on these incidents; and, by filling up according to his fancy, what historians had only sketched to him, by amplifying, beautifying, suppressing, and arranging, he worked the whole into a striking little narrative, distinguished by all the symmetry, the sparkling graces, the vigorous description, and keen thought, which characterize his other writings. This French Sallust, as his countrymen have named him, has been of use to many dramatists. His Conjuration contre Venise furnished Otway with the outline of his best tragedy; Epicaris has more than once appeared upon the stage; and Don Carlos has been dramatized in almost all the languages of Europe. Besides Otway's Carlos, so famous at its first appearance, many tragedies on this subject have been written: most of them are gathered to their final rest; some are fast going thither; two bid fair to last for ages. Schiller and Alfieri have both drawn their plot from St. Réal; the former has expanded and added; the latter has compressed and abbreviated.

Schiller's Carlos is the first of his plays that bears the stamp of anything like full maturity. The opportunities he had enjoyed for extending his knowledge of men and things, the sedulous practice of the art of composition, the study of purer models, had not been without their full effect. Increase of years had done something for him; diligence had done much more. The ebullience of youth is now chastened into the steadfast energy of manhood; the wild enthusiast, that spurned at the errors of the world, has now become the enlightened moralist, that laments their necessity, or endeavors to find out their remedy. A corresponding alteration is visible in the external form of the work, in its plot and diction. The plot is contrived with great ingenuity, embodying the result of much study, both dramatic and historical. The language is blank verse, not prose, as in the former works; it is more careful and regular, less ambitious in its object, but more certain of attaining it. Schiller's mind had now reached its full stature: he felt and thought more justly; he could better express what he felt and thought.

The merit we noticed in Fiesco, the fidelity with which the scene of action is brought before us, is observable to a still greater degree in Don Carlos. The Spanish court in the end of the sixteenth century; its rigid, cold formalities; its cruel, bigoted, but proud-spirited grandees; its inquisitors and priests; and Philip, its head, the epitome at once of its good and its bad qualities, in all his complex interests, are exhibited with wonderful distinctness and address. Nor is it at the surface or the outward movements alone that we look; we are taught the mechanism of their characters, as well as shown it in action. The stony-hearted Despot himself must have been an object of peculiar study to the author. Narrow in his understanding, dead in his affections, from his birth the lord of Europe, Philip has existed all his days above men, not among them. Locked up within himself, a stranger to every generous and kindly emotion, his gloomy spirit has had no employment but to strengthen or increase its own elevation, no pleasure but to gratify its own self-will. Superstition, harmonizing with these native tendencies, has added to their force, but scarcely to their hatefulness: it lends them a sort of sacredness in his own eyes, and even a sort of horrid dignity in ours. Philip is not without a certain greatness, the greatness of unlimited external power, and of a will relentless in its dictates, guided by principles, false, but consistent and unalterable. The scene of his existence is haggard, stern and desolate; but it is all his own, and he seems fitted for it. We hate him and fear him; but the poet has taken care to secure him from contempt.

The contrast both of his father's fortune and character are those of Carlos. Few situations of a more affecting kind can be imagined, than the situation of this young, generous and ill-fated prince. From boyhood his heart had been bent on mighty things; he had looked upon the royal grandeur that awaited his maturer years, only as the means of realizing those projects for the good of men, which his beneficent soul was ever busied with. His father's dispositions, and the temper of the court, which admitted no development of such ideas, had given the charm of concealment to his feelings; his life had been in prospect; and we are the more attached to him.

that deserving to be glorious and happy, he had but expected to be either. Bright days, however, seemed approaching; shut out from the communion of the Albas and Domingos, among whom he lived a stranger, the communion of another and far dearer object was to be granted him; Elizabeth's love seemed to make him independent even of the future, which it painted with still richer hues. But in a moment she is taken from him by the most terrible of all visitations; his bride becomes his mother; and the stroke that deprives him of her, while it ruins him forever, is more deadly, because it cannot be complained of without sacrilege, and cannot be altered by the power of Fate itself. Carlos, as the poet represents him, calls forth our tenderest sympathies. His soul seems once to have been rich and glorious, like the garden of Eden; but the desert-wind has passed over it, and smitten it with perpetual blight. Despair has overshadowed all the fair visions of his youth; or if he hopes, it is but the gleam of delirium, which something sterner than even duty extinguishes in the cold darkness of death. His energy survives but to vent itself in wild gusts of reckless passion, or aimless indignation. There is a touching poignancy in his expression of the bitter melancholy that oppresses him, in the fixedness of misery with which he looks upon the faded dreams of former years, or the fierce ebullitions and dreary pauses of resolution, which now prompts him to retrieve what he has lost, now withers into powerlessness, as nature and reason tell him that it cannot, must not be retrieved.

Elizabeth, no less moving and attractive, is also depicted with masterly skill. If she returns the passion of her amiable and once betrothed lover, we but guess at the fact; for so horrible a thought has never once been whispered to her own gentle and spotless mind. Yet her heart bleeds for Carlos; and we see that did not the most sacred feelings of humanity forbid her, there is no sacrifice she would not make to restore his peace of mind. By her soothing influence she strives to calm the agony of his spirit; by her mild winning eloquence she would persuade him that for Don Carlos other objects must remain, when his hopes of personal felicity have been cut off; she would change his love for her into love for the millions of human beings whose destiny depends on his. A meek vestal, yet with the prudence of a queen, and the courage of a matron, with every graceful and generous quality of womanhood harmoniously blended in her nature, she lives in a scene that is foreign to her; the happiness she should have had is beside her, the misery she must endure is around her; yet she utters no regret, gives way to no complaint, but seeks to draw from duty itself a compensation for the cureless evil which duty has inflicted. Many tragic queens are more imposing and majestic than this Elizabeth of Schiller; but there is none who rules over us with a sway so soft and feminine, none whom we feel so much disposed to love as well as reverence.

The virtues of Elizabeth are heightened by comparison with the principles and actions of her attendant, the Princess Eboli. The character of Eboli is full of pomp and profession; magnanimity and devotedness are on her tongue, some shadow of them even floats in her imagination; but they are not rooted in her heart; pride, selfishness, unlawful passion are the only inmates there. Her lofty boastings of generosity are soon forgotten when the success of her attachment to Carlos becomes hopeless; the fervor of a selfish love once extinguished in her bosom, she regards the object of it with none but vulgar feelings. Virtue no longer according with interest, she ceases to be virtuous; from a rejected mistress the transition to a jealous spy is with her natural and easy. Yet we do not hate the Princess: there is a seductive warmth and grace about her character, which makes us lament her vices rather than condemn them. The poet has drawn her at once false and fair.

In delineating Eboli and Philip, Schiller seems as if struggling against the current of his nature; our feelings towards them are hardly so severe as he intended; their words and deeds, at least those of the latter, are wicked and repulsive enough; but we still have a kind of latent persuasion that they meant better than they spoke or acted. With the Marquis of Posa, he had a more genial task. This Posa, we can easily perceive, is the representative of Schiller himself. The ardent love of men, which forms his ruling passion, was likewise the constant feeling of his author; the glowing eloquence with which he advocates the cause of truth, and justice, and humanity, was such as Schiller too would have employed in similar circumstances. In some respects, Posa is the chief character of the piece; there is a pre-eminent magnificence in his object, and in the faculties and feelings with which he follows it. Of a splendid intellect, and a daring devoted heart, his powers are all combined upon a single purpose. Even his friendship for Carlos, grounded on the likeness of their minds, and faithful as it is, yet seems to merge in this paramount emotion, zeal for the universal interests of man. Aiming, with all his force of thought and action, to advance the happiness and best rights of his fellow-creatures; pursuing this noble aim with the skill and dignity which it deserves, his mind is at once unwearied, earnest and serene. He is another Carlos, but somewhat older, more experienced, and never crossed in hopeless love. There is a calm strength in Posa, which no accident of fortune can shake. Whether cheering the forlorn Carlos into new activity; whether lifting up his voice in the ear of tyrants and inquisitors, or taking leave of life amid his vast unexecuted schemes, there is the same sedate magnanimity, the same fearless composure: when the fatal bullet strikes him, he dies with the concerns of others, not his own, upon his lips. He is a reformer, the perfection of reformers; not a revolutionist, but a prudent though determined improver. His enthusiasm does not burst forth in violence, but in manly and enlightened energy; his eloquence is not more moving to the heart than his lofty philosophy is convincing to the head. There is a majestic vastness of thought in his precepts, which recommends them to the mind independently of the beauty of their dress. Few passages of poetry are more spirit-stirring than his last message to Carlos, through the Queen. The certainty of death seems to surround his spirit with a kind of martyr glory; he is kindled into transport, and speaks with a commanding power. The pathetic wisdom of the line, "Tell him, that when he is a man, he must reverence the dreams of his youth," has often been admired: that scene has many such.
C.C Vol. 12

The interview with Philip is not less excellent. There is something so striking in the idea of confronting the cold solitary tyrant with "the only man in all his states that does not need him;" of raising the voice of true manhood for once within the gloomy chambers of thralldom and priestcraft, that we can forgive the stretch of poetic license by which it is effected. Philip and Posa are antipodes in all respects. Philip thinks his new instructor is "a Protestant;" a charge which Posa rebuts with calm dignity, his object not being separation and contention, but union and peaceful gradual improvement. Posa seems to understand the character of Philip better; not attempting to awaken in his sterile heart any feeling for real glory, or the interests of his fellow-men, he attacks his selfishness and pride, represents to him the intrinsic meanness and misery of a throne, however decked with adventitious pomp, if built on servitude, and isolated from the sympathies and interests of others.

We translate the entire scene; though not by any means the best, it is among the fittest for extraction of any in the piece. Posa has been sent for by the King, and is waiting in a chamber of the palace to know what is required of him; the King enters, unperceived by Posa, whose attention is directed to a picture on the wall:—

ACT III. SCENE X.

THE KING and MARQUIS DE POSA.

[The latter, on noticing the King, advances towards him, and kneels, then rises, and waits without any symptom of embarrassment.]

KING [looks at him with surprise].

We have met before, then?

MAR.

No.

KING.

You did my crown

Some service: wherefore have you shunn'd my thanks?

Our memory is besieged by crowds of suitors;

Omniscient is none but He in Heaven

You should have sought my looks: why did you not?

MAR. 'T is scarcely yet two days, your Majesty,
Since I returned to Spain.

KING. I am not used
To be my servants' debtor; ask of me
Some favor.

MAR. I enjoy the laws.

KING. That right
The very murderer has.

MAR. And how much more
The honest citizen! — Sire, I'm content.

KING [aside]. Much self-respect indeed, and lofty daring!
But this was to be looked for: I would have
My Spaniards haughty; better that the cup
Should overflow than not be full. — I hear
You left my service, Marquis.

MAR. Making way
For men more worthy. I withdrew.

KING. 'T is wrong:
When spirits such as yours play truant,
My state must suffer. You conceive, perhaps,
Some post unworthy of your merits
Might be offer'd you?

MAR. No, Sire, I cannot doubt
But that a judge so skilful, and experienced
In the gifts of men, has at a glance discover'd
Wherein I might do him service, wherein not.
I feel with humble gratitude the favor,
With which your Majesty is loading me
By thoughts so lofty: yet I can —

[He stops]

KING. You pause?

MAR. Sire, at the moment I am scarce prepar'd
To speak, in phrases of a Spanish subject,
What as a citizen o' th' world I've thought.
Truth is, in parting from the Court forever,
I held myself discharged from all necessity
Of troubling it with reasons for my absence.

KING. Are your reasons bad, then? Dare you not risk Disclosing them?

MAR. My life, and joyfully,
Were scope allow'd me to disclose them all.

'Tis not myself but Truth that I endanger,
Should the King refuse me a full hearing.
Your anger or contempt I fain would shun ;
But forced to choose between them, I had rather Seem to you a man deserving punishment
Than pity.

KING [with a look of expectation]. Well ?

MAR. The servant of a prince
I cannot be. [The King looks at him with astonishment.]

I will not cheat my merchant :

If you deign to take me as your servant,
You expect, you wish, my actions only ;
You wish my arm in fight, my thought in counsel ;
Nothing more you will accept of: not my actions,
Th' approval they might find at Court becomes
The object of my acting. Now for me
Right conduct has a value of its own :
The happiness my king might cause me plant
I would myself produce ; and conscious joy,
And free selection, not the force of duty,
Should impel me. Is it thus your Majesty
Requires it ? Could you suffer new creators
In your own creation ? Or could I
Consent with patience to become the chisel,
When I hoped to be the statuary ?
I love mankind ; and in a monarchy,
Myself is all that I can love.

KING. This fire
Is laudable. You would do good to others ;
How you do it, patriots, wise men think
Of little moment, so it be but done.
Seek for yourself the office in my kingdoms
That will give you scope to gratify
This noble zeal.

MAR. There is not such an office.

KING. How ?

MAR. What the king desires to spread abroad
Through these weak hands, is it the good of men ?
That good which my unfetter'd love would wish them ?
Pale majesty would tremble to behold it !
No ! Policy has fashioned in her courts
Another sort of human good ; a sort

Which she is rich enough to give away,
 Awakening with it in the hearts of men
 New cravings, such as it can satisfy.
 Truth she keeps coining in her mints, such truth
 As she can tolerate ; and every die
 Except her own she breaks and casts away.
 But is the royal bounty wide enough
 For me to wish and work in ? Must the love
 I bear my brother pledge itself to be My brother's jailer ? Can I call him happy
 When he dare not think ? Sire, choose some other
 To dispense the good which you have stamped for us.
 With me it tallies not ; a prince's servant
 I cannot be.

KING [rather quickly].

You are a Protestant.

MAR. [after some reflection].

Sire, your creed is also mine.

[After a pause.]

I find

I am misunderstood : 't is as I feared.
 You see me draw the veil from majesty,
 And view its mysteries with steadfast eye :
 How should you know if I regard as holy
 What I no more regard as terrible ?
 Dangerous I seem, for bearing thoughts too high :
 My King, I am not dangerous : my wishes
 Lie buried here. [Laying his hand on his breast.]

The poor and purblind rage

Of innovation, that but aggravates
 The weight o' th' fetters which it cannot break,
 Will never heat my blood. The century
 Admits not my ideas : I live a citizen
 Of those that are to come. Sire, can a picture
 Break your rest ? Your breath obliterates it.

KING. No other knows you harbor such ideas ?

MAR. Such, no one.

KING [rises, walks a few steps, then stops opposite the Marquis. — Aside]. New at least, this dialect !

Flattery exhausts itself : a man of parts
 Disdains to imitate. For once let's have A trial of the opposite ! Why not ?
 The strange is oft the lucky. — If so be

This is your principle, why let it pass !
 I will conform ; the crown shall have a servant
 New in Spain, — a liberal !

MAR. Sire, I see
 How very meanly you conceive of men ;
 How, in the language of the frank true spirit
 You find but another deeper artifice
 Of a more practis'd cox'ner : I can also Partly see what causes this. 'T is men ;
 'T is men that force you to it : they themselves
 Have cast away their own nobility,
 Themselves have crouch'd to this degraded posture.
 Man's innate greatness, like a spectre, frights them ;
 Their poverty seems safety ; with base skill
 They ornament their chains, and call it virtue
 To wear them with an air of grace. 'T was thus
 You found the world ; thus from your royal father
 Came it to you : how in this distorted,
 Mutilated image could you honor man ?

KING. Some truth there is in this.

MAR. Pity, however,
 That in taking man from the Creator,
 And changing him into your handiwork,
 And setting up yourself to be the god
 Of this new-moulded creature, you should have Forgotten one essential ; you yourself
 Remained a man, a very child of Adam !
 You are still a suffering, longing mortal,
 You call for sympathy, and to a god
 We can but sacrifice, and pray, and tremble !
 O unwise exchange ! unblest'd perversion !
 When you have sunk your brothers to be play'd
 As harp-strings, who will join in harmony
 With you the player ?

KING [aside]. By Heaven, he touches me !

MAR. For you, however, this is unimportant ;
 It but makes you separate, peculiar ;
 'T is the price you pay for being a god.
 And frightful were it if you failed in this !
 If for the desolated good of millions,
 You the Desolator should gain — nothing !
 If the very freedom you have blighted

And kill'd were that alone which could exalt
 Yourself! — Sire, pardon me, I must not stay :
 The matter makes me rash : my heart is full,
 Too strong the charm of looking on the one
 Of living men to whom I might unfold it.

[The Count de Lerma enters, and whispers a few words to the King. The latter beckons to him to withdraw, and continues sitting in his former posture.]

KING [to the Marquis, after Lerma is gone].

Speak on !

MAR. [after a pause]. I feel, Sire, all the worth —

KING. Speak on !

Y' had something more to say.

MAR. Not long since, Sire,
 I chanced to pass through Flanders and Brabant.
 So many rich and flourishing provinces ;
 A great, a mighty people, and still more,
 An honest people! — And this people's Father!
 That, thought I, must be divine : so thinking,
 I stumbled on a heap of human bones.

[He pauses ; his eyes rest on the King, who endeavors to return his glance, but with an air of embarrassment is forced to look upon the ground.]

You are in the right, you must proceed so.
 That you could do, what you saw you must do,
 Fills me with a shuddering admiration.
 Pity that the victim welt'ring in its blood
 Should speak so feeble an eulogium
 On the spirit of the priest ! That mere men,
 Not beings of a calmer essence, write
 The annals of the world ! Serener ages
 Will displace the age of Philip ; these will bring
 A milder wisdom ; the subject's good will then
 Be reconcil'd to th' prince's greatness ;
 The thrifty State will learn to prize its children,
 And necessity no more will be inhuman.

KING. And when, think you, would those blessed ages
 Have come round, had I recoil'd before
 The curse of this ? Behold my Spain ! Here blooms
 The subject's good, in never-clouded peace :
 Such peace will I bestow on Flanders.

MAR. Peace of a churchyard ! And you hope to end

What you have entered on ? Hope to withstand
 The timeful change of Christendom ; to stop
 The universal Spring that shall make young
 The countenance o' th' Earth ? Your purpose, single
 In all Europe, alone, to fling yourself
 Against the wheel of Destiny that rolls
 For ever its appointed course ; to clutch
 Its spokes with mortal arm ? You may not, Sire !
 Already thousands have forsook your kingdoms,
 Escaping glad though poor : the citizen
 You lost for conscience' sake, he was your noblest.
 With mother's arms Elizabeth receives
 The fugitives, and rich by foreign skill,
 In fertile strength her England blooms. Forsaken
 Of its toilsome people, lies Grenada
 Desolate ; and Europe sees with glad surprise
 Its enemy faint with self-inflicted wounds.

[The King seems moved : the Marquis observes it, and advances some steps nearer.]

Plant for Eternity and death the seed ?
 Your harvest will be nothingness. The work
 Will not survive the spirit of its former ;
 It will be in vain that you have labor'd ;
 That you have fought the fight with Nature ;
 And to plans of Ruin consecrated
 A high and royal lifetime. Man is greater Than you thought. The bondage of long slumber
 He will break ; his sacred rights he will reclaim.
 With Nero and Busiris will he rank
 The name of Philip, and — that grieves me, for You once were good.

KING. How know you that ?

MAR. [with warm energy]. You were :
 Yes, by th' All-Merciful ! Yes, I repeat it.
 Restore to us what you have taken from us.
 Generous as strong, let human happiness
 Stream from your horn of plenty, let souls ripen
 Round you. Restore us what you took from us.
 Amid a thousand kings become a king.

[He approaches him boldly, fixing on him firm and glowing looks.]

Oh, could the eloquence of all the millions,

Who participate in this great moment,
 Hover on my lips, and raise into a flame
 That gleam that kindles in your eyes?
 Give up this false idolatry of self,
 Which makes your brothers nothing! Be to us
 A pattern of the Everlasting and the True!
 Never, never, did a mortal hold so much,
 To use it so divinely. All the kings
 Of Europe reverence the name of Spain:
 Go on in front of all the kings of Europe!
 One movement of your pen, and new-created
 Is the Earth. Say but, Let there be freedom!

[Throwing himself at his feet.]

KING [surprised, turning his face away, then again toward-Posa].

Singular enthusiast! Yet — rise — I —

MAR. Look round and view God's lordly universe:
 On Freedom it is founded, and how rich
 Is it with Freedom! He, the great Creator,
 Has giv'n the very worm its sev'ral dewdrop;
 Ev'n in the mouldering spaces of Decay,
 He leaves Free-will the pleasures of a choice.
 This world of yours! how narrow and how poor!
 The rustling of a leaf alarms the lord
 Of Christendom. You quake at every virtue;
 He, not to mar the glorious form of Freedom,
 Suffers that the hideous hosts of Evil
 Should run riot in his fair Creation.
 Him the maker we behold not; calm
 He veils himself in everlasting laws,
 Which and not Him the sceptic seeing exclaims,
 "Wherefore a God? The World itself is God."
 And never did a Christian's adoration
 So praise him as this sceptic's blasphemy.

KING. And such a model you would undertake,
 On Earth, in my domains to imitate?

MAR. You, you can: who else? To th' people's good Devote the kingly power, which far too long
 Has struggled for the greatness of the throne.
 Restore the lost nobility of man.
 Once more make of the subject what he was,
 The purpose of the Crown; let no tie bind him,

Except his brethren's right, as sacred as
His own. And when, given back to self-dependence,
Man awakens to the feeling of his worth,
And freedom's proud and lofty virtues blossom,
Then, Sire, having made your realms the happiest
In the Earth, it may become your duty
To subdue the realms of others.

KING [after a long pause].

I have heard you to an end.
Not as in common heads, the world is painted
In that head of yours: nor will I mete you
By the common standard. I am the first
To whom your heart has been disclosed:
I know this, so believe it. For the sake
Of such forbearance; for your having kept
Ideas, embraced with such devotion, secret
Up to this present moment, for the sake
Of that reserve, young man, I will forget
That I have learned them, and how I learned them.
Arise. The headlong youth I will set right,
Not as his sovereign, but as his senior.
I will, because I will. So! bane itself,
I find, in generous natures may become Ennobled into something better. But Beware my Inquisition! It would grieve me
If you —

MAR. Would it? would it?

KING [gazing at him, and lost in surprise].

Such a mortal

Till this hour I never saw. No, Marquis!
No! You do me wrong. To you I will not Be a Nero, not to you. All happiness
Shall not be blighted by me: you yourself
Shall be permitted to remain a man
Beside me.

MAR. [quickly]. And my fellow-subjects, Sire?
Oh, not for me, not my cause was I pleading.
And your subjects, Sire?

KING. You see so clearly
How posterity will judge of me; yourself
Shall teach it how I treated men so soon
As I had found one.

MAR. O Sire! in being
 The most just of kings, at the same instant
 Be not the most unjust! In your Flanders
 Are many thousands worthier than I.
 'T is but yourself, — shall I confess it, Sire? —
 That under this mild form first truly see
 What freedom is.

KING [with softened earnestness].

Young man, no more of this.
 Far differently will you think of men,
 When you have seen and studied them as I have.
 Yet our first meeting must not be our last;
 How shall I try to make you mine?

MAR. Sire, let me
 Continue as I am. What good were it
 To you, if I like others were corrupted?

KING. This pride I will not suffer. From this moment
 You are in my service. No remonstrance!
 I will have it so. . . .

Had the character of Posa been drawn ten years later, it would have been imputed, as all things are, to the "French Revolution;" and Schiller himself perhaps might have been called a Jacobin. Happily, as matters stand, there is room for no such imputation. It is pleasing to behold in Posa the deliberate expression of a great and good man's sentiments on these ever-agitated subjects: a noble monument, embodying the liberal ideas of his age, in a form beautified by his own genius, and lasting as its other products.¹

Connected with the superior excellence of Posa, critics have remarked a dramatic error, which the author himself was the first to acknowledge and account for. The magnitude of Posa throws Carlos into the shade; the hero of the first three acts is no longer the hero of the other two. The cause of this, we are informed, was that Schiller kept the work too long upon his own hands:

"In composing the piece," he observes, "many interruptions occurred ; so that a considerable time elapsed between beginning and concluding it ; and, in the mean while, much within myself had changed. The various alterations which, during this period, my way of thinking and feeling underwent, naturally told upon the work I was engaged with. What parts of it had at first attracted me, began to produce this effect in a weaker degree, and, in the end, scarcely at all. New ideas, springing up in the interim, displaced the former ones ; Carlos himself had lost my favor, perhaps for no other reason than because I had become his senior ; and, from the opposite cause, Posa had occupied his place. Thus I commenced the fourth and fifth acts with quite an altered heart. But the first three were already in the hands of the public ; the plan of the whole could not now be re-formed ; nothing therefore remained but to suppress the piece entirely, or to fit the second half to the first the best way I could."

¹ Jean Paul nevertheless, not without some show of reason, has compared this Posa to the tower of a lighthouse: "high, far-shining, — empty!" (Noves 1845.)

The imperfection alluded to is one of which the general reader will make no great account ; the second half is fitted to the first with address enough for his purposes. Intent not upon applying the dramatic gauge, but on being moved and exalted, we may peruse the tragedy without noticing that any such defect exists in it. The pity and love we are first taught to feel for Carlos abide with us to the last ; and though Posa rises in importance as the piece proceeds, our admiration of his transcendent virtues does not obstruct the gentler feelings with which we look upon the fate of his friend. A certain confusion and crowding together of events, about the end of the play, is the only fault in its plan that strikes us with any force. Even this is scarcely prominent enough to be offensive.

An intrinsic and weightier defect is the want of ease and lightness in the general composition of the piece ; a defect which all its other excellencies will not prevent us from observing. There is action enough in the plot, energy enough in the dialogue, and abundance of individual beauties in both : but there is throughout a certain air of stiffness and effort, which abstracts from the theatrical illusion. The language, in general impressive and magnificent, is now and then inflated into bombast. The characters do not, as it were, verify their human nature, by those thousand little touches and nameless turns, which distinguish the genius essentially dramatic from the genius merely poetical; the Proteus of the stage from the philosophic observer and trained imitator of life. We have not those careless felicities, those varyings from high to low, that air of living freedom which Shakspeare has accustomed us, like spoiled children, to look for in every perfect work of this species. Schiller is too elevated, too regular and sustained in his elevation, to be altogether natural.

Yet with all this, Carlos is a noble tragedy. There is a stately massiveness about the structure of it; the incidents are grand and affecting; the characters powerful, vividly conceived, and impressively if not completely delineated. Of wit and its kindred graces Schiller has but a slender share: nor among great poets is he much distinguished for depth or fineness of pathos. But what gives him a place of his own, and the loftiest of its kind, is the vastness and intense vigor of his mind; the splendor of his thoughts and imagery, and the bold vehemence of his passion for the true and the sublime, under all their various forms. He does not thrill, but he exalts us. His genius is impetuous, exuberant, majestic; and a heavenly fire gleams through all his creations. He transports us into a holier and higher world than our own; everything around us breathes of force and solemn beauty. The looks of his heroes may be more staid than those of men, the movements of their minds may be slower and more calculated; but we yield to the potency of their endowments, and the loveliness of the scene which they animate. The enchantments of the poet are strong enough to silence our scepticism; we forbear to inquire whether it is true or false.

The celebrity of Alfieri generally invites the reader of Don Carlos to compare it with Filippo. Both writers treat the same subject; both borrow their materials from the same source, the nouvelle historique of St. Réal: but it is impossible that two powerful minds could have handled one given idea in more diverse manners. Their excellencies are, in fact, so opposite, that they scarcely come in competition. Alfieri's play is short, and the characters are few. He describes no scene: his personages are not the King of Spain and his courtiers, but merely men; their place of action is not the Escorial or Madrid, but a vacant, objectless platform anywhere in space. In all this, Schiller has a manifest advantage. He paints manners and opinions, he sets before us a striking pageant, which interests us of itself, and gives a new interest to whatever is combined with it. The principles of the antique, or perhaps rather of the French drama, upon which Alfieri worked, permitted no such delineation. In the style there is the same diversity. A severe simplicity uniformly marks Alfieri's style; in his whole tragedy there is not a single figure. A hard emphatic brevity is all that distinguishes his language from that of prose. Schiller, we have seen, abounds with noble metaphors, and all the warm exciting eloquence of poetry. It is only in expressing the character of Philip that Alfieri has a clear superiority. Without the aid of superstition, which his rival, especially in the catastrophe, employs to such advantage, Alfieri has exhibited in his Filippo a picture of unequalled power. Obscurity is justly said to be essential to terror and sublimity; and Schiller has enfeebled the effect of his Tyrant, by letting us behold the most secret recesses of his spirit: we understand him better, but we fear him less. Alfieri does not show us the internal combination of Filippo: it is from its workings alone that we judge of his nature. Mystery, and the shadow of horrid cruelty, brood over his Filippo: it is only a transient word or act that gives us here and there a glimpse of his fierce, implacable, tremendous soul; a short and dubious glimmer that reveals to us the abysses of his being, dark, lurid, and terrific, "as the throat of the infernal Pool." Alfieri's Filippo is perhaps the most wicked man that human imagination has conceived.

Alfieri and Schiller were again unconscious competitors in the history of Mary Stuart. But the works before us give a truer specimen of their comparative merits. Schiller seems to have the greater genius; Alfieri the more commanding character. Alfieri's greatness rests on the stern concentration of fiery passion, under the dominion of an adamantine will: this was his own make of mind; and he represents it, with strokes in themselves devoid of charm, but in their union terrible as a prophetic scroll. Schiller's moral force is commensurate with his intellectual gifts, and nothing more. The mind of the one is like the ocean, beautiful in its strength, smiling in the radiance of summer, and washing luxuriant and romantic shores: that of the other is like some black unfathomable lake placed far amid the melancholy mountains; bleak, solitary, desolate; but girdled with grim sky-piercing cliffs, overshadowed with storms, and illuminated only by the red glare of the lightning. Schiller is magnificent in his expansion, Alfieri is overpowering in his condensed energy; the first inspires us with greater admiration, the last with greater awe.

This tragedy of Carlos was received with immediate and universal approbation. In the closet and on the stage, it excited the warmest applauses equally among the learned and unlearned. Schiller's expectations had not been so high: he knew both the excellencies and the faults of his work; but he had not anticipated that the former would be recognized so instantaneously. The pleasure of this new celebrity came upon him, therefore, heightened by surprise. Had dramatic eminence been his sole object, he might now have slackened his exertions; the public had already ranked him as the first of their writers in that favorite department. But this limited ambition was not his moving principle; nor was his mind of that sort for which rest is provided in this world. The primary disposition of his nature urged him to perpetual toil: the great aim of his life, the unfolding of his mental powers, was one of those which admit but a relative not an absolute progress. New ideas of perfection arise as the former have been reached; the student is always attaining, never has attained.

Schiller's worldly circumstances, too, were of a kind well calculated to prevent excess of quietism. He was still drifting at large on the tide of life; he was crowned with laurels, but without a home. His heart, warm and affectionate, fitted to enjoy the domestic blessings which it longed for, was allowed to form no permanent attachment: he felt that he was unconnected, solitary in the world; cut off from the exercise of his kindlier sympathies; or if tasting such pleasures, it was "snatching them rather than partaking of them calmly." The vulgar desire of wealth and station never entered his mind for an instant: but as years were added to his age, the delights of peace and continuous comfort were fast becoming more acceptable than any other; and he looked with anxiety to have a resting-place amid his wanderings, to be a man among his fellow-men.

For all these wishes, Schiller saw that the only chance of fulfilment depended on unwearied perseverance in his literary occupations. Yet though his activity was unabated, and the calls on it were increasing rather than diminished, its direction was gradually changing. The Drama had long been stationary, and of late been falling in his estimation: the difficulties of the art, as he viewed it at present, had been overcome, and new conquests invited him in other quarters. The latter part of Carlos he had written as a task rather than a pleasure; he contemplated no farther undertaking connected with the Stage. For a time, indeed, he seems to have wavered among a multiplicity of enterprises; now solicited to this, and now to that, without being able to fix decidedly on any. The restless ardor of his mind is evinced by the number and variety of his attempts; its fluctuation by the circumstance that all of them are either short in extent, or left in the state of fragments. Of the former kind are his lyrical productions, many of which were composed about this period, during intervals from more serious labors. The character of these performances is such as his former writings gave us reason to expect. With a deep insight into life, and a keen and comprehensive sympathy with its sorrows and enjoyments, there is combined that impetuosity of feeling, that pomp of thought and imagery which belong peculiarly to Schiller. If he had now left the Drama, it was clear that his mind was still overflowing with the elements of poetry; dwelling among the grandest conceptions, and the boldest or finest emotions; thinking intensely and profoundly, but decorating its thoughts with those graces, which other faculties than the understanding are required to afford them. With these smaller pieces, Schiller occupied himself at intervals of leisure throughout the remainder of his life. Some of them are to be classed among the most finished efforts of his genius. The Walk, the Song of the Bell, contain exquisite delineations of the fortunes and history of man; his Ritter Toggenburg, his Cranes of Ibycus, his Hero and Leander, are among the most poetical and moving ballads to be found in any language.

Of these poems, the most noted written about this time, the Freethinking of Passion (Freigeisterei der Leidenschaft), is said to have originated in a real attachment. The lady, whom some biographers of Schiller introduce to us by the mysterious designation of the "Fräulein A —," one of the first beauties in Dresden," seems to have made a deep impression on the heart of the poet. They tell us that she sat for the picture of the princess Eboli, in his Don Carlos; that he paid his court to her with the most impassioned fervor, and the extreme of generosity. They add one or two anecdotes of dubious authenticity; which, as they illustrate nothing, but show us only that love could make Schiller crazy, as it is said to make all gods and men, we shall use the freedom to omit.

This enchanting and not inexorable spinster perhaps displaced the Mannheim Laura from her throne; but the gallant assiduities, which she required or allowed, seem not to have abated the zeal of her admirer in his more profitable undertakings. Her reign, we suppose, was brief, and without abiding influence. Schiller never wrote or thought with greater diligence than while at Dresden. Partially occupied with conducting his Thalia, or with those more slight poetical performances, his mind was hovering among a multitude of weightier plans, and seizing with avidity any hint that might assist in directing its attempts. To this state of feeling we are probably indebted for the Geistessehner, a novel, naturalized in our circulating libraries by the title of the Ghostseer, two volumes of which were published about this time. The king of quacks, the renowned Cagliostro, was now playing his dexterous game at Paris: harrowing up the souls of the curious and gullible of all ranks in that capital, by various thaumaturgic feats; raising the dead from their graves; and, what was more to the purpose, raising himself from the station of a poor Sicilian lacquey to that of a sumptuous and extravagant count. The noise of his exploits appears to have given rise to this work of Schiller's. It is an attempt to exemplify the process of hoodwinking an acute but too sensitive man; of working on the latent germ of superstition, which exists beneath his outward scepticism; harassing his mind by the terrors of magic,—the magic of chemistry and natural philosophy and natural cunning; till, racked by doubts and agonizing fears, and plunging from one depth of dark uncertainty into another, he is driven at length to still his scruples in the bosom of the Infallible Church. The incidents are contrived with considerable address, displaying a familiar acquaintance, not only with several branches of science, but also with some curious forms of life and human nature. One or two characters are forcibly drawn; particularly that of the amiable but feeble Count, the victim of the operation. The strange Foreigner, with the visage of stone, who conducts the business of mystification, strikes us also, though we see but little of him. The work contains some vivid description, some passages of deep tragical effect: it has a vein of keen observation; in general, a certain rugged power, which might excite regret that it was never finished. But Schiller found that his views had been mistaken: it was thought that he meant only to electrify his readers, by an accumulation of surprising horrors, in a novel of the Mrs. Radcliffe fashion. He felt, in consequence, discouraged to proceed; and finally abandoned it.

Schiller was, in fact, growing tired of fictitious writing. Imagination was with him a strong, not an exclusive, perhaps not even a predominating faculty: in the sublimest flights of his genius, intellect is a quality as conspicuous as any other; we are frequently not more delighted with the grandeur of the drapery in which he clothes his thoughts, than with the grandeur of the thoughts themselves. To a mind so restless, the cultivation of all its powers was a peremptory want; in one so earnest, the love of truth was sure to be among its strongest passions. Even while revelling, with unworn ardor, in the dreamy scenes of the Imagination, he had often cast a longing look, and sometimes made a hurried inroad, into the calmer provinces of reason: but the first effervescence of youth was past, and now more than ever, the love of contemplating or painting things as they should be, began to yield to the love of knowing things as they are. The tendency of his mind was gradually changing; he was about to enter on a new field of enterprise, where new triumphs awaited him.

For a time he had hesitated what to choose; at length he began to think of History. As a leading object of pursuit, this promised him peculiar advantages. It was new to him; and fitted to employ some of his most valuable gifts. It was grounded on reality, for which, as we have said, his taste was now becoming stronger; its mighty revolutions and events, and the commanding characters that figure in it, would likewise present him with things great and moving, for which his taste had always been strong. As recording the past transactions, and indicating the prospects of nations, it could not fail to be delightful to one, for whom not only human nature was a matter of most fascinating speculation, but who looked on all mankind with the sentiments of a brother, feeling truly what he often said, that "he had no dearer wish than to see every living mortal happy and contented with his lot." To all these advantages another of a humbler sort was added, but which the nature of his situation forbade him to lose sight of. The study of History, while it afforded him a subject of continuous and regular exertion, would also afford him, what was even more essential, the necessary competence of income for which he felt reluctant any longer to depend on the resources of poetry, but which the produce of his pen was now the only means he had of realizing.

For these reasons, he decided on commencing the business of historian. The composition of Don Carlos had already led him to investigate the state of Spain under Philip II.; and, being little satisfied with Watson's clear but shallow Work on that reign, he had turned to the original sources of information, the writings of Grotius, Strada, De Thou, and many others. Investigating these with his usual fidelity and eagerness, the Revolt of the Netherlands had, by degrees, become familiar to his thoughts; distinct in many parts where it was previously obscure; and attractive, as it naturally must be to a temper such as his. He now determined that his first historical performance should be a narrative of that event. He resolved to explore the minutest circumstance of its rise and progress; to arrange the materials he might collect, in a more philosophical order; to interweave with them the general opinions he had formed, or was forming, on many points of polity, and national or individual character; and, if possible, to animate the whole with that warm sympathy, which, in a lover of Freedom, this most glorious of her triumphs naturally called forth.

In the filling-up of such an outline, there was scope enough for diligence. But it was not in Schiller's nature to content himself with ordinary efforts; no sooner did a project take hold of his mind, than, rallying round it all his accomplishments and capabilities, he stretched it out into something so magnificent and comprehensive, that little less than a lifetime would have been sufficient to effect it. This History of the Revolt of the Netherlands, which formed his chief study, he looked upon but as one branch of the great subject he was yet destined to engage with. History at large, in all its bearings, was now his final aim; and his mind was continually occupied with plans for acquiring, improving, and diffusing the knowledge of it.

Of these plans many never reached a describable shape; very few reached even partial execution. One of the latter sort was an intended History of the most remarkable Conspiracies and Revolutions in the Middle and Later Ages. A first volume of the work was published in 1787. Schiller's part in it was trifling; scarcely more than that of a translator and editor. St. Réal's Conspiracy of Bedmar against Venice, here furnished with an extended introduction, is the best piece in the book. Indeed, St. Réal seems first to have set him on this task: the Abbé had already signified his predilection for plots and revolutions, and given a fine sample of his powers in treating such matters. What Schiller did was to expand this idea, and communicate a systematic form to it. His work might have been curious and valuable, had it been completed ; but the pressure of other engagements, the necessity of limiting his views to the Netherlands, prevented this for the present ; it was afterwards forgotten, and never carried farther.

Such were Schiller's occupations while at Dresden ; their extent and variety are proof enough that idleness was not among his vices. It was, in truth, the opposite extreme in which he erred. He wrote and thought with an impetuosity beyond what nature always could endure. His intolerance of interruptions first put him on the plan of studying by night ; an alluring but pernicious practice, which began at Dresden, and was never afterwards forsaken. His recreations breathed a similar spirit ; he loved to be much alone, and strongly moved. The banks of the Elbe were the favorite resort of his mornings : here wandering in solitude amid groves and lawns, and green and beautiful places, he abandoned his mind to delicious musings ; watched the fitful current of his thoughts, as they came sweeping through his soul in their vague, fantastic, gorgeous forms ; pleased himself with the transient images of memory and hope ; or meditated on the cares and studies which had lately been employing, and were again soon to employ him. At times, he might be seen floating on the river in a gondola, feasting himself with the loveliness of earth and sky. He delighted most to be there when tempests were abroad ; his unquiet spirit found a solace in the expression of his own unrest on the face of Nature ; danger lent a charm to his situation ; he felt in harmony with the scene, when the rack was sweeping stormfully across the heavens, and the forests were sounding in the breeze, and the river was rolling its chafed waters into wild eddying heaps.

Yet before the darkness summoned him exclusively to his tasks, Schiller commonly devoted a portion of his day to the pleasures of society. Could he have found enjoyment in the flatteries of admiring hospitality, his present fame would have procured them for him in abundance. But these things were not to Schiller's taste. His opinion of the "flesh-flies" of Leipzig we have already seen: he retained the same sentiments throughout all his life. The idea of being what we call a lion is offensive enough to any man, of not more than common vanity, or less than common understanding; it was doubly offensive to him. His pride and his modesty alike forbade it. The delicacy of his nature, aggravated into shyness by his education and his habits, rendered situations of display more than usually painful to him; the digito prætereuntium was a sort of celebration he was far from coveting. In the circles of fashion he appeared unwillingly, and seldom to advantage: their glitter and parade were foreign to his disposition; their strict ceremonial cramped the play of his mind. Hemmed in, as by invisible fences, among the intricate barriers of etiquette, so feeble, so inviolable, he felt constrained and helpless; alternately chagrined and indignant. It was the giant among pigmies; Gulliver in Lilliput, tied down by a thousand packthreads. But there were more congenial minds, with whom he could associate; more familiar scenes, in which he found the pleasures he was seeking. Here Schiller was himself; frank, unembarrassed, pliant to the humor of the hour. His conversation was delightful, abounding at once in rare and simple charms. Besides the intellectual riches which it carried with it, there was that flow of kindliness and unaffected good humor, which can render dulness itself agreeable. Schiller had many friends in Dresden, who loved him as a man, while they admired him as a writer. Their intercourse was of the kind he liked, sober, as well as free and mirthful. It was the careless, calm, honest effusion of his feelings that he wanted, not the noisy tumults and coarse delirium of dissipation. For this, under any of its forms, he at no time showed the smallest relish.

A visit to Weimar had long been one of Schiller's projects: he now first accomplished it in 1787. Saxony had been, for ages, the Attica of Germany; and Weimar had, of late, become its Athens. In this literary city, Schiller found what he expected, sympathy and brotherhood with men of kindred minds. To Goethe he was not introduced;¹ but Herder and Wieland received him with a cordial welcome; with the latter he soon formed a most friendly intimacy. Wieland, the Nestor of German letters, was grown gray in the service: Schiller revered him as a father, and he was treated by him as a son. "We shall have bright hours," he said; "Wieland is still young, when he loves." Wieland had long edited the Deutsche Mercur: in consequence of their connection, Schiller now took part in contributing to that work. Some of his smaller poems, one or two fragments of the History of the Netherlands, and the Letters on Don Carlos, first appeared here. His own Thalia still continued to come out at Leipzig. With these for his incidental employments, with the Belgian Revolt for his chief study, and the best society in Germany for his leisure, Schiller felt no wish to leave Weimar. The place and what it held contented him so much, that he thought of selecting it for his permanent abode. "You know the men," he writes, "of whom Germany is proud; a Herder, a Wieland, with their brethren; and one wall now encloses me and them. What excellencies are in Weimar! In this city, at least in this territory, I mean to settle for life, and at length once more to get a country."

So occupied and so intentioned, he continued to reside at Weimar. Some months after his arrival, he received an invitation from his early patroness and kind protectress, Madam von Wollzogen, to come and visit her at Bauerbach. Schiller went accordingly to this his ancient city of refuge; he again found all the warm hospitality, which he had of old experienced when its character could less be mistaken; but his excursion thither produced more lasting effects than this. At Rudolstadt, where he stayed for a time on occasion of this journey, he met with a new friend. It was here that he first saw the Fräulein Lengefeld, a lady whose attractions made him loath to leave Rudolstadt, and eager to return.

Next year he did return; he lived from May till November

¹ Doering says, "Goethe was at this time absent in Italy;" an error, as will by and by appear.

there or in the neighborhood. He was busy as usual, and he visited the Lengefeld family almost every day. Schiller's views on marriage, his longing for "a civic and domestic existence," we already know. "To be united with a person," he had said, "that shares our sorrows and our joys, that responds to our feelings, that moulds herself so pliantly, so closely to our humors; reposing on her calm and warm affection, to relax our spirit from a thousand distractions, a thousand wild wishes and tumultuous passions; to dream away all the bitterness of fortune, in the bosom of domestic enjoyment; this the true delight of life." Some years had elapsed since he expressed these sentiments, which time had confirmed, not weakened: the presence of the Fräulein Lengefeld awoke them into fresh activity. He loved this lady; the return of love, with which she honored him, diffused a sunshine over all his troubled world; and, if the wish of being hers excited more impatient thoughts about the settlement of his condition, it also gave him fresh strength to attain it. He was full of occupation, while in Rudolstadt; ardent, serious, but not unhappy. His literary projects were proceeding as before; and, besides the enjoyment of virtuous love, he had that of intercourse with many worthy and some kindred minds.

Among these, the chief in all respects was Goethe. It was during his present visit, that Schiller first met with this illustrious person; concerning whom, both by reading and report, his expectations had been raised so high. No two men, both of exalted genius, could be possessed of more different sorts of excellence, than the two that were now brought together, in a large company of their mutual friends. The English reader may form some approximate conception of the contrast, by figuring an interview between Shakspeare and Milton. How gifted, how diverse in their gifts! The mind of the one plays calmly, in its capricious and inimitable graces, over all the provinces of human interest; the other concentrates powers as vast, but far less various, on a few subjects; the one is catholic, the other is sectarian. The first is endowed with an all-comprehending spirit; skilled, as if by personal experience, in all the modes of human passion and opinion; therefore, tolerant of all; peaceful, collected; fighting for no class of men or principles; rather looking on the world, and the various battles waging in it, with the quiet eye of one already reconciled to the futility of their issues; but pouring over all the forms of many-colored life the light of a deep and subtle intellect, and the decorations of an overflowing fancy; and allowing men and things of every shape and hue to have their own free scope in his conception, as they have it in the world where Providence has placed them. The other is earnest, devoted; struggling with a thousand mighty projects of improvement; feeling more intensely as he feels more narrowly; rejecting vehemently, choosing vehemently; at war with the one half of things, in love with the other half; hence dissatisfied, impetuous, without internal rest, and scarcely conceiving the possibility of such a state. Apart from the difference of their opinions and mental culture, Shakspeare and Milton seem to have stood in some such relation as this to each other, in regard to the primary structure of their minds. So likewise, in many points, was it with Goethe and Schiller. The external circumstances of the two were, moreover, such as to augment their several peculiarities. Goethe was in his thirty-ninth year; and had long since found his proper rank and settlement in life. Schiller was ten years younger, and still without a fixed destiny; on both of which accounts, his fundamental scheme of thought, the principles by which he judged and acted, and maintained his individuality, although they might be settled, were less likely to be sobered and matured. In these circumstances we can hardly wonder that on Schiller's part the first impression was not very pleasant. Goethe sat talking of Italy, and art, and travelling, and a thousand other subjects, with that flow of brilliant and deep sense, sarcastic humor, knowledge, fancy and good nature, which is said to render him the best talker now alive.¹ Schiller looked at him in quite a different mood; he felt his natural constraint increased under the influence of a man so opposite in character, so potent in resources, so singular and so expert in using them; a man whom he could not agree with, and knew not how to contradict. Soon after their interview, he thus writes :—

¹ 1825.

“On the whole, this personal meeting has not at all diminished the idea, great as it was, which I had previously formed of Goethe; but I doubt whether we shall ever come into any close communication with each other. Much that still interests me has already had its epoch with him. His whole nature is, from its very origin, otherwise constructed than mine; his world is not my world; our modes of conceiving things appear to be essentially different. From such a combination, no secure, substantial intimacy can result. Time will try.”

The aid of time was not, in fact, unnecessary. On the part of Goethe there existed prepossessions no less hostile; and derived from sources older and deeper than the present transitory meeting, to the discontents of which they probably contributed. He himself has lately stated them with his accustomed frankness and good humor, in a paper, part of which some readers may peruse with an interest more than merely biographical.

“On my return from Italy,” he says, “where I had been endeavoring to train myself to greater purity and precision in all departments of art, not heeding what meanwhile was going on in Germany, I found here some older and some more recent works of poetry, enjoying high esteem and wide circulation, while unhappily their character to me was utterly offensive. I shall only mention Heinse’s Ardinghello and Schiller’s Robbers. The first I hated for its having undertaken to exhibit sensuality and mystical abstruseness, ennobled and supported by creative art: the last, because in it, the very paradoxes moral and dramatic, from which I was struggling to get liberated, had been laid hold of by a powerful though an immature genius, and poured in a boundless rushing flood over all our country.

“Neither of these gifted individuals did I blame for what he had performed or purposed: it is the nature and the privilege of every mortal to attempt working in his own peculiar way; he attempts it first without culture, scarcely with the consciousness of what he is about ; and continues it with consciousness increasing as his culture increases ; whereby it happens that so many exquisite and so many paltry things are to be found circulating in the world, and one perplexity is seen to rise from the ashes of another.

"But the rumor which these strange productions had excited over Germany, the approbation paid to them by every class of persons, from the wild student to the polished court-lady, frightened me ; for I now thought all my labor was to prove in vain ; the objects, and the way of handling them, to which I had been exercising all my powers, appeared as if defaced and set aside. And what grieved me still more was, that all the friends connected with me, Heinrich Meyer and Moritz, as well as their fellow-artists Tischbein and Bury, seemed in danger of the like contagion. I was much hurt. Had it been possible, I would have abandoned the study of creative art, and the practice of poetry altogether ; for where was the prospect of surpassing those performances of genial worth and wild form, in the qualities which recommended them ? Conceive my situation. It had been my object and my task to cherish and impart the purest exhibitions of poetic art ; and here was I hemmed in between Ardinghello and Franz von Moor !

"It happened also about this time that Moritz returned from Italy, and stayed with me awhile ; during which, he violently confirmed himself and me in these persuasions. I avoided Schiller, who was now at Weimar, in my neighborhood. The appearance of Don Carlos was not calculated to approximate us ; the attempts of our common friends I resisted ; and thus we still continued to go on our way apart."

By degrees, however, both parties found that they had been mistaken. The course of accidents brought many things to light, which had been hidden ; the true character of each became unfolded more and more completely to the other ; and the cold, measured tribute of respect was on both sides animated and exalted by feelings of kindness, and ultimately of affection. Ere long, Schiller had by gratifying proofs discovered that "this Goethe was a very worthy man;" and Goethe, in his love of genius, and zeal for the interests of literature, was performing for Schiller the essential duties of a friend, even while his personal repugnance continued unabated.

A strict similarity of characters is not necessary, or perhaps very favorable, to friendship. To render it complete, each party must no doubt be competent to understand the other; both must be possessed of dispositions kindred in their great lineaments: but the pleasure of comparing our ideas and emotions is heightened, when there is "likeness in unlikeness." The same sentiments, different opinions, Rousseau conceives to be the best material of friendship: reciprocity of kind words and actions is more effectual than all. Luther loved Melancthon; Johnson was not more the friend of Edmund Burke than of poor old Dr. Levitt. Goethe and Schiller met again; as they ultimately came to live together, and to see each other oftener, they liked each other better; they became associates, friends; and the harmony of their intercourse, strengthened by many subsequent communities of object, was never interrupted, till death put an end to it. Goethe, in his time, has done many glorious things; but few on which he should look back with greater pleasure than his treatment of Schiller. Literary friendships are said to be precarious, and of rare occurrence: the rivalry of interest disturbs their continuance; a rivalry greater, where the subject of competition is one so vague, impalpable and fluctuating, as the favor of the public; where the feeling to be gratified is one so nearly allied to vanity, the most irritable, arid and selfish feeling of the human heart. Had Goethe's prime motive been the love of fame, he must have viewed with repugnance, not the misdirection but the talents of the rising genius, advancing with such rapid strides to dispute with him the palm of intellectual primacy, nay as the million thought, already in possession of it; and if a sense of his own dignity had withheld him from offering obstructions, or uttering any whisper of discontent, there is none but a truly patrician spirit that would cordially have offered aid. To being secretly hostile and openly indifferent, the next resource was to enact the patron; to solace vanity, by helping the rival whom he could not hinder, and who could do without his help. Goethe adopted neither of these plans. It reflects much credit on him that he acted as he did. Eager to forward Schiller's views by exerting all the influence within his power, he succeeded in effecting this; and what was still more difficult, in suffering the character of benefactor to merge in that of equal. They became not friends only, but fellow-laborers: a connection productive of important consequences in the history of both, particularly of the younger and more undirected of the two.

Meanwhile the History of the Revolt of the United Netherlands was in part before the world; the first volume came out in 1788. Schiller's former writings had given proofs of powers so great and various, such an extent of general intellectual strength, and so deep an acquaintance, both practical and scientific, with the art of composition, that in a subject like history, no ordinary work was to be looked for from his hands. With diligence in accumulating materials, and patient care in elaborating them, he could scarcely fail to attain distinguished excellence. The present volume was well calculated to fulfil such expectations. The Revolt of the Netherlands possesses all the common requisites of a good history, and many which are in some degree peculiar to itself. The information it conveys is minute and copious; we have all the circumstances of the case, remote and near, set distinctly before us. Yet, such is the skill of the arrangement, these are at once briefly and impressively presented. The work is not stretched out into a continuous narrative; but gathered up into masses, which are successively exhibited to view, the minor facts being grouped around some leading one, to which, as to the central object, our attention is chiefly directed. This method of combining the details of events, of proceeding as it were, per saltum, from eminence to eminence, and thence surveying the surrounding scene, is undoubtedly the most philosophical of any: but few men are equal to the task of effecting it rightly. It must be executed by a mind able to look on all its facts at once; to disentangle their perplexities, referring each to its proper head; and to choose, often with extreme address, the station from which the reader is to view them. Without this, or with this inadequately done, a work on such a plan would be intolerable. Schiller has accomplished it in great perfection; the whole scene of affairs was evidently clear before his own eye, and he did not want expertness to discriminate and seize its distinctive features. The bond of cause and consequence he never loses sight of; and over each successive portion of his narrative he pours that flood of intellectual and imaginative brilliancy, which all his prior writings had displayed. His reflections, expressed or implied, are the fruit of strong, comprehensive, penetrating thought. His descriptions are vivid; his characters are studied with a keen sagacity, and set before us in their most striking points of view; those of Egmont and Orange occur to every reader as a rare union of perspicacity and eloquence. The work has a look of order; of beauty joined to calm reposing force. Had it been completed, it might have ranked as the very best of Schiller's prose compositions. But no second volume ever came to light, and the first concludes at the entrance of Alba into Brussels. Two fragments alone, the Siege of Antwerp, and the Passage of Alba's Army, both living pictures, show us still farther what he might have done had he proceeded. The surpassing and often highly picturesque movements of this War, the devotedness of the Dutch, their heroic achievement of liberty, were not destined to be painted by the glowing pen of Schiller, whose heart and mind were alike so qualified to do them justice.¹

The accession of reputation, which this work procured its author, was not the only or the principal advantage he derived from it. Eichhorn, Professor of History, was at this time about to leave the University of Jena: Goethe had already introduced his new acquaintance Schiller to the special notice of Amelia, the accomplished Regent of Sachsen-Weimar; he now joined with Voigt, the head Chaplain of the Court, in soliciting the vacant chair for him. Seconded by the general voice, and the persuasion of the Princess herself, he succeeded. Schiller was appointed Professor at Jena; he went thither in 1789.

¹ If we mistake not, Madame de Staël, in her Révolution Française, had this performance of Schiller's in her eye. Her work is constructed on a similar though a rather looser plan of arrangement: the execution of it bears the same relation to that of Schiller; it is less irregular; more ambitious in its rhetoric; inferior in precision, though often not in force of thought and imagery.

With Schiller's removal to Jena begins a new epoch in his public and private life. His connection with Goethe here first ripened into friendship, and became secured and cemented by frequency of intercourse.¹ Jena is but a few miles distant from Weimar; and the two friends, both settled in public offices belonging to the same Government, had daily opportunities of interchanging visits. Schiller's wanderings were now concluded: with a heart tired of so fluctuating an existence, but not despoiled of its capacity for relishing a calmer one; with a mind experienced by much and varied intercourse with men; full of knowledge and of plans to turn it to account, he could now repose himself in the haven of domestic comforts, and look forward to days of more unbroken exertion, and more wholesome and permanent enjoyment than hitherto had fallen to his lot. In the February following his settlement at Jena, he obtained the hand of Fräulein Lengefeld; a happiness, with the prospect of which he had long associated all the pleasures which he hoped for from the future. A few months after this event, he thus expresses himself, in writing to a friend:—

“Life is quite a different thing by the side of a beloved wife, than so forsaken and alone; even in Summer. Beautiful Nature! I now for the first time fully enjoy it, live in it. The world again clothes itself around me in poetic forms; old feelings are again awakening in my breast. What a life I am leading here ! I look with a glad mind around me ; my heart finds a perennial contentment without it ; my spirit so fine, so refreshing a nourishment. My existence is settled in harmonious composure ; not strained and impassioned, but peaceful and clear. I look to my future destiny with a cheerful heart ; now when standing at the wished-for goal, I wonder with myself how it all has happened, so far beyond my expectations. Fate has conquered the difficulties for me ; it has, I may say, forced me to the mark. From the future I expect everything. A few years, and I shall live in the full enjoyment of my spirit ; nay, I think my very youth will be renewed ; an inward poetic life will give it me again."

The obstacles to their union have already been described in the words of Goethe; the steps by which these were surmounted, are described by him in the same paper with equal minuteness and effect. It is interesting, but cannot be inserted here. See Appendix, No. 3.

To what extent these smiling hopes were realized will be seen in the next and concluding Part of this Biography.

PART III.

FROM HIS SETTLEMENT AT JENA TO HIS DEATH.

1790-1805.

THE duties of his new office naturally called upon Schiller to devote himself with double zeal to History : a subject, which from choice he had already entered on with so much eagerness. In the study of it, we have seen above how his strongest faculties and tastes were exercised and gratified : and new opportunities were now combined with new motives for persisting in his efforts. Concerning the plan or the success of his academical prelections, we have scarcely any notice : in his class, it is said, he used most frequently to speak extempore ; and his delivery was not distinguished by fluency or grace, a circumstance to be imputed to the agitation of a public appearance ; for, as Woltmann assures us, "the beauty, the elegance, ease, and true instructiveness with which he could continuously express himself in private, were acknowledged and admired by all his friends." His matter, we suppose, would make amends for these deficiencies of manner : to judge from his introductory lecture, preserved in his works, with the title, What is Universal History, and with what views should it be studied, there perhaps has never been in Europe another course of history sketched out on principles so magnificent and philosophical.¹ But college exercises were far from being his ultimate object, nor did he rest satisfied with mere visions of perfection : the compass of the outline he had traced, for a proper Historian, was scarcely greater than the assiduity with which he strove to fill it up. His letters breathe a spirit not only of diligence but of ardor ; he seems intent with all his strength upon this fresh pursuit ; and delighted with the vast prospects of untouched and attractive speculation, which were opening around him on every side. He professed himself to be "exceedingly contented with his business ;" his ideas on the nature of it were acquiring both extension and distinctness ; and every moment of his leisure was employed in reducing them to practice. He was now busied with the History of the Thirty-Years War.

¹ The paper entitled Hints on the Origin of Human Society, as indicated in the Mosaic Records, the Mission of Moors, the Laws of Solon and Lycurgus, are pieces of the very highest order ; full of strength and beauty ; delicious to the lovers of that plastic philosophy, which employs itself in giving form and life to the "dry bones" of those antique events, that lie before us so inexplicable

This work, which appeared in 1791, is considered by the German critics as his chief performance in this department of literature : The Revolt of the Netherlands, the only one which could have vied with it, never was completed ; otherwise, in our opinion, it might have been superior. Either of the two would have sufficed to secure for Schiller a distinguished rank among historians, of the class denominated philosophical ; though even both together, they afford but a feeble exemplification of the ideas which he entertained on the manner of composing history. In his view, the business of history is not merely to record, but to interpret ; it involves not only a clear conception and a lively exposition of events and characters, but a sound, enlightened theory of individual and national morality, a general philosophy of human life, whereby to judge of them, and measure their effects. The historian now stands on higher ground, takes in a wider range than those that went before him ; he can now survey vast tracts of human action, and deduce its laws from an experience extending over many climes and ages. With his ideas, moreover, his feelings ought to be enlarged : he should regard the interests not of any sect or state, but of mankind ; the progress not of any class of arts in the brief and enigmatic pages of their chroniclers. The Glance over Europe at the period of the first Crusade ; the Times of the Emperor Frederick I. ; the Troubles in France, are also masterly sketches, in a simpler and more common style.

or opinions, but of universal happiness and refinement. His narrative, in short, should be moulded according to the science, and impregnated with the liberal spirit of his time.

Voltaire is generally conceived to have invented and introduced a new method of composing history; the chief historians that have followed him have been by way of eminence denominated philosophical. This is hardly correct. Voltaire wrote history with greater talent, but scarcely with a new species of talent: he applied the ideas of the eighteenth century to the subject; but in this there was nothing radically new. In the hands of a thinking writer history has always been "philosophy teaching by experience;" that is, such philosophy as the age of the historian has afforded. For a Greek or Roman, it was natural to look upon events with an eye to their effect on his own city or country; and to try them by a code of principles, in which the prosperity or extension of this formed a leading object. For a monkish chronicler, it was natural to estimate the progress of affairs by the number of abbeys founded; the virtue of men by the sum-total of donations to the clergy. And for a thinker of the present day, it is equally natural to measure the occurrences of history by quite a different standard: by their influence upon the general destiny of man, their tendency to obstruct or to forward him in his advancement towards liberty, knowledge, true religion and dignity of mind. Each of these narrators simply measures by the scale which is considered for the time as expressing the great concerns and duties of humanity.

Schiller's views on this matter were, as might have been expected, of the most enlarged kind. "It seems to me," said he in one of his letters, "that in writing history for the moderns, we should try to communicate to it such an interest as the History of the Peloponnesian War had for the Greeks. Now this is the problem: to choose and arrange your materials so that, to interest, they shall not need the aid of decoration. We moderns have a source of interest at our disposal, which no Greek or Roman was acquainted with, and which the patriotic interest does not nearly equal. This last, in general, is chiefly of importance for unripe nations, for the youth of the world.

But we may excite a very different sort of interest if we represent each remarkable occurrence that happened to men as of importance to man. It is a poor and little aim to write for one nation; a philosophic spirit cannot tolerate such limits, cannot bound its views to a form of human nature so arbitrary, fluctuating, accidental. The most powerful nation is but a fragment; and thinking minds will not grow warm on its account, except in so far as this nation or its fortunes have been influential on the progress of the species."

That there is not some excess in this comprehensive cosmopolitan philosophy, may perhaps be liable to question. Nature herself has, wisely no doubt, partitioned us into "kindreds, and nations, and tongues:" it is among our instincts to grow warm in behalf of our country, simply for its own sake; and the business of Reason seems to be to chasten and direct our instincts, never to destroy them. We require individuality in our attachments: the sympathy which is expanded over all men will commonly be found so much attenuated by the process, that it cannot be effective on any. And as it is in nature, so it is in art, which ought to be the image of it. Universal philanthropy forms but a precarious and very powerless rule of conduct; and the "progress of the species" will turn out equally unfitted for deeply exciting the imagination. It is not with freedom that we can sympathize, but with free men. There ought, indeed, to be in history a spirit superior to petty distinctions and vulgar partialities; our particular affections ought to be enlightened and purified; but they should not be abandoned, or, such is the condition of humanity, our feelings must evaporate and fade away in that extreme diffusion. Perhaps, in a certain sense, the surest mode of pleasing and instructing all nations is to write for one.

This too Schiller was aware of, and had in part attended to. Besides, the Thirty-Years War is a subject in which nationality of feeling may be even wholly spared, better than in almost any other. It is not a German but a European subject; it forms the concluding portion of the Reformation, and this is an event belonging not to any country in particular, but to the human race. Yet, if we mistake not, this over-tendency to generalization, both in thought and sentiment, has rather hurt the present work. The philosophy, with which it is imbued, now and then grows vague from its abstractness, ineffectual from its refinement: the enthusiasm which pervades it, elevated, strong, enlightened, would have told better on our hearts, had it been confined within a narrower space, and directed to a more specific class of objects. In his extreme attention to the philosophical aspects of the period, Schiller has neglected to take advantage of many interesting circumstances, which it offered under other points of view. The Thirty Years War abounds with what may be called picturesqueness in its events, and still more in the condition of the people who carried it on. Harte's History of Gustavus, a wilderness which mere human patience seems unable to explore, is yet enlivened here and there with a cheerful spot, when he tells us of some scalade or camisado, or speculates on troopers rendered bullet-proof by art-magic. His chaotic records have, in fact, afforded to our Novelist the raw materials of Dugald Dalgetty, a cavalier of the most singular equipment, of character and manners which, for many reasons, merit study and description. To much of this, though, as he afterwards proved, it was well known to him, Schiller paid comparatively small attention; his work has lost in liveliness by the omission, more than it has gained in dignity or instructiveness.

Yet, with all its imperfections, this is no ordinary history. The speculation, it is true, is not always of the kind we wish; it excludes more moving or enlivening topics, and sometimes savors of the inexperienced theorist who had passed his days remote from practical statesmen; the subject has not sufficient unity; in spite of every effort, it breaks into fragments towards the conclusion: but still there is an energy, a vigorous beauty in the work, which far more than redeems its failings. Great thoughts at every turn arrest our attention, and make us pause to confirm or contradict them; happy metaphors,¹ some vivid descriptions of events and men, remind us of the author of Fiesco and Don Carlos. The characters of Gustavus and Wallenstein are finely developed in the course of the narrative. Tilly's passage of the Lech, the battles of Leipzig and Lützen figure in our recollection, as if our eyes had witnessed them: the death of Gustavus is described in terms which might draw "iron tears" from the eyes of veterans.¹ If Schiller had inclined to dwell upon the mere visual or imaginative department of his subject, no man could have painted it more graphically, or better called forth our emotions, sympathetic or romantic. But this, we have seen, was not by any means his leading aim.

¹ Yet we scarcely meet with one so happy as that in the Revolt of the Netherlands, where he finishes his picture of the gloomy silence and dismay

On the whole, the present work is still the best historical performance which Germany can boast of. Müller's histories are distinguished by merits of another sort; by condensing, in a given space, and frequently in lucid order, a quantity of information, copious and authentic beyond example: but as intellectual productions, they cannot rank with Schiller's. Woltmann of Berlin has added to the Thirty-Years War another work of equal size, by way of continuation, entitled History of the Peace of Munster; with the first negotiations of which treaty the former concludes. Woltmann is a person of ability; but we dare not say of him, what Wieland said of Schiller, that by his first historical attempt he "has discovered a decided capability of rising to a level with Hume, Robertson and Gibbon." He will rather rise to a level with Belsham or Smollett.

This first complete specimen of Schiller's art in the historical department, though but a small fraction of what he meant to do, and could have done, proved in fact to be the last he ever undertook. At present very different cares awaited him: in 1791, a fit of sickness overtook him; he had to exchange the inspiring labors of literature for the that reigned in Brussels on the first entrance of Alba, by this striking simile: "Now that the City had received the Spanish General within its walls, it had the air as of a man that has drunk a cup of poison, and with shuddering expectation watches, every moment, for its deadly agency."

¹ See Appendix, No. 4.

disgusts and disquietudes of physical disease. His disorder, which had its seat in the chest, was violent and threatening; and though nature overcame it in the present instance, the blessing of entire health never more returned to him. The cause of this severe affliction seemed to be the unceasing toil and anxiety of mind, in which his days had hitherto been passed: his frame, which, though tall, had never been robust, was too weak for the vehement and sleepless soul that dwelt within it; and the habit of nocturnal study had, no doubt, aggravated all the other mischiefs. Ever since his residence at Dresden, his constitution had been weakened: but this rude shock at once shattered its remaining strength; for a time the strictest precautions were required barely to preserve existence. A total cessation from every intellectual effort was one of the most peremptory laws prescribed to him. Schiller's habits and domestic circumstances equally rebelled against this measure; with a beloved wife depending on him for support, inaction itself could have procured him little rest. His case seemed hard; his prospects of innocent felicity had been too banefully obscured. Yet in this painful and difficult position, he did not yield to despondency; and at length, assistance, and partial deliverance, reached him from a very unexpected quarter. Schiller had not long been sick, when the hereditary Prince, now reigning Duke of Holstein-Augustenburg, jointly with the Count Von Schimmelmann, conferred on him a pension of a thousand crowns for three years.¹ No stipulation was added, but merely that he should be careful of his health, and use every attention to recover. This speedy and generous aid, moreover, was presented with a delicate politeness, which, as Schiller said, touched him more than even the gift itself. We should remember this Count and this Duke; they deserve some admiration and some envy.

This disorder introduced a melancholy change into Schiller's circumstances: he had now another enemy to strive with, a secret and fearful impediment to vanquish, in which much resolute effort must be sunk without producing any positive result. Pain is not entirely synonymous with Evil ; but bodily pain seems less redeemed by good than almost any other kind of it. From the loss of fortune, of fame, or even of friends, Philosophy pretends to draw a certain compensating benefit ; but in general the permanent loss of health will bid defiance to her alchemy. It is a universal diminution ; the diminution equally of our resources and of our capacity to guide them ; a penalty unmitigated, save by love of friends, which then first becomes truly dear and precious to us ; or by comforts brought from beyond this earthly sphere, from that serene Fountain of peace and hope, to which our weak Philosophy cannot raise her wing. For all men, in itself, disease is misery ; but chiefly for men of finer feelings and endowments, to whom, in return for such superiorities, it seems to be sent most frequently and in its most distressing forms. It is a cruel fate for the poet to have the sunny land of his imagination, often the sole territory he is lord of, disfigured and darkened by the shades of pain ; for one whose highest happiness is the exertion of his mental faculties, to have them chained and paralyzed in the imprisonment of a distempered frame. With external activity, with palpable pursuits, above all, with a suitable placidity of nature, much even in certain states of sickness may be performed and enjoyed. But for him whose heart is already over-keen, whose world is of the mind, ideal, internal ; when the mildew of lingering disease has struck that world, and begun to blacken and consume its beauty, nothing seems to remain but despondency and bitterness and desolate sorrow, felt and anticipated, to the end.

¹ It was to Denmark likewise that Klopstock owed the means of completing his Messias.

Woe to him if his will likewise falter, if his resolution fail, and his spirit bend its neck to the yoke of this new enemy ! Idleness and a disturbed imagination will gain the mastery of him, and let loose their thousand fiends to harass him, to torment him into madness. Alas ! the bondage of Algiers is freedom compared with this of the sick man of genius, whose heart has fainted and sunk beneath its load. His clay dwelling is changed into a gloomy prison ; every nerve is become an avenue of disgust or anguish ; and the soul sits within, in her melancholy loneliness, a prey to the spectres of despair, or stupefied with excess of suffering, doomed as it were to a "life in death," to a consciousness of agonized existence, without the consciousness of power which should accompany it. Happily, death, or entire fatuity, at length puts an end to such scenes of ignoble misery; which, however, ignoble as they are, we ought to view with pity rather than contempt.

Such are frequently the fruits of protracted sickness, in men otherwise of estimable qualities and gifts, but whose sensibility exceeds their strength of mind. In Schiller, its worst effects were resisted by the only availing antidote, a strenuous determination to neglect them. His spirit was too vigorous and ardent to yield even in this emergency: he disdained to dwindle into a pining valetudinarian; in the midst of his infirmities, he persevered with unabated zeal in the great business of his life. As he partially recovered, he returned as strenuously as ever to his intellectual occupations; and often, in the glow of poetical conception, he almost forgot his maladies. By such resolute and manly conduct, he disarmed sickness of its cruellest power to wound; his frame might be in pain, but his spirit retained its force, unextinguished, almost unimpeded; he did not lose his relish for the beautiful, the grand, or the good, in any of their shapes; he loved his friends as formerly, and wrote his finest and sublimest works when his health was gone. Perhaps no period of his life displayed more heroism than the present one.

After this severe attack, and the kind provision which he had received from Denmark, Schiller seems to have relaxed his connection with the University of Jena: the weightiest duties of his class appear to have been discharged by proxy, and his historical studies to have been forsaken. Yet this was but a change, not an abatement, in the activity of his mind. Once partially free from pain, all his former diligence awoke; and being also free from the more pressing calls of duty and economy, he was now allowed to turn his attention to objects which attracted it more. Among these one of the most alluring was the Philosophy of Kant.

The transcendental system of the Königsberg Professor had, for the last ten years, been spreading over Germany, which it had now filled with the most violent contentions. The powers and accomplishments of Kant were universally acknowledged; the high pretensions of his system, pretensions, it is true, such as had been a thousand times put forth, a thousand times found wanting, still excited notice, when so backed by ability and reputation. The air of mysticism connected with these doctrines was attractive to the German mind, with which the vague and the vast are always pleasing qualities; the dreadful array of first principles, the forest huge of terminology and definitions, where the panting intellect of weaker men wanders as in pathless thickets, and at length sinks powerless to the earth, oppressed with fatigue, and suffocated with scholastic miasma, seemed sublime rather than appalling to the Germans; men who shrink not at toil, and to whom a certain degree of darkness appears a native element, essential for giving play to that deep meditative enthusiasm which forms so important a feature in their character. Kant's Philosophy, accordingly, found numerous disciples, and possessed them with a zeal unexampled since the days of Pythagoras. This, in fact, resembled spiritual fanaticism rather than a calm ardor in the cause of science; Kant's warmest admirers seemed to regard him more in the light of a prophet than of a mere earthly sage. Such admiration was of course opposed by corresponding censure; the transcendental neophytes had to encounter sceptical gainsayers as determined as themselves. Of this latter class the most remarkable were Herder and Wieland. Herder, then a clergyman of Weimar, seems never to have comprehended what he fought against so keenly: he denounced and condemned the Kantian metaphysics, because he found them heterodox. The young divines came back from the University of Jena with their minds well nigh delirious; full of strange doctrines, which they explained to the examiners of the Weimar Consistorium in phrases that excited no idea in the heads of these reverend persons, but much horror in their hearts.¹ Hence reprimands, and objurgations, and excessive bitterness between the applicants for ordination and those appointed to confer it: one young clergyman at Weimar shot himself on this account; heresy, and jarring, and unprofitable logic, were universal. Hence Herder's vehement attacks on this "pernicious quackery;" this delusive and destructive "system of words."¹ Wieland strove against it for another reason. He had, all his life, been laboring to give currency among his countrymen to a species of diluted epicurism; to erect a certain smooth, and elegant, and very slender scheme of taste and morals, borrowed from our Shaftesbury and the French. All this feeble edifice the new doctrine was sweeping before it to utter ruin, with the violence of a tornado. It grieved Wieland to see the work of half a century destroyed: he fondly imagined that but for Kant's philosophy it might have been perennial. With scepticism quickened into action by such motives, Herder and he went forth as brother champions against the transcendental metaphysics; they were not long without a multitude of hot assailants. The uproar produced among thinking men by the conflict, has scarcely been equalled in Germany since the days of Luther. Fields were fought, and victories lost and won; nearly all the minds of the nation were, in secret or openly, arrayed on this side or on that. Goethe alone seemed altogether to retain his wonted composure; he was clear for allowing the Kantian scheme to "have its day, as all things have." Goethe has already lived to see the wisdom of this sentiment, so characteristic of his genius and turn of thought.

¹ Schelling has a book on the "Soul of the World:" Fichte's expression to his students, "To-morrow, gentlemen, I shall create God," is known to most readers.

In these controversies, soon pushed beyond the bounds of temperate or wholesome discussion, Schiller took no part: but the noise they made afforded him a fresh inducement to investigate a set of doctrines, so important in the general estimation. A system which promised, even with a very little plausibility, to accomplish all that Kant asserted his complete performance of; to explain the difference between Matter and Spirit, to unravel the perplexities of Necessity and Free-will; to show us the true grounds of our belief in God, and what hope nature gives us of the soul's immortality; and thus at length, after a thousand failures, to interpret the enigma of our being, — hardly needed that additional inducement to make such a man as Schiller grasp at it with eager curiosity. His progress also was facilitated by his present circumstances; Jena had now become the chief well-spring of Kantian doctrine, a distinction or disgrace it has ever since continued to deserve. Reinhold, one of Kant's ablest followers, was at this time Schiller's fellow-teacher and daily companion: he did not fail to encourage and assist his friend in a path of study, which, as he believed, conducted to such glorious results. Under this tuition, Schiller was not long in discovering, that at least the "new philosophy was more poetical than that of Leibnitz, and had a grander character;" persuasions which of course confirmed him in his resolution to examine it.

¹ See Herder's Leben, by his Widow. That Herder was not usually troubled with any unphilosophical scepticism, or aversion to novelty, may be inferred from his patronising Dr. Gall's system of Phrenology, or "Skull-doctrine" as they call it in Germany. But Gall had referred with acknowledgment and admiration to the Philosophie der Geschichte der Menschheit. Here lay a difference.

How far Schiller penetrated into the arcana of transcendentalism it is impossible for us to say. The metaphysical and logical branches of it seem to have afforded him no solid satisfaction, or taken no firm hold of his thoughts; their influence is scarcely to be traced in any of his subsequent writings. The only department to which he attached himself with his ordinary zeal was that which relates to the principles of the imitative arts, with their moral influences, and which in the Kantian nomenclature has been designated by the term Ästhetik,¹ or the doctrine of sentiments and emotions. On these subjects he had already amassed a multitude of thoughts; to see which expressed by new symbols, and arranged in systematic form, and held together by some common theory, would necessarily yield enjoyment to his intellect, and inspire him with fresh alacrity in prosecuting such researches. The new light which dawned, or seemed to dawn, upon him, in the course of these investigations, is reflected, in various treatises, evincing, at least, the honest diligence with which he studied, and the fertility with which he could produce. Of these the largest and most elaborate are the essays on Grace and Dignity; on Naïve and Sentimental Poetry; and the Letters on the Aesthetic Culture of Man: the other pieces are on Tragic Art; on the Pathetic; on the Cause of our Delight in Tragic Objects; on Employing the Low and Common in Art.

¹ From the verb αἰσθάνομαι, to feel. — The term is Baumgarten's; prior to Kant (1845).

Being cast in the mould of Kantism, or at least clothed in its garments, these productions, to readers unacquainted with that system, are encumbered here and there with difficulties greater than belong intrinsically to the subject. In perusing them, the uninitiated student is mortified at seeing so much powerful thought distorted, as he thinks, into such fantastic forms: the principles of reasoning, on which they rest, are apparently not those of common logic; a dimness and doubt overhangs their conclusions; scarcely anything is proved in a convincing manner. But this is no strange quality in such writings. To an exoteric reader the philosophy of Kant almost always appears to invert the common maxim; its end and aim seem not to be "to make abstruse things simple, but to make simple things abstruse." Often a proposition of inscrutable and dread aspect, when resolutely grappled with, and torn from its shady den, and its bristling entrenchments of uncouth terminology, and dragged forth into the open light of day, to be seen by the natural eye, and tried by merely human understanding, proves to be a very harmless truth, familiar to us from of old, sometimes so familiar as to be a truism. Too frequently, the anxious novice is reminded of Dryden in the Battle of the Books: there is a helmet of rusty iron, dark, grim, gigantic; and within it, at the farthest corner, is a head no bigger than a walnut. These are the general errors of Kantian criticism; in the present works, they are by no means of the worst or most pervading kind; and there is a fundamental merit which does more than counterbalance them. By the aid of study, the doctrine set before us can, in general, at length be comprehended; and Schiller's fine intellect, recognizable even in its masquerade, is ever and anon peering forth in its native form, which all may understand, which all must relish, and presending us with passages that show like bright verdant islands in the misty sea of metaphysics.

We have been compelled to offer these remarks on Kant's Philosophy; but it is right to add that they are the result of only very limited acquaintance with the subject. We cannot wish that any influence of ours should add a note, however feeble, to the loud and not at all melodious cry which has been raised against it in this country. When a class of doctrines so involved in difficulties, yet so sanctioned by illustrious names, is set before us, curiosity must have a theory respecting them, and indolence and other humbler feelings are too ready to afford her one. To call Kant's system a laborious dream, and its adherents crazy mystics, is a brief method, brief but false. The critic, whose philosophy includes the craziness of men like these, so easily and smoothly in its formulas, should render thanks to Heaven for having gifted him with science and acumen, as few in any age or country have been gifted. Meaner men, however, ought to recollect that where we do not understand, we should postpone deciding, or, at least, keep our decision for our own exclusive benefit. We of England may reject this Kantian system, perhaps with reason; but it ought to be on other grounds than are yet before us. Philosophy is science, and science, as Schiller has observed, cannot always be explained in "conversations by the parlor fire," or in written treatises that resemble such. The cul bono of these doctrines may not, it is true, be expressible by arithmetical computations: the subject also is perplexed with obscurities, and probably with manifold delusions; and too often its interpreters with us have been like "tenebrific stars," that "did ray out darkness" on a matter itself sufficiently dark. But what then? Is the jewel always to be found among the common dust of the highway, and always to be estimated by its value in the common judgment? It lies embosomed in the depths of the mine; rocks must be rent before it can be reached; skilful eyes and hands must separate it from the rubbish where it lies concealed, and kingly purchasers alone can prize it and buy it. This law of ostracism is as dangerous in science as it was of old in politics. Let us not forget that many things are true which cannot be demonstrated by the rules of Watt's Logic; that many truths are valuable, for which no price is given in Paternoster Row, and no preferment offered at St. Stephen's! Whoever reads these treatises of Schiller with attention, will perceive that they depend on principles of an immensely higher and more complex character than our "Essays on Taste," and our "Inquiries concerning the Freedom of the Will." The laws of criticism, which it is their purpose to establish, are derived from the inmost nature of man; the scheme of morality, which they inculcate, soars into a brighter region, very far beyond the ken of our "Utilities" and "Reflex-senses." They do not teach us "to judge of poetry and art as we judge of dinner," merely by observing the impressions it produced in us; and they do derive the duties and chief end of man from other grounds than the philosophy of Profit and Loss. These Letters on Esthetic Culture, without the aid of anything which the most sceptical could designate as superstition, trace out and attempt to sanction for us a system of morality, in which the sublimest feelings of the Stoic and the Christian are represented but as stages in our progress to the pinnacle of true human grandeur; and man, isolated on this fragment of the universe, encompassed with the boundless desolate Unknown, at war with Fate, without help or the hope of help, is confidently called upon to rise into a calm cloudless height of internal activity and peace, and be, what he has fondly named himself, the god of this lower world. When such are the results, who would not make an effort for the steps by which they are attained? In Schiller's treatises, it must be owned, the reader, after all exertions, will be fortunate if he can find them. Yet a second perusal will satisfy him better than the first; and among the shapeless immensities which fill the Night of Kantism, and the meteoric coruscations, which perplex him rather than enlighten, he will fancy he descries some streaks of a serener radiance, which he will pray devoutly that time may purify and ripen into perfect day. The Philosophy of Kant is probably combined with errors to its very core; but perhaps also, this ponderous unmanageable dross may bear in it the everlasting gold of truth! Mighty spirits have already labored in refining it: is it wise in us to take up with the base pewter of Utility, and renounce such projects altogether? We trust, not.¹

That Schiller's genius profited by this laborious and ardent study of Æsthetic Metaphysics, has frequently been doubted, and sometimes denied. That, after such investigations, the process of composition would become more difficult, might be inferred from the nature of the case. That also the principles of this critical theory were in part erroneous, in still greater part too far-fetched and fine-spun for application to the business of writing, we may farther venture to assert. But excellence, not ease of composition, is the thing to be desired; and in a mind like Schiller's, so full of energy, of images and thoughts and creative power, the more sedulous practice of selection was little likely to be detrimental. And though considerable errors might mingle with the rules by which he judged himself, the habit of judging carelessly, or not at all, is far worse than that of sometimes judging wrong. Besides, once accustomed to attend strictly to the operations of his genius, and rigorously to try its products, such a man as Schiller could not fail in time to discover what was false in the principles by which he tried them, and consequently, in the end, to retain the benefits of this procedure without its evils. There is doubtless a purism in taste, a rigid fantastical demand of perfection, a horror at approaching the limits of impropriety, which obstructs the free impulse of the faculties, and if excessive, would altogether deaden them. But the excess on the other side is much more frequent, and, for high endowments, infinitely more pernicious. After the strongest efforts, there may be little realized; without strong efforts, there must be little. That too much care does hurt in any of our tasks is a doctrine so flattering to indolence, that we ought to receive it with extreme caution. In works impressed with the stamp of true genius, their quality, not their extent, is what we value: a dull man may spend his lifetime writing little; better so than writing much; but a man of powerful mind is liable to no such danger. Of all our authors, Gray is perhaps the only one that from fastidiousness of taste has written less than he should have done: there are thousands that have erred the other way. What would a Spanish reader give, had Lope de Vega composed a hundred times as little, and that little a hundred times as well!

¹ Are our hopes from Mr. Coleridge always to be fruitless? Sneers at the common-sense philosophy of the Scotch are of little use: it is a poor philosophy, perhaps; but not so poor as none at all, which seems to be the state of matters here at present.

Schiller's own ideas on these points appear to be sufficiently sound: they are sketched in the following extract of a letter, interesting also as a record of his purposes and intellectual condition at this period:—

"Criticism must now make good to me the damage she herself has done. And damaged me she most certainly has; for the boldness, the living glow which I felt before a rule was known to me, have for several years been wanting. I now see myself create and form: I watch the play of inspiration; and my fancy, knowing she is not without witnesses of her movements, no longer moves with equal freedom. I hope, however, ultimately to advance so far that art shall become a second nature, as polished manners are to well-bred men; then Imagination will regain her former freedom, and submit to none but voluntary limitations."

Schiller's subsequent writings are the best proof that in these expectations he had not miscalculated.

The historical and critical studies, in which he had been so extensively and seriously engaged, could not remain without effect on Schiller's general intellectual character. He had spent five active years in studies directed almost solely to the understanding, or the faculties connected with it; and such industry united to such ardor had produced an immense accession of ideas. History had furnished him with pictures of manners and events, of strange conjunctures and conditions of existence; it had given him more minute and truer conceptions of human nature in its many forms, new and more accurate opinions on the character and end of man. The domain of his mind was both enlarged and enlightened; a multitude of images and detached facts and perceptions had been laid up in his memory; and his intellect was at once enriched by acquired thoughts, and strengthened by increased exercise on a wider circle of knowledge.

But to understand was not enough for Schiller; there were in him faculties which this could not employ, and therefore could not satisfy. The primary vocation of his nature was poetry: the acquisitions of his other faculties served but as the materials for his poetic faculty to act upon, and seemed imperfect till they had been sublimated into the pure and perfect forms of beauty, which it is the business of this to elicit from them. New thoughts gave birth to new feelings: and both of these he was now called upon to body forth, to represent by visible types, to animate and adorn with the magic of creative genius. The first youthful blaze of poetic ardor had long since passed away; but this large increase of knowledge awakened it anew, refined by years and experience into a steadier and clearer flame. Vague shadows of unaccomplished excellence, gleams of ideal beauty, were now hovering fitfully across his mind: he longed to turn them into shape, and give them a local habitation and a name. Criticism, likewise, had exalted his notions of art: the modern writers on subjects of taste, Aristotle, the ancient poets, he had lately studied; he had carefully endeavored to extract the truth from each, and to amalgamate their principles with his own; in choosing, he was now more difficult to satisfy. Minor poems had all along been partly occupying his attention; but they yielded no space for the intensity of his impulses, and the magnificent ideas that were rising in his fancy. Conscious of his strength, he dreaded not engaging with the highest species of his art: the perusal of the Greek tragedians had given rise to some late translations;¹ the perusal of Homer seems now to have suggested the idea of an epic poem. The hero whom he first contemplated was Gustavus Adolphus; he afterwards changed to Frederick the Great of Prussia.

¹ These were a fine version of Euripides' Iphigenia in Aulide, and a few scenes of his Phœnixes.

Epic poems, since the time of the Epigoniad, and Leonidas, and especially since that of some more recent attempts, have with us become a mighty dull affair. That Schiller aimed at something infinitely higher than these faint and superannuated imitations, far higher than even Klopstock has attained, will appear by the following extract from one of his letters:—

“An epic poem in the eighteenth century should be quite a different thing from such a poem in the childhood of the world. And it is that very circumstance which attracts me so much towards this project. Our manners, the finest essence of our philosophies, our politics, economy, arts, in short, of all we know and do, would require to be introduced without constraint, and interwoven in such a composition, to live there in beautiful harmonious freedom, as all the branches of Greek culture live and are made visible in Homer's Iliad. Nor am I disinclined to invent a species of machinery for this purpose; being anxious to fulfil, with hairsbreadth accuracy, all the requisitions that are made of epic poets, even on the side of form. Besides, this machinery, which, in a subject so modern, in an age so prosaic, appears to present the greatest difficulty, might exalt the interest in a high degree, were it suitably adapted to this same modern spirit. Crowds of confused ideas on this matter are rolling to and fro within my head; something distinct will come out of them at last.

“As for the sort of metre I would choose, this I think you will hardly guess: no other than ottave rime. All the rest, except iambic, are become insufferable to me. And how beautifully might the earnest and the lofty be made to play in these light fetters! What attractions might the epic substance gain by the soft yielding form of this fine rhyme! For, the poem must, not in name only, but in very deed, be capable of being sung; as the Iliad was sung by the peasants of Greece, as the stanzas of Jerusalem Delivered are still sung by the Venetian gondoliers.

“The epoch of Frederick's life that would fit me best, I have considered also. I should wish to select some unhappy situation; it would allow me to unfold his mind far more poetically. The chief action should, if possible, be very simple, perplexed with no complicated circumstances, that the whole might easily be comprehended at a glance, though the episodes were never so numerous. In this respect there is no better model than the Iliad."

Schiller did not execute, or even commence, the project he has here so philosophically sketched: the constraints of his present situation, the greatness of the enterprise compared with the uncertainty of its success, were sufficient to deter him. Besides, he felt that after all his wide excursions, the true home of his genius was the Drama, the department where its powers had first been tried, and were now by habit or nature best qualified to act. To the Drama he accordingly returned. The History of the Thirty-Years War had once suggested the idea of Gustavus Adolphus as the hero of an epic poem; the same work afforded him a subject for a tragedy: he now decided on beginning Wallenstein. In this undertaking it was no easy task that he contemplated; a common play did not now comprise his aim; he required some magnificent and comprehensive object, in which he could expend to advantage the new poetical and intellectual treasures which he had for years been amassing; something that should at once exemplify his enlarged ideas of art, and give room and shape to his fresh stores of knowledge and sentiment. As he studied the history of Wallenstein, and viewed its capabilities on every side, new ideas gathered round it: the subject grew in magnitude, and often changed in form. His progress in actual composition was, of course, irregular and small. Yet the difficulties of the subject, increasing with his own wider, more ambitious conceptions, did not abate his diligence: Wallenstein, with many interruptions and many alterations, sometimes stationary, sometimes retrograde, continued on the whole, though slowly, to advance.

This was for several years his chosen occupation, the task to which he consecrated his brightest hours, and the finest part of his faculties. For humbler employments, demanding rather industry than inspiration, there still remained abundant leisure, of which it was inconsistent with his habits to waste a single hour. His occasional labors, accordingly, were numerous, varied, and sometimes of considerable extent. In the end of 1792, a new object seemed to call for his attention; he once about this time seriously meditated mingling in politics. The French Revolution had from the first affected him with no ordinary hopes; which, however, the course of events, particularly the imprisonment of Louis, were now fast converting into fears. For the ill-fated monarch, and the cause of freedom, which seemed threatened with disgrace in the treatment he was likely to receive, Schiller felt so deeply interested, that he had determined, in his case a determination not without its risks, to address an appeal on these subjects to the French people and the world at large. The voice of reason advocating liberty as well as order might still, he conceived, make a salutary impression in this period of terror and delusion; the voice of a distinguished man would at first sound like the voice of the nation, which he seemed to represent. Schiller was inquiring for a proper French translator, and revolving in his mind the various arguments that might be used, and the comparative propriety of using or forbearing to use them; but the progress of things superseded the necessity of such deliberation. In a few months, Louis perished on the scaffold; the Bourbon family were murdered, or scattered over Europe; and the French government was changed into a frightful chaos, amid the tumultuous and bloody horrors of which, calm truth had no longer a chance to be heard. Schiller turned away from these repulsive and appalling scenes, into other regions where his heart was more familiar, and his powers more likely to produce effect. The French Revolution had distressed and shocked him; but it did not lessen his attachment to liberty, the name of which had been so desecrated in its wild convulsions. Perhaps in his subsequent writings we can trace a more respectful feeling towards old establishments; more reverence for the majesty of Custom; and with an equal zeal, a weaker faith in human perfectibility: changes indeed which are the common fruit of years themselves, in whatever age or climate of the world our experience may be gathered.

Among the number of fluctuating engagements, one, which for ten years had been constant with him, was the editing of the Thalia. The principles and performances of that work he had long looked upon as insufficient: in particular, ever since his settlement at Jena, it had been among his favorite projects to exchange it for some other, conducted on a more liberal scheme, uniting more ability in its support, and embracing a much wider compass of literary interests. Many of the most distinguished persons in Germany had agreed to assist him in executing such a plan; Goethe, himself a host, undertook to go hand in hand with him. The Thalia was in consequence relinquished at the end of 1793: and the first number of the Horen came out early in the following year. This publication was enriched with many valuable pieces on points of philosophy and criticism; some of Schiller's finest essays first appeared here: even without the foreign aids which had been promised him, it already bade fair to outdo, as he had meant it should, every previous work of that description.

The Musen-Almanach, of which he likewise undertook the superintendence, did not aim so high: like other works of the same title, which are numerous in Germany, it was intended for preserving and annually delivering to the world, a series of short poetical effusions, or other fugitive compositions, collected from various quarters, and often having no connection but their juxtaposition. In this work, as well as in the Horen, some of Schiller's finest smaller poems made their first appearance; many of these pieces being written about this period, especially the greater part of his ballads, the idea of attempting which took its rise in a friendly rivalry with Goethe. But the most noted composition sent forth in the pages of the Musen-Almanach, was the Xenien; ¹ a collection of epigrams which originated partly, as it seems, in the mean or irritating conduct of various contemporary authors. In spite of the most flattering promises, and of its own intrinsic character, the Horen, at its first appearance, instead of being hailed with welcome by the leading minds of the country, for whom it was intended as a rallying point, met in many quarters with no sentiment but coldness or hostility. The controversies of the day had sown discord among literary men; Schiller and Goethe, associating together, had provoked ill-will from a host of persons, who felt the justice of such mutual preference, but liked not the inferences to be drawn from it; and eyed this intellectual duumvirate, however meek in the discharge of its functions and the wearing of its honors, with jealousy and discontent.

¹ So called from ξένιον, munus hospitale; a title borrowed from Martial, who has thus designated a series of personal epigrams in his Thirteenth Book.

The cavilling of these people, awkwardly contrasted with their personal absurdity and insipidity, at length provoked the serious notice of the two illustrious associates: the result was this German Dunciad; a production of which the plan was, that it should comprise an immense multitude of detached couplets, each conveying a complete thought within itself, and furnished by one of the joint operators. The subjects were of unlimited variety; "the most," as Schiller says, "were wild satire, glancing at writers and writings, intermixed with here and there a flash of poetical or philosophic thought." It was at first intended to provide about a thousand of these pointed monodistichs; unity in such a work appearing to consist in a certain boundlessness of size, which should hide the heterogeneous nature of the individual parts: the whole were then to be arranged and elaborated, till they had acquired the proper degree of consistency and symmetry; each sacrificing something of its own peculiar spirit to preserve the spirit of the rest. This number never was completed: and, Goethe being now busy with his Wilhelm Meister, the project of completing it was at length renounced; and the Xenien were published as unconnected particles, not pretending to constitute a whole. Enough appeared to create unbounded commotion among the parties implicated: the Xenien were exclaimed against, abused, and replied to, on all hands; but as they declared war not on persons but on actions; not against Gleim, Nicolai, Manso, but against bad taste, dulness, and affectation, nothing criminal could be sufficiently made out against them.¹ The Musen-Almanach, where they appeared in 1797, continued to be published till the time of Schiller's leaving Jena : the Horen ceased some months before.

¹ This is but a lame account of the far-famed Xenien and their results. See more of the matter in Frans Horn's Poesie und Beredsamkeit; in Carlyle's Miscellanies (i. 67); &c. (Notes of 1845.)

The co-operation of Goethe, which Schiller had obtained so readily in these pursuits, was of singular use to him in many others. Both possessing minds of the first order, yet constructed and trained in the most opposite modes, each had much that was valuable to learn of the other, and suggest to him. Cultivating different kinds of excellence, they could joyfully admit each other's merit; connected by mutual services, and now by community of literary interests, few unkindly feelings could have place between them. For a man of high qualities, it is rare to find a meet companion; painful and injurious to want one. Solitude exasperates or deadens the heart, perverts or enervates the faculties; association with inferiors leads to dogmatism in thought, and self-will even in affections. Rousseau never should have lived in the Val de Montmorenci; it had been good for Warburton that Hurd had not existed; for Johnson never to have known Boswell or Davies. From such evils Schiller and Goethe were delivered; their intimacy seems to have been equal, frank and cordial; from the contrasts and the endowments of their minds, it must have had peculiar charms. In his critical theories, Schiller had derived much profit from communicating with an intellect as excursive as his own, but far cooler and more sceptical: as he lopped off from his creed the excrescences of Kantism, Goethe and he, on comparing their ideas, often found in them a striking similarity; more striking and more gratifying, when it was considered from what diverse premises these harmonious conclusions had been drawn. On such subjects they often corresponded when absent, and conversed when together. They were in the habit of paying long visits to each other's houses; frequently they used to travel in company between Jena and Weimar. "At Triesnitz, a couple of English miles from Jena, Goethe and he," we are told, "might sometimes be observed sitting at table, beneath the shade of a spreading tree; talking, and looking at the current of passengers."—There are some who would have "travelled fifty miles on foot" to join the party!

Besides this intercourse with Goethe, he was happy in a kindly connection with many other estimable men, both in literary and in active life. Dalberg, at a distance, was to the last his friend and warmest admirer. At Jena, he had Schütz, Paul, Hufland, Reinhold. Wilhelm von Humboldt, also, brother of the celebrated traveller, had come thither about this time, and was now among his closest associates. At Weimar, excluding less important persons, there were still Herder and Wieland, to divide his attention with Goethe. And what to his affectionate heart must have been the most grateful circumstance of all, his aged parents were yet living to participate in the splendid fortune of the son whom they had once lamented and despaired of, but never ceased to love. In 1793 he paid them a visit in Swabia, and passed nine cheerful months among the scenes dearest to his recollection : enjoying the kindness of those unalterable friends whom Nature had given him ; and the admiring deference of those by whom it was most delightful to be honored, — those who had known him in adverse and humbler circumstances, whether they might have respected or contemned him. By the Grand Duke, his ancient censor and patron, he was not interfered with ; that prince, in answer to a previous application on the subject, having indirectly engaged to take no notice of this journey. The Grand Duke had already interfered too much with him, and bitterly repented of his interference. Next year he died ; an event which Schiller, who had long forgotten past ill-treatment, did not learn without true sorrow, and grateful recollections of bygone kindness. The new sovereign, anxious to repair the injustice of his predecessor, almost instantly made offer of a vacant Tübingen professorship to Schiller ; a proposal flattering to the latter, but which, by the persuasion of the Duke of Weimar, he respectfully declined.

Amid labors and amusements so multiplied, amid such variety of intellectual exertion and of intercourse with men, Schiller, it was clear, had not suffered the encroachments of bodily disease to undermine the vigor of his mental or moral powers. No period of his life displayed in stronger colors the lofty and determined zeal of his character. He had already written much; his fame stood upon a firm basis; domestic wants no longer called upon him for incessant effort; and his frame was pining under the slow canker of an incurable malady. Yet he never loitered, never rested; his fervid spirit, which had vanquished opposition and oppression in his youth; which had struggled against harassing uncertainties, and passed unsullied through many temptations, in his earlier manhood, did not now yield to this last and most fatal enemy. The present was the busiest, most productive season of his literary life; and with all its drawbacks, it was probably the happiest. Violent attacks from his disorder were of rare occurrence; and its constant influence, the dark vapors with which it would have overshadowed the faculties of his head and heart, were repelled by diligence and a courageous exertion of his will. In other points, he had little to complain of, and much to rejoice in. He was happy in his family, the chosen scene of his sweetest, most lasting satisfaction; by the world he was honored and admired; his wants were provided for; he had tasks which inspired and occupied him; friends who loved him, and whom he loved. Schiller had much to enjoy, and most of it he owed to himself.

In his mode of life at Jena, simplicity and uniformity were the most conspicuous qualities; the single excess which he admitted being that of zeal in the pursuits of literature, the sin which all his life had most easily beset him. His health had suffered much, and principally, it was thought, from the practice of composing by night: yet the charms of this practice were still too great for his self-denial; and, except in severe fits of sickness, he could not discontinue it. The highest, proudest pleasure of his mind was that glow of intellectual production, that "fine frenzy," which makes the poet, while it lasts, a new and nobler creature; exalting him into brighter regions, adorned by visions of magnificence and beauty, and delighting all his faculties by the intense consciousness of their exerted power. To enjoy this pleasure in perfection, the solitary stillness of night, diffusing its solemn influence over thought as well as earth and air, had at length in Schiller's case grown indispensable. For this purpose, accordingly, he was accustomed, in the present, as in former periods, to invert the common order of things: by day he read, refreshed himself with the aspect of nature, conversed or corresponded with his friends; but he wrote and studied in the night. And as his bodily feelings were too often those of languor and exhaustion, he adopted, in impatience of such mean impediments, the pernicious expedient of stimulants, which yield a momentary strength, only to waste our remaining fund of it more speedily and surely.

"During summer, his place of study was in a garden, which at length he purchased, in the suburbs of Jena, not far from the Weselhöfts' house, where at that time was the office of the Allgemeine Litteratur-Zeitung. Reckoning from the market-place of Jena, it lies on the south-west border of the town, between the Engelgatter and the Neuthor, in a hollow defile, through which a part of the Leutrabach flows round the city. On the top of the acclivity, from which there is a beautiful prospect into the valley of the Saal, and the fir mountains of the neighboring forest, Schiller built himself a small house, with a single chamber.¹ It was his favorite abode during hours of composition; a great part of the works he then wrote were written here. In winter he likewise dwelt apart from the noise of men; in the Griesbachs' house, on the outside of the city-trench. . . . On sitting down to his desk at night, he was wont to keep some strong coffee, or wine-chocolate, but more frequently a flask of old Rhenish, or Champagne, standing by him, that he might from time to time repair the exhaustion of nature. Often the neighbors used to hear him earnestly declaiming, in the silence of the night: and whoever had an opportunity of watching him on such occasions, a thing very easy to be done from the heights lying opposite his little garden-house, on the other side of the dell, might see him now speaking aloud and walking swiftly to and fro in his chamber, then suddenly throwing himself down into his chair and writing; and drinking the while, sometimes more than once, from the glass standing near him. In winter he was to be found at his desk till four, or even five o'clock in the morning; in summer, till towards three. He then went to bed, from which he seldom rose till nine or ten."¹

¹ "The street leading from Schiller's dwelling-house to this, was by some wrongly named the Xenien-gasse; a name not yet entirely disused."

Had prudence been the dominant quality in Schiller's character, this practice would undoubtedly have been abandoned, or rather never taken up. It was an error so to waste his strength; but one of those which increase rather than diminish our respect; originating, as it did, in generous ardor for what was best and grandest, they must be cold censurers that can condemn it harshly. For ourselves, we but lament and honor this excess of zeal; its effects were mournful, but its origin was noble. Who can picture Schiller's feelings in this solitude, without participating in some faint reflection of their grandeur! The toil-worn but devoted soul, alone, under the silent starry canopy of Night, offering up the troubled moments of existence on the altar of Eternity! For here the splendor that gleamed across the spirit of a mortal, transient as one of us, was made to be perpetual; these images and thoughts were to pass into other ages and distant lands; to glow in human hearts, when the heart that conceived them had long been mouldered into common dust. To the lovers of genius, this little garden-house might have been a place to visit as a chosen shrine; nor will they learn without regret that the walls of it, yielding to the hand of time, have already crumbled into ruin, and are now no longer to be traced. The piece of ground that it stood on is itself hallowed with a glory that is bright, pure and abiding; but the literary pilgrim could not have surveyed, without peculiar emotion, the simple chamber, in which Schiller wrote the Reich der Schatten, the Spaziergang, the Ideal, and the immortal scenes of Wallenstein.

The last-named work had cost him many an anxious, given him many a pleasant, hour. For seven years it had continued in a state of irregular, and oft-suspended progress; sometimes "lying endless and formless" before him; sometimes on the point of being given up altogether. The multitude of ideas, which he wished to incorporate in the structure of the piece, retarded him; and the difficulty of contenting his taste, respecting the manner of effecting this, retarded him still more. In Wallenstein he wished to embody the more enlarged notions which experience had given him of men, especially which history had given him of generals and statesmen; and while putting such characters in action, to represent whatever was, or could be made, poetical, in the stormy period of the Thirty-Years War. As he meditated on the subject, it continued to expand; in his fancy, it assumed successively a thousand forms; and after all due strictness of selection, such was still the extent of materials remaining on his hands, that he found it necessary to divide the play into three parts, distinct in their arrangements, but in truth forming a continuous drama of eleven acts. In this shape it was sent forth to the world, in 1799; a work of labor and persevering anxiety, but of anxiety and labor, as it then appeared, which had not been bestowed in vain. Wallenstein is by far the best performance he had yet produced; it merits a long chapter of criticism by itself; and a few hurried pages are all that we can spend on it.

¹ Doering, pp. 118-131

As a porch to the great edifice stands Part first, entitled Wallenstein's Camp, a piece in one act. It paints, with much humor and graphical felicity, the manners of that rude tumultuous host which Wallenstein presided over, and had made the engine of his ambitious schemes. Schiller's early experience of a military life seems now to have stood him in good stead: his soldiers are delineated with the distinctness of actual observation; in rugged sharpness of feature, they sometimes remind us of Smollett's seamen. Here are all the wild lawless spirits of Europe assembled within the circuit of a single trench. Violent, tempestuous, unstable is the life they lead. Ishmaelites, their hands against every man, and every man's hand against them; the instruments of rapine; tarnished with almost every vice, and knowing scarcely any virtue but those of reckless bravery and uncalculating obedience to their leader, their situation still presents some aspects which affect or amuse us; and these the poet has seized with his accustomed skill.

Much of the cruelty and repulsive harshness of these soldiers, we are taught to forget in contemplating their forlorn houseless wanderings, and the practical magnanimity, with which even they contrive to wring from Fortune a tolerable scantling of enjoyment. Their manner of existence Wallenstein has, at an after period of the action, rather movingly expressed:

"Our life was but a battle and a march,
And, like the wind's blast, never-resting, homeless,
We storm'd across the war-convulsed Earth."

Still farther to soften the asperities of the scene, the dialogue is cast into a rude Hudibrastic metre, full of forced rhymes, and strange double endings, with a rhythm ever changing, ever rough and lively, which might almost be compared to the hard, irregular, fluctuating sound of the regimental drum. In this ludicrous doggerel, with phrases and figures of a correspondent cast, homely, ridiculous, graphic, these men of service paint their hopes and doings. There are ranks and kinds among them; representatives of all the constituent parts of the motley multitude, which followed this prince of Condottieri. The solemn pedantry of the ancient Wachtmeister is faithfully given; no less so are the jocund ferocity and heedless daring of Holky's Jägers, or the iron courage and stern camp-philosophy of Pappenheim's Cuirassiers. Of the Jäger the sole principle is military obedience; he does not reflect or calculate; his business is to do whatever he is ordered, and to enjoy whatever he can reach. "Free wished I to live," he says,

"Free wished I to live, and easy and gay,
And see something new on each new day;
In the joys of the moment lustily sharing,
'Bout the past or the future not thinking or caring:
To the Kaiser, therefore, I sold my bacon,
And by him good charge of the whole is taken.
Order me on 'mid the whistling fiery shot,
Over the Rhine-stream rapid and roaring wide,
A third of the troop must go to pot, —
Without loss of time, I mount and ride;

But farther, I beg very much, do you see,
That in all things else you would leave me free."

The Pappenheimer is an older man, more sedate and more indomitable; he has wandered over Europe, and gathered settled maxims of soldierly principle and soldierly privilege: he is not without a rationale of life; the various professions of men have passed in review before him, but no coat that he has seen has pleased him like his own "steel doublet," cased in which, it is his wish,

"Looking down on the world's poor restless scramble, Careless, through it, astride of his nag to ramble."

Yet at times with this military stoicism there is blended a dash of homely pathos; he admits,

"This sword of ours is no plough or spade,
You cannot delve or reap with the iron blade;
For us there falls no seed, no cornfield grows,
Neither home nor kindred the soldier knows:
Wandering over the face of the earth,
Warming his hands at another's hearth:
From the pomp of towns he must onward roam;
In the village-green with its cheerful game,
In the mirth of the vintage or harvest-home,
No part or lot can the soldier claim.
Tell me then, in the place of goods or pelf,
What has he unless to honor himself?
Leave not even ~~this~~ his own, what wonder
The man should burn and kill and plunder?"

But the camp of Wallenstein is full of bustle as well as speculation; there are gamblers, peasants, sutlers, soldiers, recruits, capuchin friars, moving to and fro in restless pursuit of their several purposes. The sermon of the Capuchin is an unparalleled composition;¹ a medley of texts, puns, nicknames, and verbal logic, conglutinated by a stupid judgment, and a fiery catholic zeal. It seems to be delivered with great unction, and to find fit audience in the camp: towards the conclusion they rush upon him, and he narrowly escapes killing or ducking, for having ventured to glance a censure at the General. The soldiers themselves are jeering, wrangling, jostling; discussing their wishes and expectations; and, at last, they combine in a profound deliberation on the state of their affairs. A vague exaggerated outline of the coming events and personages is imaged to us in their coarse conceptions. We dimly discover the precarious position of Wallenstein; the plots which threaten him, which he is meditating: we trace the leading qualities of the principal officers; and form a high estimate of the potent spirit which binds this fierce discordant mass together, and seems to be the object of universal reverence where nothing else is revered.

¹ Said to be by Goethe; the materials faithfully extracted from a real sermon (by the Jesuit Santa Clara) of the period it refers to. — There were various Jesuits Santa Clara, of that period: this is the German one, Abraham by name; specimens of whose Sermons, a fervent kind of preaching-rummage, have been reprinted in late years, for dilettante purposes. (Notes of 1846.)

In the Two Piccolomini, the next division of the work, the generals for whom we have thus been prepared appear in person on the scene, and spread out before us their plots and counterplots; Wallenstein, through personal ambition and evil counsel, slowly resolving to revolt; and Octavio Piccolomini, in secret, undermining his influence among the leaders, and preparing for him that pit of ruin, into which, in the third Part, Wallenstein's Death, we see him sink with all his fortunes. The military spirit which pervades the former piece is here well sustained. The ruling motives of these captains and colonels are a little more refined, or more disguised, than those of the Cuirassiers and Jägers; but they are the same in substance; the love of present or future pleasure, of action, reputation, money, power; selfishness, but selfishness distinguished by a superficial external propriety, and gilded over with the splendor of military honor, of courage inflexible, yet light, cool and unassuming. These are not imaginary heroes, but genuine hired men of war: we do not love them; yet there is a pomp about their operations, which agreeably fills up the scene. This din of war, this clash of tumultuous conflicting interests, is felt as a suitable accompaniment to the affecting or commanding movements of the chief characters whom it envelops or obeys.

Of the individuals that figure in this world of war, Wallenstein himself, the strong Atlas which supports it all, is by far the most imposing. Wallenstein is the model of a high-souled, great, accomplished man, whose ruling passion is ambition. He is daring to the utmost pitch of manhood; he is enthusiastic and vehement; but the fire of his soul burns hid beneath a deep stratum of prudence, guiding itself by calculations which extend to the extreme limits of his most minute concerns. This prudence, sometimes almost bordering on irresolution, forms the outward rind of his character, and for a while is the only quality which we discover in it. The immense influence which his genius appears to exert on every individual of his many followers, prepares us to expect a great man; and, when Wallenstein, after long delay and much forewarning, is in fine presented to us, we at first experience something like a disappointment. We find him, indeed, possessed of a staid grandeur; yet involved in mystery; wavering between two opinions; and, as it seems, with all his wisdom, blindly credulous in matters of the highest import. It is only when events have forced decision on him, that he rises in his native might, that his giant spirit stands unfolded in its strength before us; amid difficulties, darkness and impending ruin, at which the boldest of his followers grow pale, he himself is calm, and first in this awful crisis feels the serenity and conscious strength of his soul return. Wallenstein, in fact, though pre-eminent in power, both external and internal, of high intellect and commanding will, skilled in war and statesmanship beyond the best in Europe, the idol of sixty thousand fearless hearts, is not yet removed above our sympathy. We are united with him by feelings which he reckons weak, though they belong to the most generous parts of his nature. His indecision partly takes its rise in the sensibilities of his heart, as well as in the caution of his judgment: his belief in astrology, which gives force and confirmation to this tendency, originates in some soft kindly emotions, and adds a new interest to the spirit of the warrior; it humbles him, to whom the earth is subject, before those mysterious Powers which weigh the destinies of man in their balance, in whose eyes the greatest and the least of mortals scarcely differ in littleness. Wallenstein's confidence in the friendship of Octavio, his disinterested love for Max Piccolomini, his paternal and brotherly kindness, are feelings which cast an affecting lustre over the harsher, more heroic qualities wherewith they are combined. His treason to the Emperor is a crime, for which, provoked and tempted as he was, we do not greatly blame him; it is forgotten in our admiration of his nobleness, or recollected only as a venial trespass. Schiller has succeeded well with Wallenstein, where it was not easy to succeed. The truth of history has been but little violated; yet we are compelled to feel that Wallenstein, whose actions individually are trifling, unsuccessful, and unlawful, is a strong, sublime, commanding character; we look at him with interest, our concern at his fate is tinged with a shade of kindly pity.

“Night must it be, ere Friedland’s star will beam:”

In Octavio Piccolomini, his war-companion, we can find less fault, yet we take less pleasure. Octavio's qualities are chiefly negative; he rather walks by the letter of the moral law, than by its spirit; his conduct is externally correct, but there is no touch of generosity within. He is more of the courtier than of the soldier: his weapon is intrigue, not force. Believing firmly that "whatever is, is best," he distrusts all new and extraordinary things; he has no faith in human nature, and seems to be virtuous himself more by calculation than by impulse. We scarcely thank him for his loyalty; serving his Emperor, he ruins and betrays his friend: and, besides, though he does not own it, personal ambition is among his leading motives; he wishes to be general and prince, and Wallenstein is not only a traitor to his sovereign, but a bar to this advancement. It is true, Octavio does not personally tempt him towards his destruction; but neither does he warn him from it; and perhaps he knew that fresh temptation was superfluous. Wallenstein did not deserve such treatment from a man whom he had trusted as a brother, even though such confidence was blind, and guided by visions and starry omens. Octavio is a skilful, prudent, managing statesman; of the kind praised loudly, if not sincerely, by their friends, and detested deeply by their enemies. His object may be lawful or even laudable; but his ways are crooked; we dislike him but the more that we know not positively how to blame him.

Octavio Piccolomini and Wallenstein are, as it were, the two opposing forces by which this whole universe of military politics is kept in motion. The struggle of magnanimity and strength combined with treason, against cunning and apparent virtue, aided by law, gives rise to a series of great actions, which are here vividly presented to our view. We mingle in the clashing interests of these men of war; we see them at their gorgeous festivals and stormy consultations, and participate in the hopes or fears that agitate them. The subject had many capabilities; and Schiller has turned them all to profit. Our minds are kept alert by a constant succession of animating scenes of spectacle, dialogue, incident: the plot thickens and darkens as we advance; the interest deepens and deepens to the very end.

But among the tumults of this busy multitude, there are two forms of celestial beauty that solicit our attention, and whose destiny, involved with that of those around them, gives it an importance in our eyes which it could not otherwise have had. Max Piccolomini, Octavio's son, and Thekla, the daughter of Wallenstein, diffuse an ethereal radiance over all this tragedy; they call forth the finest feelings of the heart, where other feelings had already been aroused; they superadd to the stirring pomp of scenes, which had already kindled our imaginations, the enthusiasm of bright unworn humanity, "the bloom of young desire, the purple light of love." The history of Max and Thekla is not a rare one in poetry; but Schiller has treated it with a skill which is extremely rare. Both of them are represented as combining every excellence; their affection is instantaneous and unbounded; yet the coolest, most sceptical reader is forced to admire them, and believe in them.

Of Max we are taught from the first to form the highest expectations: the common soldiers and their captains speak of him as of a perfect hero; the Cuirassiers had, at Pappenheim's death, on the field of Lützen, appointed him their colonel by unanimous election. His appearance answers these ideas: Max is the very spirit of honor, and integrity, and young ardor, personified. Though but passing into maturer age, he has already seen and suffered much; but the experience of the man has not yet deadened or dulled the enthusiasm of the boy. He has lived, since his very childhood, constantly amid the clang of war, and with few ideas but those of camps; yet here, by a native instinct, his heart has attracted to it all that was noble and graceful in the trade of arms, rejecting all that was repulsive or ferocious. He loves Wallenstein his patron, his gallant and majestic leader: he loves his present way of life, because it is one of peril and excitement, because he knows no other, but chiefly because his young unsullied spirit can shed a resplendent beauty over even the wastest region in the destiny of man. Yet though a soldier, and the bravest of soldiers, he is not this alone. He feels that there are fairer scenes in life, which these scenes of havoc and distress but deform or destroy; his first acquaintance with the Princess Thekla unveils to him another world, which till then he had not dreamed of; a land of peace and serene elysian felicity, the charms of which he paints with simple and unrivalled eloquence. Max is not more daring than affectionate; he is merciful and gentle, though his training has been under tents; modest and altogether unpretending, though young and universally admired. We conceive his aspect to be thoughtful but fervid, dauntless but mild: he is the very poetry of war, the essence of a youthful hero. We should have loved him anywhere; but here, amid barren scenes of strife and danger, he is doubly dear to us.

His first appearance wins our favor; his eloquence in sentiment prepares us to expect no common magnanimity in action. It is as follows: Octavio and Questenberg are consulting on affairs of state; Max enters: he is just returned from conveying the Princess Thekla and her mother, the daughter and the wife of Friedland, to the camp at Pilsen.

ACT I. SCENE IV.

MAX PICCOLOMINI, OCTAVIO PICCOLOMINI, QUESTENBERG.

MAX 'T is he himself! My father, welcome, welcome!
[He embraces him: on turning round, he observes Questenberg, and draws coldly back.]

Bused, I perceive? I will not interrupt you.

OCT. How now, Max? View this stranger better!
 An old friend deserves regard and kindness;
 The Kaiser's messenger should be rever'd!

MAX [drily]. Von Questenberg! If it is good that brings you
 To our head-quarters, welcome!

QUEST. [has taken his hand]. Nay, draw not
 Your hand away, Count Piccolomini!
 Not on mine own account alone I grasp it,
 And nothing common will I say therewith.
 Octavio, Max, Piccolomini! [Taking both their hands]

Names of benignant solemn import! Never
 Can Austria's fortune fail while two such stars,
 To guide and guard her, gleam above our hosts.

MAX. You play it wrong, Sir Minister! To praise,
 I wot, you come not hither; to blame and censure
 You are come. Let me be no exception.

OCT. [to Max]. He comes from Court, where every one is not
 So well contented with the Duke as here.

MAX. And what new fault have they to charge him with?
 That he alone decides what he alone
 Can understand? Well! Should it not be so?
 It should and must! This man was never made
 To ply and mould himself like wax to others:
 It goes against his heart; he cannot do it,
 He has the spirit of a ruler, and
 The station of a ruler. Well for us
 It is so! Few can rule themselves, can use
 Their wisdom wisely: happy for the whole
 Where there is one among them that can be
 A centre and a hold for many thousands;

That can plant himself like a firm column,
For the whole to lean on safely! Such a one
Is Wallenstein; some other man might better
Serve the Court, none else could serve the Army.

QUEST. The Army, truly!

MAX. And it is a pleasure
To behold how all awakes and strengthens
And revives around him; how men's faculties
Come forth; their gifts grow plainer to themselves!
From each he can elicit his endowment,
His peculiar power; and does it wisely;
Leaving each to be the man he found him,
Watching only that he always be so
In proper place: and thus he makes the talents
Of all mankind his own.

QUEST. No one denies him
Skill in men, and skill to use them. His fault is That in the ruler he forgets the servant,
As if he had been born to be commander.

MAX. And is he not? By birth he is invested
With all gifts for it, and with the farther gift
Of finding scope to use them; of acquiring
For the ruler's faculties the ruler's office.

QUEST. So that how far the rest of us have rights
Or influence, if any, lies with Friedland?

MAX. He is no common person; he requires
No common confidence: allow him space;
The proper limit he himself will set.

QUEST. The trial shows it!

MAX. Ay! Thus it is with them!
Still so! All frights them that has any depth;
Nowhere are they at ease but in the shallows.

OCT. [to Quest.]. Let him have his way, my friend! The argument

Will not avail us.

MAX. They invoke the spirit
I' th' hour of need, and shudder when he rises.
The great, the wonderful, must be accomplished
Like a thing of course!—In war, in battle,
A moment is decisive; on the spot
Must be determin'd, in the instant done.
With ev'ry noble quality of nature

The leader must be gifted : let him live, then,
In their noble sphere ! The oracle within him,
The living spirit, not dead books, old forms,
Not mould'ring parchments must he take to counsel.

OCT. My Son ! despise not these old narrow forms !
They are as barriers, precious walls and fences,
Which oppressed mortals have erected
To mod'rate the rash will of their oppressors.
For the uncontrolled has ever been destructive.
The way of Order, though it lead through windings,
Is the best. Right forward goes the lightning
And the cannon-ball : quick, by the nearest path.
They come, op'ning with murderous crash their way,
To blast and ruin ! My Son ! the quiet road
Which men frequent, where peace and blessings travel,
Follows the river's course, the valley's bendings ;
Modest skirts the cornfield and the vineyard,
Revering property's appointed bounds ;
And leading safe though slower to the mark.

QUEST. Oh, hear your Father ! him who is at once
A hero and a man !

OCT. It is the child
O' th' camp that speaks in thee, my Son : a war
Of fifteen years has nursed and taught thee ; peace
Thou hast never seen. My Son, there is a worth
Beyond the worth of warriors : ev'n in war itself
The object is not war. The rapid deeds
Of power, th' astounding wonders of the moment —
It is not these that minister to man
Aught useful, aught benignant or enduring.
In haste the wandering soldier comes, and builds
With canvas his light town : here in a moment
Is a rushing concourse ; markets open ;
Roads and rivers crowd with merchandise
And people ; Traffic stirs his hundred arms.
Ere long, some morning, look, — and it is gone !
The tents are struck, the host has marched away ;
Dead as a churchyard lies the trampled seed-field,
And wasted is the harvest of the year.

MAX. O Father ! that the Kaiser would make peace !
The bloody laurel I would gladly change
For the first violet Spring should offer us,

The tiny pledge that Earth again was young !

OCT. How's this ? What is it that affects thee so ?

MAX. Peace I have never seen ? Yes, I have seen it !
Ev'n now I come from it : my journey led me
Through lands as yet unvisited by war.

O Father ! life has charms, of which we know not :
We have but seen the barren coasts of life ;
Like some wild roving crew of lawless pirates,
Who, crowded in their narrow noisome ship,
Upon the rude sea, with rude manners dwell ;
Naught of the fair land knowing but the bays,
Where they may risk their hurried thievish landing.
Of the loveliness that, in its peaceful dales,
The land conceals — O Father ! — Oh, of this,
In our wild voyage we have seen no glimpse.

OCT. [gives increased attention].

And did this journey show thee much of it ?

MAX. 'T was the first holiday of my existence.
Tell me, where's the end of all this labor,
This grinding labor that has stolen my youth,
And left my heart uncheer'd and void, my spirit
Uncultivated as a wilderness ?
This camp's unceasing din ; the neighing steeds ;
The trumpet's clang ; the never-changing round
Of service, discipline, parade, give nothing
To the heart, the heart that longs for nourishment.
There is no soul in this insipid bus'ness ;
Life has another fate and other joys.

OCT. Much hast thou learn'd, my Son, in this short journey !

MAX. O blessed bright day, when at last the soldier
Shall turn back to life, and be again a man !
Through th' merry lines the colors are unfurl'd,
And homeward beats the thrilling soft peace-march ;
All hats and helmets deck'd with leafy sprays,
The last spoil of the fields ! The city's gates
Fly up ; now needs not the petard to burst them :
The walls are crowded with rejoicing people ;
Their shouts ring through the air : from every tower
Blithe bells are pealing forth the merry vesper
Of that bloody day. From town and hamlet
Flow the jocund thousands ; with their hearty
Kind impetuosity our march impeding.

The old man, weeping that he sees this day,
Embraces his long-lost son : a stranger
He revisits his old home; with spreading boughs
The tree o'ershadows him at his return,
Which waver'd as a twig when he departed;
And modest blushing comes a maid to meet him,
Whom on her nurse's breast he left. O happy,
For whom some kindly door like this, for whom Soft arms to clasp him shall be open'd!—

QUEST. [with emotion]. O that
The times you speak of should be so far distant!
Should not be to-morrow, be to-day!

MAX. And who's to blame for it but you at Court?
I will deal plainly with you, Questenberg:
When I observ'd you here, a twinge of spleen
And bitterness went through me. It is you
That hinder peace; yes, you. The General
Must force it, and you ever keep tormenting him,
Obstructing all his steps, abusing him;
For what? Because the good of Europe lies
Nearer his heart, than whether certain acres
More or less of dirty land be Austria's!
You call him traitor, rebel, God knows what,
Because he spares the Saxons; as if that Were not the only way to peace; for how
If during war, war end not, can peace follow?
Go to! go to! As I love goodness, so I hate
This paltry work of yours: and here I vow to God,
For him, this rebel, traitor Wallenstein,
To shed my blood, my heart's blood, drop by drop,
Ere I will see you triumph in his fall!

The Princess Thekla is perhaps still dearer to us. Thekla, just entering on life, with "timid steps," with the brilliant visions of a cloister yet undisturbed by the contradictions of reality, beholds in Max, not merely her protector and escort to her father's camp, but the living emblem of her shapeless yet glowing dreams. She knows not deception, she trusts and is trusted: their spirits meet and mingle, and "clasp each other firmly and forever." All this is described by the poet with a quiet inspiration, which finds its way into our deepest sympathies. Such beautiful simplicity is irresistible. "How long," the Countess Terzky asks,

How long is it since you disclosed your heart?

MAX. This morning first I risked a word of it.

COUN. Not till this morning during twenty days?

MAX. 'T was at the castle where you met us, 'twixt this
And Nepomuk, the last stage of the journey.
On a balcony she and I were standing, our looks
In silence turn'd upon the vacant landscape;
And before us the dragoons were riding,
Whom the Duke had sent to be her escort.
Heavy on my heart lay thoughts of parting,
And with a faltering voice at last I said:
All this reminds me, Fräulein, that to-day
I must be parted from my happiness;
In few hours you will find a father,
Will see yourself encircled by new friends;
And I shall be to you nought but a stranger,
Forgotten in the crowd — "Speak with Aunt Terzky!"
Quick she interrupted me; I noticed
A quiv'ring in her voice; a glowing blush
Spread o'er her cheeks; slow rising from the ground,
Her eyes met mine: I could control myself
No longer —

[The Princess appears at the door, and stops; the Countess, but not Piccolomini, observing her.

— I clasp'd her wildly in my arms,
My lips were join'd with hers. Some footsteps stirring
F' th' next room parted us; 't was you; what then Took place, you know.

COUN. And can you be so modest,
Or incurious, as not once to ask me
For my secret, in return?

MAX. Your secret?

COUN. Yes, sure! On coming in the moment after,
How my niece receiv'd me, what f' th' instant
Of her first surprise she —

MAX. Ha!

THEKLA [enters hastily]. Spare yourself
The trouble, Aunt! That he can learn from me.

.

We rejoice in the ardent, pure and confiding affection of these two angelic beings: but our feeling is changed and made more poignant, when we think that the inexorable hand of Destiny is already lifted to smite their world with blackness and desolation. Thekla has enjoyed "two little hours of heavenly beauty;" but her native gayety gives place to serious anticipations and alarms; she feels that the camp of Wallenstein is not a place for hope to dwell in. The instructions and explanations of her aunt disclose the secret: she is not to love Max; a higher, it may be a royal, fate awaits her; but she is to tempt him from his duty, and make him lend his influence to her father, whose daring projects she now for the first time discovers. From that moment her hopes of happiness have vanished, never more to return. Yet her own sorrows touch her less than the ruin which she sees about to overwhelm her tender and affectionate mother. For herself, she waits with gloomy patience the stroke that is to crush her. She is meek, and soft, and maiden-like; but she is Friedland's daughter, and does not shrink from what is unavoidable. There is often a rectitude, and quick inflexibility of resolution about Thekla which contrasts beautifully with her inexperience and timorous, acuteness of feeling: on discovering her father's treason, she herself decides that Max "shall obey his first impulse," and forsake her.

There are few scenes in poetry more sublimely pathetic than this. We behold the sinking but still fiery glory of Wallenstein, opposed to the impetuous despair of Max Piccolomini, torn asunder by the claims of duty and of love; the calm but broken-hearted Thekla, beside her broken-hearted mother, and surrounded by the blank faces of Wallenstein's desponding followers. There is a physical pomp corresponding to the moral grandeur of the action; the successive revolt and departure of the troops is heard without the walls of the Palace; the trumpets of the Pappenheimers re-echo the wild feelings of their leader. What follows too is equally affecting. Max being forced away by his soldiers from the side of Thekla, rides forth at their head in a state bordering on frenzy. Next day come tidings of his fate, which no heart is hard enough to hear unmoved. The effect it produces upon Thekla displays all the hidden energies of her soul. The first accidental hearing of the news had almost overwhelmed her; but she summons up her strength: she sends for the messenger, that she may question him more closely, and listen to his stern details with the heroism of a Spartan virgin.

ACT IV. SCENE X.

THEKLA; the SWEDISH CAPTAIN; FRÄULEIN NEUBRUNN.

CAPT. [approaches respectfully].

Princess — I — must pray you to forgive me
My most rash unthinking words: I could not —

THEKLA [with noble dignity].

You saw me in my grief; a sad chance made you
At once my confidant, who were a stranger.

CAPT. I fear the sight of me is hateful to you:
They were mournful tidings I brought hither.

THEKLA. The blame was mine! 'T was I that forced them from you;

Your voice was but the voice of Destiny.

My terror interrupted your recital:

Finish it, I pray you.

CAPT. 'T will renew your grief!

THEKLA. I am prepared for't, I will be prepared.
Proceed! How went the action? Let me hear.

CAPT. At Neustadt, dreading no surprise, we lay Slightly entrench'd; when towards night a cloud
Of dust rose from the forest, and our outposts
Rush'd into the camp, and cried: The foe was there!
Scarcely had we time to spring on horseback, when
The Pappenheimers, coming at full gallop,
Dash'd o'er the palisado, and next moment
These fierce troopers pass'd our camp-trench also.
But thoughtlessly their courage had impelled them
To advance without support; their infantry
Was far behind; only the Pappenheimers
Boldly following their bold leader —

[Thekla makes a movement. The Captain pauses for a moment, till she beckons him to proceed.]

On front and flank with all our horse we charged them;

And ere long forc'd them back upon the trench,
 Where rank'd in haste our infantry presented
 An iron hedge of pikes to stop their passage.
 Advance they could not, nor retreat a step,
 Wedg'd in this narrow prison, death on all sides.
 Then the Rheingraf call'd upon their leader,
 In fair battle, fairly to surrender :

But Colonel Piccolomini — [Thekla, tottering, catches by a seat
 — We knew him

By 's helmet-plume and his long flowing hair,
 The rapid ride had loosen'd it : to th' trench
 He points ; leaps first himself his gallant steed
 Clean over it ; the troop plunge after him :
 But — in a twinkle it was done ! — his horse
 Run through the body by a partisan,
 Rears in its agony, and pitches far
 Its rider ; and fierce o'er him tramp the steeds
 O' th' rest, now heeding neither bit nor bridle.

[*Thekla, who has listened to the last words with increasing anguish, falls into a violent tremor ; she is sinking to the ground ;
 Fräulein Neubrunn hastens to her, and receives her in her arms.*

NEU. Lady, dearest mistress —

CAPT. [moved]. Let me begone.

THEKLA. 'T is past ; conclude it.

CAPT. Seeing their leader fall,

A grim inexorable desperation
 Seiz'd the troops : their own escape forgotten,
 Like wild tigers they attack us ; their fury
 Provokes our soldiers, and the battle ends not Till the last man of the Pappenheimers falls.

THEKLA [with a quivering voice].

And where — where is — You have not told me all.

CAPT. [after a pause].

This morning we interr'd him. He was borne
 By twelve youths of the noblest families,
 And all our host accompanied the bier.
 A laurel deck'd his coffin ; and upon it
 The Rheingraf laid his own victorious sword.
 Nor were tears wanting to his fate : for many
 Of us had known his noble-mindedness.
 And gentleness of manners ; and all hearts
 Were mov'd at his sad end. Fain would the Rheingraf

Have sav'd him; but himself prevented it;
'Tis said he wish'd to die.

NEU. [with emotion, to Thekla, who hides her face].

O dearest mistress,

Look up! Oh, why would you insist on this?

THEKLA. Where is his grave?

CAPT.

I th' chapel of a cloister

At Neustadt is he laid, till we receive

Directions from his father.

THEKLA.

What is its name?

CAPT. St. Catharine's.

THEKLA.

Is't far from this?

CAPT.

Seven leagues.

THEKLA. How goes the way?

CAPT.

You come by Tirscheureit

And Falkenberg, and through our farthest outposts.

THEKLA. Who commands them?

CAPT.

Colonel Seckendorf.

THEKLA [steps to a table, and takes a ring from her jewel-box].

You have seen me in my grief, and shown me

A sympathizing heart: accept a small

Memorial of this hour [giving him the ring]. Now leave me.

CAPT. [overpowered].

Princess!

[Thekla silently makes him a sign to go, and turns from him.

He lingers, and attempts to speak; Neubrunn repeats the sign; he goes.

SCENE XI.

NEUBRUNN; THEKLA.

THEKLA [falls on Neubrunn's neck].

Now, good Neubrunn, is the time to show the love

Which thou hast always vow'd me. Prove thyself

A true friend and attendant! We must go,

This very night.

NEU.

Go! This very night! And whither?

THEKLA. Whither? There is but one place in the world,

The place where he lies buried: to his grave.

NEU. Alas, what would you there, my dearest mistress?

THEKLA. What there? Unhappy girl! Thou would'st not ask
If thou hadst ever lov'd. There, there, is all
That yet remains of him; that one small spot

Is all the earth to me. Do not detain me!

Oh, come! Prepare, think how we may escape.

NEU. Have you reflected on your father's anger?

THEKLA. I dread no mortal's anger now.

NEU.

The mockery

Of the world, the wicked tongue of slander!

THEKLA. I go to seek one that is cold and low:

Am I, then, hast'ning to my lover's arms?

O God! I am but hast'ning to his grave!

NEU. And we alone? Two feeble, helpless women?

THEKLA. We will arm ourselves; my hand shall guard thee.

NEU. In the gloomy night-time?

THEKLA.

Night will hide us.

NEU. In this rude storm?

THEKLA.

Was his bed made of down,

When the horses' hoofs went o'er him?

NEU.

O Heaven!

And then the many Swedish posts! They will not

Let us pass.

THEKLA. Are they not men? Misfortune

Passes free through all the earth.

NEU.

So far! So—

THEKLA. Does the pilgrim count the miles, when journeying
To the distant shrine of grace?

NEU.

How shall we

Even get out of Eger?

THEKLA.

Gold opens gates.

Go! Do go!

NEU. If they should recognize us?

THEKLA. In a fugitive despairing woman

No one will look to meet with Friedland's daughter.

NEU. And where shall we get horses for our flight?

THEKLA. My Equerry will find them. Go and call him.

NEU. Will he venture without his master's knowledge?

THEKLA. He will, I tell thee. Go! Oh, linger not!

NEU. Ah! And what will your mother do when you

Are vanish'd?

THEKLA [recollecting this, and gazing with a look of anguish].

O my mother!

NEU.

Your good mother!

She has already had so much to suffer.

Must this last heaviest stroke too fall on her?

THEKLA. I cannot help it. Go, I prithee, go!

NEU. Think well what you are doing.

THEKLA. All is thought

That can be thought, already.

NEU. Were we there,

What would you do?

THEKLA. God will direct me, there.

NEU. Your heart is full of trouble: O my lady!

This way leads not to peace.

THEKLA. To that deep peace

Which he has found. Oh, hasten! Go! No words!

There is some force, I know not what to call it,

Pulls me irresistibly, and drags me

On to his grave: there I shall find some solace

Instantly: the strangling band of sorrow

Will be loosen'd; tears will flow. Oh, hasten!

Long time ago we might have been o' th' road.

No rest for me till I have fled these walls:

They fall upon me, some dark power repels me

From them — Ha! What's this? The chamber's filling

With pale gaunt shapes! No room is left for me!

More! more! The crowding spectres press on me,

And push me forth from this accursed house.

NEU. You frighten me, my lady: I dare stay

No longer; quickly I'll call Rosenberg.

SCENE XII.

THEKLA.

It is his spirit calls me! 'T is the host

Of faithful souls that sacrificed themselves

In fiery vengeance for him. They upbraid me

For this loit'ring: they in death forsook him not,

Who in their life had led them; their rude hearts

Were capable of this: and I can live?

No! No! That laurel-garland which they laid

Upon his bier was twined for both of us!

What is this life without the light of love?

I cast it from me, since its worth is gone.

Yes, when we found and lov'd each other, life

Was something ! Glittering lay before me
The golden morn : I had two hours of Heaven.

Thou stoodest at the threshold of the scene
Of busy life ; with timid steps I cross'd it :
How fair it lay in solemn shade and sheen !
And thou beside me, like some angel, posted
To lead me out of childhood's fairy land
On to life's glancing summit, hand in hand !
My first thought was of joy no tongue can tell,
My first look on thy spotless spirit fell.

[She sinks into a reverie, then with signs of horror proceeds.
And Fate put forth his hand : inexorable, cold,
My friend it grasp'd and clutch'd with iron hold,
And — under th' hoofs of their wild horses hurld,
Such is the lot of loveliness i' th' world !

Thekla has yet another pang to encounter ; the parting with her mother : but she persists in her determination, and goes forth to die beside her lover's grave. The heart-rending emotions, which this amiable creature has to undergo, are described with an almost painful effect : the fate of Max and Thekla might draw tears from the eyes of a stoic.

Less tender, but not less sublimely poetical, is the fate of Wallenstein himself. We do not pity Wallenstein ; even in ruin he seems too great for pity. His daughter having vanished like a fair vision from the scene, we look forward to Wallenstein's inevitable fate with little feeling save expectant awe : —

This kingly Wallenstein, whene'er he falls,
Will drag a world to ruin down with him ;
And as a ship that in the midst of ocean
Catches fire, and shiv'ring springs into the air,
And in a moment scatters between sea and sky
The crew it bore, so will he hurry to destruction
Ev'ry one whose fate was join'd with his.

Yet still there is some touch of pathos in his gloomy fall ; some visitings of nature in the austere grandeur of his slowly coming, but inevitable and annihilating doom. The last scene of his life is among the finest which poetry can boast of. Thekla's death is still unknown to him; but he thinks of Max, and almost weeps. He looks at the stars: dim shadows of superstitious dread pass fitfully across his spirit, as he views these fountains of light, and compares their glorious and enduring existence with the fleeting troubled life of man. The strong spirit of his sister is subdued by dark forebodings; omens are against him; his astrologer entreats, one of the relenting conspirators entreats, his own feelings call upon him, to watch and beware. But he refuses to let the resolution of his mind be overmastered; he casts away these warnings, and goes cheerfully to sleep, with dreams of hope about his pillow, unconscious that the javelins are already grasped which will send him to his long and dreamless sleep. The death of Wallenstein does not cause tears; but it is perhaps the most high-wrought scene of the play. A shade of horror, of fateful deariness, hangs over it, and gives additional effect to the fire of that brilliant poetry, which glows in every line of it. Except in Macbeth or the conclusion of Othello, we know not where to match it. Schiller's genius is of a kind much narrower than Shakspeare's; but in his own peculiar province, the exciting of lofty, earnest, strong emotion, he admits of no superior. Others are finer, more piercing, varied, thrilling, in their influence: Schiller, in his finest mood, is overwhelming.

This tragedy of Wallenstein, published at the close of the eighteenth century, may safely be rated as the greatest dramatic work of which that century can boast. France never rose into the sphere of Schiller, even in the days of her Corneille: nor can our own country, since the times of Elizabeth, name any dramatist to be compared with him in general strength of mind, and feeling, and acquired accomplishment. About the time of Wallenstein's appearance, we of this gifted land were shuddering at The Castle Spectre! Germany, indeed, boasts of Goethe: and on some rare occasions, it must be owned that Goethe has shown talents of a higher order than are here manifested; but he has made no equally regular or powerful exertion of them: Faust is but a careless effusion compared with Wallenstein. The latter is in truth a vast and magnificent work. What an assemblage of images, ideas, emotions, disposed in the most felicitous and impressive order ! We have conquerors, statesmen, ambitious generals, marauding soldiers, heroes, and heroines, all acting and feeling as they would in nature, all faithfully depicted, yet all embellished by the spirit of poetry, and all made conducive to heighten one paramount impression, our sympathy with the three chief characters of the piece.¹

Soon after the publication of Wallenstein, Schiller once more changed his abode. The "mountain air of Jena" was conceived by his physicians to be prejudicial in disorders of the lungs ; and partly in consequence of this opinion, he determined henceforth to spend his winters in Weimar. Perhaps a weightier reason in favor of this new arrangement was the opportunity it gave him of being near the theatre, a constant attendance on which, now that he had once more become a dramatist, seemed highly useful for his farther improvement. The summer he, for several years, continued still to spend in Jena ; to which, especially its beautiful environs, he declared himself particularly attached. His little garden-house was still his place of study during summer ; till at last he settled constantly at Weimar. Even then he used frequently to visit Jena ; to which there was a fresh attraction in later years, when Goethe chose it for his residence, which, we understand, it still occasionally is. With Goethe he often stayed for months.

This change of place produced little change in Schiller's habits or employment : he was now as formerly in the pay of the Duke of Weimar; now as formerly engaged in dramatic composition as the great object of his life. What the amount of his pension was, we know not: that the Prince behaved to him in a princely manner, we have proof sufficient. Four years before, when invited to the University of Tübingen, Schiller had received a promise, that, in case of sickness or any other cause preventing the continuance of his literary labor, his salary should be doubled. It was actually increased on occasion of the present removal; and again still farther in 1804, some advantageous offers being made to him from Berlin. Schiller seems to have been, what he might have wished to be, neither poor nor rich: his simple unostentatious economy went on without embarrassment: and this was all that he required. To avoid pecuniary perplexities was constantly among his aims: to amass wealth, never. We ought also to add that, in 1802, by the voluntary solicitation of the Duke, he was ennobled; a fact which we mention, for his sake by whose kindness this honor was procured; not for the sake of Schiller, who accepted it with gratitude, but had neither needed nor desired it.

¹ Wallenstein has been translated into French by M. Benjamin Constant ; and the last two parts of it have been faithfully rendered into English by Mr. Coleridge. As to the French version, we know nothing, save that it is an improved one ; but that little is enough : Schiller, as a dramatist, improved by M. Constant, is a spectacle we feel no wish to witness. Mr. Coleridge's translation is also, as a whole, unknown to us : but judging from many large specimens, we should pronounce it, excepting Sotheby's Oberon, to be the best, indeed the only sufferable, translation from the German with which our literature has yet been enriched.

The official services expected of him in return for so much kindness seem to have been slight, if any. Chiefly or altogether of his own accord, he appears to have applied himself to a close inspection of the theatre, and to have shared with Goethe the task of superintending its concerns. The rehearsals of new pieces commonly took place at the house of one of these friends; they consulted together on all such subjects, frankly and copiously. Schiller was not slow to profit by the means of improvement thus afforded him; in the mechanical details of his art he grew more skilful: by a constant observation of the stage, he became more acquainted with its capabilities and its laws. It was not long till, with his characteristic expansiveness of enterprise, he set about turning this new knowledge to account. In conjunction with Goethe, he remodelled his own Don Carlos and his friend's Count Egmont, altering both according to his latest views of scenic propriety. It was farther intended to treat, in the same manner, the whole series of leading German plays, and thus to produce a national stock of dramatic pieces, formed according to the best rules ; a vast project, in which some progress continued to be made, though other labors often interrupted it. For the present, Schiller was engaged with his Maria Stuart: it appeared in 1800.

This tragedy will not detain us long. It is upon a subject, the incidents of which are now getting trite, and the moral of which has little that can peculiarly recommend it. To exhibit the repentance of a lovely but erring woman, to show us how her soul may be restored to its primitive nobleness, by sufferings, devotion and death, is the object of Maria Stuart. It is a tragedy of sombre and mournful feelings ; with an air of melancholy and obstruction pervading it ; a looking backward on objects of remorse, around on imprisonment, and forward on the grave. Its object is undoubtedly attained. We are forced to pardon and to love the heroine ; she is beautiful, and miserable, and lofty-minded ; and her crimes, however dark, have been expiated by long years of weeping and woe. Considering also that they were the fruit not of calculation, but of passion acting on a heart not dead, though blinded for a time, to their enormity, they seem less hateful than the cold premeditated villany of which she is the victim. Elizabeth is selfish, heartless, envious ; she violates no law, but she has no virtue, and she lives triumphant : her arid, artificial character serves by contrast to heighten our sympathy with her warm-hearted, forlorn, ill-fated rival. These two Queens, particularly Mary, are well delineated : their respective qualities are vividly brought out, and the feelings they were meant to excite arise within us. There is also Mortimer, a fierce, impetuous, impassioned lover ; driven onward chiefly by the heat of his blood, but still interesting by his vehemence and unbounded daring. The dialogue, moreover, has many beauties ; there are scenes which have merited peculiar commendation. Of this kind is the interview between the Queens ; and more especially the first entrance of Mary, when, after long seclusion, she is once more permitted to behold the cheerful sky. In the joy of a momentary freedom, she forgets that she is still a captive ; she addresses the clouds, the "sailors of the air," who "are not subjects of Elizabeth," and bids them carry tidings of her to the hearts that love her in other lands. Without doubt, in all that he intended, Schiller has succeeded; Maria Stuart is a beautiful tragedy; it would have formed the glory of a meaner man, but it cannot materially alter his. Compared with Wallenstein, its purpose is narrow, and its result is common. We have no manners or true historical delineation. The figure of the English court is not given; and Elizabeth is depicted more like one of the French Medici, than like our own politic, capricious, coquettish, imperious, yet on the whole true-hearted, "good Queen Bess." With abundant proofs of genius, this tragedy produces a comparatively small effect, especially on English readers. We have already wept enough for Mary Stuart, both over prose and verse; and the persons likely to be deeply touched with the moral or the interest of her story, as it is recorded here, are rather a separate class than men in general. Madame de Staël, we observe, is her principal admirer.

Next year, Schiller took possession of a province more peculiarly his own: in 1801, appeared his Maid of Orleans (Jungfrau von Orleans); the first hint of which was suggested to him by a series of documents, relating to the sentence of Jeanne d'Arc, and its reversal, first published about this time by De l'Averdy of the Académie des Inscriptions. Schiller had been moved in perusing them: this tragedy gave voice to his feelings.

Considered as an object of poetry or history, Jeanne d'Arc, the most singular personage of modern times, presents a character capable of being viewed under a great variety of aspects, and with a corresponding variety of emotions. To the English of her own age, bigoted in their creed, and baffled by her prowess, she appeared inspired by the Devil, and was naturally burnt as a sorceress. In this light, too, she is painted in the poems of Shakspeare. To Voltaire, again, whose trade it was to war with every kind of superstition, this child of fanatic ardor seemed no better than a moonstruck zealot; and the people who followed her, and believed in her, something worse than lunatics. The glory of what she had achieved was for gotten, when the means of achieving it were recollected; and the Maid of Orleans was deemed the fit subject of a poem, the wittiest and most profligate for which literature has to blush. Our illustrious Don Juan hides his head when contrasted with Voltaire's Pucelle: Juan's biographer, with all his zeal, is but an innocent, and a novice, by the side of this arch-scorner.

Such a manner of considering the Maid of Orleans is evidently not the right one. Feelings so deep and earnest as hers can never be an object of ridicule: whoever pursues a purpose of any sort with such fervid devotedness, is entitled to awaken emotions, at least of a serious kind, in the hearts of others. Enthusiasm puts on a different shape in every different age: always in some degree sublime, often it is dangerous; its very essence is a tendency to error and exaggeration; yet it is the fundamental quality of strong souls; the true nobility of blood, in which all greatness of thought or action has its rise. Quicquid vult valdè vult is ever the first and surest test of mental capability. This peasant girl, who felt within her such fiery vehemence of resolution, that she could subdue the minds of kings and captains to her will, and lead armies on to battle, conquering, till her country was cleared of its invaders, must evidently have possessed the elements of a majestic character. Benevolent feelings, sublime ideas, and above all an overpowering will, are here indubitably marked. Nor does the form, which her activity assumed, seem less adapted for displaying these qualities, than many other forms in which we praise them. The gorgeous inspirations of the Catholic religion are as real as the phantom of posthumous renown; the love of our native soil is as laudable as ambition, or the principle of military honor. Jeanne d'Arc must have been a creature of shadowy yet far-glancing dreams, of unutterable feelings, of "thoughts that wandered through Eternity." Who can tell the trials and the triumphs, the splendors and the terrors, of which her simple spirit was the scene! "Heartless, sneering, god-forgetting French!" as old Suwarrow called them, — they are not worthy of this noble maiden. Hers were errors, but errors which a generous soul alone could have committed, and which generous souls would have done more than pardon. Her darkness and delusions were of the understanding only ; they but make the radiance of her heart more touching and apparent ; as clouds are gilded by the orient light into something more beautiful than azure itself.

It is under this aspect that Schiller has contemplated the Maid of Orleans, and endeavored to make us contemplate her. For the latter purpose, it appears that more than one plan had occurred to him. His first idea was, to represent Joanna, and the times she lived in, as they actually were : to exhibit the superstition, ferocity, and wretchedness of the period, in all their aggravation ; and to show us this patriotic and religious enthusiast beautifying the tempestuous scene by her presence ; swaying the fierce passions of her countrymen ; directing their fury against the invaders of France ; till at length, forsaken and condemned to die, she perished at the stake, retaining the same steadfast and lofty faith, which had ennobled and redeemed the errors of her life, and was now to glorify the ignominy of her death. This project, after much deliberation, he relinquished, as too difficult. By a new mode of management, much of the homeliness and rude horror, that defaced and encumbered the reality, is thrown away. The Dauphin is not here a voluptuous weakling, nor is his court the centre of vice and cruelty and imbecility : the misery of the time is touched but lightly, and the Maid of Arc herself is invested with a certain faint degree of mysterious dignity, ultimately represented as being in truth a preternatural gift ; though whether preternatural, and if so, whether sent from above or from below, neither we nor she, except by faith, are absolutely sure, till the conclusion.

The propriety of this arrangement is liable to question ; indeed, it has been more than questioned. But external blemishes are lost in the intrinsic grandeur of the piece : the spirit of Joanna is presented to us with an exalting and pathetic force sufficient to make us blind to far greater improprieties. Joanna is a pure creation, of half-celestial origin, combining the mild charms of female loveliness with the awful majesty of a prophetess, and a sacrifice doomed to perish for her country. She resembled, in Schiller's view, the Iphigenia of the Greeks; and as such, in some respects, he has treated her.

The woes and desolation of the land have kindled in Joanna's keen and fervent heart a fire, which the loneliness of her life, and her deep feelings of religion, have nourished and fanned into a holy flame. She sits in solitude with her flocks, beside the mountain chapel of the Virgin, under the ancient Druid oak, a wizard spot, the haunt of evil spirits as well as of good; and visions are revealed to her such as human eyes behold not. It seems the force of her own spirit, expressing its feelings in forms which react upon itself. The strength of her impulses persuades her that she is called from on high to deliver her native France; the intensity of her own faith persuades others; she goes forth on her mission; all bends to the fiery vehemence of her will; she is inspired because she thinks herself so. There is something beautiful and moving in the aspect of a noble enthusiasm, fostered in the secret soul, amid obstructions and depressions, and at length bursting forth with an overwhelming force to accomplish its appointed end: the impediments which long hid it are now become testimonies of its power; the very ignorance, and meanness, and error, which still in part adhere to it, increase our sympathy without diminishing our admiration; it seems the triumph, hardly contested, and not wholly carried, but still the triumph, of Mind over Fate, of human volition over material necessity.

All this Schiller felt, and has presented with even more than his usual skill. The secret mechanism of Joanna's mind is concealed from us in a dim religious obscurity; but its active movements are distinct; we behold the lofty heroism of her feelings; she affects us to the very heart. The quiet, devout innocence of her early years, when she lived silent, shrouded in herself, meek and kindly though not communing with others, makes us love her: the celestial splendor which illuminates her after-life adds reverence to our love. Her words and actions combine an overpowering force with a calm unpretending dignity: we seem to understand how they must have carried in their favor the universal conviction. Joanna is the most noble being in tragedy. We figure her with her slender lovely form, her mild but spirit-speaking countenance; "beautiful and terrible;" bearing the banner of the Virgin before the hosts of her country; travelling in the strength of a rapt soul; irresistible by faith; "the lowly herdsmaid," greater in the grandeur of her simple spirit than the kings and queens of this world. Yet her breast is not entirely insensible to human feeling, nor her faith never liable to waver. When that inexorable vengeance, which had shut her ear against the voice of mercy to the enemies of France, is suspended at the sight of Lionel, and her heart experiences the first touch of mortal affection, a baleful cloud overspreads the serene of her mind; it seems as if Heaven had forsaken her, or from the beginning permitted demons or earthly dreams to deceive her. The agony of her spirit, involved in endless and horrid labyrinths of doubt, is powerfully portrayed. She has crowned the king at Rheims; and all is joy, and pomp, and jubilee, and almost adoration of Joanna: but Joanna's thoughts are not of joy. The sight of her poor but kind and true-hearted sisters in the crowd, moves her to the soul. Amid the tumult and magnificence of this royal pageant, she sinks into a reverie; her small native dale of Arc, between its quiet hills, rises on her mind's eye, with its straw-roofed huts, and its clear greensward; where the sun is even then shining so brightly, and the sky is so blue, and all is so calm and motherly and safe. She sighs for the peace of that sequestered home; then shudders to think that she shall never see it more. Accused of witchcraft, by her own ascetic melancholic father, she utters no word of denial to the charge; for her heart is dark, it is tarnished by earthly love, she dare not raise her thoughts to Heaven. Parted from her sisters; cast out with horror by the people she had lately saved from despair, she wanders forth, desolate, forlorn, not knowing whither. Yet she does not sink under this sore trial: as she suffers from without, and is forsaken of men, her mind grows clear and strong, her confidence returns. She is now more firmly fixed in our admiration than before; tenderness is united to our other feelings; and her taith has been proved by sharp vicissitudes. Her countrymen recognize their error; Joanna closes her career by a glorious death; we take farewell of her in a solemn mood of heroic pity.

Joanna is the animating principle of this tragedy; the scenes employed in developing her character and feelings constitute its great charm. Yet there are other personages in it, that leave a distinct and pleasing impression of themselves in our memory. Agnes Sorel, the soft, languishing, generous mistress of the Dauphin, relieves and heightens by comparison the sterner beauty of the Maid. Dunois, the Bastard of Orleans, the lover of Joanna, is a blunt, frank, sagacious soldier, and well described. And Talbot, the gray veteran, delineates his dark, unbelieving, indomitable soul, by a few slight but expressive touches: he sternly passes down to the land, as he thinks, of utter nothingness, contemptuous even of the fate that destroys him, and

"On the soil of France he sleeps, as does
A hero on the shield he would not quit."

A few scattered extracts may in part exhibit some of these inferior personages to our readers, though they can afford us no impression of the Maid herself. Joanna's character, like every finished piece of art, to be judged of must be seen in all its bearings. It is not in parts, but as a whole, that the delineation moves us; by light and manifold touches, it works upon our hearts, till they melt before it into that mild rapture, free alike from the violence and the impurities of Nature, which it is the highest triumph of the Artist to communicate.

ACT III. SCENE IV.

[The DAUPHIN CHARLES, with his suite: afterwards JOANNA. She is in armor, but without her helmet; and wears a garland in her hair.]

DUNOIS [steps forward].

My heart made choice of her while she was lowly;
This new honor raises not her merit
Or my love. Here, in the presence of my King

And of this holy Archbishop, I offer her
My hand and princely rank, if she regard me
As worthy to be hers.

CHARLES. Resistless Maid,
Thou addest miracle to miracle !
Henceforward I believe that nothing is Impossible to thee. Thou hast subdued
This haughty spirit, that till now defied
Th' omnipotence of Love.

LA HIRE [steps forward]. If I mistake not Joanna's form of mind, what most adorns her
Is her modest heart. The reverence of the great
She merits ; but her thoughts will never rise
So high. She strives not after giddy splendours :
The true affection of a faithful soul
Contents her, and the still, sequester'd lot
Which with this hand I offer her.

CHARLES. Thou too,
La Hire ? Two valiant suitors, equal in Heroic virtue and renown of war !
— Wilt thou, that hast united my dominions,
Softened my opposers, part my firmest friends ?
Both may not gain thee, each deserving thee :
Speak, then ! Thy heart must here be arbiter.

AGNES SOREL [approaches].
Joanna is embarrass'd and surprised ;
I see the bashful crimson tinge her cheeks.
Let her have time to ask her heart, to open
Her clos'd bosom in trustful confidence
With me. The moment is arriv'd when I
In sisterly communion also may Approach the rigorous Maid, and offer her
The solace of my faithful, silent breast.
First let us women sit in secret judgment
On this matter that concerns us ; then expect
What we shall have decided.

CHARLES [about to go]. Be it so, then !

JOANNA. Not so, Sire ! 'T was not the embarrassment
Of virgin shame that dy'd my cheeks in crimson :
To this lady I have nothing to confide,
Which I need blush to speak of before men.
Much am I honor'd by the preference

Of these two noble Knights; but it was not
 To chase vain worldly grandeurs, that I left
 The shepherd moors; not in my hair to bind
 The bridal garland, that I girt myself
 With warlike armor. To far other work
 Am I appointed: and the spotless virgin
 Alone can do it. I am the soldier
 Of the God of Battles; to no living man
 Can I be wife.

ARCHBISHOP. As kindly help to man
 Was woman born; and in obeying Nature
 She best obeys and reverences Heaven.
 When the command of God who summon'd thee
 To battle is fulfill'd, thou wilt lay down
 Thy weapons, and return to that soft sex
 Which thou deny'st, which is not call'd to do
 The bloody work of war.

JOANNA. Father, as yet
 I know not how the Spirit will direct me:
 When the needful time comes round, His voice
 Will not be silent, and I will obey it.
 For the present, I am bid complete the task
 He gave me. My sov'reign's brow is yet uncrown'd,
 His head unwetted by the holy oil,
 He is not yet a King.

CHARLES. We are journeying
 Towards Rheims.

JOANNA. Let us not linger by the way.
 Our foes are busy round us, shutting up
 Thy passage: I will lead thee through them all.

DUNOIS. And when the work shall be fulfill'd, when we Have marched in triumph into Rheims,
 Will not Joanna then —

JOANNA. If God see meet
 That I return with life and vict'ry from
 These broils, my task is ended, and the herdsmaid
 Has nothing more to do in her King's palace.

CHARLES [taking her hand].
 It is the Spirit's voice impels thee now,
 And Love is mute in thy inspired bosom.
 Believe me, it will not be always mute!
 Our swords will rest; and Victory will lead

Meek Peace by th' hand, and Joy will come again
To ev'ry breast, and softer feelings waken
In every heart: in thy heart also waken;
And tears of sweetest longing wilt thou weep,
Such as thine eyes have never shed. This heart,
Now fill'd by Heav'n, will softly open
To some terrestrial heart. Thou hast begun
By blessing thousands; but thou wilt conclude
By blessing one.

JOANNA. Dauphin! Art thou weary
Of the heavenly vision, that thou seekest
To deface its chosen vessel, wouldst degrade
To common dust the Maid whom God has sent thee?
Ye blind of heart! O ye of little faith!
Heaven's brightness is about you, before your eyes
Unveils its wonders; and ye see in me
Nought but a woman. Dare a woman, think ye,
Clothe herself in iron harness, and mingle
In the wreck of battle? Woe, woe to me,
If bearing in my hand th' avenging sword
Of God, I bore in my vain heart a love
To earthly man! Woe to me! It were better
That I never had been born. No more,
No more of this! Unless ye would awake the wrath
Of Him that dwells in me! The eye of man
Desiring me is an abomination
And a horror.

CHARLES. Cease! 'Tis vain to urge her.

JOANNA. Bid the trumpets sound! This loit'ring grieves
And harasses me. Something chases me
From aloth, and drives me forth to do my mission,
Stern beck'ning me to my appointed doom.

SCENE V.

A KNIGHT [in haste].

CHARLES. How now?

KNIGHT. The enemy has pass'd the Marne:
Is forming as for battle.

JOANNA [as if inspired]. Arms and battle!

My soul has cast away its bonds! To arms!
 Prepare yourselves, while I prepare the rest! [She hastens out.]

[Trumpets sound with a piercing tone, and while the scene is changing pass into a wild tumultuous sound of battle.]

SCENE VI.

[The scene changes to an open space encircled with trees. During the music, soldiers are seen hastily retreating across the background.]

TALBOT, leaning upon FASTOLF, and accompanied by Soldiers. Soon after, LIONEL.

TALBOT. Here set me down beneath this tree, and you
 Betake yourselves again to battle: quick!
 I need no help to die.

FASTOLF. O day of woe! [Lionel enters.]
 Look, what a sight awaits you, Lionel!
 Our General expiring of his wounds!

LIONEL. Now God forbid! Rise, noble Talbot! This
 Is not a time for you to faint and sink.
 Yield not to Death; force faltering Nature
 By your strength of soul, that life depart not!

TALBOT. In vain! The day of Destiny is come
 That prostrates with the dust our power in France.
 In vain, in the fierce clash of desp'rate battle,
 Have I risk'd our utmost to withstand it:
 The bolt has smote and crush'd me, and I lie
 To rise no more forever. Rheims is lost;
 Make haste to rescue Paris.

LIONEL. Paris has surrender'd
 To the Dauphin: an express is just arriv'd
 With tidings.

TALBOT [tears away his bandages].
 Then flow out, ye life-streams;
 I am grown to loathe this Sun.

LIONEL. They want me!
 Fastolf, bear him to a place of safety:
 We can hold this post few instants longer,
 The coward knaves are giving way on all sides,
 Irresistible the Witch is pressing on.

TALBOT. Madness, thou conquerest, and I must yield:
Stupidity can baffle the very gods.

High Reason, radiant Daughter of God's Head,
Wise Foundress of the system of the Universe,
Conductress of the stars, who art thou, then,
If tied to th' tail o' th' wild horse Superstition,
Thou must plunge, eyes open, vainly shrieking,
Sheer down with that drunk Beast to the Abyss?
Cursed who sets his life upon the great
And dignified; and with forecasting spirit
Forms wise projects! The Fool-king rules this world.

LIONEL. Oh, Death is near you! Think of your Creator!

TALBOT. Had we as brave men been defeated
By brave men, we might have consoled ourselves
With common thoughts of Fortune's fickleness:
But that a sorry farce should be our ruin! —
Did our earnest toilsome struggle merit
No graver end than this?

LIONEL [grasps his hand]. Talbot, farewell!
The meed of bitter tears I'll duly pay you,
When the fight is done, should I outlive it.
Now Fate calls me to the field, where yet
She wav'ring sits, and shakes her doubtful urn.
Farewell! we meet beyond the unseen shore.
Brief parting for long friendship! God be with you!

[Exit]

TALBOT. Soon it is over, and to th' Earth I render,
To the everlasting Sun, the atoms,
Which for pain and pleasure join'd to form me;
And of the mighty Talbot, whose renown
Once fill'd the world, remains nought but a handful
Of light dust. Thus man comes to his end;
And our one conquest in this fight of life
Is the conviction of life's nothingness,
And deep disdain of all that sorry stuff
We once thought lofty and desirable.

SCENE VII.

Enter CHARLES; BURGUNDY; DUNOIS; DU CHATEL, and Soldiers.

BURGUN. The trench is storm'd.

DUNOIS.

The victory is ours.

F.F Vol. 12

CHARLES [observing Talbot].

Ha! who is this that to the light of day
Is bidding his constrained and sad farewell?
His bearing speaks no common man: go, haste,
Assist him, if assistance yet avail.

[Soldiers from the Dauphin's suite step forward.]

FASTOLF. Back! Keep away! Approach not the Departing,
Whom in life ye never wish'd too near you.

BURGUN. What do I see? Lord Talbot in his blood!

[He goes towards him. Talbot gazes fixedly at him, and dies.]

FASTOLF. Off, Burgundy! With th' aspect of a traitor
Poison not the last look of a hero.

DUNOIS. Dreaded Talbot! stern, unconquerable!
Dost thou content thee with a space so narrow,
And the wide domains of France once could not Stay the striving of thy giant spirit? —
Now for the first time, Sire, I call you King:
The crown but totter'd on your head, so long
As in this body dwelt a soul.

CHARLES [after looking at the dead in silence]. It was A higher hand that conquer'd him, not we.
Here on the soil of France he sleeps, as does
A hero on the shield he would not quit.
Bring him away. [Soldiers lift the corpse, and carry it off.]

And peace be with his dust!

A fair memorial shall arise to him
P' th' midst of France: here, where the hero's course
And life were finished, let his bones repose.
Thus far no other foe has e'er advanced.
His epitaph shall be the place he fell on.

SCENE IX.

Another empty space in the field of battle. In the distance are seen the towers of Rheims illuminated by the sun.

A Knight, cased in black armor, with his visor shut. JOANNA follows him to the front of the scene, where he stops and awaits her.

JOANNA. Deceiver! Now I see thy craft. Thou hast,
By seeming flight, enticed me from the battle,

And warded death and destiny from off the head
Of many a Briton. Now they reach thy own.

KNIGHT. Why dost thou follow me, and track my steps
With murd'rous fury? I am not appointed
To die by thee.

JOANNA. Deep in my lowest soul
I hate thee as the Night, which is thy color.
To sweep thee from the face of Earth, I feel
Some irresistible desire impelling me.
Who art thou? Lift thy visor: had not I Seen Talbot fall, I should have named thee Talbot.

KNIGHT. Speaks not the prophesying Spirit in thee?

JOANNA. It tells me loudly, in my inmost bosom,
That Misfortune is at hand.

KNIGHT. Joanna d'Arc!
Up to the gates of Rheims hast thou advanced,
Led on by victory. Let the renown
Already gain'd suffice thee! As a slave
Has Fortune serv'd thee: emancipate her,
Ere in wrath she free herself; fidelity
She hates; no one obeys she to the end.

JOANNA. How say'st thou, in the middle of my course,
That I should pause and leave my work unfinished?
I will conclude it, and fulfil my vow.

KNIGHT. Nothing can withstand thee; thou art most strong;
In ev'ry battle thou prevailest. But go
Into no other battle. Hear my warning!

JOANNA. This sword I quit not, till the English yield.

KNIGHT. Look! Yonder rise the towers of Rheims, the goal
And purpose of thy march; thou seest the dome
Of the cathedral glittering in the sun:
There wouldst thou enter in triumphal pomp,
To crown thy sov'reign and fulfil thy vow.
Enter not there. Turn homewards. Hear my warning!

JOANNA. Who art thou, false, double-tongued betrayer,
That wouldst frighten and perplex me? Dar'st thou
Utter lying oracles to me?

[The Black Knight attempts to go; she steps in his way]

No!

Thou shalt answer me, or perish by me!

[She lifts her arm to strike him.]

KNIGHT [touches her with his hand: she stands immovable].
Kill what is mortal!

[Darkness, lightning and thunder. The Knight sinks.]

JOANNA. [stands at first amazed: but soon recovers herself]

It was nothing earthly.

Some delusive form of Hell, some spirit
Of Falsehood, sent from th' everlasting Pool
To tempt and terrify my fervent soul!
Bearing the sword of God, what do I fear?
Victorious will I end my fated course;
Though Hell itself with all its fiends assail me,
My heart and faith shall never faint or fail me. [She is going.]

SCENE X.

LIONEL, JOANNA.

LIONEL. Accursed Sorceress, prepare for battle:
Not both of us shall leave the place alive.
Thou hast destroyed the chosen of my host;
Brave Talbot has breath'd out his mighty spirit
In my bosom. I will avenge the Dead,
Or share his fate. And wouldst thou know the man
Who brings thee glory, let him die or conquer,
I am Lionel, the last survivor
Of our chiefs; and still unvanquish'd is this arm.

[He rushes towards her; after a short contest, she strikes the sword from his hand.]

Faithless fortune! [He struggles with her.]

JOANNA [seizes him by the plume from behind, and tears his helmet violently down, so that his face is exposed: at the same time she lifts her sword with the right hand].

Suffer what thou soughtest

The Virgin sacrifices thee through me!

[At this moment she looks in his face; his aspect touches her; she stands immovable, and then slowly drops her arm.]

LIONEL. Why lingerest thou, and stayest the stroke of death?
My honor thou hast taken, take my life:

'T is in thy hands to take it; I want not mercy.

[She gives him a sign with her hand to depart.]

Fly from thee? Owe thee my life? Die rather!

JOANNA [her face turned away].

I will not remember that thou owedst
Thy life to me.

LIONEL. I hate thee and thy gift.
I want not mercy. Kill thy enemy,
Who meant to kill thee, who abhors thee!

JOANNA. Kill me, and fly!

LIONEL. Ha! How is this?

JOANNA [hides her face].

Woe's me!

LIONEL [approaches her].
Thou killest every Briton, I have heard,
Whom thou subdu'st in battle: why spare me?

JOANNA [lifts her sword with a rapid movement against him, but quickly lets it sink again, when she observes his face].
O Holy Virgin!

LIONEL. Wherefore namest thou
The Virgin? She knows nothing of thee; Heaven
Has nought to say to thee.

JOANNA [in violent anguish]. What have I done!
My vow, my vow is broke! [Wrings her hands in despair].

LIONEL [looks at her with sympathy, and comes nearer].

Unhappy girl!
I pity thee; thou touchest me; thou showedst
Mercy to me alone. My hate is going:
I am constrain'd to feel for thee. Who art thou?
Whence comest thou?

JOANNA. Away! Begone!

LIONEL. Thy youth,

Thy beauty melt and sadden me; thy look
Goes to my heart: I could wish much to save thee;
Tell me how I may! Come, come with me! Forsake
This horrid business; cast away those arms!

JOANNA. I no more deserve to bear them!

LIONEL. Cast them

Away, then, and come with me!

JOANNA [with horror]. Come with thee!

LIONEL. Thou mayst be sav'd: come with me! I will save thee.
But delay not. A strange sorrow for thee
Seizes me, and an unspeakable desire
To save thee.

[Seizes her arm].

JOANNA. Ha! Dunois! 'T is they!

If they should find thee! —

LIONEL. Fear not; I will guard thee.

JOANNA. I should die, were they to kill thee.

LIONEL. Am I

Dear to thee !

JOANNA. Saints of Heaven!

LIONEL. Shall I ever

See thee, hear of thee, again ?

JOANNA. Never! Never!

LIONEL. This sword for pledge that I will see thee!

[He wrests the sword from her.

JOANNA. Madman!

Thou dar'nt !

LIONEL. I yield to force ; again I'll see thee. [Exit.]

The introduction of supernatural agency in this play, and the final aberration from the truth of history, have been considerably censured by the German critics: Schlegel, we recollect, calls Joanna's end a "rosy death." In this dramatic discussion, the mere reader need take no great interest. To require our belief in apparitions and miracles, things which we cannot now believe, no doubt for a moment disturbs our submission to the poet's illusions: but the miracles in this story are rare and transient, and of small account in the general result: they give our reason little trouble, and perhaps contribute to exalt the heroine in our imaginations. It is still the mere human grandeur of Joanna's spirit that we love and reverence; the lofty devotedness with which she is transported, the generous benevolence, the irresistible determination. The heavenly mandate is but the means of unfolding these qualities, and furnishing them with a proper passport to the minds of her age. To have produced, without the aid of fictions like these, a Joanna so beautified and exalted, would undoubtedly have yielded greater satisfaction: but it may be questioned whether the difficulty would not have increased in a still higher ratio. The sentiments, the characters, are not only accurate, but exquisitely beautiful; the incidents, excepting the very last, are possible, or even probable: what remains is but a very slender evil.

After all objections have been urged, and this among others has certainly a little weight, the Maid of Orleans will remain one of the very finest of modern dramas. Perhaps, among all Schiller's plays, it is the one which evinces most of that quality denominated genius in the strictest meaning of the word. Wallenstein embodies more thought, more knowledge, more conception; but it is only in parts illuminated by that ethereal brightness, which shines over every part of this. The spirit of the romantic ages is here imaged forth; but the whole is exalted, embellished, ennobled. It is what the critics call idealized. The heart must be cold, the imagination dull, which the Jungfrau von Orleans will not move.

In Germany this case did not occur: the reception of the work was beyond example flattering. The leading idea suited the German mind; the execution of it inflamed the hearts and imaginations of the people; they felt proud of their great poet, and delighted to enthusiasm with his poetry. At the first exhibition of the play in Leipzig, Schiller being in the theatre, though not among the audience, this feeling was displayed in a rather singular manner. When the curtain dropped at the end of the first act, there arose on all sides a shout of "Es lebe Friedrich Schiller!" accompanied by the sound of trumpets and other military music: at the conclusion of the piece, the whole assembly left their places, went out, and crowded round the door through which the poet was expected to come; and no sooner did he show himself, than his admiring spectators, uncovering their heads, made an avenue for him to pass; and as he walked along, many, we are told, held up their children, and exclaimed, "That is he!"¹

This must have been a proud moment for Schiller; but also an agitating, painful one; and perhaps on the whole, the latter feeling, for the time, prevailed. Such noisy, formal, and tumultuous plaudits were little to his taste: the triumph they confer, though plentiful, is coarse; and Schiller's modest nature made him shun the public gaze, not seek it. He loved men, and did not affect to despise their approbation; but neither did this form his leading motive. To him art, like virtue, was its own reward; he delighted in his tasks for the sake of the fascinating feelings which they yielded him in their performance. Poetry was the chosen gift of his mind, which his pleasure lay in cultivating: in other things he wished not that his habits or enjoyments should be different from those of other men.

¹ Doering (p. 176);—who adds as follows: "Another testimony of approval, very different in its nature, he received at the first production of the play in Weimar. Knowing and valuing, as he did, the public of that city, it could not but surprise him greatly, when a certain young Doctor S—— called out to him, 'Bravo, Schiller!' from the gallery, in a very loud tone of voice. Offended at such impertinence, the poet hissed strongly, in which the audience joined him. He likewise expressed in words his displeasure at this conduct; and the youthful sprig of medicine was, by direction of the Court, farther punished for his indiscreet applause, by some admonitions from the police."

At Weimar his present way of life was like his former one at Jena: his business was to study and compose; his recreations were in the circle of his family, where he could abandon himself to affections, grave or trifling, and in frank and cheerful intercourse with a few friends. Of the latter he had lately formed a social club, the meetings of which afforded him a regular and innocent amusement. He still loved solitary walks: in the Park at Weimar he might frequently be seen wandering among the groves and remote avenues, with a note-book in his hand; now loitering slowly along, now standing still, now moving rapidly on; if any one appeared in sight, he would dart into another alley, that his dream might not be broken.¹ "One of his favorite resorts," we are told, "was the thickly overshadowed rocky path which leads to the Römische Haus, a pleasure-house of the Duke's, built under the direction of Goethe. There he would often sit in the gloom of the crags, overgrown with cypresses and boxwood; shady hedges before him; not far from the murmur of a little brook, which there gushes in a smooth slaty channel, and where some verses of Goethe are cut upon a brown plate of stone, and fixed in the rock." He still continued to study in the night: the morning was spent with his children and his wife, or in pastimes such as we have noticed; in the afternoon he revised what had been last composed, wrote letters, or visited his friends. His evenings were often passed in the theatre; it was the only public place of amusement which he ever visited; nor was it for the purpose of amusement that he visited this: it was his observatory, where he watched the effect of scenes and situations; devised new schemes of art, or corrected old ones. To the players he was kind, friendly: on nights when any of his pieces had been acted successfully or for the first time, he used to invite the leaders of the company to a supper in the Stadthaus, where the time was spent in mirthful diversions, one of which was frequently a recitation, by Genast, of the Capuchin's sermon in Wallenstein's Camp. Except on such rare occasions, he returned home directly from the theatre, to light his midnight lamp, and commence the most earnest of his labors.

¹ "Whatever he intended to write, he first composed in his head, before putting down a line of it on paper. He used to call a work ready so soon as its existence in his spirit was complete: hence in the public there often were reports that such and such a piece of his was finished, when, in the common sense, it was not even begun." — Jördens Lexicon, § SCHILLER.

The assiduity, with which he struggled for improvement in dramatic composition, had now produced its natural result: the requisitions of his taste no longer hindered the operation of his genius; art had at length become a second nature. A new proof at once of his fertility, and of his solicitude for farther improvement, appeared in 1803. The Braut von Messina was an experiment; an attempt to exhibit a modern subject and modern sentiments in an antique garb. The principle on which the interest of this play rests is the Fatalism of the ancients: the plot is of extreme simplicity; a Chorus also is introduced, an elaborate discussion of the nature and uses of that accompaniment being prefixed by way of preface. The experiment was not successful: with a multitude of individual beauties this Bride of Messina is found to be ineffectual as a whole: it does not move us; the great object of every tragedy is not attained. The Chorus, which Schiller, swerving from the Greek models, has divided into two contending parts, and made to enter and depart with the principals to whom they are attached, has in his hands become the medium of conveying many beautiful effusions of poetry; but it retards the progress of the plot ; it dissipates and diffuses our sympathies ; the interest we should take in the fate and prospects of Manuel and Caesar, is expended on the fate and prospects of man. For beautiful and touching delineations of life ; for pensive and pathetic reflections, sentiments, and images, conveyed in language simple but nervous and emphatic, this tragedy stands high in the rank of modern compositions. There is in it a breath of young tenderness and ardor, mingled impressively with the feelings of gray-haired experience, whose recollections are darkened with melancholy, whose very hopes are chequered and solemn. The implacable Destiny which consigns the brothers to mutual enmity and mutual destruction, for the guilt of a past generation, involving a Mother and a Sister in their ruin, spreads a sombre hue over all the poem ; we are not unmoved by the characters of the hostile Brothers, and we pity the hapless and amiable Beatrice, the victim of their feud. Still there is too little action in the play ; the incidents are too abundantly diluted with reflection ; the interest pauses, flags, and fails to produce its full effect. For its specimens of lyrical poetry, tender, affecting, sometimes exquisitely beautiful, the Bride of Messina will long deserve a careful perusal ; but as exemplifying a new form of the drama, it has found no imitators, and is likely to find none.

The slight degree of failure or miscalculation which occurred in the present instance, was next year abundantly redeemed. Wilhelm Tell, sent out in 1804, is one of Schiller's very finest dramas ; it exhibits some of the highest triumphs which his genius, combined with his art, ever realized. The first descent of Freedom to our modern world, the first unfurling of her standard on the rocky pinnacle of Europe, is here celebrated in the style which it deserved. There is no false tinsel-decoration about Tell, no sickly refinement, no declamatory sentimentality. All is downright, simple, and agreeable to Nature ; yet all is adorned and purified and rendered beautiful, without losing its resemblance. An air of freshness and wholesomeness breathes over it ; we are among honest, inoffensive, yet fearless peasants, untainted by the vices, undazzled by the theories, of more complex and perverted conditions of society. The opening of the first scene sets us down among the Alps. It is "a high rocky shore of the Luzern Lake, opposite to Schwytz. The lake makes a little bight in the land, a hut stands at a short distance from the bank, the fisher-boy is rowing himself about in his boat. Beyond the lake, on the other side, we see the green meadows, the hamlets and farms of Schywtz, lying in the clear sunshine. On our left are observed the peaks of the Hacken surrounded with clouds: to the right, and far in the distance, appear the glaciers. We hear the rances des vaches and the tinkling of cattle-bells." This first impression never leaves us; we are in a scene where all is grand and lovely; but it is the loveliness and grandeur of unpretending, unadulterated Nature. These Switzers are not Arcadian shepherds or speculative patriots; there is not one crook or beechen bowl among them, and they never mention the Social Contract, or the Rights of Man. They are honest people, driven by oppression to assert their privileges; and they go to work like men in earnest, bent on the despatch of business, not on the display of sentiment. They are not philosophers or tribunes; but frank, stalwart landmen: even in the field of Rütli, they do not forget their common feelings; the party that arrive first indulge in a harmless little ebullition of parish vanity: "We are first here!" they say, "we Unterwaldeners!" They have not charters or written laws to which they can appeal; but they have the traditionary rights of their fathers, and bold hearts and strong arms to make them good. The rules by which they steer are not deduced from remote premises, by a fine process of thought; they are the accumulated result of experience, transmitted from peasant sire to peasant son. There is something singularly pleasing in this exhibition of genuine humanity; of wisdom, embodied in old adages and practical maxims of prudence; of magnanimity, displayed in the quiet unpretending discharge of the humblest every-day duties. Truth is superior to Fiction: we feel at home among these brave good people; their fortune interests us more than that of all the brawling, vapid, sentimental heroes in creation. Yet to make them interest us was the very highest problem of art; it was to copy lowly Nature, to give us a copy of it embellished and refined by the agency of genius, yet preserving the likeness in every lineament. The highest quality of art is to conceal itself: these peasants of Schiller's are what every one imagines he could imitate successfully; yet in the hands of any but a true and strong-minded poet they dwindle into repulsive coarseness or mawkish insipidity. Among our own writers, who have tried such subjects, we remember none that has succeeded equally with Schiller. One potent but ill-fated genius has, in far different circumstances and with far other means, shown that he could have equalled him: the Cotter's Saturday Night of Burns is, in its own humble way, as quietly beautiful, as simplex munditiis, as the scenes of Tell. No other has even approached them; though some gifted persons have attempted it. Mr. Wordsworth is no ordinary man; nor are his pedlars, and leech-gatherers, and dalesmen, without their attractions and their moral; but they sink into whining drivellers beside Rösselmann the Priest, Ulric the Smith, Hans of the Wall, and the other sturdy confederates of Rütli.

The skill with which the events are concatenated in this play corresponds to the truth of its delineation of character. The incidents of the Swiss Revolution, as detailed in Tschudi or Müller, are here faithfully preserved, even to their minutest branches. The beauty of Schiller's descriptions all can relish; their fidelity is what surprises every reader who has been in Switzerland. Schiller never saw the scene of his play; but his diligence, his quickness and intensity of conception, supplied this defect. Mountain and mountaineer, conspiracy and action, are all brought before us in their true forms, all glowing in the mild sunshine of the poet's fancy. The tyranny of Gessler, and the misery to which it has reduced the land; the exasperation, yet patient courage of the people; their characters, and those of their leaders, Fürst, Stauffacher, and Melchthal; their exertions and ultimate success, described as they are here, keep up a constant interest in the piece. It abounds in action, as much as the Bride of Messina is defective in that point.

But the finest delineation is undoubtedly the character of Wilhelm Tell, the hero of the Swiss Revolt, and of the present drama. In Tell are combined all the attributes of a great man, without the help of education or of great occasions to develop them. His knowledge has been gathered chiefly from his own experience, and this is bounded by his native mountains: he has had no lessons or examples of splendid virtue, no wish or opportunity to earn renown: he has grown up to manhood, a simple yeoman of the Alps, among simple yeomen; and has never aimed at being more. Yet we trace in him a deep, reflective, earnest spirit, thirsting for activity, yet bound in by the wholesome dictates of prudence; a heart benevolent, generous, unconscious alike of boasting or of fear. It is this salubrious air of rustic, unpretending honesty that forms the great beauty in Tell's character: all is native, all is genuine; he does not declaim: he dislikes to talk of noble conduct, he exhibits it. He speaks little of his freedom, because he has always enjoyed it, and feels that he can always defend it. His reasons for destroying Gessler are not drawn from juriconsults and writers on morality, but from the everlasting instincts of Nature: the Austrian Vogt must die; because if not, the wife and children of Tell will be destroyed by him. The scene, where the peaceful but indomitable archer sits waiting for Gessler in the hollow way among the rocks of Küssnacht, presents him in a striking light. Former scenes had shown us Tell under many amiable and attractive aspects; we knew that he was tender as well as brave, that he loved to haunt the mountain tops, and inhale in silent dreams the influence of their wild and magnificent beauty: we had seen him the most manly and warm-hearted of fathers and husbands; intrepid, modest, and decisive in the midst of peril, and venturing his life to bring help to the oppressed. But here his mind is exalted into stern solemnity; its principles of action come before us with greater clearness, in this its fiery contest. The name of murder strikes a damp across his frank and fearless spirit; while the recollection of his children and their mother proclaims emphatically that there is no remedy. Gessler must perish: Tell swore it darkly in his secret soul, when the monster forced him to aim at the head of his boy; and he will keep his oath. His thoughts wander to and fro, but his volition is unalterable; the free and peaceful mountaineer is to become a shedder of blood: woe to them that have made him so!

Travellers come along the pass; the unconcern of their every-day existence is strikingly contrasted with the dark and fateful purposes of Tell. The shallow innocent garrulity of Stüssi the Forester, the maternal vehemence of Armgart's Wife, the hard-hearted haughtiness of Gessler, successively presented to us, give an air of truth to the delineation, and deepen the impressiveness of the result.

ACT IV. SCENE III.

The hollow way at Küssnacht. You descend from behind amid rocks; and travellers, before appearing on the scene, are seen from the height above. Rocks encircle the whole space; on one of the foremost is a projecting crag overgrown with brushwood.

TELL [enters with his bow].

Here through the hollow way he'll pass; there is No other road to Küssnacht: here I'll do it!
The opportunity is good; the bushes
Of alder there will hide me; from that point
My arrow hits him; the strait pass prevents Pursuit. Now, Gessler, balance thy account
With Heaven! Thou must be gone: thy sand is run.

Remote and harmless I have liv'd; my bow
Ne'er bent save on the wild beast of the forest;
My thoughts were free of murder. Thou hast scar'd me
From my peace; to fell asp-poison hast thou
Changed the milk of kindly temper in me;
Thou hast accusom'd me to horrors. Gessler!
The archer who could aim at his boy's head
Can send an arrow to his enemy's heart.

Poor little boys! My kind true wife! I will Protect them from thee, Landvogt! When I drew
That bowstring, and my hand was quiv'ring,

And with devilish joy thou mad'st me point
 At the child, and I in fainting anguish
 Entreated thee in vain; then with a grim
 Irrevocable oath, deep in my soul,
 I vow'd to God in Heav'n, that the next aim
 I took should be thy heart. The vow I made
 In that despairing moment's agony
 Became a holy debt; and I will pay it.

Thou art my master, and my Kaiser's Vogt;
 Yet would the Kaiser not have suffer'd thee
 To do as thou hast done. He sent thee hither
 To judge us; rigorously, for he is angry;
 But not to glut thy savage appetite
 With murder, and thyself be safe, among us:
 There is a God to punish them that wrong us.

Come forth, thou bringer once of bitter sorrow,
 My precious jewel now, my trusty yew!
 A mark I'll set thee, which the cry of woe
 Could never penetrate: to thee it shall not
 Be impenetrable. And, good bowstring!
 Which so oft in sport hast serv'd me truly,
 Forsake me not in this last awful earnest;
 Yet once hold fast, thou faithful cord; thou oft
 For me hast wing'd the biting arrow;
 Now send it sure and piercing, now or never!
 Fail this, there is no second in my quiver.
[Travellers cross the scene.]

Here let me sit on this stone bench, set up
 For brief rest to the wayfarer; for here
 There is no home. Each pushes on quick, transient,
 Regarding not the other or his sorrows.
 Here goes the anxious merchant, and the light
 Unmoneyed pilgrim; the pale pious monk,
 The gloomy robber, and the mirthful showman;
 The carrier with his heavy-laden horse,
 Who comes from far-off lands; for every road
 Will lead one to the end o' th' World.
 They pass; each hastening forward on his path,
 Pursuing his own business: mine is death!
[Sits down.]

Erewhile, my children, were your father out,
 There was a merriment at his return ;
 For still, on coming home, he brought you somewhat,
 Might be an Alpine flower, rare bird, or elf-bolt,
 Such as the wand'rer finds upon the mountains :
 Now he is gone in quest of other spoil.
 On the wild way he sits with thoughts of murder :
 'T is for his enemy's life he lies in wait.
 And yet on you, dear children, you alone
 He thinks as then : for your sake is he here ;
 To guard you from the Tyrant's vengeful mood,
 He bends his peaceful bow for work of blood. [Rises.

No common game I watch for. Does the hunter
 Think it nought to roam the livelong day,
 In winter's cold ; to risk the desp'rate leap
 From crag to crag, to climb the slipp'ry face
 O' th' dizzy steep, gluing his steps in 's blood ;
 And all to catch a pitiful chamois ?
 Here is a richer prize afield : the heart
 Of my sworn enemy, that would destroy me.
[A sound of gay music is heard in the distance ; it approaches.

All my days, the bow has been my comrade,
 I have trained myself to archery ; oft
 Have I took the bull's-eye, many a prize
 Brought home from merry shooting ; but to-day
 I will perform my master-feat, and win me
 The best prize in the circuit of the hills.

[A wedding company crosses the scene, and mounts up through the Pass. Tell looks at them, leaning on his bow ; Stüssi the Forester joins him.

STÜSSI. 'T is Klostermey'r of Morlischachen holds
 His bridal feast to-day : a wealthy man ;
 Has half a score of glens i' th' Alpa. They're going
 To fetch the bride from Imisee ; to-night
 There will be mirth and wassail down at Küsnacht.
 Come you ! All honest people are invited.

TELL. A serious guest befits not bridal feasts.

STÜSSI. If sorrow press you, dash it from your heart !

Seize what you can : the times are hard ; one needs
To snatch enjoyment nimbly while it passes.

Here 't is a bridal, there 't will be a burial.

TELL. And oftentimes the one leads to the other.

STRÜSSL. The way o' th' world at present! There is nought
But mischief everywhere : an avalanche
Has come away in Glarus; and, they tell me,
A side o' th' Glärnisch has sunk under ground.

TELL. Do, then, the very hills give way! On earth
Is nothing that endures.

STRÜSSL. In foreign parts, too,
Are strange wonders. I was speaking with a man
From Baden : a Knight, it seems, was riding
To the King ; a swarm of hornets met him
By the way, and felt on's horse, and stung it
Till it dropt down dead of very torment,
And the poor Knight was forced to go afoot.

TELL. Weak creatures too have stings.

[Armgar's Wife enters with several children, and places herself at the entrance of the Pass.]

STRÜSSL. 'T is thought to bode
Some great misfortune to the land ; some black Unnatural action.

TELL. Ev'ry day such actions
Occur in plenty : needs no sign or wonder
To foreshow them.

STRÜSSL. Ay, truly! Well for him
That tills his field in peace, and undisturb'd
Sits by his own fireside!

TELL. The peacefulest
Dwells not in peace, if wicked neighbors hinder.

[Tell looks often, with restless expectation, towards the top of the Pass.]

STRÜSSL. Too true. — Good b'ye! — You're waiting here for some one?

TELL. That am I.

STRÜSSL. Glad meeting with your friends!
You are from Uri? His Grace the Landvogt
Is expected thence to-day.

TRAVELLER [enters]. Expect not
The Landvogt now. The waters, from the rain,
Are flooded, and have swept down all the bridges. [Tell stands up.]

ARMGART [coming forward].

The Vogt not come!

STÜSSI.

Did you want aught with him?

ARMGART. Ah! yes, indeed!

STÜSSI.

Why have you placed yourself

In this strait pass to meet him?

ARMGART.

In the pass

He cannot turn aside from me, must hear me.

FRIESSHARDT [comes hastily down the Pass, and calls into the Scene].

Make way! make way! My lord the Landvogt

Is riding close at hand.

ARMGART.

The Landvogt coming!

[She goes with her children to the front of the Scene. Gessler and Rudolph der Harnas appear on horseback at the top of the Pass.]

STÜSSI [to Friesshardt].

How got you through the water, when the flood

Had carried down the bridges?

FRIESS.

We have battled

With the billows, friend; we heed no Alp-flood.

STÜSSI. Were you o' board i' th' storm?

FRIESS.

That were we;

While I live, I shall remember 't.

STÜSSI.

Stay, stay!

Oh, tell me!

FRIESS. Cannot; must run on t' announce

His lordship in the Castle.

[Exit.]

STÜSSI.

Had these fellows

I' th' boat been honest people, 't would have sunk

With ev'ry soul of them. But for such rakehells,

Neither fire nor flood will kill them. [He looks round.] Whither

Went the Mountain-man was talking with me?

[Exit.]

GRESSLER and RUDOLPH DER HARNAS on horseback.

GRESSLER. Say what you like, I am the Kaiser's servant,

And must think of pleasing him. He sent me

Not to caress these hinds, to soothe or nurse them:

Obedience is the word! The point at issue is Shall Boor or Kaiser here be lord o' th' land.

ARMGART. Now is the moment! Now for my petition!

[Approaches timidly.]

GESSLER. This Hat at Aldorf, mark you, I set up
Not for the joke's sake, or to try the hearts
O' th' people; these I know of old: but that
They might be taught to bend their necks to me,
Which are too straight and stiff: and in the way
Where they are hourly passing, I have planted
This offence, that so their eyes may fall on 't,
And remind them of their lord, whom they forget.

RUDOLPH. But yet the people have some rights —

GESSLER.

Which now

Is not a time for settling or admitting.
Mighty things are on the anvil. The house
Of Hapsburg must wax powerful; what the Father
Gloriously began, the Son must forward:
This people is a stone of stumbling, which
One way or t' other must be put aside.

[They are about to pass along. The Woman throws herself before the Landvogt.]

ARMGART. Mercy, gracious Landvogt! Justice! Justice!

GESSLER. Why do you plague me here, and stop my way,
F' th' open road? Off! Let me pass!

ARMGART.

My husband

Is in prison; these orphans cry for bread.
Have pity, good your Grace, have pity on us!

RUDOLPH. Who or what are you, then? Who is your husband?

ARMGART. A poor wild-hay-man of the Rigiberg,
Whose trade is, on the brow of the abyss,
To mow the common grass from craggy shelves
And nooks to which the cattle dare not climb.

RUDOLPH [to Gessler]. By Heaven, a wild and miserable life!
Do now! do let the poor drudge free, I pray you!
Whatever be his crime, that horrid trade
Is punishment enough.

[To the Woman] You shall have justice:

In the Castle there, make your petition;
This is not the place.

ARMGART.

No, no! I stir not

From the spot till you give up my husband!
'T is the sixth month he has lain f' th' dungeon,

Waiting for the sentence of some judge, in vain.

GESSLER. Woman! Would'st lay hands on me? Begone!

ARMGART. Justice, Landvogt! thou art judge o' th' land here,
 P' th' Kaiser's stead and God's. Perform thy duty!
 As thou expectest justice from above,
 Show it to us.

GESSLER. Off! Take the mutinous rabble
 From my sight.

ARMGART [catches the bridle of the horse].

No, no! I now have nothing
 More to lose. Thou shalt not move a step, Vogt,
 Till thou hast done me right. Ay, knit thy brows,
 And roll thy eyes as sternly as thou wilt;
 We are so wretched, wretched now, we care not
 Aught more for thy anger.

GESSLER. Woman, make way!
 Or else my horse shall crush thee.

ARMGART. Let it! there —

[She pulls her children to the ground, and throws herself along with them in his way.]

Here am I with my children: let the orphans
 Be trodden underneath thy horse's hoofs!
 'T is not the worst that thou hast done.

RUDOLPH. Woman! Art mad?

ARMGART [with still greater violence].

'T is long that thou hast trodden
 The Kaiser's people under foot. Too long!
 Oh, I am but a woman; were I a man,
 I should find something else to do than lie
 Here crying in the dust.

[The music of the Wedding is heard again, at the top of the Pass, but softened by distance.]

GESSLER. Where are my servants?
 Quick! Take her hence! I may forget myself,
 And do the thing I shall repent.

RUDOLPH. My lord,
 The servants cannot pass; the place above
 Is crowded by a bridal company.

GESSLER. I've been too mild a ruler to this people;
 They are not tamed as they should be; their tongues
 Are still at liberty. This shall be alter'd!

I will break that stubborn humor; Freedom
 With its pert vauntings shall no more be heard of:
 I will enforce a new law in these lands;
 There shall not —

[An arrow pierces him; he claps his hand upon his heart, and is about to sink. With a faint voice.]

God be merciful to me!

RUDOLPH. Herr Landvogt — God! What is it? Whence came it?

ARMGART [springing up].

Dead! dead! He totters, sinks! 'T has hit him!

RUDOLPH [springs from his horse].

Horrible! — O God of Heaven! — Herr Ritter,
 Cry to God for mercy! You are dying.

GESSLER. 'T is Tell's arrow.

[Has slid down from his horse into Rudolph's arms, who sets him on the stone bench.]

TELL [appears above, on the point of the rock].

Thou hast found the archer;

Seek no other. Free are the cottages,
 Secure is innocence from thee; thou wilt
 Torment the land no more.

[Disappears from the height. The people rush in.]

STÜSSI [foremost]. What? What has happen'd?

ARMGART. The Landvogt shot, kill'd by an arrow.

PEOPLE [rushing in].

Who?

Who is shot?

[Whilst the foremost of the wedding company enter on the Scene, the hindmost are still on the height, and the music continues.]

RUDOLPH. He's bleeding, bleeding to death.
 Away! Seek help; pursue the murderer!
 Lost man! Must it so end with thee? Thou wouldst not Hear my warning!

STÜSSI. Sure enough! There lies he
 Pale and going fast.

MANY VOICES. Who was it killed him?

RUDOLPH. Are the people mad, that they make music
 Over murder? Stop it, I say!

[The music ceases suddenly; more people come crowding round.]

Herr Landvogt,

Can you not speak to me? Is there nothing
You would entrust me with?

[Gessler makes signs with his hand, and vehemently repeats them, as they are not understood.]

Where shall I run?

To Küssnacht! I cannot understand you:
Oh, grow not angry! Leave the things of Earth,
And think how you shall make your peace with Heaven!

[The whole bridal company surround the dying man with an expression of unsympathising horror.]

STÜSSL. Look there! How pale he grows! Now! Death is coming

Round his heart: his eyes grow dim and fixed.

ARMGART [lifts up one of her children].

See, children, how a miscreant departs!

RUDOLPH. Out on you, crazy hags! Have ye no touch
Of feeling in you, that ye feast your eyes
On such an object? Help me, lend your hands!
Will no one help to pull the tort'ring arrow
From his breast?

WOMEN [start back]. We touch him whom God has smote!

RUDOLPH. My curse upon you! [Draws his sword.]

STÜSSL [lays his hand on Rudolph's arm].

Softly, my good Sir!

Your government is at an end. The Tyrant
Is fallen: we will endure no farther violence:
We are free.

ALL [tumultuously]. The land is free!

RUDOLPH. Ha! runs it so?

Are rev'rence and obedience gone already?

[To the armed Attendants, who press in.]

You see the murd'rous deed that has been done.
Our help is vain, vain to pursue the murd'rer;
Other cares demand us. On! To Küssnacht!
To save the Kaiser's fortress! For at present
All bonds of order, duty, are unloosed,
No man's fidelity is to be trusted.

[Whilst he departs with the Attendants, appear six Friars in Misericordie.]

ARMGART. Room! Room! Here come the Friars of Mercy.

STÜSSL. The victim slain, the ravens are assembling!

FRATRES MISERICORDIÆ [form a half-circle round the dead body, and sing in a deep tone].

With noiseless tread death comes on man,
No plea, no prayer delivers him ;
From midst of busy life's unfinished plan,
With sudden hand, it severs him :
And ready or not ready, — no delay,
Forth to his Judge's bar he must away !

The death of Gessler, which forms the leading object of the plot, happens at the end of the fourth act ; the fifth, occupied with representing the expulsion of his satellites, and the final triumph and liberation of the Swiss, though diversified with occurrences and spectacles, moves on with inferior animation. A certain want of unity is, indeed, distinctly felt throughout all the piece ; the incidents do not point one way ; there is no connection, or a very slight one, between the enterprise of Tell and that of the men of Rütli. This is the principal, or rather sole, deficiency of the present work ; a deficiency inseparable from the faithful display of the historical event, and far more than compensated by the deeper interest and the wider range of action and delineation, which a strict adherence to the facts allows. By the present mode of management, Alpine life in all its length and breadth is placed before us : from the feudal halls of Attinghausen to Buodi the Fisher of the Luzern Lake, and Armgart, —

“ The poor wild-hay-man of the Rigiberg,
Whose trade is, on the brow of the abyss,
To mow the common grass from craggy shelves
And nooks to which the cattle dare not climb,” —

we stand as if in presence of the Swiss, beholding the achievement of their freedom in its minutest circumstances, with all its simplicity and unaffected greatness. The light of the poet's genius is upon the Four Forest Cantons, at the opening of the Fourteenth Century : the whole time and scene shine as with the brightness, the truth, and more than the beauty, of reality.

The tragedy of Tell wants unity of interest and of action ; but in spite of this, it may justly claim the high dignity of ranking with the very best of Schiller's plays. Less comprehensive and ambitious than Wallenstein, less ethereal than the Jungfrau, it has a look of nature and substantial truth, which neither of its rivals can boast of. The feelings it inculcates and appeals to are those of universal human nature, and presented in their purest, most unpretending form. There is no high-wrought sentiment, no poetic love. Tell loves his wife as honest men love their wives ; and the episode of Bertha and Rudenz, though beautiful, is very brief, and without effect on the general result. It is delightful and salutary to the heart to wander among the scenes of Tell : all is lovely, yet all is real. Physical and moral grandeur are united ; yet both are the unadorned grandeur of Nature. There are the lakes and green valleys beside us, the Schreckhorn, the Jungfrau, and their sister peaks, with their avalanches and their palaces of ice, all glowing in the southern sun ; and dwelling among them are a race of manly husbandmen, heroic without ceasing to be homely, poetical without ceasing to be genuine.

We have dwelt the longer on this play, not only on account of its peculiar fascinations, but also — as it is our last ! Schiller's faculties had never been more brilliant than at present : strong in mature age, in rare and varied accomplishments, he was now reaping the full fruit of his studious vigils ; the rapidity with which he wrote such noble poems, at once betokened the exuberant riches of his mind and the prompt command which he enjoyed of them. Still all that he had done seemed but a fraction of his appointed task : a bold imagination was carrying him forward into distant untouched fields of thought and poetry, where triumphs yet more glorious were to be gained. Schemes of new writings, new kinds of writing, were budding in his fancy ; he was yet, as he had ever been, surrounded by a multitude of projects, and full of ardor to labor in fulfilling them. But Schiller's labors and triumphs were drawing to a close. The invisible Messenger was already near, which over takes alike the busy and the idle, which arrests man in the midst of his pleasures or his occupations, and changes his countenance and sends him away.

In 1804, having been at Berlin witnessing the exhibition of his Wilhelm Tell, he was seized, while returning, with a paroxysm of that malady which for many years had never wholly left him. The attack was fierce and violent; it brought him to the verge of the grave; but he escaped once more; was considered out of danger, and again resumed his poetical employments. Besides various translations from the French and Italian, he had sketched a tragedy on the history of Perkin Warbeck, and finished two acts of one on that of a kindred but more fortunate impostor, Dimitri of Russia. His mind, it would appear, was also frequently engaged with more solemn and sublime ideas. The universe of human thought he had now explored and enjoyed; but he seems to have found no permanent contentment in any of its provinces. Many of his later poems indicate an incessant and increasing longing for some solution of the mystery of life; at times it is a gloomy resignation to the want and the despair of any. His ardent spirit could not satisfy itself with things seen, though gilded with all the glories of intellect and imagination; it soared away in search of other lands, looking with unutterable desire for some surer and brighter home beyond the horizon of this world. Death he had no reason to regard as probably a near event; but we easily perceive that the awful secrets connected with it had long been familiar to his contemplation. The veil which hid them from his eyes was now shortly, when he looked not for it, to be rent asunder.

The spring of 1805, which Schiller had anticipated with no ordinary hopes of enjoyment and activity, came on in its course, cold, bleak, and stormy; and along with it his sickness returned. The help of physicians was vain; the unwearied services of trembling affection were vain: his disorder kept increasing; on the 9th of May it reached a crisis. Early in the morning of that day, he grew insensible, and by degrees delirious. Among his expressions, the word Lichtenberg was frequently noticed; a word of no import; indicating, as some thought, the writer of that name, whose works he had lately been reading; according to others, the castle of Leuchtenberg, which, a few days before his sickness, he had been proposing to visit. The poet and the sage was soon to lie low; but his friends were spared the farther pain of seeing him depart in madness. The fiery canopy of physical suffering, which had bewildered and blinded his thinking faculties, was drawn aside; and the spirit of Schiller looked forth in its wonted serenity, once again before it passed away forever. After noon his delirium abated; about four o'clock he fell into a soft sleep, from which he ere long awoke in full possession of his senses. Restored to consciousness in that hour, when the soul is cut off from human help, and man must front the King of Terrors on his own strength, Schiller did not faint or fail in this his last and sharpest trial. Feeling that his end was come, he addressed himself to meet it as became him; not with affected carelessness or superstitious fear, but with the quiet unpretending manliness which had marked the tenor of his life. Of his friends and family he took a touching but a tranquil farewell: he ordered that his funeral should be private, without pomp or parade. Some one inquiring how he felt, he said "Calmer and calmer;" simple but memorable words, expressive of the mild heroism of the man. About six he sank into a deep sleep; once for a moment he looked up with a lively air, and said, "Many things were growing plain and clear to him!" Again he closed his eyes; and his sleep deepened and deepened, till it changed into the sleep from which there is no awakening; and all that remained of Schiller was a lifeless form, soon to be mingled with the clods of the valley.

The news of Schiller's death fell cold on many a heart: not in Germany alone, but over Europe, it was regarded as a public loss, by all who understood its meaning. In Weimar especially, the scene of his noblest efforts, the abode of his chosen friends, the sensation it produced was deep and universal. The public places of amusement were shut; all ranks made haste to testify their feelings, to honor themselves and the deceased by tributes to his memory. It was Friday when Schiller died; his funeral was meant to be on Sunday; but the state of his remains made it necessary to proceed before. Doering thus describes the ceremony: —

"According to his own directions, the bier was to be borne by private burghers of the city; but several young artists and students, out of reverence for the deceased, took it from them. It was between midnight and one in the morning, when they approached the churchyard. The overclouded heaven threatened rain. But as the bier was set down beside the grave, the clouds suddenly split asunder, and the moon, coming forth in peaceful clearness, threw her first rays on the coffin of the Departed. They lowered him into the grave; and the moon again retired behind her clouds. A fierce tempest of wind began to howl, as if it were reminding the bystanders of their great, irreparable loss. At this moment who could have applied without emotion the poet's own words:—

'Alas, the ruddy morning tinges
A silent, cold, sepulchral stone;
And evening throws her crimson fringes
But round his slumber dark and lone!'"

So lived and so died Friedrich Schiller; a man on whose history other men will long dwell with a mingled feeling of reverence and love. Our humble record of his life and writings is drawing to an end: yet we still linger, loath to part with a spirit so dear to us. From the scanty and too much neglected field of his biography, a few slight facts and indications may still be gleaned; slight, but distinctive of him as an individual, and not to be despised in a penury so great and so unmerited.

Schiller's age was forty-five years and a few months when he died.¹ Sickness had long wasted his form, which at no time could boast of faultless symmetry. He was tall and strongly boned; but unmuscular and lean: his body, it might be perceived, was wasting under the energy of a spirit too keen for it. His face was pale, the cheeks and temples rather hollow, the chin somewhat deep and slightly projecting, the nose irregularly aquiline, his hair inclined to auburn. Withal his countenance was attractive, and had a certain manly beauty. The lips were curved together in a line, expressing delicate and honest sensibility; a silent enthusiasm, impetuosity not unchecked by melancholy, gleamed in his softly kindled eyes and pale cheeks, and the brow was high and thoughtful. To judge from his portraits, Schiller's face expressed well the features of his mind: it is mildness tempering strength; fiery ardor shining through the clouds of suffering and disappointment, deep but patiently endured. Pale was its proper tint; the cheeks and temples were best hollow. There are few faces that affect us more than Schiller's; it is at once meek, tender, unpretending, and heroic.

¹ "He left a widow, two sons, and two daughters," of whom we regret to say that we have learned nothing. "Of his three sisters, the youngest died before him; the eldest is married to the Hofrath Reinwald, in Meinungen; the second to Herr Frankh, the clergyman of Meckmühl, in Württemberg." Doering.

In his dress and manner, as in all things, he was plain and unaffected. Among strangers, something shy and retiring might occasionally be observed in him: in his own family, or among his select friends, he was kind-hearted, free, and gay as a little child. In public, his external appearance had nothing in it to strike or attract. Of an unassuming aspect, wearing plain apparel, his looks as he walked were constantly bent on the ground; so that frequently, as we are told, "he failed to notice the salutation of a passing acquaintance; but if he heard it, he would catch hastily at his hat, and give his cordial 'Guten Tag.'" Modesty, simplicity, a total want of all parade or affectation were conspicuous in him. These are the usual concomitants of true greatness, and serve to mitigate its splendor. Common things he did as a common man. His conduct in such matters was uncalculated, spontaneous; and therefore natural and pleasing.

Concerning his mental character, the greater part of what we had to say has been already said, in speaking of his works. The most cursory perusal of these will satisfy us that he had a mind of the highest order; grand by nature, and cultivated by the assiduous study of a lifetime. It is not the predominating force of any one faculty that impresses us in Schiller; but the general force of all. Every page of his writings bears the stamp of internal vigor; new truths, new aspects of known truth, bold thought, happy imagery, lofty emotion. Schiller would have been no common man, though he had altogether wanted the qualities peculiar to poets. His intellect is clear, deep, and comprehensive; its deductions, frequently elicited from numerous and distant premises, are presented under a magnificent aspect, in the shape of theorems, embracing an immense multitude of minor propositions. Yet it seems powerful and vast, rather than quick or keen; for Schiller is not notable for wit, though his fancy is ever prompt with its metaphors, illustrations, comparisons, to decorate and point the perceptions of his reason. The earnestness of his temper farther disqualified him for this: his tendency was rather to adore the grand and the lofty than to despise the little and the mean. Perhaps his greatest faculty was a half-poetical, half-philosophical imagination: a faculty teeming with magnificence and brilliancy; now adorning, or aiding to erect, a stately pyramid of scientific speculation; now brooding over the abysses of thought and feeling, till thoughts and feelings, else unutterable, were embodied in expressive forms, and palaces and landscapes glowing in ethereal beauty rose like exhalations from the bosom of the deep.

Combined and partly of kindred with these intellectual faculties was that vehemence of temperament which is necessary for their full development. Schiller's heart was at once fiery and tender; impetuous, soft, affectionate, his enthusiasm clothed the universe with grandeur, and sent his spirit forth to explore its secrets and mingle warmly in its interests. Thus poetry in Schiller was not one but many gifts. It was not the "lean and flashy song" of an ear apt for harmony, combined with a maudlin sensibility, or a mere animal ferocity of passion, and an imagination creative chiefly because unbridled: it was, what true poetry is always, the quintessence of general mental riches, the purified result of strong thought and conception, and of refined as well as powerful emotion. In his writings, we behold him a moralist, a philosopher, a man of universal knowledge: in each of these capacities he is great, but also in more; for all that he achieves in these is brightened and gilded with the touch of another quality; his maxima his feelings, his opinions are transformed from the lifeless shape of didactic truths, into living shapes that address faculties far finer than the understanding.

The gifts by which such transformation is effected, the gift of pure, ardent, tender sensibility, joined to those of fancy and imagination, are perhaps not wholly denied to any man endowed with the power of reason; possessed in various degrees of strength, they add to the products of mere intellect corresponding tints of new attractiveness; in a degree great enough to be remarkable they constitute a poet. Of this peculiar faculty how much had fallen to Schiller's lot, we need not attempt too minutely to explain. Without injuring his reputation, it may be admitted that, in general, his works exhibit rather extraordinary strength than extraordinary fineness or versatility. His power of dramatic imitation is perhaps never of the very highest, the Shakspearean kind; and in its best state, it is farther limited to a certain range of characters. It is with the grave, the earnest, the exalted, the affectionate, the mournful, that he succeeds: he is not destitute of humor, as his Wallenstein's Camp will show, but neither is he rich in it; and for sprightly ridicule in any of its forms he has seldom shown either taste or talent. Chance principally made the drama his department; he might have shone equally in many others. The vigorous and copious invention, the knowledge of life, of men and things, displayed in his theatrical pieces, might have been available in very different pursuits; frequently the charm of his works has little to distinguish it from the charm of intellectual and moral force in general; it is often the capacious thought, the vivid imagery, the impetuous feeling of the orator, rather than the wild pathos and capricious enchantment of the poet. Yet that he was capable of rising to the loftiest regions of poetry, no reader of his Maid of Orleans, his character of Thekla, or many other of his pieces, will hesitate to grant. Sometimes we suspect that it is the very grandeur of his general powers which prevents us from exclusively admiring his poetic genius. We are not lulled by the syren song of poetry, because her melodies are blended with the clearer, manlier tones of serious reason, and of honest though exalted feeling.

Much laborious discussion has been wasted in defining genius, particularly by the countrymen of Schiller, some of whom have narrowed the conditions of the term so far, as to find but three men of genius since the world was created: Homer, Shakspeare, and Goethe! From such rigid precision, applied to a matter in itself indefinite, there may be an apparent, but there is no real, increase of accuracy. The creative power, the faculty not only of imitating given forms of being, but of imagining and representing new ones, which is here attributed with such distinctness and so sparingly, has been given by nature in complete perfection to no man, nor entirely denied to any. The shades of it cannot be distinguished by so loose a scale as language. A definition of genius which excludes such a mind as Schiller's will scarcely be agreeable to philosophical correctness, and it will tend rather to lower than to exalt the dignity of the word. Possessing all the general mental faculties in their highest degree of strength, an intellect ever active, vast, powerful, far-sighted; an imagination never weary of producing grand or beautiful forms; a heart of the noblest temper, sympathies comprehensive yet ardent, feelings vehement, impetuous, yet full of love and kindness and tender pity; conscious of the rapid and fervid exercise of all these powers within him, and able farther to present their products refined and harmonized, and "married to immortal verse," Schiller may or may not be called a man of genius by his critics; but his mind in either case will remain one of the most enviable which can fall to the share of a mortal.

In a poet worthy of that name, the powers of the intellect are indissolubly interwoven with the moral feelings; and the exercise of his art depends not more on the perfection of the one than of the other. The poet, who does not feel nobly and justly, as well as passionately, will never permanently succeed in making others feel: the forms of error and falseness, infinite in number, are transitory in duration; truth, of thought and sentiment, but chiefly of sentiment, truth alone is eternal and unchangeable. But, happily, a delight in the products of reason and imagination can scarcely ever be divided from, at least, a love for virtue and genuine greatness. Our feelings are in favor of heroism; we wish to be pure and perfect. Happy he whose resolutions are so strong, or whose temptations are so weak, that he can convert these feelings into action! The severest pang, of which a proud and sensitive nature can be conscious, is the perception of its own debasement. The sources of misery in life are many: vice is one of the surest. Any human creature, tarnished with guilt, will in general be wretched; a man of genius in that case will be doubly so, for his ideas of excellence are higher, his sense of failure is more keen. In such miseries, Schiller had no share. The sentiments, which animated his poetry, were converted into principles of conduct; his actions were as blameless as his writings were pure. With his simple and high predilections, with his strong devotedness to a noble cause, he contrived to steer through life, unsullied by its meanness, unsubdued by any of its difficulties or allurements. With the world, in fact, he had not much to do; without effort, he dwelt apart from it; its prizes were not the wealth which could enrich him. His great, almost his single aim, was to unfold his spiritual faculties, to study and contemplate and improve their intellectual creations. Bent upon this, with the steadfastness of an apostle, the more sordid temptations of the world passed harmlessly over him. Wishing not to seem, but to be, envy was a feeling of which he knew but little, even before he rose above its level. Wealth or rank he regarded as a means, not an end; his own humble fortune supplying him with all the essential conveniences of life, the world had nothing more that he chose to covet, nothing more that it could give him. He was not rich; but his habits were simple, and, except by reason of his sickness and its consequences, unexpensive. At all times he was far above the meanness of self-interest, particularly in its meanest shape, a love of money. Doering tells us, that a bookseller having travelled from a distance expressly to offer him a higher price for the copyright of Wallenstein, at that time in the press, and for which he was on terms with Cotta of Tübingen, Schiller answering, "Cotta deals steadily with me, and I with him," sent away this new merchant, without even the hope of a future bargain. The anecdote is small; but it seems to paint the integrity of the man, careless of pecuniary concerns in comparison with the strictest uprightness in his conduct. In fact, his real wealth lay in being able to pursue his darling studies, and to live in the sunshine of friendship and domestic love. This he had always longed for; this he at last enjoyed. And though sickness and many vexations annoyed him, the intrinsic excellence of his nature chequered the darkest portions of their gloom with an effulgence derived from himself. The ardor of his feelings, tempered by benevolence, was equable and placid: his temper, though overflowing with generous warmth, seems almost never to have shown any hastiness or anger. To all men he was humane and sympathizing; among his friends, open-hearted, generous, helpful; in the circle of his family, kind, tender, sportive. And what gave an especial charm to all this was, the unobtrusiveness with which it was attended: there was no parade, no display, no particle of affectation; rating and conducting himself simply as an honest man and citizen, he became greater by forgetting that he was great.

Such were the prevailing habits of Schiller. That in the mild and beautiful brilliancy of their aspect there must have been some specks and imperfections, the common lot of poor humanity, who knows not? That these were small and transient, we judge from the circumstance that scarcely any hint of them has reached us: nor are we anxious to obtain a full description of them. For practical uses, we can sufficiently conjecture what they were; and the heart desires not to dwell upon them. This man is passed away from our dim and tarnished world: let him have the benefit of departed friends; let him be transfigured in our thoughts, and shine there without the little blemishes that clung to him in life.

Schiller gives a fine example of the German character: he has all its good qualities in a high degree, with very few of its defects. We trace in him all that downrightness and simplicity, that sincerity of heart and mind, for which the Germans are remarked; their enthusiasm, their patient, long-continuing, earnest devotedness; their imagination, delighting in the lofty and magnificent; their intellect, rising into refined abstractions, stretching itself into comprehensive generalizations. But the excesses to which such a character is liable are, in him, prevented by a firm and watchful sense of propriety. His simplicity never degenerates into ineptitude or insipidity; his enthusiasm must be based on reason; he rarely suffers his love of the vast to betray him into toleration of the vague. The boy Schiller was extravagant; but the man admits no bombast in his style, no inflation in his thoughts or actions. He is the poet of truth; our understandings and consciences are satisfied, while our hearts and imaginations are moved. His fictions are emphatically nature copied and embellished; his sentiments are refined and touchingly beautiful, but they are likewise manly and correct; they exalt and inspire, but they do not mislead. Above all, he has no cant; in any of its thousand branches, ridiculous or hateful, none. He does not distort his character or genius into shapes, which he thinks more becoming than their natural one: he does not hang out principles which are not his, or harbor beloved persuasions which he half or wholly knows to be false. He did not often speak of wholesome prejudices; he did not "embrace the Roman Catholic religion because it was the grandest and most comfortable." Truth with Schiller, or what seemed such, was an indispensable requisite: if he but suspected an opinion to be false, however dear it may have been, he seems to have examined it with rigid scrutiny, and if he found it guilty, to have plucked it out, and resolutely cast it forth. The sacrifice might cause him pain, permanent pain; real damage, he imagined, it could hardly cause him. It is irksome and dangerous to travel in the dark; but better so, than with an Ignifatus to guide us. Considering the warmth of his sensibilities, Schiller's merit on this point is greater than we might at first suppose. For a man with whom intellect is the ruling or exclusive faculty, whose sympathies, loves, hatreds, are comparatively coarse and dull, it may be easy to avoid this half-wilful entertainment of error, and this cant which is the consequence and sign of it. But for a man of keen tastes, a large fund of innate probity is necessary to prevent his aping the excellence which he loves so much, yet is unable to attain. Among persons of the latter sort, it is extremely rare to meet with one completely unaffected. Schiller's other noble qualities would not have justice, did we neglect to notice this, the truest proof of their nobility. Honest, unpretending, manly simplicity pervades all parts of his character and genius and habits of life. We not only admire him, we trust him and love him.

"The character of child-like simplicity," he has himself observed,¹ "which genius impresses on its works, it shows also in its private life and manners. It is bashful, for nature is ever so; but it is not prudish, for only corruption is prudish. It is clear-sighted, for nature can never be the contrary; but it is not cunning, for this only art can be. It is faithful to its character and inclinations; but not so much because it is directed by principles, as because after all vibrations nature constantly reverts to her original position, constantly renews her primitive demand. It is modest, nay timid, for genius is always a secret to itself; but it is not anxious, for it knows not the dangers of the way which it travels. Of the private habits of the persons who have been peculiarly distinguished by their genius, our information is small; but the little that has been recorded for us of the chief of them, — of Sophocles, Archimedes, Hippocrates; and in modern times, of Dante and Tasso, of Rafaelle, Albrecht Dürer, Cervantes, Shakespeare, Fielding, and others, — confirms this observation." Schiller himself confirms it; perhaps more strongly than most of the examples here adduced. No man ever wore his faculties more meekly, or performed great works with less consciousness of their greatness. Abstracted from the contemplation of himself, his eye was turned upon the objects of his labor, and he pursued them with the eagerness, the entireness, the spontaneous sincerity, of a boy pursuing sport. Hence this "child-like simplicity," the last perfection of his other excellencies. His was a mighty spirit unheeding of its might. He walked the earth in calm power: "the staff of his spear was like a weaver's beam ;" but he wielded it like a wand.

¹ Naive und sentimentalische Dichtung.

Such, so far as we can represent it, is the form in which Schiller's life and works have gradually painted their character in the mind of a secluded individual, whose solitude he has often charmed, whom he has instructed, and cheered, and moved. The original impression, we know, was faint and inadequate, the present copy of it is still more so ; yet we have sketched it as we could : the figure of Schiller, and of the figures he conceived and drew are there ; himself, "and in his hand a glass which shows us many more." To those who look on him as we have wished to make them, Schiller will not need a farther panegyric. For the sake of Literature, it may still be remarked, that his merit was peculiarly due to her. Literature was his creed, the dictate of his conscience ; he was an Apostle of the Sublime and Beautiful, and this his calling made a hero of him. For it was in the spirit of a true man that he viewed it, and undertook to cultivate it ; and its inspirations constantly maintained the noblest temper in his soul. The end of Literature was not, in Schiller's judgment, to amuse the idle, or to recreate the busy, by showy spectacles for the imagination, or quaint paradoxes and epigrammatic disquisitions for the understanding : least of all was it to gratify in any shape the selfishness of its professors, to minister to their malignity, their love of money, or even of fame. For persons who degrade it to such purposes, the deepest contempt of which his kindly nature could admit was at all times in store. "Unhappy mortal !" says he to the literary tradesman, the man who writes for gain, "Unhappy mortal, who with science and art, the noblest of all instruments, effectest and attemptest nothing more than the day-drudge with the meanest ; who, in the domain of perfect Freedom, bearest about in thee the spirit of Slave !" As Schiller viewed it, genuine Literature includes the essence of philosophy, religion, art ; whatever speaks to the immortal part of man. The daughter, she is likewise the nurse of all that is spiritual and exalted in our character. The boon she bestows is truth ; truth, not merely physical, political, economical, such as the sensual man in us is perpetually demanding, ever ready to reward, and likely in general to find; but truth of moral feeling, truth of taste, that inward truth in its thousand modifications, which only the most ethereal portion of our nature can discern, but without which that portion of it languishes and dies, and we are left divested of our birthright, thenceforward "of the earth earthy," machines for earning and enjoying, no longer worthy to be called the Sons of Heaven. The treasures of Literature are thus celestial, imperishable, beyond all price: with her is the shrine of our best hopes, the palladium of pure manhood; to be among the guardians and servants of this is the noblest function that can be intrusted to a mortal. Genius, even in its faintest scintillations, is "the inspired gift of God;" a solemn mandate to its owner to go forth and labor in his sphere, to keep alive "the sacred fire" among his brethren, which the heavy and polluted atmosphere of this world is forever threatening to extinguish. Woe to him if he neglect this mandate, if he hear not its small still voice! Woe to him if he turn this inspired gift into the servant of his evil or ignoble passions; if he offer it on the altar of vanity, if he sell it for a piece of money!

"The Artist, it is true," says Schiller, "is the son of his age; but pity for him if he is its pupil, or even its favorite! Let some beneficent Divinity snatch him when a suckling from the breast of his mother, and nurse him with the milk of a better time; that he may ripen to his full stature beneath a distant Grecian sky. And having grown to manhood, let him return, a foreign shape, into his century; not, however, to delight it by his presence; but terrible, like the Son of Agamemnon, to purify it. The Matter of his works he will take from the present; but their Form he will derive from a nobler time, nay from beyond all time, from the absolute unchanging unity of his nature. Here from the pure æther of his spiritual essence, flows down the Fountain of Beauty, uncontaminated by the pollutions of ages and generations, which roll to and fro in their turbid vortex far beneath it. His Matter caprice can dishonor as she has ennobled it; but the chaste Form is withdrawn from her mutations. The Roman of the first century had long bent the knee before his Cæsars, when the statues of Rome were still standing erect; the temples continued holy to the eye, when their gods had long been a laughing-stock; and the abominations of a Nero and a Commodus were silently rebuked by the style of the edifice which lent them its concealment. Man has lost his dignity, but Art has saved it, and preserved it for him in expressive marbles. Truth still lives in fiction, and from the copy the original will be restored.

"But how is the Artist to guard himself from the corruptions of his time, which on every side assail him? By despising its decisions. Let him look upwards to his dignity and his mission, not downwards to his happiness and his wants. Free alike from the vain activity, that longs to impress its traces on the fleeting instant; and from the discontented spirit of enthusiasm, that measures by the scale of perfection the meagre product of reality, let him leave to common sense, which is here at home, the province of the actual; while he strives from the union of the possible with the necessary to bring out the ideal. This let him imprint and express in fiction and truth, imprint it in the sport of his imagination and the earnest of his actions, imprint it in all sensible and spiritual forms, and cast it silently into everlasting Time."¹

Nor were these sentiments, be it remembered, the mere boasting manifesto of a hot-brained inexperienced youth, entering on literature with feelings of heroic ardor, which its difficulties and temptations would soon deaden or pervert: they are the calm principles of a man, expressed with honest manfulness, at a period when the world could compare them with a long course of conduct. In this just and lofty spirit, Schiller undertook the business of literature; in the same spirit he pursued it with unflinching energy all the days of his life. The common, and some uncommon, difficulties of a fluctuating and dependent existence could not quench or abate his zeal: sickness itself seemed hardly to affect him. During his last fifteen years, he wrote his noblest works; yet, as it has been proved too well, no day of that period could have passed without its load of pain.¹ Pain could not turn him from his purpose, or shake his equanimity: in death itself he was calmer and calmer. Nor has he gone without his recompense. To the credit of the world it can be recorded, that their suffrages, which he never courted, were liberally bestowed on him: happier than the mighty Milton, he found "fit hearers," even in his lifetime, and they were not "few." His effect on the mind of his own country has been deep and universal, and bids fair to be abiding: his effect on other countries must in time be equally decided; for such nobleness of heart and soul shadowed forth in beautiful imperishable emblems, is a treasure which belongs not to one nation, but to all. In another age, this Schiller will stand forth in the foremost rank among the master-spirits of his century; and be admitted to a place among the chosen of all centuries. His works, the memory of what he did and was, will rise afar off like a towering landmark in the solitude of the Past, when distance shall have dwarfed into invisibility the lesser people that encompassed him, and hid him from the near beholder.

¹ Über die ästhetische Erziehung des Menschen.

On the whole, we may pronounce him happy. His days passed in the contemplation of ideal grandeurs, he lived among the glories and solemnities of universal Nature; his thoughts were of sages and heroes, and scenes of elysian beauty. It is true, he had no rest, no peace; but he enjoyed the fiery consciousness of his own activity, which stands in place of it for men like him. It is true, he was long sickly; but did he not even then conceive and body forth Max Piccolomini, and Thekla, and the Maid of Orleans, and the scenes of Wilhelm Tell? It is true, he died early; but the student will exclaim with Charles XII. in another case, "Was it not enough of life when he had conquered kingdoms?" These kingdoms which Schiller conquered were not for one nation at the expense of suffering to another; they were soiled by no patriot's blood, no widows, no orphan's tear: they are kingdoms conquered from the barren realms of Darkness, to increase the happiness, and dignity, and power, of all men; new forms of Truth, new maxims of Wisdom, new images and scenes of Beauty, won from the "void and formless Infinite;" α κτήμα ἐς αἰεῖ, "a possession forever," to all the generations of the Earth.

¹ On a surgical inspection of his body after death, the most vital organs were found totally deranged. "The structure of the lungs was in great part destroyed, the cavities of the heart were nearly grown up, the liver had become hard, and the gall-bladder was extended to an extraordinary size." Deering.

SUPPLEMENT OF 1872.

HERR SAUPE'S BOOK.

[NOTE IN PEOPLE'S EDITION.]

IN the end of Autumn last a considerably kind old Friend of mine brought home to me, from his Tour in Germany, a small Book by a Herr Saupe, one of the Head-masters of Gera High-School, — Book entitled “Schiller and His Father's Household,”¹ — of which, though it has been before the world these twenty years and more, I had not heard till then. The good little Book, — an altogether modest, lucid, exact and amiable, though not very lively performance, offering new little facts about the Schiller world, or elucidations and once or twice a slight correction of the old, — proved really interesting and instructive; awoke, in me especially, multifarious reflections, mournfully beautiful old memories; — and led to farther readings in other Books touching on the same subject, particularly in these three mentioned below,² — the first two of them earlier than Saupe's, the third later and slightly corrective of him once or twice; — all which agreeably employed me for some weeks, and continued to be rather a pious recreation than any labor.

To this accident of Saupe's little Book there was, meanwhile, added another not less unexpected: a message, namely, from Bibliopolis Head-quarters that my own poor old Book on Schiller was to be reprinted, and that in this “People's Edition” it would want (on deduction of the German Piece by Goethe, which had gone into the “Library Edition,” but which had no fitness here) some sixty or seventy pages for the proper size of the volume. Saupe, which I was still reading, or idly reading about, offered the ready expedient: — and here accordingly Saupe is. I have had him faithfully translated, and with

¹ Schiller und sein Väterliches Haus. Von Ernst Julius Saupe, Subconrector am Gymnasium zu Gera. Leipzig: Verlagsbuchhandlung von J. J. Weber, 1851.

² Schiller's Leben von Gustav Schwab (Stuttgart, 1841).

Schiller's Leben, verfasst aus, &c. By Caroline von Wolszogen, born von Lengefeld (Schiller's Sister-in-law): Stuttgart und Tübingen, 1845.

Schiller's Beziehungen zu Eltern, Geschwistern und der Familie von Wolszogen, aus den Familien-Papieren. By Baroness von Gleichen (Schiller's youngest Daughter) and Baron von Wolszogen (her Cousin): Stuttgart, 1859.

some small omissions or abridgments, alight transposals here and there for clearness' sake, and one or two elucidative patches, gathered from the three subsidiary Books already named, all duly distinguished from Saupé's text ; — whereby the gap or deficit of pages is well filled up, almost of its own accord. And thus I can now certify that, in all essential respects, the authentic Saupé is here made accessible to English readers as to German ; and hope that to many lovers of Schiller among us, who are likely to be lovers also of humbly beautiful Human Worth, and of such an unconsciously noble scene of Poverty made richer than any California, as that of the elder Schiller Household here manifests, it may be a welcome and even profitable bit of reading.

T. C.

CHELSEA, Nov. 1878.

SAUPE'S

"SCHILLER AND HIS FATHER'S HOUSEHOLD."

I. THE FATHER.

"SCHILLER's Father, Johann Caspar Schiller, was born at Bittenfeld, a parish hamlet in the ancient part of Würtemberg, a little north of Waiblingen, on the 27th October, 1723. He had not yet completed his tenth year when his Father, Johannes Schiller, Schuttheiss, 'Petty Magistrate,' of the Village, and by trade a Baker, died, at the age of fifty-one. Soon after which the fatherless Boy, hardly fitted out with the most essential elements of education, had to quit school, and was apprenticed to a Surgeon; with whom, according to the then custom, he was to learn the art of 'Surgery;' but in reality had little more to do than follow the common employment of a Barber.

"After completing his apprenticeship and proof-time, the pushing young lad, eager to get forward in the world, went, during the Austrian-Succession War, in the year 1745, with a Bavarian Hussar Regiment, as 'Army-Doctor,' into the Netherlands. Here, as his active mind found no full employment in the practice of his Art, he willingly undertook, withal, the duties of a sub-officer in small military enterprises. On the Peace of Aix-la-Chapelle, 1748, when a part of this Regiment was disbanded, and Schiller with them, he returned to his homeland; and set himself down in Marbach, a pleasant little country town on the Neckar, as practical Surgeon there. Here, in 1749, he married the Poet's Mother; then a young girl of sixteen: Elisabetha Dorothea, born at Marbach in the year 1733, the daughter of a respectable townsman, Georg Friedrich Kodweis, who, to his trade of Baker adding that of Innkeeper and Woodmeasurer, had gathered a little fortune, and was at this time counted well-off, though afterwards, by some great inundation of the Neckar," date not given, "he was again reduced to poverty. The brave man by this unavoidable mischance came, by degrees, so low that he had to give up his house in the Market-Place, and in the end to dwell in a poor hut, as Porter at one of the Toll-Gates of Marbach. Elisabetha was a comely girl to look upon; slender, well-formed, without quite being tall; the neck long, hair high-blond, almost red, brow broad, eyes as if a little sorish, face covered with freckles; but with all these features enlivened by a soft expression of kindness and good-nature.

"This marriage, for the first eight years, was childless; after that, they gradually had six children, two of whom died soon after birth; the Poet Schiller was the second of these six, and the only Boy. The young couple had to live in a very narrow, almost needy condition, as neither of them had any fortune; and the Husband's business could hardly support a household. There is still in existence a legal Marriage Record and Inventory, such as is usual in these cases, which estimates the money and money's worth brought together by the young people at a little over 700 gulden (£70). Out of the same Inventory, one sees, by the small value put upon the surgical instruments, and the outstanding debts of patients, distinctly enough, that Caspar Schiller's practice, at that point of time, did not much exceed that of a third-class Surgeon, and was scarcely adequate, as above stated, to support the thriftiest household. And therefore it is not surprising that Schiller, intent on improving so bare a position, should, at the breaking-out of the Seven-Years War, have anew sought a military appointment, as withal more fit for employing his young strength and ambitions.

"In the beginning of the year 1757 he went, accordingly, as Ensign and Adjutant, into the Würtemberg Regiment Prince Louis; which in several of the campaigns in the Seven-Years War belonged to an auxiliary corps of the Austrian Army."

—Was he at the Ball of Fulda, one wonders? Yes, for certain! He was at the Ball of Fulda (tragicomical Explosion of a Ball, not yet got to the dancing point); and had to run for life, as his Duke, in a highly ridiculous manner, had already done. And, again, tragically, it is certain that he stood on the fated Austrian left-wing at the Battle of Leuthen; had his horse shot under him there, and was himself nearly drowned in a quagmire, struggling towards Breslau that night.¹

"In Bohemia this Corps was visited by an infectious fever, and suffered by the almost pestilential disorder a good deal of loss. In this bad time, Schiller, who by his temperance and frequent movement in the open air had managed to retain perfect health, showed himself very active and helpful; and cheerfully undertook every kind of business in which he could be of use. He attended the sick, there being a scarcity of Doctors; and served at the same time as Chaplain to the Regiment, so far as to lead the Psalmody, and read the Prayers. When, after this, he was changed into another Würtemberg Regiment, which served in Hessen and Thüringen, he employed every free hour in filling up, by his own industrious study, the many deeply felt defects in his young schooling; and was earnestly studious. By his perseverant zeal and diligence, he succeeded in the course of these war-years in acquiring not only many medical, military and agricultural branches of knowledge, but also, as his Letters prove, in amassing a considerable amount of general culture. Nor did his praiseworthy efforts remain without recognition and external reward. At the end of the Seven-Years War, he had risen to be a Captain, and had even saved a little money.

"His Wife, who, during these War times, lived, on money sent by him, in her Father's house at Marbach, he could only visit seldom, and for short periods in winter-quarters, much as he longed for his faithful Wife; who, after the birth of a Daughter, in September, 1757, was dearer to him than ever.

¹ See Life of Friedrich (Book xix. chap. 8; Book xviii. chap. 10), and Schiller Senior's rough bit of Autobiography, called "Meine Lebensgeschichte," in Schiller's Beziehungen zu Eltern, Geschwistern und der Familie von Walsen (mentioned above), p. 1. et seqq.

But never had the rigid fetters of War-discipline appeared more oppressive than when, two years later, in November, 1759, a Son, the Poet, was born. With joyful thanks to God, he saluted this dear Gift of Heaven; in daily prayer commended Mother and Child to 'the Being of all Beings;' and waited now with impatience the time when he should revisit his home, and those that were his there. Yet there still passed four years before Father Schiller, on conclusion of the Hubertsburg Peace, 1763, could return home from the War, and again take up his permanent residence in his home-country. Where, on his return, his first Garrison quarters were, whether at Ludwigsburg, Cannstadt or what other place, is not known. On the other hand, all likelihoods are, that, so soon as he could find it possible, he carried over his Wife and his two Children, the little Daughter Christophine six, and the little Friedrich now four, out of Marbach to his own quarters, wherever these were."

There is no date to the Neckar Inundation above mentioned; but we have elsewhere evidence that the worthy Father Kodweis with his Wife, at this time, still dwelt in their comfortable house in the Market-Place. We know also, though it is not mentioned in the text, that their pious Daughter struggled zealously to the last to alleviate their sore poverty; and the small effect, so far as money goes, may testify how poor and straitened the Schiller Family itself then was.

"With the Father's return out of War, there came a new element into the Family, which had so long been deprived of its natural Guardian and Counsellor. To be House-Father in the full sense of the word was now all the more Captain Schiller's need and duty, the longer his War-service had kept him excluded from the sacred vocation of Husband and Father. For he was throughout a rational and just man, simple, strong, expert, active for practical life, if also somewhat quick and rough. This announced itself even in the outward make and look of him; for he was of short stout stature and powerful make of limbs; the brow high-arched, eyes sharp and keen. Withal, his erect carriage, his firm step, his neat clothing, as well as his clear and decisive mode of speech, all testified of strict military training; which also extended itself over his whole domestic life, and even over the daily devotions of the Family. For although the shallow Illuminationism of that period had produced some influence on his religious convictions, he held fast by the pious principles of his forebeers; read regularly to his household out of the Bible; and pronounced aloud, each day, the Morning and Evening Prayer. And this was, in his case, not merely an outward decorous bit of discipline, but in fact the faithful expression of his Christian conviction, that man's true worth and true happiness can alone be found in the fear of the Lord, and the moral purity of his heart and conduct. He himself had even, in the manner of those days, composed a long Prayer, which he in later years addressed to God every morning, and which began with the following lines:—

'True Watcher of Israel!
To Thee be praise, thanks and honor.
Praying aloud I praise Thee,
That earth and Heaven may hear.'¹

"If, therefore, a certain otherwise accredited Witness calls him a kind of crotchety, fantastic person, mostly brooding over strange thoughts and enterprises, this can only have meant that Caspar Schiller in earlier years appeared such, namely at the time when, as incipient Surgeon at Marbach, he saw himself forced into a circle of activity which corresponded neither to his inclination, strength nor necessities.

"On the spiritual development of his Son this conscientious Father employed his warmest interest and activities; and appears to have been for some time assisted herein by a near relation, a certain Johann Friedrich Schiller from Bittenfeld; the same who, as Studiosus Philosophiæ, was, in 1759, Godfather to the Boy. He is said to have given the little Godson

¹ *Treuer Wächter Israels!
Dir sei Preis und Dank und Ehren;
Laut betend lob' ich Dich,
Dass es Erd' und Himmel hören etc.*

Fritz his first lessons in Writing, Natural-History and Geography. A more effective assistance in this matter the Father soon after met with on removing to Lorch.

"In the year 1765, the reigning Duke, Karl of Württemberg, sent Captain Schiller as Recruiting Officer to the Imperial Free-Town Schwäbisch-Gmünd; with permission to live with his Family in the nearest Württemberg place, the Village and Cloister of Lorch. Lorch lies in a green meadow-ground, surrounded by beech-woods, at the foot of a hill, which is crowned by the weird buildings of the Cloister, where the Hohenstaufen graves are; opposite the Cloister and Hamlet, rise the venerable ruins of Hohenstaufen itself, with a series of hills; at the bottom winds the Rems," a branch of the Neckar, "towards still fruitfuler regions. In this attractive rural spot the Schiller Family resided for several years; and found from the pious and kindly people of the Hamlet, and especially from a friend of the house, Moser, the worthy Parish-Parson there, the kindest reception. The Schiller children soon felt themselves at home and happy in Lorch, especially Fritz did, who, in the Parson's Son, Christoph Ferdinand Moser, a soft gentle child, met with his first boy-friend. In this worthy Parson's house he also received, along with the Parson's own Sons, the first regular and accurate instruction in reading and writing, as also in the elements of Latin and Greek. This arrangement pleased and comforted Captain Schiller not a little: for the more distinctly he, with his clear and candid character, recognized the insufficiency of his own instruction and stock of knowledge, the more impressively it lay on him that his Son should early acquire a good foundation in Languages and Science, and learn something solid and effective. What he could himself do in that particular he faithfully did; bringing out, with this purpose, partly the grand historical memorials of that neighborhood, partly his own life-experiences, in instructive and exciting dialogues with his children. He would point out to the listening little pair the venerable remains of the Hohenstaufen Ancestral Castle, or tell them of his own soldier-career. He took the Boy with him into the Exercise Camp, to the Woodmen in the Forest, and even into the farther distant pleasure-castle of Hohenheim ; and thereby led their youthful imagination into many changeful imaginings of life.¹

"Externally little Fritz and his Sister were not like; Christophine more resembling the Father, whilst Friedrich was the image of the Mother. On the other hand, they had internally very much in common ; both possessed a lively apprehension for whatever was true, beautiful or good. Both had a temper capable of enthusiasm, which early and chiefly turned towards the sublime and grand : in short, the strings of their souls were tuned on a cognate tone. Add to this, that both, in the beautifullest, happiest period of their life, had been under the sole care and direction of the pious genial Mother ; and that Fritz, at least till his sixth year, was exclusively limited to Christophine's society, and had no other companion. They two had to be, and were, all to each other. Christophine on this account stood nearer to her Brother throughout all his life than the Sisters who were born later.

"In rural stillness, and in almost uninterrupted converse with outdoor nature, flowed by for Fritz and her the greatest part of their childhood and youth. Especially dear to them was their abode in this romantic region. Every hour that was free from teaching or other task, they employed in roaming about in the neighborhood ; and they knew no higher joy than a ramble into the neighboring hills. In particular they liked to make pilgrimages together to a chapel on the Calvary Hill at Gmünd, a few miles off, to which the way was still through the old monkish grief-stations, on to the Cloister of Lorch noticed above. Often they would sit with closely grasped hands, under the thousand-years-old Linden, which stood on a projection before the Cloister-walls, and seemed to whisper to them long-silent tales of past ages. On these walks the hearts of the two clasped each other ever closer and more firmly, and they faithfully shared their little childish joys and sorrows. Christophine would bitterly weep when her vivacious Brother had committed some small misdeed and was punished for it. In such cases, she often enough confessed Fritz's faults as her own, and was punished when she had in reality had no complicity in them. It was with great sorrow that they two parted from their little Paradise; and both of them always retained a great affection for Lorch and its neighborhood. Christophine, who lived to be ninety, often even in her latter days looked back with tender affection to their abode there.¹

¹ Sauppe, p. 11.

"In his family circle, the otherwise hard-mannered Father showed always to Mother and Daughters the tenderest respect and the affectionate tone which the heart suggests. Thus, if at table a dish had chanced to be especially prepared for him, he would never eat of it without first inviting the Daughters to be helped. As little could he ever, in the long-run, withstand the requests of his gentle Wife; so that not seldom she managed to soften his rough severity. The Children learned to make use of this feature in his character; and would thereby save themselves from the first outburst of his anger. They confessed beforehand to the Mother their bits of misdoings, and begged her to inflict the punishment, and prevent their falling into the heavier paternal hand. Towards the Son again, whose moral development his Father anxiously watched over, his wrath was at times disarmed by touches of courage and fearlessness on the Boy's part. Thus little Fritz, once on a visit at Hohenheim, in the house where his Father was calling, and which formed part of the side-buildings of the Castle, whilst his Father followed his business within doors, had, unobserved, clambered out of a saloon window, and undertaken a voyage of discovery over the roofs. The Boy, who had been missed and painfully sought after, was discovered just on the point of trying to have a nearer view of the Lion's Head, by which one of the roof-gutters discharges itself, when the terrified Father got eye on him, and called out aloud. Cunning Fritz, however, stood motionless where he was on the roof, till his Father's anger had stilled itself, and pardon was promised him." — Here farther is a vague anecdote made authentic: "Another time the little fellow was not to be found at the evening meal, while, withal, there was a heavy thunderstorm

¹ Saupé, pp. 106-108.

in the sky, and fiery bolts were blazing through the black clouds. He was searched for in vain, all over the house; and at every new thunder-clap the misery of his Parents increased. At last they found him, not far from the house, on the top of the highest lime-tree, which he was just preparing to descend, under the crashing of a very loud peal. 'In God's name, what hast thou been doing there?' cried the agitated Father. 'I wanted to know,' answered Fritz, 'where all that fire in the sky was coming from!'

"Three full years the Schiller Family lived at Lorch; and this in rather narrow circumstances, as the Father, though in the service of his Prince, could not, during the whole of this time, receive the smallest part of his pay, but had to live on the little savings he had made during War-time. Not till 1768, after the most impressive petitioning to the Duke, was he at last called away from his post of Recruiting Officer, and transferred to the Garrison of Ludwigsburg, where he, by little and little, squeezed out the pay owing him.

"Upon his removal, the Father's first care was to establish his little Boy, now nine years old, — who, stirred on probably by the impressions he had got in the Parsonage at Lorch, and the visible wish of his Parents, had decided for the Clerical Profession, — in the Latin school at Ludwigsburg. This done, he made it his chief care that his Son's progress should be swift and satisfying there. But on that side, Fritz could never come up to his expectations, though the Teachers were well enough contented. But out of school-time, Fritz was not so zealous and diligent as could be wished; liked rather to spring about and sport in the garden. The arid, stony, philological instruction of his teacher, Johann Friedrich Jahn, who was a solid Latiner, and nothing more, was not calculated to make a specially alluring impression on the clever and lively Boy; thus it was nothing but the reverence and awe of his Father that could drive him on to diligence.

"To this time belongs the oldest completely preserved Poem of Schiller's; it is in the form of a little Hymn, in which, on New Year's Day, 1769, the Boy, now hardly over nine years old, presents to his Parents the wishes of the season. It may stand here by way of glimpse into the position of the Son towards his Parents, especially towards his Father.

'MUCH-LOVED PARENTS.'

'Parents, whom I lovingly honor,
To-day my heart is full of thankfulness!
This Year may a gracious God increase
What is at all times your support!

'The Lord, the Fountain of all joy,
Remain always your comfort and portion;
His Word be the nourishment of your heart,
And Jesus your wished-for salvation.

'I thank you for all your proofs of love,
For all your care and patience;
My heart shall praise all your goodness,
And ever comfort itself in your favor.

¹ HERZGEHILFTE ELTERN.

*Eltern, die ich stätlich ehre,
Mein Herz ist heut' voll Dankbarkeit!
Der treue Gott dies Jahr vermehre
Was Sie erquickt zu jeder Zeit!*

*Der Herr, die Quelle aller Freude,
Verbleibe stets Ihr Trost und Theil;
Sein Wort sei Ihres Herzens Weide,
Und Jesus Ihr erwünschtes Heil.*

*Ich dank' von alle Liebes-Proben,
Von alle Sorgfalt und Geduld,
Mein Herz soll alle Güte loben,
Und trösten sich stets Ihrer Huld.*

*Gehorsam, Fleiss und zarte Liebe
Verspreche ich auf dieses Jahr.
Der Herr dank' mir nur gute Treibe,
Und mac... all' mein Wunsch. wahr. Amen.*

JOHANN CHRISTOPH FRIEDRICH SCHILLER.

Den 1 Januarii, Anno 1789.

'Obedience, diligence and tender love
 I promise you for this Year.
 God send me only good inclinations,
 And make true all my wishes! Amen.

'JOHANN FRIEDRICH SCHILLER.

'1 January, 1769.'

"According to the pious wish of their Son, this year, 1769, did bring somewhat which 'comforted' them. Captain Schiller, from of old a lover of rural occupations, and skilful in gardening and nursery affairs, had, at Ludwigsburg, laid out for himself a little Nursery. It was managed on the same principles which he afterwards made public in his Book, Die Baumzucht im Grossen (Neustrelitz, 1795, and second edition, Giessen, 1806); and was prospering beautifully. The Duke, who had noticed this, signified satisfaction in the thing; and he appointed him, in 1770, to shift to his beautiful Forest-Castle, Die Solitude, near Stuttgart, as overseer of all his Forest operations there. Hereby to the active man was one of his dearest wishes fulfilled; and a sphere of activity opened, corresponding to his acquirements and his inclination. At Solitude, by the Duke's order, he laid out a Model Nursery for all Württemberg, which he managed with perfect care and fidelity; and in this post he so completely satisfied the expectations entertained of him, that his Prince by and by raised him to the rank of Major." He is reckoned to have raised from seeds, and successfully planted, 60,000 trees, in discharge of this function, which continued for the rest of his life.

"His Family, which already at Lorch, in 1766, had been increased by the birth of a Daughter, Luise, waited but a short time in Ludwigsburg till the Father brought them over to the new dwelling at Solitude. Fritz, on the removal of his Parents, was given over as boarder to his actual Teacher, the rigorous pedant Jahn; and remained yet two years at the Latin school in Ludwigsburg. During this time, the lively, and perhaps also sometimes mischievous Boy, was kept in the strictest fetters; and, by the continual admonitions, exhortations, and manually practical corrections of Father and of Teacher, not a little held down and kept in fear. The fact, for instance, that he liked more the potent Bible-words and pious songs of a Luther, a Paul Gerhard, and Gellert, than he did the frozen lifeless catechism-drill of the Ludwigsburg Institute, gave surly strait-laced Jahn occasion to lament from time to time to the alarmed Parents, that 'their Son had no feeling whatever for religion.' In this respect, however, the otherwise so irritable Father easily satisfied himself, not only by his own observations of an opposite tendency, but chiefly by stricter investigation of one little incident that was reported to him. The teacher of religion in the Latin school, Superintendent Zilling, whose name is yet scornfully remembered, had once, in his dull awkwardness, introduced even Solomon's Song as an element of nurture for his class; and was droning out, in an old-fashioned way, his interpretation of it as symbolical of the Christian Church and its Bridegroom Christ, when he was, on the sudden, to his no small surprise and anger, interrupted by the audible inquiry of little Schiller, 'But was this Song, then, actually sung to the Church?' Schiller Senior took the little heretic to task for this rash act; and got as justification the innocent question, 'Has the Church really got teeth of ivory?' The Father was enlightened enough to take the Boy's opposition for a natural expression of sound human sense; nay, he could scarcely forbear a laugh; whirled swiftly round, and murmured to himself, 'Occasionally she has Wolf's teeth.' And so the thing was finished.¹

"At Ludwigsburg Schiller and Christophine first saw a Theatre; where at that time, in the sumptuous Duke's love of splendor, only pompous operas and ballets were given. The first effect of this new enjoyment, which Fritz and his Sister strove to repeat as often as they could, was that at home, with little clipped and twisted paper dolls, they set about representing scenes; and on Christophine's part it had the more important result of awakening and nourishing, at an early age, her æsthetic taste. Schiller considered her, ever after these youthful sports, as a true and faithful companion in his poetic dreams and attempts; and constantly not only told his Sister, whose silence on such points could be perfect, of all that he secretly

¹ Saupe, p. 18.

did in the way of verse-making in the Karl's School, — which, as we shall see, he entered in 1773, — but if possible brought it upon the scene with her. Scenes from the lyrical operetta of Semele were acted by Schiller and Christophine, on those terms ; which appears in a complete shape for the first time in Schiller's Anthology, printed 1782.¹

“So soon as Friedrich had gone through the Latin school at Ludwigsburg, which was in 1772, he was, according to the standing regulation, to enter one of the four Lower Cloister-schools ; and go through the farther curriculum for a Würtemberg clergyman. But now there came suddenly from the Duke to Captain Schiller an offer to take his Son, who had been represented to him as a clever boy, into the new Military Training-School, founded by his Highness at Solitude, in 1771 ; where he would be brought up, and taken charge of, free of cost.

“In the Schiller Family this offer caused great consternation and painful embarrassment. The Father was grieved to be obliged to sacrifice a long-cherished paternal plan to the whim of an arbitrary ruler ; and the Son felt himself cruelly hurt to be torn away so rudely from his hope and inclination. Accordingly, how dangerous soever for the position of the Family a declining of the Ducal grace might seem, the straightforward Father ventured nevertheless to lay open to the Duke, in a clear and distinct statement, how his purpose had always been to devote his Son, in respect both of his inclination and his hitherto studies, to the Clerical Profession ; for which in the new Training-School he could not be prepared. The Duke showed no anger at this step of the elder Schiller's ; but was just as little of intention to let a capable and hopeful scholar, who was also the Son of one of his Officers and Dependents, escape him. He simply, with brevity, repeated his wish, and required the choice of another study, in which the Boy would have a better career and outlook than in the Theological Department. Nill they, will they, there was nothing for the Parents but compliance with the so plainly intimated will of this Duke, on whom their Family's welfare so much depended.

¹ Sampe, p. 103.

"Accordingly, 17th January, 1773, Friedrich Schiller, then in his fourteenth year, stepped over to the Military Training-School at Solitude.

"In September of the following year, Schiller's Parents had, conformably to a fundamental law of the Institution, to acknowledge and engage by a written Bond, 'That their Son, in virtue of his entrance into this Ducal Institution, did wholly devote himself to the service of the Württemberg Ducal House; that he, without special Ducal permission, was not empowered to go out of it; and that he had, with his best care, to observe not only this, but all other regulations of the Institute.' By this time, indeed directly upon signature of this strict Bond, young Schiller had begun to study Jurisprudence; — which, however, when next year, 1775, the Training-School, raised now to be a 'Military Academy,' had been transferred to Stuttgart, he either of his own accord, or in consequence of a discourse and interview of the Duke with his Father, exchanged for the Study of Medicine.

"From the time when Schiller entered this 'Karl's School' [Military Academy, in official style], he was nearly altogether withdrawn from any tutelage of his Father; for it was only to Mothers, and to Sisters still under age, that the privilege of visiting their Sons and Brothers, and this on the Sunday only, was granted: beyond this, the Karl's Scholars, within their monastic cells, were cut off from family and the world, by iron doors and sentries guarding them. This rigorous seclusion from actual life and all its friendly impressions, still more the spiritual constraint of the Institution, excluding every free activity, and all will of your own, appeared to the Son in a more hateful light than to the Father, who, himself an old soldier, found it quite according to order that the young people should be kept in strict military discipline and subordination. What filled the Son with bitter discontent and indignation, and at length brought him to a kind of poetic outburst of revolution in the Robbers, therein the Father saw only a wholesome regularity, and indispensable substitute for paternal discipline. Transient complaints of individual teachers and superiors little disturbed the Father's mind ; for, on the whole, the official testimonies concerning his Son were steadily favorable. The Duke too treated young Schiller, whose talents had not escaped his sharpness of insight, with particular good-will, nay distinction. To this Prince, used to the accurate discernment of spiritual gifts, the complaints of certain Teachers, that Schiller's slow progress in Jurisprudence proceeded from want of head, were of no weight whatever ; and he answered expressly, 'Leave me that one alone ; he will come to something yet !' But that Schiller gave his main strength to what in the Karl's School was a strictly forbidden object, to poetry namely, this I believe was entirely hidden from his Father, or appeared to him, on occasional small indications, the less questionable, as he saw that, in spite of this, the Marketable-Sciences were not neglected.

" At the same age, viz. about twenty-two, at which Captain Schiller had made his first military sally into the Netherlands and the Austrian-Succession War, his Son issued from the Karl's School, 15th December, 1780 ; and was immediately appointed Regimental-Doctor at Stuttgard, with a monthly pay of twenty-three gulden [$\pounds 2\ 6s.=11s.$ and a fraction per week]. With this appointment, Schiller had, as it were, openly altogether outgrown all special paternal guardianship or guidance ; and was, from this time, treated by his Father as come to majority, and standing on his own feet. If he came out, as frequently happened, with a comrade to Solitude, he was heartily welcome there, and the Father's looks often dwelt on him with visible satisfaction. If in the conscientious and rigorous old man, with his instructive and serious experiences of life, there might yet various anxieties and doubts arise when he heard of the exuberantly genial ways of his hopeful Son at Stuttgard, he still looked upon him with joyful pride, in remarking how those so promising Karl's Scholars, who had entered into the world along with him, recognized his superiority of mind, and willingly ranked themselves under him. Nor could it be otherwise than highly gratifying to his old heart to remark always with what deep love the gifted Son constantly regarded his Parents and Sisters." ¹— Of Schiller's first procedures in Stuttgart, after his emancipation from the Karl's School, and appointment as Regimental-Surgeon, or rather of his general behavior and way of life there, which are said to have been somewhat wild, genially, or even ungenially extravagant, and to have involved him in many paltry entanglements of debts, as one bad consequence, — there will be some notice in the next Section, headed "The Mother." His Regimental Doctorship, and stay in Stuttgart altogether, lasted twenty-two months.

This is Schiller's bodily appearance, as it first presented itself to an old School-fellow, who, after an interval of eighteen months, saw him again on Parade, as Doctor of the Regiment Augé, — more to his astonishment than admiration.

"Crushed into the stiff tasteless Old-Prussian Uniform; on each of his temples three stiff rolls as if done with gypsum; the tiny three-cooked hat scarcely covering his crown; so much the thicker the long pigtail, with the slender neck crammed into a very narrow horsehair stock; the felt put under the white spatterdashes, smirched by traces of shoe-blackening, giving to the legs a bigger diameter than the thighs, squeezed into their tight-fitting breeches, could boast of. Hardly, or not at all, able to bend his knees, the whole man moved like a stork."

"The Poet's form," says this Witness elsewhere, a bit of a dilettante artist it seems, "had somewhat the following appearance: Long straight stature; long in the legs, long in the arms; pigeon-breasted; his neck very long; something rigorously stiff; in gait and carriage not the smallest elegance. His brow was broad; the nose thin, cartilaginous, white of color, springing out at a notably sharp angle, much bent, — a parrot-nose, and very sharp in the point (according to Dannecker the Sculptor, Schiller, who took snuff, had pulled it out so with his hand). The red eyebrows, over the deep-lying dark-gray eyes, were bent too close together at the nose, which gave him a pathetic expression. The lips were thin, energetic; the under-lip protruding, as if pushed forward by the inspiration of his feelings; the chin strong; cheeks pale, rather hollow than full, freckly; the eyelids a little inflamed; the bushy hair of the head dark red; the whole head rather ghostlike than manlike, but impressive even in repose, and all expression when Schiller declaimed. Neither the features nor the somewhat shrieky voice could he subdue. Dannecker," adds the satirical Witness, "has unsurpassably cut this head in marble for us." ¹

¹ Soupe, p. 25.

"The publication of the Robbers [Autumn, 1781],—which Schiller, driven on by rage and desperation, had composed in the fetters of the Karl's School,—raised him on the sudden to a phenomenon on which all eyes in Stuttgart were turned. What, with careless exaggeration, he had said to a friend some months before, on setting forth his Elegy on the Death of a Young Man, 'The thing has made my name hereabouts more famous than twenty years of practice would have done; but it is a name like that of him who burnt the Temple of Ephesus: God be merciful to me a sinner!' might now with all seriousness be said of the impression his Robbers made on the harmless townfolk of Stuttgart. But how did Father Schiller at first take up this eccentric product of his Son, which openly declared war on all existing order? Astonishment and terror, anger and detestation, boundless anxiety, with touches of admiration and pride, stormed alternately through the solid honest man's paternal breast, as he saw the frank picture of a Prodigal Son rolled out before him; and had to gaze into the most revolting deeps of the passions and vices. Yet he felt himself irresistibly dragged along by the uncommon vivacity of action in this wild Drama; and at the same time powerfully attracted by the depth, the tenderness and fulness of true feeling manifested in it: so that, at last, out of those contradictory emotions of his, a clear admiration and pride for his Son's bold and rich spirit maintained the upper hand. By Schiller's friends and closer connections, especially by his Mother and Sisters, all pains were of course taken to keep up this favorable humor in the Father, and carefully to hide from him all disadvantageous or disquieting tidings about the Piece and its consequences and practical effects. Thus he heard sufficiently of the huge excitement and noise which the Robbers was making all over Germany, and of the seductive approval which came streaming in on the youthful Poet, even out of distant provinces; but heard nothing either of the Duke's offended and angry feelings over the Robbers, a production horrible to him; nor of the Son's secret journeys to Mannheim, and the next consequences of these [his brief arrest, namely], nor of the rumor circulating in spiteful quarters, that this young Doctor was neglecting his own province of medicine, and meaning to become a play-actor. How could the old man, in these circumstances, have a thought that the Robbers would be the loss of Family and Country to his poor Fritz! And yet so it proved.

¹ Schwab, Schiller's Leben (Stuttgart, 1841), p. 68.

"Excited by all kinds of messagings, informings and insinuations, the imperious Prince, in spite of his secret pleasure in this sudden renown of his Pupil, could in nowise be persuaded to revoke or soften his harsh Order, which 'forbade the Poet henceforth, under pain of military imprisonment, either to write anything poetic or to communicate the same to foreign persons' [non-Würtembergers]. In vain were all attempts of Schiller to obtain his discharge from Military Service and his 'Entschwörung' (Un-Swabian-ing); such petitions had only for result new sharper rebukes and hard threatening expressions, to which the mournful fate of Schubart in the Castle of Hohenasperg¹ formed a too questionable background.

"Thus by degrees there ripened in the strong soul of this young man the determination to burst these laming fetters of his genius, by flight from despotic Würtemberg altogether; and, in some friendlier country, gain for himself the freedom without which his spiritual development was impossible. Only to one friend, who clung to him with almost enthusiastic devotion, did he impart his secret. This was Johann Andreas Streicher of Stuttgart, who intended to go next year to Hamburg, and there, under Bach's guidance, study music; but declared himself ready to accompany Schiller even now, since it had become urgent. Except to this trustworthy friend, Schiller had imparted his plan to his elder Sister Christophine alone; and she had not only approved of the sad measure, but had undertaken also to prepare their Mother for it. The Father naturally had to be kept dark on the subject; all the more that, if need were, he might pledge his word as an Officer that he had known nothing of his Son's intention.

¹ See Appendix II. infra.

"Schiller went out, in company of Madam Meier, Wife of the Regisseur (Theatre-manager) at Mannheim, a native of Stuttgart, and of this Streicher, one last time to Solitude, to have one more look of it and of his dear ones there; especially to soothe and calm his Mother. On the way, which they travelled on foot, Schiller kept up a continual discourse about the Mannheim Theatre and its interests, without betraying his secret to Madam Meier. The Father received these welcome guests with frank joy; and gave to the conversation, which at first hung rather embarrassed, a happy turn by getting into talk, with cheery circumstantiality, of the grand Pleasure-Hunt, of the Play and of the Illumination, which were to take place, in honor of the Russian Grand-Prince, afterwards Czar Paul, and his Bride, the Duke of Würtemberg's Niece, on the 17th September instant, at Solitude. Far other was the poor Mother's mood; she was on the edge of betraying herself, in seeing the sad eyes of her Son; and she could not speak for emotion. The presence of Streicher and a Stranger with whom the elder Schiller was carrying on a, to him, attractive conversation, permitted Mother and Son to withdraw speedily and unremarked. Not till after an hour did Schiller reappear, alone now, to the company; neither this circumstance, nor Schiller's expression of face, yet striking the preoccupied Father. Though to the observant Streicher, his wet red eyes betrayed how painful the parting must have been. Gradually on the way back to Stuttgart, amid general talk of the three, Schiller regained some composure and cheerfulness.

"The bitter sorrow of this hour of parting renewed itself yet once in Schiller's soul, when on the flight itself, about midnight of the 17th. In effect it was these same festivities that had decided the young men's time and scheme of journey; and under the sheltering noise of which their plan was luckily executed. Towards midnight of the abovesaid day, when the Castle of Solitude, with all its surroundings, was beaming in full splendor of illumination, there rolled past, almost rubbing elbows with it, the humble Schiller Vehicle from Stuttgart, which bore the fugitive Poet with his true Friend on their way. Schiller pointed out to his Friend the spot where his Parents lived, and, with a half-suppressed sigh and a woe-begone exclamation, 'Oh, my Mother!' sank back upon his seat."

Mannheim, the goal of their flight, is in Baden-Baden, under another Sovereign; lies about 80 miles to n.w. of Stuttgart. Their dreary journey lasted two days, — arrival not till deep in the night of the second. Their united stock of money amounted to 51 gulden, — Schiller 23, Streicher 28, — £5 6s. in all. Streicher subsequently squeezed out from home £3 more; and that appears to have been their sum-total.¹

"Great was the astonishment and great the wrath of the Father, when at length he understood that his Son had broken the paternal, written Bond, and withdrawn himself by flight from the Ducal Service. He dreaded, not without reason, the heavy consequences of so rash an action; and a thousand gnawing anxieties bestormed the heart of the worthy man. Might not the Duke, in the first outburst of his indignation, overwhelm forever the happiness of their Family, which there was nothing but the income of his post that supported in humble competence? And what a lot stood before the Son himself, if he were caught in flight, or if, what was nowise improbable, his delivery back was required and obtained? Sure enough, there had risen on the otherwise serene heaven of the Schiller Family a threatening thundercloud; which, any day, might discharge itself, bringing destruction on their heads.

"The thing, however, passed away in merciful peace. Whatever may have been the Duke's motives or inducements to let the matter, in spite of his embitterment, silently drop, —whether his bright festal humor in presence of those high kinsfolk, or the noble frankness with which the Runaway first of all, to save his Family, had in a respectful missive, dated from Mannheim, explained to his Princely Educator the necessity of his flight; or the expectation, flattering to the Ducal pride, that the future greatness of his Pupil might be a source of glory to him and his Karl's School: enough, on his part, there took place no kind of hostile step against the Poet, and still less against his Family. Captain Schiller again breathed freer when he saw himself delivered from his most crushing anxiety on this side; but there remained still a sharp sting in his wounded heart. His military feeling of honor was painfully hurt by the thought that they might now look upon his Son as a deserter; and withal the future of this voluntary Exile appeared so uncertain and wavering, that it did not offer the smallest justification of so great a risk. By degrees, however, instead of anger and blame there rose in him the most sympathetic anxiety for the poor Son's fate; to whom, from want of a free, firm and assuring position in life, all manner of contradictions and difficulties must needs arise.

¹ Schwab, Schiller's Leben.

"And Schiller did actually, at Mannheim, find himself in a bad and difficult position. The Superintendent of the celebrated Mannheim Theatre, the greatly powerful Imperial Baron von Dalberg, with whom Schiller, since the bringing out of his Robbers, had stood in lively correspondence, drew back when Schiller himself was here; and kept the Poet at a distance as a political Fugitive; leaving him to shift as he could. In vain had Schiller explained to him, in manly open words, his economic straits, and begged from him a loan of 300 gulden [£30] to pay therewith a pressing debt in Stuttgart, and drag himself along, and try to get started in the world. Dalberg returned the Fiesco, Schiller's new republican Tragedy, which had been sent him, with the declaration that he could advance no money on the Fiesco, in its present form; the Piece must first be remodelled to suit the stage. During this remodelling, which the otherwise so passionately vivid and hopeful Poet began without murmur, he lived entirely on the journey-money that had been saved up by the faithful Streicher, who would on no account leave him."

What became of this good Streicher afterwards, I have inquired considerably, but with very little success. On the total exhaustion of their finance, Schiller and he had to part company, — Schiller for refuge at Bauerbach, as will soon be seen. Streicher continued about Mannheim, not as Schiller's fellow-lodger any longer, but always at his hand, passionately eager to serve him with all his faculties by night or by day; and they did not part finally till Schiller quitted Mannheim, two years hence, for Leipzig. After which they never met again. Streicher, in Mannheim, seems to have subsisted by his musical talent; and to have had some connection with the theatre in that capacity. In similar dim positions, with what shiftings, adventures and vicissitudes is quite unknown to me, he long survived Schiller, and, at least fifty years after these Mannheim struggles, wrote some Book of bright and loving Reminiscences concerning him, the exact title of which I can nowhere find, — though passages from it are copied by Biographer Schwab here and there. His affection for Schiller is of the nature of worship rather, of constant adoration; and probably formed the sunshine to poor Streicher's life. Schiller nowhere mentions him in his writings or correspondences, after that final parting at Mannheim, 1784.

"The necessities of the two Friends reached by and by such a height that Schiller had to sell his Watch, although they had already for several weeks been subsisting on loans. To all which now came Dalberg's overwhelming message, that even this Remodelling of Pisces could not be serviceable; and of course could not have money paid for it. Schiller thereupon, at once resolute what to do, walked off to the worthy Bookseller Schwann," with whom he was already on a trustful, even grateful footing; "and sold him his MS. at one louis-d'or the sheet. At the same time, too, he recognized the necessity of quitting Mannheim, and finding a new asylum in Saxony; seeing, withal, his farther continuance here might be as dangerous for him as it was a matter of apprehension to his Friends. For although the Duke of Württemberg undertook nothing that was hostile to him, and his Family at Solitude experienced no annoyance, yet the impetuous Prince might, any day, take it into his head to have him put in prison. In the ever livelier desire after a securely hidden place of abode, where he might execute in peace his poetic plans and enterprises, Schiller suddenly took up an earlier purpose, which had been laid aside.

"In the Stuttgart time he had known Wilhelm von Wolzogen, by and by his Brother-in-law [they married two sisters], who, with three Brothers, had been bred in the Karl's School. The two had, indeed, during the academic time, Wolzogen being some years younger, had few points of contact, and were not intimate. But now on the appearance of the Robbers, Wolzogen took a cordial affection and enthusiasm for the widely celebrated Poet, and on closer acquaintance with Schiller, also affected his Mother, — who, as Widow, for her three Sons' sake, lived frequently at Stuttgart, — with a deep and zealous sympathy in Schiller's fate. Schiller had, with a truly childlike trust, confided himself to this excellent Lady, and after his Arrest, — a bitter consequence of his secret visit to Mannheim, — had confessed to her his purpose to run away. Frau von Wolzogen, who feared no sacrifice when the question was of the fortune of her friends, had then offered him her family mansion, Bauerbach, near Meiningen, as a place of refuge. Schiller's notion had also been to fly thither; though, deceived by false hopes, he changed that purpose. He now wrote at once to Stuttgart, and announced to Frau von Wolzogen his wish to withdraw for some time to Bauerbach." To which, as is well known, the assent was ready and zealous.

"Before quitting Mannheim, Schiller could not resist the longing wish to see his Parents yet one time; and wrote to them accordingly, 19 Nov. 1782, in visible haste and excitement: —

'BEST PARENTS, — As I am at present in Mannheim, and am to go away forever in five days, I wished to prepare for myself and you the one remaining satisfaction of seeing one another once more. To-day is the 19th, on the 21st you receive this Letter; — if you therefore.

H. H. Vol. 12

without the least delay (that is indispenable), leave Stuttgart, you might on the 22d be at the Post-house in Bretten, which is about half way from Mannheim, and where you would find me. I think it would be best if Mamma and Christophine, under the pretext of going to Ludwigsburg to Wolzogen, should make this journey. Take the Frau Vischerin [a Captain's Widow, sung of under the name of "Laura," with whom he had last lodged in Stuttgart] and also Wolsogen with you, as I wish to speak with both of them, perhaps for the last time, Wolzogen excepted. I will give you a Karolin as journey-money; but not till I see you at Bretten. By the prompt fulfilment of my Prayer, I will perceive whether is still dear to you,

'Your ever-grateful Son,

'SCHILLER.'

From Mannheim, Bauerbach or Meiningen lies about 120 miles N.E.; and from Stuttgart almost as far straight North. Bretten, "a little town on a hill, celebrated as Melancthon's Birthplace, his Father's house still standing there," is some 35 miles S.E. of Mannheim, and as far N.W. from Stuttgart. From Mannheim, in this wise, it is not at all on the road to Meiningen, though only a few miles more remote in direct distance. Schiller's purpose had been, after this affectionate interview, to turn at once leftward and make for Meiningen, by what road or roads there were from Bretten thither. Schiller's poor guinea (Karolin) was not needed on this occasion; the rendezvous at Bretten being found impossible or inexpedient at the Stuttgart end of it. Our Author continues:—

"Although this meeting, on which the loving Son and Brother wished to spend his last penny, did not take effect; yet this mournful longing of his, evident from the Letter, and from the purpose itself, must have touched the Father's heart with somewhat of a reconciliatory feeling. Schiller Senior writes accordingly, 8 December, 1782, the very day after his Son's arrival at Bauerbach, to Bookseller Schwann in Mannheim: 'I have not noticed here the smallest symptom that his Ducal Durchlaucht has any thought of having my Son searched for and prosecuted; and indeed his post here has long since been filled up; a circumstance which visibly indicates that they can do without him.' This Letter to Schwann concludes in the following words, which are characteristic: 'He (my Son) has, by his untimely withdrawal, against the advice of his true friends, plunged himself into this difficult position; and it will profit him in soul and body that he feel the pain of it, and thereby become wiser for the future. I am not afraid, however, that want of actual necessities should come upon him, for in such case I should feel myself obliged to lend a hand.'

"And in effect Schiller, during his abode in Bauerbach, did once or twice receive little subventions of money from his Father, although never without earnest and not superfluous admonition to become more frugal, and take better heed in laying out his money. For economics were, by Schiller's own confession, 'not at all his talent; it cost him less,' he says, 'to execute a whole conspiracy and tragedy-plot than to adjust his scheme of housekeeping.' — At this time it was never the Father himself who wrote to Schiller, but always Christophine, by his commission; and on the other hand, Schiller too never risked writing directly to his Father, as he felt but too well how little on his part had been done to justify the flight in his Father's eyes. He writes accordingly, likewise on that 8th December 1782, to his Publisher Schwann: 'If you can accelerate the printing of my Fiesco, you will very much oblige me by doing so. You know that nothing but the prohibition to become an Author drove me out of the Würtemberg service. If I now, on this side, don't soon let my native country hear of me, they will say the step I took was useless and without real motive.'

"In Banerbach Schiller lived about eight months, under the name of Doctor Ritter, unknown to everybody; and only the Court-Librarian, Reinwald, in Meiningen, afterwards his Brother-in-law," as we shall see, "in whom he found a solid friend, had been trusted by Frau von Wolzogen with the name and true situation of the mysterious stranger. The most of Schiller's time here was spent in dramatic labors, enterprises and dreams. The outcome of all these were his third civic Tragedy, Louise Miller, or Kabale und Liebe, which was finished in February, 1783, and the settling on Don Carlos as a new tragic subject. Many reasons, meanwhile, in the last eight months, had been pushing Schiller into the determination to leave his asylum, and anew turn towards Mannheim. A passionate, though unreturned attachment to Charlotte von Wolzogen at that time filled Schiller's soul; and his removal therefore must both to Frau von Wolzogen for her own and her Daughter's sake, and to Schiller himself, have appeared desirable. It was Frau von Wolzogen's own advice to him to go for a short time to Mannheim, there to get into clear terms with Dalberg, who had again begun corresponding with him: so, in July, 1783, Schiller bade his solitary, and, by this time dear and loved, abode a hasty adieu; and, much contrary to fond hope, never saw it again.

"In September, 1783, his bargainings with Dalberg had come to this result, That for a fixed salary of 500 gulden [£50 a year] he was appointed Theatre-Poet here. By this means, to use his own words, the way was open to him gradually to pay off a considerable portion of his debts, and so escape from the drowning whirlpool, and remain an honest man. Now, furthermore, he thought it permissible to show himself to his Family with a certain composure of attitude; and opened straightway a regular correspondence with his Parents again. And Captain Schiller volunteers a stiff-starched but true and earnest Letter to the Baron Dalberg himself; most humbly thanking that gracious nobleman for such beneficent favor shown my poor Son; and begs withal the far stranger favor that Dalberg would have the extreme goodness to appoint the then inexperienced young man some true friend who might help him to arrange his housekeeping, and in moral things might be his Mentor!

"Soon after this, an intermittent fever threw the Poet on a sick-bed; and lamed him above five weeks from all capacity of mental labor. Not even in June of the following year was the disease quite overcome. Visits, acquaintanceships, all kinds of amusements, and more than anything else, overhasty attempts at work, delayed his cure; — so that his Father had a perfect right to bring before him his, Schiller's, own blame in the matter: 'That thou [Er, He; the then usual tone towards servants and children] for eight whole months hast weltered about with intermittent fever, surely that does little honor to thy study of medicine; and thou wouldst, with great justice, have poured the bitterest reproaches on any Patient who, in a case like thine, had not held himself to the diet and regimen that were prescribed to him! —

“In Autumn, 1783, there seized Schiller so irresistible a longing to see his kindred again, that he repeatedly expressed to his Father the great wish he had for a meeting, either at Mannheim or some other place outside the Würtemberg borders. To the fulfilment of this scheme there were, however, in the sickness which his Mother had fallen into, in the fettered position of the Father, and in the rigorously frugal economies of the Family, insuperable obstacles. Whereupon his Father made him the proposal, that he, Friedrich, either himself or by him, the Captain, should apply to the Duke Karl's Serene Highness; and petition him for permission to return to his country and kindred. As Schiller to this answered nothing, Christophine time after time pressingly repeated to him the Father's proposal. At the risk of again angering his Father, Schiller gave, in his answer to Christophine, of 1st January, 1784, the decisive declaration that his honor would frightfully suffer if he, without connection with any other Prince, without character and lasting means of support, after his forceful withdrawal from Würtemberg, should again show face there. ‘That my Father,’ adds he, as ground of this refusal, ‘give his name to such a petition can help me little; for every one will at once, so long as I cannot make it plain that I no longer need the Duke of Würtemberg, suspect in a return, obtained on petition (by myself or by another is all one), a desire to get settled in Würtemberg again. Sister, consider with serious attention these circumstances; for the happiness of thy Brother may, by rash haste in this matter, suffer an incurable wound. Great part of Germany knows of my relations to your Duke and of the way I left him. People have interested themselves for me at the expense of this Duke; how horribly would the respect of the public (and on this depends my whole future fortune), how miserably would my own honor sink by the suspicion that I had sought this return; that my circumstances had forced me to repent my former step; that the support which I had sought in the wide world had misgone, and I was seeking it anew in my Birth-land! The open manlike boldness, which I showed in my forceful withdrawal, would get the name of a childish outburst of mutiny, a stupid bit of impotent bluster, if I do not make it good. Love for my dear ones, longing for my Fatherland might perhaps excuse me in the heart of this or the other candid man; but the world makes no account of all that.

“For the rest, if my Father is determined to do it, I cannot hinder him; only this I say to thee, Sister, that in case even the Duke would permit it, I will not show myself on Württemberg ground till I have at least a character (for which object I shall zealously labor); and that in case the Duke refuses, I shall not be able to restrain myself from avenging the affront thereby put upon me by open fooleries (sottisen) and expressions of myself in print.’

“The intended Petition to the Duke was not drawn out, — and Father Schiller overcame his anger on the matter; as, on closer consideration of the Son’s aversion to this step, he could not wholly disapprove him. Yet he did not hide from Schiller Junior the steadfast wish that he would in some way or other try to draw near to the Duke; at any rate he, Father Schiller, ‘hoped to God that their parting would not last forever; and that, in fine, he might still live to see his only Son near him again.’

“In Mannheim Schiller’s financial position, in spite of his earnest purpose to manage wisely, grew by degrees worse rather than better. Owing to the many little expenses laid upon him by his connections in society, his income would not suffice; and the cash-box was not seldom run so low that he had not wherewithal to support himself next day. Of assistance from home, with the rigorous income of his Father, which scarcely amounted to £40 a year, there could nothing be expected; and over and above, the Father himself had, in this respect, very clearly spoken his mind. ‘Parents and Sisters,' said Schiller Senior, 'have as just a right as they have a confidence, in cases of necessity, to expect help and support from a Son.' To fill to overflowing the measure of the Poet's economical distress, there now stepped forth suddenly some secret creditors of his in Stuttgart, demanding immediate payment. Whereupon, in quick succession, there came to Captain Schiller, to his great terror, two drafts from the Son, requiring of him, the one £10, the other £5. The Captain, after stern reflection, determined at last to be good for both demands; but wrote to the Son that he only did so in order that his, the Son's, labor might not be disturbed; and in the confident anticipation that the Son, regardful of his poor Sisters and their bit of portion, would not leave him in the lurch.

"But Schiller, whom still other debts in Stuttgart, unknown to his Father, were pressing hard, could only repay the smaller of these drafts; and thus the worthy Father saw himself compelled to pay the larger, the £10, out of the savings he had made for outfit of his Daughters. Whereupon, as was not undeserved, he took his Son tightly to task, and wrote to him: 'As long as thou, my Son, shalt make thy reckoning on resources that are still to come, and therefore are still subject to chance and mischance, so long wilt thou continue in thy mess of embarrassments. Furthermore, as long as thou thinkest, This gulden or batzen [shilling or farthing] can't help me to get over it; so long will thy debts become never the smaller: and, what were a sorrow to me, thou wilt not be able, after a heavy labor of head got done, to recreate thyself in the society of other good men. But, withal, to make recreation-days of that kind more numerous than work-days, that surely will not turn out well. Best Son, thy abode in Bauerbach has been of that latter kind. Hinc illæ lacrymæ! For these thou art now suffering, and that not by accident. The embarrassment thou now art in is verily a work of Higher Providence, to lead thee off from too great trust in thy own force; to make thee soft and contrite; that, laying aside all self-will, thou mayest follow more the counsel of thy Father and other true friends; must meet every one with due respectful courtesy and readiness to oblige ; and become ever more convinced that our most gracious Duke, in his restrictive plans, meant well with thee ; and that altogether thy position and outlooks had now been better, hadst thou complied, and continued in thy country. Many a time I find thou hast wayward humors, that make thee to thy truest friend scarcely endurable ; stiff ways which repel the best wishing man ; — for example, when I sent thee my excellent old friend Herr Amtmann Cramer from Altdorf near Speier, who had come to Herr Hofrath Schwann's in the end of last year, thy reception of him was altogether dry and stingy, though by my Letter I had given thee so good an opportunity to seek the friendship of this honorable, rational, and influential man (who has no children of his own), and to try whether he might not have been of help to thee. Thou wilt do well, I think, to try and make good this fault on another opportunity.'

"At the same time the old man repeatedly pressed him to return to Medicine, and graduate in Heidelberg: 'a theatre-poet in Germany,' he signified, 'was but a small light; and as he, the Son, with all his Three Pieces, had not made any footing for himself, what was to be expected of the future ones, which might not be of equal strength! Doctorship, on the other hand, would give him a sure income and reputation as well.' — Schiller himself was actually determined to follow his Father's advice as to Medicine; but this project and others of the same, which were sometimes taken up, went to nothing, now and always, for want of money to begin with.

"Amid these old tormenting hindrances, affronts and embarrassments, Schiller had also many joyful experiences, to which even his Father was not wholly indifferent. To these belong, besides many others, his reception into the Kurpfälzische Deutsche Gesellschaft," German Society of the Electoral Palatinate, "of this year; which he himself calls a great step for his establishment; as well as the stormy applause with which his third Piece, Kabale und Liebe, came upon the boards, in March following. His Father acknowledged receipt of this latter Work with the words, 'That I possess a copy of thy new Tragedy I tell nobody; for I dare not, on account of certain passages, let any one notice that it has pleased me.' Nevertheless the Piece, as already the Robbers had done, came in Stuttgart also to the acting point; and was received with loud approval. Schiller now, with new pleasure and inspiration, laid hands on his Don Carlos; and with the happy progress of this Work, there began for him a more confident temper of mind, and a clearing up of horizon and outlook; which henceforth only transiently yielded to embarrassments in his outer life.

"Soon after this, however, there came upon him an unexpected event so suddenly and painfully that, in his extremest excitement and misery, he fairly hurt the feelings of his Father by unreasonable requirements of him, and reproaches on their being refused. A principal Stuttgart Cautioner of his, incessantly pressed upon by the stringent measures of the creditors there, had fairly run off, saved himself by flight, from Stuttgart, and been seized in Mannheim, and there put in jail. Were not this Prisoner at once got out, Schiller's honor and peace of conscience were at stake. And so, before his (properly Streicher's) Landlord, the Architect Hölzel, could get together the required 300 gulden, and save this unlucky friend, the half-desperate Poet had written home, and begged from his Father that indispensable sum. And on the Father's clear refusal, had answered him with a very unfilial Letter. Not till after the lapse of seven weeks, did the Father reply; in a Letter, which, as a luminous memorial of his faithful honest father-heart and of his considerate just character as a man, deserves insertion here:—

"'Very unwilling,' writes he, 'am I to proceed to the answering of thy last Letter, 21st November of the past year; which I could rather wish never to have read than now to taste again the bitterness contained there. Not enough that thou, in the beginning of the said Letter, very undeservedly reproachest me, as if I could and should have raised the 300 gulden for thee, — thou continuest to blame me, in a very painful way, for my inquiries about thee on this occasion. Dear Son, the relation between a good Father and his Son fallen into such a strait, who, although gifted with many faculties of mind, is still, in all that belongs to true greatness and contentment, much mistaken and astray, can never justify the Son in taking up as an injury what the Father has said out of love, out of consideration and experience of his own, and meant only for his Son's good. As to what concerns those 300 gulden, every one, alas, who knows my position here, knows that it cannot be possible for me to have even 50 gulden, not to speak of 300, before me in store; and that I should borrow such a sum, to the still farther disadvantage of my other children, for a Son, who of the much that he has promised me has been able to perform so little, — there, for certain, were I an unjust Father.' Farther on, the old man takes him up on another side, a private family affair. Schiller had, directly and through others, in reference to the prospect of a marriage between his elder Sister Christophine and his friend Reinwald the Court Librarian of Meiningen, expressed himself in a doubting manner, and thereby delayed the settlement of this affair. In regard to which his Father tells him: —

“‘And now I have something to remark in respect of thy Sister. As thou, my Son, partly straight out, and partly through Frau von Kalb, hast pictured Reinwald in a way to deter both me and thy Sister in counselling and negotiating in the way we intended, the affair seems to have become quite retrograde: for Reinwald, these two months past, has not written a word more. Whether thou, my Son, didst well to hinder a match not unsuitable for the age, and the narrow pecuniary circumstances of thy Sister, God, who sees into futurity, knows. As I am now sixty-one years of age, and can leave little fortune when I die; and as thou, my Son, how happily soever thy hopes be fulfilled, wilt yet have to struggle, years long, to get out of these present embarrassments, and arrange thyself suitably; and as, after that, thy own probable marriage will always require thee to have more thy own advantages in view, than to be able to trouble thyself much about those of thy Sisters; — it would not, all things considered, have been ill if Christophine had got a settlement. She would quite certainly, with her apparent regard for Reinwald, have been able to fit herself into his ways and him; all the better as she,

God be thanked, is not yet smit with ambition, and the wish for great things, and can suit herself to all conditions.' ”

The Reinwald marriage did take place by and by, in spite of Schiller Junior's doubts; and had not Christophine been the paragon of Wives, might have ended very ill for all parties.

“After these incidents, Schiller bent his whole strength to disengage himself from the crushing burden of his debts, and to attain the goal marked out for him by his Parents' wishes, —an enduring settlement and steady way of life. Two things essentially contributed to enliven his activity, and brighten his prospects into the future. One was, the original beginning, which falls in next June, 1784, of his friendly intimacy with the excellent Körner; in whom he was to find not only the first founder of his outer fortune in life, but also a kindred spirit, and cordial friend such as he had never before had. The second was, that he made, what shaped his future lot, acquaintance with Duke Karl August of Weimar; who, after hearing him read the first act of Don Carlos at the Court of Darmstadt, had a long conversation with the Poet, and officially, in consequence of the same, bestowed on him the title of Rath. This new relation to a noble German Prince gave him a certain standing-ground for the future; and at the same time improved his present condition, by completely securing him in respect of any risk from Würtemberg. The now Schiller, as Court-Counsellor (Hofrath) to the Duke of Weimar; distinguished in this way by a Prince, who was acquainted with the Muses, and accustomed only to what was excellent, —stept forth in much freer attitude, secure of his position and himself, than the poor fugitive under ban of law had done.

“Out of this, however, and the fact resulting from it, that he now assumed a more decisive form of speech in the Periodical 'Thalia' founded by him, and therein spared the players as little as the public, there grew for him so many and such irritating brabbles and annoyances that he determined to quit his connection with the Theatre, leave Mannheim altogether; and, at Leipzig with his new title of Rath, to begin a new honorable career. So soon as the necessary moneys and advices from his friend [Körner] had arrived, he repaired thither, end of March 1785; and remained there all the summer. In October of the same year, he followed his friend Körner to Dresden; and found in the family of this just-minded, clear-seeing man the purest and warmest sympathy for himself and his fortunes. The year 1787 led him at last to Weimar. But here too he had still long to struggle, under the pressure of poverty and want of many things, while the world, in ever-increasing admiration, was resounding with his name, till, in 1789, his longing for a civic existence, and therewith the intensest wish of his Parents, was fulfilled.

"Inexpressible was the joy of the now elderly Father to see his deeply beloved Son, after so many roamings, mischances and battles, at last settled as Professor in Jena; and soon thereafter, at the side of an excellent Wife, happy at a hearth of his own. The economic circumstances of the Son were now also shaped to the Father's satisfaction. If his College salary was small, his literary labors, added thereto, yielded him a sufficient income; his Wife moreover had come to him quite fitted out, and her Mother had given all that belongs to a household. 'Our economical adjustment,' writes Schiller to his Father, some weeks after their marriage, 'has fallen out, beyond all my wishes, well; and the order, the dignity which I see around me here serves greatly to exhilarate my mind. Could you but for a moment get to me, you would rejoice at the happiness of your Son.'

"Well satisfied and joyful of heart, from this time, the Father's eye followed his Son's career of greatness and renown upon which the admired Poet every year stepped onwards, powerfuller, and richer in results, without ever, even transiently, becoming strange to his Father's house and his kindred there. Quite otherwise, all letters of the Son to Father and Mother bear the evident stamp of true-hearted, grateful and pious filial love. He took, throughout, the heartiest share in all, even the smallest, events that befell in his Father's house; and in return communicated to his loved ones all of his own history that could soothe and gratify them. Of this the following Letter, written by him,

26th October, 1791, on receipt of a case of wine sent from home, furnishes a convincing proof :—

'DEAREST FATHER,—I have just returned with my dear Lotte from Rudolstadt [her native place], where I was passing part of my holidays; and find your Letter. Thousand thanks for the thrice-welcome news you give me there, of the improving health of our dear Mother, and of the general welfare of you all. The conviction that it goes well with you, and that none of my dear loved ones is suffering, heightens for me the happiness which I enjoy here at the side of my dear Lotte.

'You are careful, even at this great distance, for your children, and gladden our little household with gifts. Heartiest thanks from us both for the Wine you have sent; and with the earliest carriage-post the Reinwalds shall have their share. Day after to-morrow we will celebrate your Birthday as if you were present, and with our whole heart drink your health.

'Here I send you a little production of my pen, which may perhaps give pleasure to my dear Mother and Sisters; for it should be at least written for ladies. In the year 1790 Wieland edited the Historical Calendar, and in this of 1791 and in the 1792 that will follow, I have undertaken the task. Insignificant as a Calendar seems to be, it is that kind of book which the Publishers can circulate the most extensively, and which accordingly brings them the best payment. To the Authors also they can, accordingly, offer much more. For this Essay on the Thirty-Years War they have given me 80 Louis-d'or, and I have in the middle of my Lectures written it in four weeks. Print, copper-plates, binding, Author's honorarium cost the Publisher 4,500 reichsthaler [£675], and he counts on a sale of 7,000 copies or more.

'26th. To-day,' so he continues, after some remarks on a good old friend of his Father's, written after interruption, — 'To-day is your Birthday, dearest Father, which we both celebrate with a pious joy that Heaven has still preserved you sound and happy for us thus far. May Heaven still watch over your dear life and your health, and preserve your days to the latest age, that so your grateful Son may be able to spread, with all the power he has, joy and contentment over the evening of your life, and pay the debts of filial duty to you !

'Farewell, my dearest Father; loving kisses to our dearest Mother and my dear Sisters. We will soon write again.

'The Wine has arrived in good condition; once more receive our hearty thanks. — Your grateful and obedient Son

'FRIEDRICH.'

"In the beginning of this year (1791) the Poet had been seized with a violent and dangerous affection of the chest. The immediate danger was now over; but his bodily health was, for the rest of his life, shattered to ruin, and required, for the time coming, especially for the time just come, all manner of soft treatment and repose. The worst, therefore, was to be feared if his friends and he could not manage to place him, for the next few years, in a position freer from economic cares than now. Unexpectedly, in this difficulty, help appeared out of Denmark. Two warm admirers of Schiller's genius, the then hereditary Prince of Holstein-Augustenburg [Grandfather of the Prince Christian now, 1872, conspicuous in our English Court], and Count von Schimmelmann, offered the Poet a pension of 1,000 thalers [£150] for three years; and this with a fineness and delicacy of manner, which touched the recipient more even than the offer itself did, and moved him to immediate assent. The Pension was to remain a secret; but how could Schiller prevail on himself to be silent of it to his Parents? With tears of thankfulness the Parents received this glad message; in their pious minds they gathered out of this the beneficent conviction that their Son's heavy sorrows, and the danger in which his life hung, had only been decreed by Providence to set in its right light the love and veneration which he far and near enjoyed. Schiller himself this altogether unexpected proof of tenderest sympathy in his fate visibly cheered, and strengthened even in health; at lowest, the strength of his spirit, which now felt itself free from outward embarrassments, subdued under it the weakness of his body.

"In the middle of the year 1793, the love of his native country, and the longing after his kindred, became so lively in him that he determined, with his Wife, to visit Swabia. He writes to Körner: 'The Swabian, whom I thought I had altogether got done with, stirs himself strongly in me; but indeed I have been eleven years parted from Swabia; and Thüringen is not the country in which I can forget it.' In August he set out, and halted first in the then Reichstadt [Imperial Free-town] Heilbronn, where he found the friendliest reception; and enjoyed the first indescribable emotion in seeing again his Parents, Sisters and early friends. 'My dear ones,' writes he to Körner, 27th August, from Heilbronn, 'I found well to do, and, as thou canst suppose, greatly rejoiced to meet me again. My Father, in his seventieth year, is the image of a healthy old age; and any one who did not know his years would not count them above sixty. He is in continual activity, and this it is which keeps him healthy and youthful.' In large draughts the robust old man enjoyed the pleasure, long forborne, of gazing into the eyes of his Son, who now stood before him a completed man. He knew not whether more to admire than love him; for, in his whole appearance, and all his speeches and doings, there stamped itself a powerful lofty spirit, a tender loving heart, and a pure noble character. His youthful fire was softened, a mild seriousness and a friendly dignity did not leave him even in jest; instead of his old neglect in dress, there had come a dignified elegance; and his lean figure and his pale face completed the interest of his look. To this was yet added the almost wonderful gift of conversation upon the objects that were dear to him, whenever he was not borne down by attacks of illness.

"From Heilbronn, soon after his arrival, Schiller wrote to Duke Karl, in the style of a grateful former Pupil, whom contradictory circumstances had pushed away from his native country. He got no answer from the Duke; but from Stuttgart friends he did get sure tidings that the Duke, on receipt of this Letter, had publicly said, If Schiller came into Würtemberg Territory, he, the Duke, would take no notice. To Schiller Senior, too, he had at the same time granted the humble petition that he might have leave to visit his Son in Heilbronn now and then.

"Under these circumstances, Schiller, perfectly secure, visited Ludwigsburg and even Solitude, without, as he himself expressed it, asking permission of the 'Schwabenkönig.' And, in September, in the near prospect of his Wife's confinement, he went altogether to Ludwigsburg, where he was a good deal nearer to his kindred; and moreover, in the clever Court-Doctor von Hoven, a friend of his youth, hoped to find counsel, help and enjoyment. Soon after his removal, Schiller had, in the birth of his eldest Son, Karl, the sweet happiness of first paternal joy; and with delight saw fulfilled what he had written to a friend shortly before his departure from Jena: 'I shall taste the joys of a Son and of a Father, and it will, between these two feelings of Nature, go right well with me.'

"The Duke, ill of gout, and perhaps feeling that death was nigh, seemed to make a point of strictly ignoring Schiller; and laid not the least hindrance in his way. On the contrary, he granted Schiller Senior, on petition, the permission to make use of a certain Bath as long as he liked; and this Bath lay so near Ludwigsburg that he could not but think the meaning merely was, that the Father wished to be nearer his Son. Absence was at once granted by the Duke, useful and necessary as the elder Schiller always was to him at home. For the old man, now Major Schiller, still carried on his overseeing of the Ducal Gardens and Nurseries at Solitude, and his punctual diligence, fidelity, intelligence and other excellences in that function had long been recognized.

"In a few weeks after, 24th October, 1793, Duke Karl died; and was, by his illustrious Pupil, regarded as in some sort a paternal friend. Schiller thought only of the great qualities of the deceased, and of the good he had done him; not of the great faults which as Sovereign, and as man, he had manifested. Only to his most familiar friend did he write: 'The death of old Herod has had no influence either on me or my Family, — except indeed that all men who had immediately to do with that Sovereign Herr, as my Father had, are glad now to have the prospect of a man before them. That the new Duke is, in every good, and also in every bad meaning of the word.' Withal, however, his Father, to whom naturally the favor of the new Duke, Ludwig Eugen, was of importance, could not persuade Schiller to welcome him to the Sovereignty with a poem. To Schiller's feelings it was unendurable to awaken, for the sake of an external advantage from the new Lord, any suspicions as if he welcomed the death of the old."¹ Christophine, Schiller's eldest Sister, whom he always loved the most, was not here in Swabia; — long hundred miles away, poor Christophine, with her sickly and gloomy Husband at Meiningen, these ten years past! — but the younger two, Luise and Nanette, were with him, the former daily at his hand. Luise was then twenty-seven, and is described as an excellent domestic creature, amiable, affectionate, even enthusiastic; yet who at an early period, though full of admiration about her Brother and his affairs, had turned all her faculties and tendencies upon domestic practicality, and the satisfaction of being useful to her loved ones in their daily life and wants.² "Her element was altogether house-management; the aim of her endeavor to attain the virtues by which she saw her pious Mother made happy herself, in making others happy in the narrow indoor kingdom. This quiet household vocation, with its manifold labors and its simple joys, was Luise's world; beyond which she needed nothing and demanded nothing. From her Father she had inherited this feeling for the practical, and this restless activity; from the Mother her piety, compassion and kindness; from both, the love of order, regularity and contentment. Luise, in the weak state of Schiller's Wife's health, was right glad to take charge of her Brother's housekeeping; and, first at Heilbronn and then at Ludwigsburg, did it to the complete satisfaction both of Brother and Sister-in-law. Schiller himself gives to Körner the grateful testimony, that she 'very well understands household management.'

"In this daily relation with her delicate and loving Brother, to whom Luise looked up with a sort of timid adoration, he became ever dearer to her; with a silent delight, she would often look into the soft eyes of the great and wonderful man; from whose powerful spirit she stood so distant, and to whose rich heart so near. All too rapidly for her flew by the bright days of his abode in his homeland, and long she looked after the vanished one with sad longing; and Schiller also felt himself drawn closer to his Sister than before; by whose silent faithful working his abode in Swabia had been made so smooth and agreeable."

¹ Saups, p. 60.

² Ibid. p. 136 et seqq.

Nanette he had, as will by and by appear, seen at Jena, on her Mother's visit there, the year before; — with admiration and surprise he then saw the little creature whom he had left a pretty child of five years old, now become a blooming maiden, beautiful to eye and heart, and had often thought of her since. She too was often in his house, at present; a loved and interesting object always. She had been a great success in the foreign Jena circle, last year; and had left bright memories there. This is what Saupe says afterwards, of her appearance at Jena, and now in Schiller's temporary Swabian home: —

"She evinced the finest faculties of mind, and an uncommon receptivity and docility, and soon became to all that got acquainted with her a dear and precious object. To declaim passages from her Brother's Poems was her greatest joy; she did her recitation well; and her Swabian accent and naivete of manner gave her an additional charm for her new relatives, and even exercised a beneficent influence on the Poet's own feelings. With hearty pleasure his beaming eyes rested often on the dear Swabian girl, who understood how to awaken in his heart the sweet tones of childhood and home. 'She is good,' writes he of her to his friend Körner, 'and it seems as if something could be made of her. She is yet much the child of nature, and that is still the best she could be, never having been able to acquire any reasonable culture.' With Schiller's abode in Swabia, from August, 1793, till May, 1794, Nanette grew still closer to his heart, and in his enlivening and inspiring neighborhood her spirit and character shot out so many rich blossoms, that Schiller on quitting his Father's house felt justified in the fairest hopes for the future." Just before her visit to Jena, Schiller Senior writes to his Son: "It is a great pity for Nanette that I cannot give her a better education. She has sense and talent and the best of hearts; much too of my dear Fritz's turn of mind, as he will himself see, and be able to judge."¹

"For the rest, on what childlike confidential terms Schiller lived with his Parents at this time, one may see by the following Letter, of 8th November, 1793, from Ludwigsburg:—

'Right sorry am I, dearest Parents, that I shall not be able to celebrate my Birthday, 11th November, along with you. But I see well that good Papa cannot rightly risk just now to leave Solitude at all, — a visit from the Duke being expected there every day. On the whole, it does not altogether depend on the day on which one is to be merry with loved souls; and every day on which I can be where my dear Parents are shall be festal and welcome to me like a Birthday.

'About the precious little one here Mamma is not to be uneasy. [Here follow some more precise details about the health of this little Gold Son; omitted.] Of watching and nursing he has no lack; that you may believe; and he is indeed, a little leanness excepted, very lively and has a good appetite.

'I have been, since I made an excursion to Stuttgart, tolerably well; and have employed this favorable time to get a little forward in my various employments which have been lying waste so long. For this whole week, I have been very diligent, and getting on briskly. This is also the cause that I have not written to you. I am always supremely happy when I am busy and my labor speeds.

'For your so precious Portrait I thank you a thousand times, dearest Father: yet glad as I am to possess this memorial of you, much gladder still am I that Providence has granted me to have you yourself, and to live in your neighborhood. But we must profit better by this good time, and no longer make such pauses before coming together again. If you once had seen the Duke at Solitude and known how you stand with him, there would be, I think, no difficulty in a short absence of a few days, especially at this season of the year. I will send up the carriage [hired at Jena for the visit thither and back] at the very first opportunity, and leave it with you, to be ready always when you can come.

'My and all our hearty and childlike salutations to you both, and to the good Nane [Nanette] my brotherly salutation.

'Hoping soon for a joyful meeting, — Your obedient Son,

'FRIEDRICH SCHILLER.'

¹ Saups, pp. 149, 150.

"In the new-year time, 1794, Schiller spent several agreeable weeks in Stuttgart; whither he had gone primarily on account of some family matter which had required settling there. At least he informs his friend Körner, on the 17th March, from Stuttgart, 'I hope to be not quite useless to my Father here, though, from the connections in which I stand, I can expect nothing for myself.'

"By degrees, however, the sickly, often-ailing Poet began to long again for a quiet, uniform way of life; and this feeling, daily strengthened by the want of intellectual conversation, which had become a necessary for him, grew at length so strong, that he, with an alleviated heart, thought of departure from his Birth-land, and of quitting his loved ones; glad that Providence had granted him again to possess his Parents and Sisters for months long, and to live in their neighborhood. He gathered himself into readiness for the journey back; and returned, first to his original quarters at Heilbronn, and, in May, 1794, with Wife and Child, to Jena.

"Major Schiller, whom the joy to see his Son and Grandson seemed to have made young again, lived with fresh pleasure in his idyllic calling; and in free hours busied himself with writing down his twenty years' experiences in the domain of garden- and tree-culture, — in a Work, the printing and publication of which were got managed for him by his renowned Son. In November, 1794, he was informed that the young Publisher of the first Musen-Almanach had accepted his MS. for an honorarium of twenty-four Karolins; and that the same was already gone to press. Along with this, the good old Major was valued by his Prince, and by all who knew him. His subordinates loved him as a just impartial man; feared him, too, however, in his stringent love of order. Wife and children showed him the most reverent regard and tender love; but the Son was the ornament of his old age. He lived to see the full renown of the Poet, and his close connection with Goethe, through which he was to attain complete mastership and lasting composure. With hands quivering for joy the old man grasped the MSS. of his dear Son; which from Jena, vid

Cotta's Stuttgart Warehouses, were before all things transmitted to him. In a paper from his hand, which is still in existence, there is found a touching expression of thanks, That God had given him such a joy in his Son. 'And Thou Being of all beings,' says he in the same, 'to Thee did I pray, at the birth of my one Son, that Thou wouldst supply to him in strength of intellect and faculty what I, from want of learning, could not furnish; and Thou hast heard me. Thanks to Thee, most merciful Being, that Thou hast heard the prayer of a mortal!'

"Schiller had left his loved ones at Solitude whole and well; and with the firm hope that he would see them all again. And the next-following years did pass untroubled over the prosperous Family. But 'ill-luck,' as the proverb says, 'comes with a long stride.' In the Spring of 1796, when the French, under Jourdan and Moreau, had overrun South Germany, there reached Schiller, on a sudden, alarming tidings from Solitude. In the Austrian chief Hospital, which had been established in the Castle there, an epidemic fever had broken out; and had visited the Schiller Family among others. The youngest Daughter Nanette had sunk under this pestilence, in the flower of her years; and whilst the second Daughter Luise lay like to die of the same, the Father also was laid bedrid with gout. For fear of infection, nobody except the Doctors would risk himself at Solitude; and so the poor weakly Mother stood forsaken there, and had, for months long, to bear alone the whole burden of the household distress. Schiller felt it painfully that he was unable to help his loved ones, in so terrible a posture of affairs; and it cost him great effort to hide these feelings from his friends. In his pain and anxiety, he turned himself at last to his eldest Sister Christophine, Wife of Hof-rath Reinwald in Meiningen; and persuaded her to go to Solitude to comfort and support her people there. Had not the true Sister-heart at once acceded to her Brother's wishes, he had himself taken the firm determination to go in person to Swabia, in the middle of May, and bring his Family away from Solitude, and make arrangements for their nursing and accommodation. The news of his Sister's setting out relieved him of a great and continual anxiety. 'Heaven bless thee,' writes he to her on the 6th May, 'for this proof of thy filial love.' He earnestly entreats her to prevent his dear Parents from delaying, out of thrift, any wholesome means of improvement to their health; and declares himself ready, with joy, to bear all costs, those of travelling included: she is to draw on Cotta in Tübingen for whatever money she needs. Her Husband also he thanks, in a cordial Letter, for his consent to this journey of his Wife.

"July 11, 1796, was born to the Poet, who had been in much trouble about his own household for some time, his second Son, Ernst. Great fears had been entertained for the Mother; which proving groundless, the happy event lifted a heavy burden from his heart; and he again took courage and hope. But soon after, on the 15th August, he writes again to the faithful Körner about his kinsfolk in Swabia: 'From the War we have not suffered so much; but all the more from the condition of my Father, who, broken down under an obstinate and painful disease, is slowly wending towards death. How sad this fact is, thou mayest think.'

"Within few weeks after, 7th September, 1796, the Father died; in his seventy-third year, after a sick-bed of eight months. Though his departure could not be reckoned other than a blessing, yet the good Son was deeply shattered by the news of it. What his filially faithful soul suffered, in these painful days, is touchingly imaged in two Letters, which may here make a fitting close to this Life-sketch of Schiller's Father. It was twelve days after his Father's death when he wrote to his Brother-in-law, Reinwald, in Meiningen: —

'Thou hast here news, dear Brother, of the release of our good Father; which, much as it had to be expected, may wished, has deeply affected us all. The conclusion of so long and withal so active a life is, even for bystanders, a touching object: what must it be to those whom it so nearly concerns? I have to tear myself away from thinking of this painful loss, since it is my part to help the dear remaining ones. It is a great comfort to thy Wife that she has been able to continue and fulfil her daughterly duty till her Father's last release. She would never have consoled herself, had he died a few days after her departure home.

'Thou understandest how in the first days of this fatal breach among us, while so many painful things storm in upon our good Mother, thy Christophine could not have left, even had the Post been in free course. But this still remains stopped, and we must wait the War-events on the Franconian, Swabian and Palatinate borders. How much this absence of thy Wife must afflict, I feel along with thee; but who can fight against such a chain of inevitable destinies? Alas, public and universal disorder rolls up into itself our private events too, in the fatalest way.

'Thy Wife longs from her heart for home; and she only the more deserves our regard that she, against her inclination and her interest, resolved to be led only by the thought of her filial duties. Now, however, she certainly will not delay an hour longer with her return, the instant it can be entered upon without danger and impossibility. Comfort her too when thou writest to her; it grieves her to know thee forsaken, and to have no power to help thee.

'Fare right well, dear Brother. — Thine,

SCHILLER.'

"Nearly at the same time he wrote to his Mother: —

'Grieved to the heart, I take up the pen to lament with you and my dear Sisters the loss we have just sustained. In truth, for a good while past I have expected nothing else: but when the inevitable actually comes, it is always a sad and overwhelming stroke. To think that one who was so dear to us, whom we hung upon with the feelings of early childhood, and also in later years were bound to by respect and love, that such an object is gone from the world, that with all our striving we cannot bring it back, — to think of this is always something frightful. And when, like you, my dearest best Mother, one has shared with the lost Friend and Husband joy and sorrow for so many long years, the parting is all the painful. Even when I look away from what the good Father that is gone was to myself and to us all, I cannot without mournful emotion contemplate the close of so steadfast and active a life, which God continued to him so long, in such soundness of body and mind, and which he managed so honorably and well. Yes truly, it is not a small thing to hold out so faithfully upon so long and toilsome a course; and like him, in his seventy-third year, to part from the world in so childlike and pure a mood. Might I but, if it cost me all his sorrows, pass away from my life as innocently as he from his! Life is so severe a trial; and the advantages which Providence, in some respects, may have granted me compared with him, are joined with so many dangers for the heart and for its true peace!

'I will not attempt to comfort you and my dear Sisters. You all feel, like me, how much we have lost; but you feel also that Death alone could end these long sorrows. With our dear Father it is now well; and we shall all follow him ere long. Never shall the image of him fade from our hearts; and our grief for him can only unite us still closer together.

'Five or six years ago it did not seem likely that you, my dear ones, should, after such a loss, find a Friend in your Brother, — that I should survive our dear Father. God has ordered it otherwise; and He grants me the joy to feel that I may still be something to you. How ready I am thereto, I need not assure you. We all of us know one another in this respect, and are our dear Father's not unworthy children.'

This earnest and manful lamentation, which contains also a just recognition of the object lamented, may serve to prove, think Saupe and others, what is very evident, that Caspar Schiller, with his stiff, military regulations, spirit of discipline and rugged, angular ways, was, after all, the proper Father for a wide-flowing, sensitive, enthusiastic, somewhat lawless Friedrich Schiller; and did beneficently compress him into something of the shape necessary for his task in this world.

II. THE MOTHER.

OF Schiller's Mother, Elisabetha Dorothea Kodweis, born at Marbach, 1733, the preliminary particulars have been given above: That she was the daughter of an Innkeeper, Woodmeasurer and Baker; prosperous in the place when Schiller Senior first arrived there. We should have added, what Saupe omits, that the young Surgeon boarded in their house; and that by the term Woodmeasurer (Holzmesser, Measurer of Wood) is signified an Official Person appointed not only to measure and divide into portions the wood supplied as fuel from the Ducal or Royal Forests, but to be responsible also for payment of the same. In which latter capacity, Kodweis, as Father Schiller insinuates, was rash, imprudent and unlucky, and at one time had like to have involved that prudent, parsimonious Son-in-law in his disastrous economics. We have also said what Elisabetha's comely looks were, and particular features; pleasing and hopeful, more and more, to the strict young Surgeon, daily observant of her and them.

"In her circle," Saupe continues, "she was thought by her early playmates a kind of enthusiast; because she, with average faculties of understanding combined deep feeling, true piety and love of Nature, a talent for Music, nay even for Poetry. But perhaps it was the very reverse qualities in her, the fact namely that what she wanted in culture, and it may be also in clearness and sharpness of understanding, was so richly compensated by warmth and lovingness of character,—perhaps it was this which most attracted to her the heart of her deeply reasonable Husband. And never had he cause to repent his choice. For she was, and remained, as is unanimously testified of her by trustworthy witnesses, an unpretending, soft and dutiful Wife; and, as all her Letters testify, had the tenderest mother-heart. She read a good deal, even after her marriage, little as she had of time for reading. Favorite Books with her were those on Natural History; but she liked best of all to study the Biographies of famous men, or to dwell in the spiritual poetizing of an Utz, a Gellert and Klopstock. She also liked, and in some measure had the power, to express her own feelings in verses; which, with all their simplicity, show a sense for rhythm and some expertness in diction. Here is one instance; her salutation to the Husband who was her First-love, on New Year's Day, 1757, the ninth year of their as yet childless marriage:—

'Oh, could I but have found forget-me-not in the Valley,
And roses beside it! Then had I plaited thee
In fragrant blossoms the garland for this New Year,
Which is still brighter to me than that of our Marriage was.

'I grumble, in truth, that the cold North now governs us,
And every flowret's bud is freezing in the cold earth !
Yet one thing does not freeze, I mean my loving heart ;
Thine that is, and shares with thee its joys and sorrows.' ¹

"The Seven-Years War threw the young Wife into manifold anxiety and agitation ; especially since she had become a Mother, and in fear for the life of her tenderly loved Husband, had to tremble for the Father of her children too. To this circumstance Christophine ascribes, certainly with some ground, the world-important fact that her Brother had a much weaker constitution than herself. He had in fact been almost born in a camp. In late Autumn, 1759, the Infantry Regiment of Major-General Romann, in which Caspar Schiller was then a Lieutenant, had, for sake of the Autumn Manœuvres of the Württemberg Soldiery, taken Camp in its native region. The Mother had thereupon set out from Marbach to visit her long-absent Husband in the Camp ; and it was in his tent that she felt the first symptoms of her travail. She rapidly hastened back to Marbach ; and by good luck still reached her Father's house in the Market-place there, near by the great Fountain ; where she, on the 11th November, was delivered of a Boy. For almost four years the little Friedrich with Christophine and Mother continued in the house of the well-contented Grandparents (who had not yet fallen poor), under her exclusive care. With self-sacrificing love and careful fidelity, she nursed her little Boy ; whose tender body had to suffer not only from the common ailments of children, but was heavily visited with fits of cramp. In a beautiful region, on the bosom of a tender Mother, and in these first years far from the over-

¹ *O hätte ich doch im Thal Vergissmeinnicht gefunden
Und Rosen nebenbei ! Dann hätte ich Dir gewunden
In Blüthenduft den Kranz zu diesem neuen Jahr, Der schöner noch als der am Hochzeitstage war.*

*Ich zürne, trau, dass itzt der kalte Nord regiert,
Und jedes Blümchens Keim in kalter Erde frieret !
Doch eines frieret nicht, es ist mein liebend Herz ; sight of a rigorous Father, the Child grew up, and unfolded himself under cheerful and harmonious impressions.
Dein ist es, theilt mit Dir die Freuden und den Schmerz.*

"On the return of his Father from the War, little Fritz, now four years old, was quite the image of his Mother; long-necked, freckled and reddish-haired like her. It was the pious Mother's work, too, that a feeling of religion, early and vivid, displayed itself in him. The easily receptive Boy was indeed keenly attentive to all that his Father, in their Family-circle, read to them, and inexhaustible in questions till he had rightly caught the meaning of it: but he listened with most eagerness when his Father read passages from the Bible, or vocally uttered them in prayer. 'It was a touching sight,' says his eldest Sister, 'the expression of devotion on the dear little Child's countenance. With its blue eyes directed towards Heaven, its high-blond hair about the clear brow, and its fast-clasped little hands. It was like an angel's head to look upon.'

"With Father's return, the happy Mother conscientiously shared with him the difficult and important business of bringing up their Son; and both in union worked highly beneficially for his spiritual development. The practical and rigorous Father directed his chief aim to developing the Boy's intellect and character; the mild, pious, poetic-minded Mother, on the other hand, strove for the ennobling nurture of his temper and his imagination. It was almost exclusively owing to her that his religious feeling, his tender sense of all that was good and beautiful, his love of mankind, tolerance, and capability of self-sacrifice, in the circle of his Sisters and playmates, distinguished the Boy.

"On Sunday afternoons, when she went to walk with both the Children, she was wont to explain to them the Church-Gospel of the day. 'Once,' so stands it in Christophine's Memorials, 'when we two, as children, had set out walking with dear Mamma to see our Grandparents, she took the way from Ludwigsburg to Marbach, which leads straight over the Hill,' a walk of some four miles. 'It was a beautiful Easter Monday, and our Mother related to us the history of the two Disciples to whom, on their journey to Emmaus, Jesus had joined himself. Her speech and narrative grew ever more inspired ; and when we got upon the Hill, we were all so much affected that we knelt down and prayed. This Hill became a Tabor to us.'

"At other times she entertained the children with fairy-tales and magic histories. Already while in Lorch she had likewise led the Boy, so far as his power of comprehension and her own knowledge permitted, into the domains of German Poetry. Klopstock's Messias, Opitz's Poems, Paul Gerhard's and Gellert's pious Songs, were made known to him in this tender age, through his Mother ; and were, for that reason, doubly dear. At one time also the artless Mother made an attempt on him with Hofmannswaldau ;¹ but the sugary and windy tone of him hurt the tender poet-feeling of the Boy. With smiling dislike he pushed the Book away ; and afterwards was wont to remark, when, at the new year, rustic congratulants with their foolish rhymes would too liberally present themselves, 'Mother, there is a new Hofmannswaldau at the door !' Thus did the excellent Mother guide forward the soul of her docile Boy, with Bible-passages and Church-symbols, with tales, histories and poems, into gradual form and stature. Never forgetting, withal, to awaken and nourish his sense for the beauties of Nature. Before long, Nature had become his dearest abode ; and only love of that could sometimes tempt him to little abridgments of school-hours. Often, in the pretty region of Lorch, he wished the Sun good-night in open song ; or with childish pathos summoned Stuttgart's Painters to represent the wondrous formation and glorious coloring of the sunset clouds. If, in such a humor, a poor man met him, his overflowing little heart would impel him to the most active pity ; and he liberally gave away whatever he had by him and thought he could dispense with. The Father, who, as above indicated, never could approve or even endure such unreasonable giving up of one's feelings to effeminate impressions, was apt to intervene on these occasions, even with manual punishment, — unless the Mother were at hand to plead the little culprit off.

¹ A once celebrated Silesian of the 17th century, distinguished for his blustering exaggerations, numb-footed caprices, and tearing of a passion to rags ; — now extinct.

"But nothing did the Mother forward with more eagerness, by every opportunity, than the kindling inclination of her Son to become a Preacher; which even showed itself in his sports. Mother or Sister had to put a little cowl on his head, and pin round him by way of surplice a bit of black apron; then would he mount a chair and begin earnestly to preach; ranging together in his own way, not without some traces of coherency, all that he had retained from teaching and church-visiting in this kind, and interweaving it with verses of songs. The Mother, who listened attentively and with silent joy, put a higher meaning into this childish play; and, in thought, saw her Son already stand in the Pulpit, and work, rich in blessings, in a spiritual office. The spiritual profession was at that time greatly esteemed, and gave promise of an honorable existence. Add to this, that the course of studies settled for young Württemberg Theologians not only offered important pecuniary furtherances and advantages, but also morally the fewest dangers. And thus the prudent and withal pious Father, too, saw no reason to object to this inclination of the Son and wish of the Mother.

"It had almost happened, however, that the Latin School in Ludwigsburg (where our Fritz received the immediately preparatory teaching for his calling) had quite disgusted him with his destination for theology. The Teacher of Religion in the Institute, a narrow-minded, angry-tempered Pietist," as we have seen, "used the sad method of tormenting his scholars with continual rigorous, altogether soulless, drillings and trainings in matters of mere creed; nay he threatened often to whip them thoroughly, if, in the repetition of the catechism, a single word were wrong. And thus to the finely sensitive Boy instruction was making hateful to him what domestic influences had made dear. Yet these latter did outweigh and overcome, in the end; and he remained faithful to his purpose of following a spiritual career.

"When young Schiller, after the completion of his course at the Latin School, 1777, was to be confirmed, his Mother and her Husband came across to Ludwigsburg the day before that solemn ceremony. Just on their arrival, she saw her Son wandering idle and unconcerned about the streets; and impressively represented to him how greatly his indifference to the highest and most solemn transaction of his young life troubled her. Struck and affected hereby, the Boy withdrew; and, after a few hours, handed to his Parents a German Poem, expressive of his feelings over the approaching renewal of his baptismal covenant. The Father, who either had n't known the occasion of this, or had looked upon his Son's idling on the street with less severe eyes, was highly astonished, and received him mockingly with the question, 'Hast thou lost thy senses, Fritz?' The Mother, on the other hand, was visibly rejoiced at that poetic outpouring, and with good cause. For, apart from all other views of the matter, she recognized in it how firmly her Son's inclination was fixed on the study of Theology. — [This anecdote, if it were of any moment whatever, appears to be a little doubtful.]

"The painfuler, therefore, was it to the Mother's heart when her Son, at the inevitable entrance into the Karl's School, had to give up Theology; and renounce withal, for a long time, if not forever, her farther guidance and influence. But she was too pious not to recognize by degrees, in this change also, a Higher Hand; and could trustfully expect the workings of the same. Besides, her Son clung so tenderly to her, that at least there was no separation of him from the Mother's heart to be dreaded. The heart-warm attachment of childish years to the creed taught him by his Mother might, and did, vanish; but not the attachment to his Mother herself, whose dear image often enough charmed back the pious sounds and forms of early days, and for a time scared away doubts and unbelief.

"Years came and went; and Schiller, at last, about the end of 1780, stepped out of the Academy, into the actual world, which he as yet knew only by hearsay. Delivered from that long unnatural constraint of body and spirit, he gave free course to his fettered inclinations; and sought, as in Poetry so also in Life, unlimited freedom! The tumults of passion and youthful buoyancy, after so long an imprisonment, had their sway; and embarrassments in money, their natural consequence, often brought him into very sad moods.

"In this season of time, so dangerous for the moral purity of the young man, his Mother again was his good Genius: a warning and request, in her soft tone of love sufficed to recall youthful levity within the barriers again, and restore the balance. She anxiously contrived, too, that the Son, often and willingly, visited his Father's house. Whenever Schiller had decided to give himself a good day, he wandered out with some friend as far as Solitude. [Only some four or five miles.] 'What a baking and a roasting then went on by that good soul,' says one who witnessed it, 'for the dear Prodigy of a Son and the comrade who had come with him; for whom the good Mother never could do enough! Never have I seen a better maternal heart, a more excellent, more domestic, more womanly woman.'

"The admiring recognition which the Son had already found among his youthful friends, and in wider circles, was no less grateful to her heart than the gradual perception that his powerful soul, welling forth from the interior to the outward man, diffused itself into his very features, and by degrees even advantageously altered the curvatures and the form of his body. His face about this time got rid of its freckles and irregularities of skin; and strikingly improved, moreover, by the circumstance that the hitherto rather drooping nose gradually acquired its later aquiline form. And withal, the youthful Poet, with the growing consciousness of his strength and of his worth, assumed an imposing outward attitude; so that a witty Stuttgart Lady, whose house Schiller often walked past, said of him: 'Regiment's Dr. Schiller steps out as if the Duke were one of his inferior servants!'

"The indescribable impression which the Robbers, the gigantic first-born of a Karl's Scholar, made in Stuttgart, communicated itself to the Mother too; innocently she gave herself up to the delight of seeing her Son's name wondered at and celebrated; and was, in her Mother-love, inventive enough to overcome all doubts and risks which threatened to dash her joy. By Christophine's mediations, and from the Son himself as well, she learned many a disquieting circumstance, which for the present had to be carefully concealed from her Husband ; but nothing whatever could shake her belief in her Son and his talent. Without murmur, with faithful trust in God, she resigned herself even to the bitter necessity of losing for a long time her only Son ; having once got to see, beyond disputing, that his purpose was firm to withdraw himself by flight from the Duke's despotic interference with his poetical activity as well as with his practical procedures ; and that this purpose of his was rigorously demanded by the circumstances. Yet a sword went through her soul when Schiller, for the last time, appeared at Solitude, secretly to take leave of her." Her feelings on this tragic occasion have been described above ; and may well be pictured as among the painfulest, tenderest and saddest that a Mother's heart could have to bear. Our Author continues : —

"In reality, it was to the poor Mother a hard and lamentable time. Remembrance of the lately bright and safe-looking situation, now suddenly rent asunder and committed to the dubious unknown ; anxiety about their own household and the fate of her Son ; the Father's just anger, and perhaps some tacit self-reproach that she had favored a dangerous game by keeping it concealed from her honest-hearted Husband, — lay like crushing burdens on her heart. And if many a thing did smooth itself, and many a thing, which at first was to be feared, did not take place, one thing remained fixed continually, — painful anxiety about her Son. To the afflicted Mother, in this heavy time, Frau von Wolzogen devoted the most sincere and beneficent sympathy ; a Lady of singular goodness of heart, who, during Schiller's eight hidden months at Bauerbach, frequently went out to see his Family at Solitude. By her oral reports about Schiller, whom she herself several times visited at Bauerbach, his Parents were more soothed than by his own somewhat excited Letters. With reference to this magnanimous service of friendship, Schiller wrote to her at Stuttgart in February, 1783 : 'A Letter to my Parents is getting on its way : yet, much as I had to speak of you, I have said nothing whatever [from prudent motives] of your late appearance here, or of the joyful moments of our conversation together. You yourself still, therefore, have all that to tell, and you will presumably find a pair of attentive hearers.' Frau von Wolzogen ventured also to apply to a high court lady, Countess von Hohenheim [Duke's finale in the illicit way, whom he at length wedded], personally favorable to Schiller, and to direct her attention, before all, upon the heavy-laden Parents. Nor was this without effect. For the Countess's persuasion seems essentially to have contributed to the result that Duke Karl, out of respect for the deserving Father, left the evasion of his own Pupil unpunished.

"It must, therefore, have appeared to the still agitated Mother, who revered the Frau von Wolzogen as her helpful guardian, a flagrant piece of ingratitude, when she learnt that her Son was allowing himself to be led into a passionate love for the blooming young Daughter of his Benefactress. She grieved and mourned in secret to see him exposed to new storms; foreseeing clearly, in this passion, a ready cause for his removal from Bauerbach. To such agitations her body was no longer equal; a creeping, eating misery undermined her health. She wrote to her Son at Mannheim, with a soft shadow of reproof, that in this year, since his absence, she had become ten years older in health and looks. Not long after, she had actually to take to bed, because of painful cramps, which, proceeding from the stomach, spread themselves over breast, head, back and loins. The medicines which the Son, upon express account of symptoms by the Father, prescribed for her, had no effect. By degrees, indeed, these cramps abated or left off; but she tottered about in a state of sickness, years long: the suffering mind would not let the body come to strength. For though her true heart was filled with a pious love, which hopes all, believes and suffers all, yet she was neither blind to the faults of her Son, nor indifferent to the thought of seeing her Family's good repute and well-being threatened by his non-performances and financial confusions.

"With the repose and peace which the news of her Son's appointment to Jena, and intended marriage, had restored to his Family, there appeared also (beginning of 1790) an improvement to be taking place in the Mother's health. Learning this by a Letter from his Father, Schiller wrote back with lightened heart: 'How welcome, dearest Father, was your last Letter to me, and how necessary! I had, the very day before, got from Christophine the sad news that my dearest Mother's state had grown so much worse; and what a blessed turn now has this weary sickness taken! If in the future regimen vite (diet arrangements) of my dearest Mother, there is strict care taken, her long and many sufferings, with the source of them, may be removed. Thanks to a merciful Providence, which saves and preserves for us the dear Mother of our youth. My soul is moved with tenderness and gratitude. I had to think of her as lost to us forever; and she has now been given back.' In reference to his approaching marriage with Lottchen von Lengefeld, he adds, 'How did it lacerate my heart to think that my dearest Mother might not live to see the happiness of her Son! Heaven bless you with thousand-fold blessings, best Father, and grant to my dear Mother a cheerful and painless life!'

"Soon, however, his Mother again fell sick, and lay in great danger. Not till August following could the Father announce that she was saved, and from day to day growing stronger. The annexed history of the disorder seemed so remarkable to Schiller, that he thought of preparing it for the public; unless the Physician, Court-Doctor Consruch, liked better to send it out in print himself. 'On this point,' says Schiller, 'I will write to him by the first post; and give him my warmest thanks for the inestimable service he has done us all, by his masterly cure of our dear Mamma; and for his generous and friendly behavior throughout.' 'How heartily, my dearest Parents,' writes he farther, 'did it rejoice us both [this Letter is of 29th December; on the 20th February of that year he had been wedded to his Lotte], this good news of the still-continuing improvement of our dearest Mother! With full soul we both of us join in the thanks which you give to gracious Heaven for this recovery; and our heart now gives way to the fairest hopes that Providence, which herein overtops our expectations, will surely yet prepare a joyful meeting for us all once more.'

"Two years afterwards this hope passed into fulfilment.

The Mother being now completely cured of her last disorder, there seized her so irresistible a longing for her Son, that even her hesitating Husband, anxious lest her very health should suffer, at last gave his consent to the far and difficult journey to Jena. On the 3d September, 1792, Schiller, in joyful humor, announces to his friend in Dresden, 'To-day I have received from home the very welcome tidings that my good Mother, with one of my Sisters, is to visit us here this month. Her arrival falls at a good time, when I hope to be free and loose from labor; and then we have ahead of us mere joyful undertakings.' The Mother came in company with her youngest Daughter, bright little Nane, or Nanette; and surprised him two days sooner than, by the Letters from Solitude, he had expected her. Unspeakable joy and sweet sorrow seized Mother and Son to feel themselves, after ten years of separation, once more in each other's arms. The long journey, bad weather and roads had done her no harm. 'She has altered a little, in truth,' writes he to Körner, 'from what she was ten years ago; but after so many sicknesses and sorrows, she still has a healthy look. It rejoices me much that things have so come about, that I have her with me again, and can be a joy to her.'

"The Mother likewise soon felt herself at home and happy in the trusted circle of her children; only too fast flew by the beautiful and happy days, which seemed to her richly to make amends for so many years of sorrows and cares. Especially it did her heart good to see for herself what a beneficent influence the real and beautiful womanhood of her Daughter-in-law exercised upon her Son. Daily she learnt to know the great advantages of mind and heart in her; daily she more deeply thanked God that for her Son, who, on account even of his weak health, was not an altogether convenient Husband, there had been so tender-hearted and so finely cultivated a Wife given him as life-companion. The conviction that the domestic happiness of her Son was secure contributed essentially also to alleviate the pain of departure.

"Still happier days fell to her when Schiller, stirred up by her visit, came the year after, with his Wife, to Swabia; and lived there from August, 1793, till May, 1794. It was a singular and as if providential circumstance, which did not escape the pious Mother, that Schiller, in the same month in which he had, eleven years ago, hurried and in danger, fled out of Stuttgart to Ludwigsburg, should now in peace and without obstruction come, from Heilbronn by the same Ludwigsburg, to the near neighborhood of his Parents. With bitter tears of sorrow, her eye had then followed the fugitive, in his dark trouble and want of everything; with sweet tears of joy she now received her fame-crowned Son, whom God, through sufferings and mistakes and wanderings, had led to happiness and wisdom. The birth of the Grandson gave to her life a new charm, as if of youth returned. She felt herself highly favored that God had spared her life to see her dear Son's first-born with her own eyes. It was a touching spectacle to see the Grandmother as she sat by the cradle of the little 'Gold Son,' and listened to every breath-drawing of the child; or when, with swelling heart, she watched the approaching steps of her Son, and observed his true paternal pleasure over his first-born.

"Well did the excellent Grandmother deserve such refreshment of heart; for all too soon there came again upon her troublous and dark days. Schiller had found her stronger and cheerfuler than on her prior visit to Jena; and had quitted his Home-land with the soothing hope that his good Mother would reach a long and happy age. Nor could he have the least presentiment of the events which, three years later, burst in, desolating and destroying, upon his family, and brought the health and life of his dear Mother again into peril. It is above stated, in our sketch of the Husband, in what extraordinary form the universal public misery, under which, in 1796, all South Germany was groaning, struck the Schiller Family at Solitude. Already on the 21st March of this year, Schiller had written to his Father, 'How grieved I am for our good dear Mother, on whom all manner of sorrows have stormed down in this manner! But what a mercy of God it is, too, that she still has strength left not to sink under these circumstances, but to be able still to afford you so much help! Who would have thought, six or seven years ago, that she, who was so infirm and exhausted, would now be serving you all as support and nurse? In such traits I recognize a good Providence which watches over us; and my heart is touched by it to the core.'

"Meanwhile the poor Mother's situation grew ever frightfuler from day to day; and it needed her extraordinary strength of religious faith to keep her from altogether sinking under the pains, sorrows and toils, which she had for so many weeks to bear all alone, with the help only of a hired maid. The news of such misery threw Schiller into the deepest grief. He saw only one way of sending comfort and help to his poor Mother, and immediately adopted it; writing to his eldest Sister in Meiningen, as follows:—

'Thou too wilt have heard, dearest Sister, that Luise has fallen seriously ill; and that our poor dear Mother is thereby robbed of all consolation. If Luise's case were to grow worse, or our Father's even, our poor Mother would be left entirely forsaken. Such misery would be unspeakable. Canst thou make it possible, think'st thou, that thy strength could accomplish such a thing? If so, at once make the journey thither. What it costs I will pay with joy. Reinwald might accompany thee; or, if he did not like that, come over to me here, where I would brotherlike take care of him.

'Consider, my dear Sister, that Parents, in such extremity of need, have the justest claim upon their children for help. O God, why am not I myself in such health as in my journey thither three years ago! Nothing should have hindered me from hastening to them; but that I have scarcely gone over the threshold for a year past makes me so weak that I either could not stand the journey, or should fall down into sickness myself in that afflicted house. Alas, I can do nothing for them but help with money; and, God knows, I do that with joy. Consider that our dear Mother, who has held up hitherto with an admirable courage, must at last break down under so many sorrows. I know thy childlike loving heart, I know the perfect fairness and equitable probity of my Brother-in-law. Both these facts will teach you better than I under the circumstances. Salute him cordially. — Thy faithful Brother,

'SCHILLER.'

Christophine failed not to go, as we saw above. "From the time of her arrival there, no week passed without Schiller's writing home ; and his Letters much contributed to strengthen and support the heavy-laden Mother. The assurance of being tenderly loved by such a Son was infinitely grateful to her ; she considered him as a tried faithful friend, to whom one, without reluctance, yields his part in one's own sorrows. Schiller thus expressed himself on this matter in a Letter to Christophine of 9th May. 'The last Letter of my dear good Mother has deeply affected me. Ah, how much has this good Mother already undergone ; and with what patience and courage has she borne it ! How touching is it that she opened her heart to me ; and what woe was mine that I cannot immediately comfort and soothe her ! Hadst thou not gone, I could not have stayed here. The situation of our dear ones was horrible ; so solitary, without help from loving friends, and as if forsaken by their two children, living far away ! I dare not think of it. What did not our good Mother do for her Parents ; and how greatly has she deserved the like from us ! Thou wilt comfort her, dear Sister ; and me thou wilt find heartily ready for all that thou canst propose to me. Salute our dear Parents in the tenderest way, and tell them that their Son feels their sorrows.'

"The excellent Christophine did her utmost in these days of sorrow. She comforted her Mother, and faithfully nursed her Father to his last breath ; nay she saved him and the house, with great presence of mind, on a sudden inburst of French soldiers. Nor did she return to Meiningen till all tumult of affairs was past, and the Mother was again a little composed. And composure the Mother truly needed ; for in a short space she had seen a hopeful Daughter and a faithful Husband laid in their graves ; and by the death of her Husband a union severed which, originating in mutual affection, had for forty-seven years been blessed with the same mutual feeling. To all which in her position was now added the doubly pressing care about her future days. Here, however, the Son so dear to her interposed with loving readiness, and the tender manner natural to him : —

" 'You, dear Mother,' he writes, 'must now choose wholly for yourself what your way of life is to be ; and let there be,

I charge you, no care about me or others in your choice. Ask yourself where you would like best to live, — here with me, or with Christophine, or in our native country with Luise. Whithersoever your choice falls, there will we provide the means. For the present, of course, in the circumstances given, you would remain in Württemberg a little while; and in that time all would be arranged. I think you might pass the winter months most easily at Leonberg [pleasant Village nearest to Solitude]; and then with the Spring you would come with Luise to Meiningen; where, however, I would expressly advise that you had a household of your own. But of all this, more next time. I would insist upon your coming here to me, if I did not fear things would be too foreign and too unquiet for you. But were you once in Meiningen, we will find means enough to see each other, and to bring your dear Grandchildren to you. It were a great comfort, dearest Mother, at least to know you, for the first three or four weeks after Christophine's departure, among people of your acquaintance; as the sole company of our Luise would too much remind you of times that are gone. But should there be no Pension granted by the Duke, and the Sale of Furniture, &c. did not detain you too long, you might perhaps travel with both the Sisters to Meiningen; and there compose yourself in the new world so much the sooner. All that you need for a convenient life must and shall be yours, dear Mother. It shall be henceforth my care that no anxiety on that head be left you. After so many sorrows, the evening of your life must be rendered cheerful, or at least peaceful; and I hope you will still, in the bosom of your Children and Grandchildren, enjoy many a good day.' In conclusion, he bids her send him everything of Letters and MSS. which his dear Father left; hereby to fulfil his last wish; which also shall have its uses to his dear Mother.

"The Widow had a Pension granted by the Duke, of 200 gulden [near £20]; and therein a comfortable proof that official people recognized the worth of her late Husband, and held him in honor. She remained in her native country; and lived the next three years, according to her Son's counsel, with Luise in the little village of Leonberg, near to Solitude. where an arrangement had been made for her. Here a certain Herr Roos, a native of Württemberg, had made some acquaintance with her, in the winter 1797-8; to whom we owe the following sketch of portraiture. 'She was a still agreeable old person of sixty-five or six, whose lean wrinkly face still bespoke cheerfulness and kindliness. Her thin hair was all gray; she was of short [middle] stature, and her attitude slightly stooping; she had a pleasant tone of voice; and her speech flowed light and cheerful. Her bearing generally showed native grace, and practical acquaintance with social life.'

"Towards the end of 1799, there opened to the Mother a new friendly outlook in the marriage of her Luise to the young Parson, M. Frankh, in Clever-Sulzbach, a little town near Heilbronn. The rather as the worthy Son-in-law would on no account have the Daughter separated from the Mother." Error on Saupé's part. The Mother Schiller continued to occupy her own house at Leonberg till near the end of her life; she naturally made frequent little visits to Clever-Sulzbach; and her death took place there.¹ "Shortly before the marriage, Schiller wrote, heartily wishing Mother and Sister happiness in this event. It would be no small satisfaction to his Sister, he said, that she could lodge and wait upon her good dear Mother in a well-appointed house of her own; to his Mother also it must be a great comfort to see her children all settled, and to live up again in a new generation.

"Almost contemporary with the removal of the Son from Jena to Weimar was the Mother's with her Daughter to Clever-Sulzbach. The peaceful silence which now environed them in their rural abode had the most salutary influence both on her temper of mind and on her health; all the more as Daughter and Son-in-law vied with each other in respectful attention to her. The considerable distance from her Son, when at times it fell heavy on her, she forgot in reading his Letters; which were ever the unaltered expression of the purest and truest child-love. She forgot it too, as often, over the immortal works out of which his powerful spirit spoke to her. She lived to hear the name of Friedrich Schiller celebrated over all Germany with reverent enthusiasm; and ennobled by the German People sooner and more gloriously than an Imperial Patent could do it. Truly a Mother that has had such joys in her Son is a happy one; and can and may say, 'Lord, now let me depart in peace; I have lived enough!'

¹ Beziehungen, p. 197 n.

"In the beginning of the year 1802, Schiller's Mother again fell ill. Her Daughter Luise hastened at once to Stuttgart, where she then chanced to be, and carried her home to Clever-Sulzbach, to be under her own nursing. So soon as Schiller heard of this, he wrote, in well-meant consideration of his Sister's frugal economies, to Dr. Hoven, a friend of his youth at Ludwigsburg; and empowered him to take his Mother over thither, under his own medical care: he, Schiller, would with pleasure pay all that was necessary for lodging and attendance. But the Mother stayed with her Daughter; wrote, however, in her last Letter to Schiller: 'Thy unwearied love and care for me God reward with thousand-fold love and blessings! Ah me! another such Son there is not in the world!' Schiller, in his continual anxiety about the dear Patient, had his chief solace in knowing her to be in such tender hands; and he wrote at once, withal, to his Sister: 'Thou wilt permit me also that on my side I try to do something to lighten these burdens for thee. I therefore make this agreement with my Bookseller Cotta that he shall furnish my dear Mother with the necessary money to make good, in a convenient way, the extra outlays which her illness requires.'

"Schiller's hope, supported by earlier experiences, that kind Nature would again help his Mother, did not find fulfilment. On the contrary, her case grew worse; she suffered for months the most violent pains; and was visibly travelling towards Death. Two days before her departure, she had the Medallion of her Son handed down to her from the wall; and pressed it to her heart; and, with tears, thanked God, who had given her such good children. On the 29th April, 1802, she passed away, in the 69th year of her age.

Schiller, from the tenor of the last news received, had given up all hope ; and wrote, in presentiment of the bitter loss, to his Sister Frankh at Clever-Sulzbach :—

‘Thy last letter, dearest Sister, leaves me without hope of our dear Mother. For a fortnight past I have looked with terror for the tidings of her departure ; and the fact that thou hast not written in that time, is a ground of fear, not of comfort. Alas ! under her late circumstances, life was no good to her more ; a speedy and soft departure was the one thing that could be wished and prayed for. But write me, dear Sister, when thou hast recovered thyself a little from these mournful days. Write me minutely of her condition and her utterances in the last hours of her life. It comforts and composes me to busy myself with her, and to keep the dear image of my Mother living before me.

‘And so they are both gone from us, our dear Parents ; and we Three alone remain. Let us be all the nearer to each other, dear Sister ; and believe always that thy Brother, though so far away from thee and thy Sister, carries you both warmly in his heart ; and in all the accidents of this life will eagerly meet you with his brotherly love.

‘But I can write no more to-day. Write me a few words soon. I embrace thee and thy dear Husband with my whole heart ; and thank him again for all the love he has shown our departed Mother.

‘Your true Brother,

‘SCHILLER.’

“Soon after this Letter, he received from Frankh, his Brother-in-law, the confirmation of his sad anticipations. From his answer to Frankh we extract the following passage : ‘May Heaven repay with rich interest the dear Departed One all that she has suffered in life, and done for her children ! Of a truth she deserved to have loving children ; for she was a good Daughter to her suffering necessitous Parents ; and the childlike solicitude she always had for them well deserved the like from us. You, my dear Brother-in-law, have shared the assiduous care of my Sister for Her that is gone ; and acquired thereby the justest claim upon my brotherly love. Alas, you had already given your spiritual support and filial service to my late Father, and taken on yourself the duties of his absent Son. How cordially I thank you ! Never shall I think of my departed Mother without, at the same time, blessing the memory of him who alleviated so kindly the last days of her life.' He then signifies the wish to have, from the effects of his dear Mother, something that, without other worth, will remain a continual memorial of her. And was in effect heartily obliged to his Brother, who sent him a ring which had been hers. 'It is the most precious thing that he could have chosen for me,' writes he to Luise; 'and I will keep it as a sacred inheritance.' Painfully had it touched him, withal, that the day of his entering his new house at Weimar had been the death-day of his Mother. He noticed this singular coincidence, as if in mournful presentiment of his own early decease, as a singular concatenation of events by the hand of Destiny.

"A Tree and a plain stone Cross, with the greatly comprehensive short inscription, 'Here rests Schiller's Mother,' now mark her grave in Clever-Sulzbach Church-yard."

III. THE SISTERS.

SAUPE has a separate Chapter on each of the three Sisters of Schiller; but most of what concerns them, especially in relation to their Brother, has been introduced incidentally above. Besides which, Saupe's flowing pages are too long for our space; so that instead of translating, henceforth, we shall have mainly to compile from Saupe and others, and faithfully abridge.

Christophine (born 4 Sept. 1757; married "June, 1786;" died 31 August, 1847).¹

Till Schiller's flight, in which what endless interest and industries Christophine had we have already seen, the young

¹ Here, from Schiller Senior himself (Autobiography, called "Curriculum Vitæ," in Beziehungen, pp. 15-18) is a List of his six Children; — the two that died so young we have marked in italics:

1. "ELISABETH CHRISTOPHINE FRIEDRICKE, born 4 September, 1757, at Marbach.

2. "JOHANN CHRISTOPH FRIEDRICH, born 10 November, 1759, at Marbach.

girls, — Christophine 25, Luise 16, Nanette a rosy little creature of 5, — had known no misfortune; nor, except Christophine's feelings on the death of the two little Sisters, years ago, no heavy sorrow. At Solitude, but for the general cloud of anxiety and grief about their loved and gifted Brother and his exile, their lives were of the peaceablest description: diligence in household business, sewing, spinning, contented punctuality in all things; in leisure hours eager reading (or at times, on Christophine's part, drawing and painting, in which she attained considerable excellence), and, as choicest recreation, walks amid the flourishing Nurseries, Tree-avenues, and fine solid industries and forest achievements of Papa. Mention is made of a Cavalry Regiment stationed at Solitude; the young officers of which, without society in that dull place, and with no employment except parade, were considerably awake to the comely Jungfers Schiller and their promenadings in those pleasant woods: one Lieutenant of them (afterwards a Colonel, "Obrist von Miller of Stuttgart") is said to have manifested honorable aspirations and intentions towards Christophine, — which, however, and all connection with whom or his comrades, the rigorously prudent Father strictly forbade; his piously obedient Daughters, Christophine it is rather thought with some regret, immediately conforming. A Portrait of this Von Miller, painted by Christophine, still exists, it would appear, among the papers of the Schillers.¹

The great transaction of her life, her marriage with Reinwald, Court Librarian of Meiningen, had its origin in 1783; the fruit of that forced retreat of Schiller's to Bauerbach, and of the eight months he spent there, under covert, anonymously and in secret, as "Dr. Ritter," with Reinwald for his one friend and adviser. Reinwald, who commanded the resources of an

3. "LUISE DOROTHEA KATHARINA, born 24 January, 1766, at Lorch.

4. "Maria Charlotte, born 20 November, 1768, at Ludwigsburg: died 29 March, 1774; age 5 gone.

5. "Berta Friedericks, born 4 May, 1773, at Ludwigsburg: died 22 December, same year.

6. "CAROLINE CHRISTIANE, born 8 September, 1777, at Solitude;" — (this is she they call, in fond diminutive, Nane or Nanette).

¹ Beziehungen, p. 217 B.

excellent Library, and of a sound understanding, long seriously and painfully cultivated, was of essential use to Schiller; and is reckoned to be the first real guide or useful counsellor he ever had in regard to Literature. One of Christophine's Letters to her Brother, written at her Father's order, fell by accident on Reinwald's floor, and was read by him, — awakening in his over-clouded, heavy-laden mind a gleam of hope and aspiration. "This wise, prudent, loving-hearted and judicious young woman, of such clear and salutary principles of wisdom as to economics too, what a blessing she might be to me as Wife in this dark, lonely home of mine!" Upon which hint he spake; and Schiller, as we saw above, who loved him well, but knew him to be within a year or two of fifty, always ailing in health, taciturn, surly, melancholy, and miserably poor, was rebuked by Papa for thinking it questionable. We said, it came about all the same. Schiller had not yet left Mannheim for the second and last time, when, in 1784, Christophine paid him a visit, escorted thither by Reinwald; who had begged to have that honor allowed him; having been at Solitude, and, either there or on his road to Mannheim, concluded his affair. Streicher, an eye-witness of this visit, says, "The healthy, cheerful and blooming Maiden had determined to share her future lot with a man whose small income and uncertain health seemed to promise little joy. Nevertheless her reasons were of so noble a sort, that she never repented, in times following, this sacrifice of her fancy to her understanding, and to a Husband of real worth."¹ They were married "June, 1786;" and for the next thirty, or indeed, in all, sixty years, Christophine lived in her dark new home at Meiningen; and never, except in that melancholy time of sickness, mortality and war, appears to have seen Native Land and Parents again.

What could have induced, in the calm and well-discerning Christophine, such a resolution, is by no means clear; Saupe, with hesitation, seems to assign a religious motive, "the desire of doing good." Had that abrupt and peremptory dismissal of Lieutenant Miller perhaps something to do with it? Probably her Father's humor on the matter, at all times so anxious and zealous to see his Daughters settled, had a chief effect. It is certain, Christophine consulted her Parish Clergyman on the affair; and got from him, as Saupe shows us, an affirmatory or at least permissive response. Certain also that she summoned her own best insight of all kinds to the subject, and settled it calmly and irrevocably with whatever faculty was in her.

¹ Schwab, p. 173, citing Streicher's words.

To the candid observer Reinwald's gloomy ways were not without their excuse. Scarcely above once before this, in his now longish life, had any gleam of joy or success shone on him, to cheer the strenuous and never-abated struggle. His father had been Tutor to the Prince of Meiningen, who became Duke afterwards, and always continued to hold him in honor. Father's death had taken place in 1751, young Reinwald then in his fourteenth year. After passing with distinction his three years' curriculum at Jena, Reinwald returned to Meiningen, expecting employment and preferment; — the rather perhaps as his Mother's bit of property got much ruined in the Seven-Years War then raging. Employment Reinwald got, but of the meanest Kanzlist (Clerkship) kind; and year after year, in spite of his merits, patient faithfulness and undeniable talent, no preferment whatever. At length, however, in 1762, the Duke, perhaps enlightened by experience as to Reinwald, or by personal need of such a talent, did send him as Geheimer Kanzlist (kind of Private Secretary) to Vienna, with a view to have from him reports "about politics and literary objects" there. This was an extremely enjoyable position for the young man; but it lasted only till the Duke's death, which followed within two years. Reinwald was then immediately recalled by the new Duke (who, I think, had rather been in controversy with his Predecessor), and thrown back to nearly his old position; where, without any regard had to his real talents and merits, he continued thirteen years, under the title of Consistorial Kanzlist; and, with the miserablest fraction of yearly pay, "carried on the slavish, spirit-killing labors required of him." In 1776, — uncertain whether as promotion or as mere abridgment of labor, — he was placed in the Library as now; that is to say, had become Sub-Librarian, at a salary of about £15, with all the Library duties to do; an older and more favored gentleman, perhaps in lieu of pension, enjoying the Upper Office, and doing none of the work.

Under these continual pressures and discouragements poor Reinwald's heart had got hardened into mutinous indignation, and his health had broken down: so that, by this time, he was noted in his little world as a solitary, taciturn, morose and gloomy man; but greatly respected by the few who knew him better, as a clear-headed, true and faithful person, much distinguished by intellectual clearness and veracity, by solid scholarly acquirements and sterling worth of character. To bring a little help or cheerful alleviation to such a down-pressed man, if a wise and gentle Christophine could accomplish it, would surely be a bit of well-doing; but it was an extremely difficult one!

The marriage was childless; not, in the first, or in any times of it, to be called unhappy; but, as the weight of years was added, Christophine's problem grew ever more difficult. She was of a compassionate nature, and had a loving, patient and noble heart; prudent she was; the skilfullest and thriftiest of financiers; could well keep silence, too, and with a gentle stoicism endure much small unreason. Saupe says withal, "Nobody liked a laugh better, or could laugh more heartily than she, even in her extreme old age." — Christophine herself makes no complaint, on looking back upon her poor Reinwald, thirty years after all was over. Her final record of it is: "for twenty-nine years we lived contentedly together." But her rugged hypochondriac of a Husband, morbidly sensitive to the least interruption of his whims and habitudes, never absent from their one dim sitting-room, except on the days in which he had to attend at the Library, was in practice infinitely difficult to deal with; and seems to have kept her matchless qualities in continual exercise. He belonged to the class called in Germany Stubengelehrten (Closet Literary-men), who publish little or nothing that brings them profit, but are continually poring and studying. Study was the one consolation he had in life; and formed his continual employment to the end of his days. He was deep in various departments, Antiquarian, Philological, Historical; deep especially in Gothic philology, in which last he did what is reckoned a real feat,—he, Reinwald, though again it was another who got the reward. He had procured somewhere, “a Transcript of the famous Anglo-Saxon Poem Heliand (Saviour) from the Cotton Library in England,” this he, with unwearied labor and to great perfection, had at last got ready for the press; Translation, Glossary, Original all in readiness;—but could find no Publisher, nobody that would print without a premium. Not to earn less than nothing by his labor, he sent the Work to the München Library; where, in after years, one Schmeller found it, and used it for an editio princeps of his own. Sic vos non vobis; heavy-laden Reinwald!¹—

To Reinwald himself Christophine's presence and presidency in his dim household were an infinite benefit,—though not much recognized by him, but accepted rather as a natural tribute due to unfortunate down-pressed worth, till towards the very end, when the singular merit of it began to dawn upon him, like the brightness of the Sun when it is setting. Poor man, he anxiously spent the last two weeks of his life in purchasing and settling about a neat little cottage for Christophine; where accordingly she passed her long widowhood, on stiller terms, though not on less beneficent and humbly beautiful, than her marriage had offered.

Christophine, by pious prudence, faith in Heaven, and in the good fruits of real goodness even on Earth, had greatly comforted the gloomy, disappointed, pain-stricken man; enlightened his darkness, and made his poverty noble. Simplex munditiis might have been her motto in all things. Her beautiful Letters to her Brother are full of cheerful, though also, it is true, sad enough, allusions to her difficulties with Reinwald, and partial successes. Poor soul, her hopes, too, are gently turned sometimes on a blessed future, which might still lie ahead: of her at last coming, as a Widow, to live with her ¹ Schiller's Beziehungen (where many of Christophine's Letters, beautiful all of them, are given).

Brother, in serene affection, like that of their childhood together; in a calm blessedness such as the world held no other for her! But gloomy Reinwald survived bright Schiller for above ten years; and she had thirty more of lone widowhood, under limited conditions, to spend after him, still in a noble, humbly-admirable, and even happy and contented manner. She was the flower of the Schiller Sisterhood, though all three are beautiful to us; and in poor Nane, there is even something of poetic, and tragically pathetic. For one blessing, Christophine "lived almost always in good health." Through life it may be said of her, she was helpful to all about her, never hindbersome to any; and merited, and had, the universal esteem, from high and low, of those she had lived among. At Meiningen, 31st August, 1847, within a few days of her ninety-first year, without almost one day's sickness, a gentle stroke of apoplexy took her suddenly away, and so ended what may be called a Secular Saintlike existence, mournfully beautiful, wise and noble to all that had beheld it.

Nanette (born 8th September, 1777, died 23d March, 1796; age not yet 19).

Of Nanette we were told how, in 1792, she charmed her Brother and his Jena circle, by her recitations and her amiable enthusiastic nature; and how, next year, on Schiller's Swabian visit, his love of her grew to something of admiration, and practical hope of helping such a rich talent and noble heart into some clear development, — when, two years afterwards, death put, to the dear Nanette and his hopes about her, a cruel end. We are now to give the first budding out of those fine talents and tendencies of poor Nanette, and that is all the history the dear little Being has. Saupe proceeds: —

"Some two years after Schiller's flight, Nanette as a child of six or seven had, with her elder Sister Luise, witnessed the first representation of Schiller's Kabale und Liebe in the Stuttgart theatre. With great excitement, and breath held in, she had watched the rolling up of the curtain; and during the whole play no word escaped her lips; but the excited glance of her eyes, and her heightened color, from act to act, testified her intense emotion. The stormy applause with which her Brother's Play was received by the audience made an indelible impression on her.

"The Players, in particular, had shone before her as in a magic light; the splendor of which, in the course of years, rather increased than diminished. The child's bright fancy loved to linger on those never-to-be-forgotten people, by whom her Brother's Poem had been led into her sight and understanding. The dawning thought, how glorious it might be to work such wonders herself, gradually settled, the more she read and heard of her dear Brother's poetic achievements, into the ardent but secret wish of being herself able to represent his Tragedies upon the stage. On her visit to Jena, and during her Brother's abode in Swabia, she was never more attentive than when Schiller spoke occasionally of the acting of his Pieces, or unfolded his opinion of the Player's Art.

"The wish of Nanette, secretly nourished in this manner, to be able, on the stage, which represents the world, to contribute to the glory of her Brother, seized her now after his return with such force and constancy, that Schiller's Sister-in-law, Caroline von Wolzogen, urged him to yield to the same; to try his Sister's talent; and if it was really distinguished, to let her enter this longed-for career. Schiller had no love for the Player Profession; but as, in his then influential connections in Weimar, he might steer clear of many a danger, he promised to think the thing over. And thus this kind and amiable protectress had the satisfaction of cheering Nanette's last months with the friendly prospect that her wishes might be fulfilled. — Schiller's hope, after a dialogue with Goethe on the subject, had risen to certainty, when with the liveliest sorrow he learnt that Nanette was ill of that contagious Hospital Fever, and, in a few days more, that she was gone forever."¹

Beautiful Nanette; with such a softly glowing soul, and such a brief tragically beautiful little life! Like a Daughter of the rosy fingered Morn; her existence all a sun-gilt soft auroral cloud, and no sultry Day, with its dusts and disfigurements, permitted to follow. Father Schiller seems, in his rugged way, to have loved Nanette best of them all; in an embarrassed manner, we find him more than once recommending her to Schiller's help, and intimating what a glorious thing for her, were it a possible one, education might be. He followed her in few months to her long home; and, by his own direction, "was buried in the Churchyard at Gerlingen by her side."

¹ Saupe, pp. 150-155.

Luise (born 24th January, 1766; married 20th October, 1799; died 14th September, 1836).

Of Luise's life too, except what was shown above, there need little be said. In the dismal pestilential days at Solitude, while her Father lay dying, and poor Nanette caught the infection, Luise, with all her tender assiduities and household talent, was there; but, soon after Nanette's death, the fever seized her too; and she long lay dangerously ill in that forlorn household; still weak, but slowly recovering, when Christophine arrived.

The Father, a short while before his death, summoned to him that excellent young Clergyman, Frankh, who had been so unweariedly kind to them in this time of sickness when all neighbors feared to look in, To ask him what his intentions towards Luise were. It was in presence of the good old man that they made solemn promise to each other; and at Leonberg, where thenceforth the now widowed Mother's dwelling was, they were formally betrothed; and some two years after that were married.

Her Mother's death, so tenderly watched over, took place at their Parsonage at Clever-Sulzbach, as we saw above. Frankh, about two years after, was promoted to a better living, Möckmühl by name; and lived there, a well-doing and respected Parson, till his death, in 1834; which Luise's followed in September of the second year afterwards. Their marriage lasted thirty-five years. Luise had brought him three children; and seems to have been, in all respects, an excellent Wife. She was ingenious in intellectual as well as economics; had a taste for poetry ; a boundless enthusiasm for her Brother ; seems to have been an anxious Mother, often ailing herself, but strenuously doing her best at all times.

A touching memorial of Luise is Schiller's last Letter to her, Letter of affectionate apology for long silence, — apology, and hope of doing better, — written only a few weeks before his own death. It is as follows : —

“WEIMAR, 27th March, 1805.

“Yes, it is a long time indeed, good dear Luise, since I have written to thee ; but it was not for amusements that I forgot thee ; it was because in this time I have had so many hard illnesses to suffer, which put me altogether out of my regular way ; for many months I had lost all courage and cheerfulness, and given up all hope of my recovery. In such a humor one does not like to speak ; and since then, on feeling myself again better, there was, after the long silence, a kind of embarrassment ; and so it was still put off. But now, when I have been anew encouraged by thy sisterly love, I gladly join the thread again ; and it shall, if God will, not again be broken.

“Thy dear Husband's promotion to Möckmühl, which I learned eight days ago from our Sister [Christophine], has given us great joy, not only because it so much improves your position, but also because it is so honorable a testimony for my dear Brother-in-law's deserts. May you feel yourselves right happy in these new relations, and right long enjoy them ! We too are got thereby a few miles nearer you ; and on a future journey to Franconia, which we are every year projecting, we may the more easily get over to you.

“How sorry am I, dear Sister, that thy health has suffered so much ; and that thou wert again so unfortunate with thy confinement ! Perhaps your new situation might permit you, this summer, to visit some tonic watering-place, which might do thee a great deal of good. —

“Of our Family here, my Wife will write thee more at large. Our Children, this winter, have all had chicken-pox ; and poor little Emilie [a babe of four months] had much to suffer in the affair. Thank God, things are all come round with us again, and my own health too begins to confirm itself.

"A thousand times I embrace thee, dear Sister, and my dear Brother-in-law as well, whom I always wish from the heart to have more acquaintance with. Kiss thy Children in my name; may all go right happily with you, and much joy be in store! How would our dear Parents have rejoiced in your good fortune; and especially our dear Mother, had she been spared to see it! Adieu, dear Luise. With my whole soul,

"Thy faithful Brother,

"SCHILLER."

Schiller's tone and behavior to his Sisters is always beautifully human and brotherlike, as here. Full of affection, sincerity and the warmest truest desire to help and cheer. The noble loving Schiller; so mindful always of the lowly, from his own wildly dangerous and lofty path! He was never rich, poor rather always; but of a spirit royally munificent in these respects; never forgets the poor "birthdays" of his Sisters, whom one finds afterwards gratefully recognizing their "beautiful dress" or the like!—

Of date some six weeks after this Letter to Luise, let us take from Eye-witnesses one glimpse of Schiller's own death-bed. It is the eighth day of his illness; his last day but one in this world:—

"Morning of 8th May, 1805. — Schiller, on awakening from sleep, asked to see his youngest Child. The Baby "Emilie, spoken of above, "was brought. He turned his head round; took the little hand in his, and, with an inexpressible look of love and sorrow, gazed into the little face; then burst into bitter weeping, hid his face among the pillows; and made a sign to take the child away." — This little Emilie is now the Baroness von Gleichen, Co-editress with her Cousin Wolzogen of the clear and useful Book, Beziehungen, often quoted above.

It was to that same Cousin Wolzogen's Mother (Caroline von Wolzogen, Authoress of the Biography), and in the course of this same day, that Schiller made the memorable response, "Calmer, and calmer." — "Towards evening he asked to see the Sun once more. The curtain was opened; with bright eyes and face he gazed into the beautiful sunset. It was his last farewell to Nature.

"Thursday, 9th May. All the morning, his mind was wandering; he spoke incoherent words, mostly in Latin. About three in the afternoon, complete weakness came on; his breathing began to be interrupted. About four, he asked for naphtha, but the last syllable died on his tongue. He tried to write, but produced only three letters; in which, however, the character of his hand was still visible. Till towards six, no change. His Wife was kneeling at the bedside; he still pressed her offered hand. His Sister-in-law stood, with the Doctor, at the foot of the bed, and laid warm pillows on his feet, which were growing cold. There now darted, as it were, an electrical spasm over all his countenance; the head sank back; the profoundest repose transfigured his face. His features were as those of one softly sleeping," — wrapt in hard-won Victory and Peace forevermore!¹ —

¹ Schraub, p. 627, citing Voss, an eye-witness; and Caroline von Wolzogen herself.

APPENDIX.

No. 1. Page 37.

DANIEL SCHUBART.

THE enthusiastic discontent so manifest in the Robbers has by some been in part attributed to Schiller's intercourse with Schubart. This seems as wise as the hypothesis of Gray's Alderman, who, after half a century of turtle-soup, imputed the ruin of his health to eating two unripe grapes: "he felt them cold upon his stomach, the moment they were over; he never got the better of them." Schiller, it appears, saw Schubart only once, and their conversation was not of a confidential kind. For any influence this interview could have produced upon the former, the latter could have merited no mention here: it is on other grounds that we refer to him. Schubart's history, not devoid of interest in itself, unfolds in a striking light the circumstances under which Schiller stood at present; and may serve to justify the violence of his alarms, which to the happy natives of our Island might otherwise appear pusillanimous and excessive. For these reasons we subjoin a sketch of it.

Schubart's character is not a new one in literature; nor is it strange that his life should have been unfortunate. A warm genial spirit; a glowing fancy, and a friendly heart; every faculty but diligence, and every virtue but "the understrapping virtue of discretion:" such is frequently the constitution of the poet; the natural result of it also has frequently been pointed out, and sufficiently bewailed. This man was one of the many who navigate the ocean of life with "more sail than ballast;" his voyage contradicted every rule of seamanship, and necessarily ended in a wreck.

Christian Friedrich Daniel Schubart was born at Obersontheim in Swabia, on the 26th of April, 1739. His father, a well-meaning soul, officiated there in the multiple capacity of schoolmaster, precentor, and curate; dignities which, with various mutations and improvements, he subsequently held in several successive villages of the same district. Daniel, from the first, was a thing of inconsistencies; his life proceeded as if by fits and starts. At school, for a while, he lay dormant: at the age of seven he could not read, and had acquired the reputation of a perfect dunce. But "all at once," says his biographer, "the rind which enclosed his spirit started asunder;" and Daniel became the prodigy of the school! His good father determined to make a learned man of him: he sent him at the age of fourteen to the Nördlingen Lyceum, and two years afterwards to a similar establishment at Nürnberg. Here Schubart began to flourish with all his natural luxuriance; read classical and domestic poets; spouted, speculated; wrote flowing songs; discovered "a decided turn for music," and even composed tunes for the harpsichord! In short, he became an acknowledged genius: and his parents consented that he should go to Jena, and perform his cursus of Theology.

Schubart's purposes were not at all like the decrees of Fate: he set out towards Jena; and on arriving at Erlangen, resolved to proceed no farther, but perform his cursus where he was. For a time he studied well; but afterwards "tumultuously," that is, in violent fits, alternating with fits as violent of idleness and debauchery. He became a Bursche of the first water; drank and declaimed, rioted and ran in debt; till his parents, unable any longer to support such expenses, were glad to seize the first opening in his cursus, and recall him. He returned to them with a mind fevered by intemperance, and a constitution permanently injured; his heart burning with regret, and vanity, and love of pleasure; his head without habits of activity or principles of judgment, a whirlpool where fantasies and hallucinations and "fragments of science" were chaotically jumbled to and fro. But he could babble college-latin; and talk with a trenchant tone about the "revolutions of Philosophy." Such accomplishments procured him pardon from his parents: the precentorial spirit of his father was more than reconciled on discovering that Daniel could also preach and play upon the organ. The good old people still loved their prodigal, and would not cease to hope in him.

As a preacher Schubart was at first very popular; he imitated Cramer; but at the same time manifested first-rate pulpit talents of his own. These, however, he entirely neglected to improve: presuming on his gifts and their acceptance, he began to "play such fantastic tricks before high Heaven," as made his audience sink to yawning, or explode in downright laughter. He often preached extempore; once he preached in verse! His love of company and ease diverted him from study: his musical propensities diverted him still farther. He had special gifts as an organist ; but to handle the concordance and to make " the heaving bellows learn to blow " were inconsistent things.

Yet withal it was impossible to hate poor Schubart, or even seriously to dislike him. A joyful, piping, guileless mortal, good nature, innocence of heart, and love of frolic beamed from every feature of his countenance ; he wished no ill to any son of Adam. He was musical and poetical, a maker and a singer of sweet songs ; humorous also, speculative, discursive ; his speech, though aimless and redundant, glittered with the hues of fancy, and here and there with the keenest rays of intellect. He was vain, but had no touch of pride ; and the excellencies which he loved in himself, he acknowledged and as warmly loved in others. He was a man of few or no principles, but his nervous system was very good. Amid his chosen comrades, a jug of indifferent beer and a pipe of tobacco could change the earth into elysium for him, and make his brethren demi-gods. To look at his laughing eyes, and his effulgent honest face, you were tempted to forget that he was a perjured priest, that the world had duties for him which he was neglecting. Had life been all a May-game, Schubart was the best of men, and the wisest of philosophers.

Unluckily it was not : the voice of Duty had addressed him in vain ; but that of Want was more impressive. He left his father's house, and engaged himself as tutor in a family at Königsbrunn. To teach the young idea how to shoot had few delights for Schubart : he soon gave up this place in favor of a younger brother ; and endeavored to subsist, for some time, by affording miscellaneous assistance to the clergy of the neighboring villages. Ere long, preferring even pedagogy to starvation, he again became a teacher. The bitter morsel was sweetened with a seasoning of music ; he was appointed not only schoolmaster but also organist of Geislingen. A fit of diligence now seized him : his late difficulties had impressed him ; and the parson of the place, who subsequently married Schubart's sister, was friendly and skilful enough to turn the impression to account. Had poor Schubart always been in such hands, the epithet " poor " could never have belonged to him. In this little village-school he introduced some important reforms and improvements, and in consequence attracted several valuable scholars. Also for his own behoof, he studied honestly. His conduct here, if not irreprehensible, was at least very much amended. His marriage, in his twenty-fifth year, might have improved it still farther ; for his wife was a good, soft-hearted, amiable creature, who loved him with her whole heart, and would have died to serve him.

But new preferments awaited Schubart, and with them new temptations. His fame as a musician was deservedly extending : in time it reached Ludwigsburg, and the Grand Duke of Württemberg himself heard Schubart spoken of! The schoolmaster of Geislingen was, in 1768, promoted to be organist and band-director in this gay and pompous court. With a bounding heart, he tossed away his ferula, and hastened to the scene, where joys forevermore seemed calling on him. He plunged into the heart of business and amusement. Besides the music which he taught and played, publicly and privately, with great applause, he gave the military officers instruction in various branches of science; he talked and feasted; he indited songs and rhapsodies; he lectured on History and the Belles Lettres. All this was more than Schubart's head could stand. In a little time he fell in debt; took up with virtuosi; began to read Voltaire, and talk against religion in his drink. From the rank of genius, he was fast degenerating into that of profligate: his affairs grew more and more embarrassed; and he had no gift of putting any order in them. Prudence was not one of Schubart's virtues; the nearest approximation he could make to it was now and then a little touch of cunning. His wife still loved him; loved him with that perverseness of affection, which increases in the inverse ratio of its requital: she had long patiently endured his follies and neglect, happy if she could obtain a transient hour of kindness from him. But his endless course of riot, and the straits to which it had reduced their hapless family, at length overcame her spirits: she grew melancholy, almost broken-hearted; and her father took her home to him, with her children, from the spendthrift who had been her ruin. Schubart's course in Ludwigsburg was verging to its close; his extravagance increased, and debts pressed heavier and heavier on him: for some scandal with a young woman of the place, he was cast into prison; and let out of it, with an injunction forthwith to quit the dominions of the Grand Duke.

Forlorn and homeless, here then was Schubart footing the hard highway, with a staff in his hand, and one solitary thaler in his purse, not knowing whither he should go. At Heilbronn, the Bürgermeister Wachs permitted him to teach his Bürgermeisterrinn the harpsichord; and Schubart did not die of hunger. For a space of time he wandered to and fro, with numerous impracticable plans; now talking for his victuals; now lecturing or teaching music; kind people now attracted to him by his genius and misfortunes, and anon repelled from him by the faults which had abased him. Once a gleam of court-preferment revisited his path: the Elector Palatine was made acquainted with his gifts, and sent for him to Schwetzingen to play before him. His playing gratified the Electoral ear; he would have been provided for, had he not in conversation with his Highness happened to express a rather free opinion of the Mannheim Academy, which at that time was his Highness's hobby. On the instant of this luckless oversight, the door of patronage was slammed in Schubart's face, and he stood solitary on the pavement as before.

One Count Schmettan took pity on him; offered him his purse and home; both of which the way-worn wanderer was happy to accept. At Schmettan's he fell in with Baron Leiden, the Bavarian envoy, who advised him to turn Catholic, and accompany the returning embassy to Munich. Schubart hesitated to become a renegade; but departed with his new patron, upon trial. In the way, he played before the Bishop of Würzburg; was rewarded by his Princely Reverence with gold as well as praise; and arrived under happy omens at Munich. Here for a while fortune seemed to smile on him again. The houses of the great were thrown open to him; he talked and played, and fared sumptuously every day. He took serious counsel with himself about the great Popish question; now inclining this way, now that: he was puzzling which to choose, when Chance entirely relieved him of the trouble. "A person of respectability" in Munich wrote to Würtemberg to make inquiries who or what this general favorite was; and received for answer, that the general favorite was a villain, and had been banished from Ludwigsburg for denying that there was a Holy Ghost! — Schubart was happy to evacuate Munich without tap of drum.

Once more upon the road without an aim, the wanderer turned to Augsburg, simply as the nearest city, and — set up a Newspaper! The Deutsche Chronik flourished in his hands; in a little while it had acquired a decided character for sprightliness and talent; in time it became the most widely circulated journal of the country. Schubart was again a prosperous man: his writings, stamped with the vigorous impress of his own genius, travelled over Europe; artists and men of letters gathered round him; he had money, he had fame; the rich and noble throw their parlors open to him, and listened with delight to his overflowing, many-colored conversation. He wrote paragraphs and poetry; he taught music and gave concerts; he set up a spouting establishment, recited newly published poems, read Klopstock's Messias to crowded and enraptured audiences. Schubart's evil genius seemed asleep, but Schubart himself awoke it. He had borne a grudge against the clergy, ever since his banishment from Ludwigsburg; and he now employed the facilities of his journal for giving vent to it. He criticised the priesthood of Augsburg; speculated on their selfishness and cant, and took every opportunity of turning them and their proceedings into ridicule. The Jesuits especially, whom he regarded as a fallen body, he treated with extreme freedom; exposing their deceptions, and holding up to public contumely certain quacks whom they patronized. The Jesuitic Beast was prostrate, but not dead : it had still strength enough to lend a dangerous kick to any one who came too near it. One evening an official person waited upon Schubart, and mentioned an arrest by virtue of a warrant from the Catholic Bürgermeister ! Schubart was obliged to go to prison. The heads of the Protestant party made an effort in his favor : they procured his liberty, but not without a stipulation that he should immediately depart from Augsburg. Schubart asked to know his crime ; but the Council answered him : " We have our reasons ; let that satisfy you : " and with this very moderate satisfaction he was forced to leave their city.

But Schubart was now grown an adept in banishment ; so trifling an event could not unhinge his equanimity. Driven out of Augsburg, the philosophic editor sought refuge in Ulm, where the publication of his journal had, for other reasons, already been appointed to take place. The Deutsche Chronik was as brilliant here as ever : it extended more and more through Germany ; " copies of it even came to London, Paris, Amsterdam, and Petersburg." Nor had its author's fortune altered much ; he had still the same employments, and remunerations, and extravagances ; the same sort of friends, the same sort of enemies. The latter were a little busier than formerly : they propagated scandals ; engraved caricatures, indited lampoons against him ; but this he thought a very small matter. A man that has been three or four times banished, and as often put in prison, and for many years on the point of starving, will not trouble himself much about a gross or two of pasquinades. Schubart had his wife and family again beside him, he had money also to support them ; so he sang and fiddled, talked and wrote, and " built the lofty rhyme," and cared no fig for any one.

But enemies, more fell than these, were lurking for the thoughtless Man of Paragraphs. The Jesuits had still their feline eyes upon him, and longed to have their talons in his flesh. They found a certain General Ried, who joined them on a quarrel of his own. This General Ried, the Austrian Agent at Ulm, had vowed inexorable hatred against Schubart, it would seem, for a very slight cause indeed : once Schubart had engaged to play before him, and then finding that the harpsichord was out of order, had refused, flatly refused ! The General's elevated spirit called for vengeance on this impudent plebeian ; the Jesuits encouraged him ; and thus all lay in eager watch. An opportunity ere long occurred. One week in 1778, there appeared in Schubart's newspaper an Extract of a Letter from Vienna, stating that " the Empress Maria Theresa had been struck by apoplexy." On reading which, the General made instant application to his Ducal Highness, requesting that the publisher of this "atrocious libel" should be given up to him, and "sent to expiate his crime in Hungary," by imprisonment — for life. The Duke desired his gallant friend to be at ease, for that he had long had his own eye on this man, and would himself take charge of him. Accordingly, a few days afterwards, Herr von Scholl, Comptroller of the Convent of Blaubeuren, came to Schubart with a multitude of compliments, inviting him to dinner, "as there was a stranger wishing to be introduced to him." Schubart sprang into the Schlitten with this wolf in sheep's clothing, and away they drove to Blaubeuren. Arrived here, the honorable Herr von Scholl left him in a private room, and soon returned with a posse of official Majors and Amtmen, the chief of whom advanced to Schubart, and declared him — an arrested man! The hapless Schubart thought it was a jest; but alas here was no jesting! Schubart then said with a composure scarcely to be looked for, that "he hoped the Duke would not condemn him unheard." In this too he was deceived; the men of office made him mount a carriage with them, and set off without delay for Hohenasperg. The Duke himself was there with his Duchess, when these bloodhounds and their prey arrived: the princely couple gazed from a window as the group went past them, and a fellow-creature took his farewell look of sun and sky!

If hitherto the follies of this man have cast an air of farce upon his sufferings, even when in part unmerited, such sentiments must now give place to that of indignation at his cruel and cold-blooded persecutors. Schubart, who never had the heart to hurt a fly, and with all his indiscretions, had been no man's enemy but his own, was conducted to a narrow subterraneous dungeon, and left, without book or pen, or any sort of occupation or society, to chew the cud of bitter thought, and count the leaden months as they passed over him, and brought no mitigation of his misery. His Serene Transparency of Würtemberg, nay the heroic General himself, might have been satisfied, could they have seen him: physical squalor, combined with moral agony, were at work on Schubart; at the end of a year, he was grown so weak, that he could not stand except by leaning on the walls of his cell. A little while, and he bade fair to get beyond the reach of all his tyrants. This, however, was not what they wanted. The prisoner was removed to a wholesome upper room; allowed the use of certain books, the sight of certain company, and had, at least, the privilege to think and breathe without obstruction. He was farther gratified by hearing that his wife and children had been treated kindly: the boys had been admitted to the Stuttgart school, where Schiller was now studying; to their mother there had been assigned a pension of two hundred gulden. Charles of Württemberg was undoubtedly a weak and heartless man, but we know not that he was a savage one: in the punishment of Schubart, it is possible enough that he believed himself to be discharging an important duty to the world. The only subject of regret is, that any duty to the world, beyond the duty of existing inoffensively, should be committed to such hands; that men like Charles and Ried, endowed with so very small a fraction of the common faculties of manhood, should have the destiny of any living thing at their control.

Another mitigating circumstance in Schubart's lot was the character of his gaoler. This humane person had himself tasted the tender mercies of "paternal" government; he knew the nature of a dungeon better even than his prisoner. "For four years," we are told, "he had seen no human face; his scanty food had been lowered to him through a trap-door; neither chair nor table were allowed him, his cell was never swept, his beard and nails were left to grow, the humblest conveniences of civilized humanity were denied him!"¹ On this man affliction had produced its softening, not its hardening influence: he had grown religious, and merciful in heart; he studied to alleviate Schubart's hard fate by every means within his power. He spoke comfortingly to him; ministered to his infirmities, and, in spite of orders, lent him all his books. These, it is true, were only treatises on theosophy and mystical devotion; but they were the best he had; and to Schubart, in his first lonely dungeon, they afforded occupation and solace.

Human nature will accommodate itself to anything. The King of Pontus taught himself to eat poison: Schubart, cut out from intemperance and jollity, did not pine away in confinement and abstemiousness; he had lost Voltaire and gay company, he found delight in solitude and Jacob Böhm. Nature had been too good to him to let his misery in any case be unalloyed. The vague unguided ebullience of spirit, which had so often set the table in a roar, and made him the most fascinating of debauchees, was now mellowed into a cloudy enthusiasm, the sable of which was still copiously blended with rainbow colors. His brain had received a slight though incurable crack; there was a certain exasperation mixed with his unsettled fervor; but he was not wretched, often even not uncomfortable. His religion was not real; but it had reality enough for present purposes; he was at once a sceptic and a mystic, a true disciple of Böhm as well as of Voltaire. For afflicted, irresolute, imaginative men like Schubart, this is not a rare or altogether ineffectual resource: at the bottom of their minds they doubt or disbelieve, but their hearts exclaim against the slightest whisper of it ; they dare not look into the fathomless abyss of Infidelity, so they cover it over with the dense and strangely-tinted smoke of Theosophy. Schubart henceforth now and then employed the phrases and figures of religion ; but its principles had made no change in his theory of human duties : it was not food to strengthen the weakness of his spirit, but an opiate to stay its craving.

¹ And yet Mr. Fox is reported to have said: There was one FREE Government on the Continent, and that one was— Württemberg. They had a parliament and "three estates" like the English. — So much for paper Constitutions!

Schubart had still farther resources : like other great men in captivity, he set about composing the history of his life. It is true, he had no pens or paper ; but this could not deter him. A fellow-prisoner, to whom, as he one day saw him pass by the grating of his window, he had communicated his desire, entered eagerly into the scheme : the two contrived to unfasten a stone in a wall that divided their apartments ; when the prison-doors were bolted for the night, this volunteer amanuensis took his place, Schubart trailed his mattress to the friendly orifice, and there lay down, and dictated in whispers the record of his fitful story. These memoirs have been preserved ; they were published and completed by a son of Schubart's : we have often wished to see them, but in vain.

By day, Schubart had liberty to speak with certain visitors. One of these, as we have said above, was Schiller. That Schubart, in their single interview, was pleased with the enthusiastic friendly boy, we could have conjectured, and he has himself informed us. "Excepting Schiller," said the veteran garreteer, in writing afterwards to Gleim, "I scarcely know of any German youth in whom the sacred spark of genius has mounted up within the soul like flame upon the altar of a Deity. We are fallen into the shameful times, when women bear rule over men ; and make the toilet a tribunal before which the most gigantic minds must plead. Hence the stunted spirit of our poets ; hence the dwarf products of their imagination ; hence the frivolous witticism, the heartless sentiment, crippled and ricketed by soups, ragouts and sweetmeats, which you find in fashionable ballad-mongers."

Time and hours wear out the roughest day. The world began to feel an interest in Schubart, and to take some pity on him : his songs and poems were collected and published ; their merit and their author's misery exhibited a shocking contrast. His Highness of Würtemberg at length condescended to remember that a mortal, of wants and feelings like his own, had been forced by him to spend, in sorrow and inaction, the third part of an ordinary lifetime ; to waste, and worse than waste, ten years of precious time ; time, of which not all the dukes and princes in the universe could give him back one instant. He commanded Schubart to be liberated ; and the rejoicing Editor (unacquitted, unjudged unaccused !) once more beheld the blue zenith and the full ring of the horizon. He joined his wife at Stuttgart, and recommenced his newspaper. The Deutsche Chronik was again popular ; the notoriety of its conductor made amends for the decay which critics did not fail to notice in his faculties. Schubart's sufferings had in fact permanently injured him ; his mind was warped and weakened by theosophy and solitude ; bleak northern vapors often flitted over it, and chilled its tropical luxuriance. Yet he wrote and rhymed ; discoursed on the corruption of the times, and on the means of their improvement. He published the first portion of his Life, and often talked amazingly about the Wandering Jew, and a romance of which he was to form the subject. The idea of making old Joannes a temporibus, the "Wandering," or as Schubart's countrymen denominate him, the "Eternal Jew," into a novel hero, was a mighty favorite with him. In this antique cordwainer, as on a raft at anchor in the stream of time, he would survey the changes and wonders of two thousand years : the Roman and the Arab were to figure there ; the Crusader and the Circumnavigator, the Eremitic of the Thebaid and the Pope of Rome. Joannes himself, the Man existing out of Time and Space, Joannes the unresting and undying, was to be a deeply tragic personage. Schubart warmed himself with this idea ; and talked about it in his cups, to the astonishment of simple souls. He even wrote a certain rhapsody connected with it, which is published in his poems. But here he rested ; and the project of the Wandering Jew, which Goethe likewise meditated in his youth, is still unexecuted. Goethe turned to other objects : and poor Schubart was surprised by death, in the midst of his schemes, on the 10th of October, 1791.

Of Schubart's character as a man, this record of his life leaves but a mean impression. Unstable in his goings, without principle or plan, he flickered through existence like an ignis-fatuus ; now shooting into momentary gleams of happiness and generosity, now quenched in the mephitic marshes over which his zig-zag path conducted him. He had many amiable qualities, but scarcely any moral worth. From first to last his circumstances were against him ; his education was unfortunate, its fluctuating aimless wanderings enhanced its ill effects. The thrall of the passing moment, he had no will ; the fine endowments of his heart were left to riot in chaotic turbulence, and their forces cancelled one another. With better models and advisers, with more rigid habits, and a happier fortune, he might have been an admirable man : as it is, he is far from admirable.

The same defects have told with equal influence on his character as a writer. Schubart had a quick sense of the beautiful, the moving, and the true; his nature was susceptible and fervid; he had a keen intellect, a fiery imagination; and his "iron memory" secured forever the various produce of so many gifts. But he had no diligence, no power of self-denial. His knowledge lay around him like the plunder of a sacked city. Like this too, it was squandered in pursuit of casual objects. He wrote in gusts; the labor limæ et mora was a thing he did not know. Yet his writings have great merit. His newspaper essays abound in happy illustration and brilliant careless thought. His songs, excluding those of a devotional and theosophic cast, are often full of nature, heartiness and true simplicity. "From his youth upwards," we are told, "he studied the true Old-German Volkslied; he watched the artisan on the street, the craftsman in his workshop, the soldier in his guardhouse, the maid by the spinning-wheel; and transferred the genuine spirit of primeval Germanism, which he found in them, to his own songs." Hence their popularity, which many of them still retain. "In his larger lyrical pieces," observes the same not injudicious critic, "we discover fearless singularity; wild imagination, dwelling rather on the grand and frightful than on the beautiful and soft; deep, but seldom long-continued feeling; at times far-darting thoughts, original images, stormy vehemence; and generally a glowing, self-created, figurative diction. He never wrote to show his art; but poured forth, from the inward call of his nature, the thought or feeling which happened for the hour to have dominion in him."¹

Such were Schubart and his works and fortunes; the disiecta membra of a richly gifted but ill-starred and infatuated poet! The image of his persecutions added speed to Schiller's flight from Stuttgart; may the image of his wasted talents and ineffectual life add strength to our resolves of living otherwise!

No. 2. Page 28.

LETTERS OF SCHILLER.

A FEW Extracts from Schiller's correspondence may be gratifying to some readers. The Letters to Dalberg, which constitute the chief part of it as yet before the public, are on the whole less interesting than might have been expected, if we did not recollect that the writer of them was still an inexperienced youth, overawed by his idea of Dalberg, to whom he could communicate with freedom only on a single topic; and besides oppressed with grievances, which of themselves would have weighed down his spirit, and prevented any frank or cordial exposition of its feelings.

¹ Jördens' Lesicon: from which most part of the above details are taken. — There exists now a decidedly compact, intelligent and intelligible Life of Schubart, done, in three little volumes, by Strasse, some years ago. (Note of 1867.)

Of the Reichsfreiherr von Dalberg himself, this correspondence gives us little information, and we have gleaned little elsewhere. He is mentioned incidentally in almost every literary history connected with his time; and generally as a mild gentlemanly person, a judicious critic, and a warm lover of the arts and their cultivators. The following notice of his death is extracted from the Conversations Lexicon, Part III. p. 12: "Died at Mannheim, on the 27th of December, 1806, in his 85th year, Wolfgang Heribert, Reichsfreiherr von Dalberg; knighted by the Emperor Leopold on his coronation at Frankfurt. A warm friend and patron of the arts and sciences; while the German Society flourished at Mannheim, he was its first President; and the theatre of that town, the school of the best actors in Germany, of Iffland, Beck, Beil, and many others, owes to him its foundation, and its maintenance throughout his long Intendancy, which he held till 1803. As a writer and a poet, he is no less favorably known. We need only refer to his Coru, a musical drama, and to the Mönch von Carmel." — These letters of Schiller were found among his papers at his death; rescued from destruction by two of his executors, and published at Karlsruhe, in a small duodecimo, in the year 1819. There is a verbose preface, but no note or comment, though some such aid is now and then a little wanted.

The letters most worthy of our notice are those relating to the exhibition of the Robbers on the Mannheim stage, and to Schiller's consequent embarrassments and flight. From these, accordingly, the most of our selections shall be taken. It is curious to see with what timidity the intercourse on Schiller's part commences; and how this awkward shyness gradually gives place to some degree of confidence, as he becomes acquainted with his patron, or is called to treat of subjects where he feels that he himself has a dignity, and rights of his own, forlorn and humble as he is. At first he never mentions Dalberg but with all his titles, some of which to our unceremonious ears seem ludicrous enough. Thus in the full style of German reverence, he avoids directly naming his correspondent, but uses the oblique designation of "your Excellency," or something equally exalted: and he begins his two earliest letters with an address, which, literally interpreted, runs thus: "Empire-free, Highly-wellborn, Particularly-much-to-be-venerated, Lord Privy Counsellor!" Such sounding phrases make us smile: but they entirely depend on custom for their import, and the smile which they excite is not by any means a philosophic one. It is but fair that in our version we omit them, or render them by some more grave equivalent.

The first letter is as follows:—

[No date.]

“The proud judgment, passed upon me in the flattering letter which I had the honor to receive from your Excellency, is enough to set the prudence of an Author on a very slippery eminence. The authority of the quarter it proceeds from, would almost communicate to that sentence the stamp of infallibility, if I could regard it as anything but a mere encouragement of my Muse. More than this a deep feeling of my weakness will not let me think it; but if my strength shall ever climb to the height of a masterpiece, I certainly shall have this warm approval of your Excellency alone to thank for it, and so will the world. For several years I have had the happiness to know you from the public papers: long ago the splendor of the Mannheim theatre attracted my attention. And, I confess, ever since I felt any touch of dramatic talent in myself, it has been among my darling projects some time or other to remove to Mannheim, the true temple of Thalia; a project, however, which my closer connection with Würtemberg might possibly impede.

“Your Excellency’s very kind proposal on the subject of the Robbers, and such other pieces as I may produce in future, is infinitely precious to me; the maturing of it well deserves a narrower investigation of your Excellency’s theatre, its special mode of management, its actors, the non plus ultra of its machinery; in a word, a full conception of it, such as I shall never get while my only scale of estimation is this Stuttgard theatre of ours, an establishment still in its minority. Unhappily my economical circumstances render it impossible for me to travel much; though I could travel now with the greater happiness and confidence, as I have still some pregnant ideas for the Mannheim theatre, which I could wish to have the honor of communicating to your Excellency. For the rest, I remain,” &c.

From the second letter we learn that Schiller had engaged to revisé his original edition of the Robbers, and still wished much to be connected in some shape with Mannheim. The third explains itself:

“STUTTGARD, 6th October, 1781.

“Here then at last returns the luckless prodigal, the remodelled Robbers! I am sorry that I have not kept the time, appointed by myself; but a transitory glance at the number and extent of the changes I have made, will, I trust, be sufficient to excuse me. Add to this, that a contagious epidemic was at work in our military Hospital, which, of course, interfered very often with my otia poetica. After finishing my work, I may assure you I could engage with less effort of mind, and certainly with far more contentment, to compose a new piece, than to undergo the labor I have just concluded. The task was complicated and tedious. Here I had to correct an error, which naturally was rooted in the very groundwork of the play; there perhaps to sacrifice a beauty to the limits of the stage, the humor of the pit, the stupidity of the gallery, or some such sorrowful convention; and I need not tell you, that as in nature, so on the stage, an idea, an emotion, can have only one suitable expression, one proper tone. A single alteration in a trait of character may give a new tendency to the whole personage, and, consequently, to his actions, and the mechanism of the piece which depends on them.

"In the original, the Robbers are exhibited in strong contrast with each other; and I dare maintain that it is difficult to draw half a dozen robbers in strong contrast, without in some of them offending the delicacy of the stage. In my first conception of the piece, I excluded the idea of its ever being represented in a theatre; hence came it that Franz was planned as a reasoning villain; a plan which, though it may content the thinking Reader, cannot fail to vex and weary the Spectator, who does not come to think, and who wants not philosophy, but action.

"In the new edition, I could not overturn this arrangement without breaking down the whole economy of the piece. Accordingly I can predict, with tolerable certainty, that Franz when he appears on the stage, will not play the part which he has played with the reader. And, at all events, the rushing stream of the action will hurry the spectator over all the finer shadings, and rob him of a third part of the whole character.

"Karl von Moor might chance to form an era on the stage; except a few speculations, which, however, work as indispensable colors in the general picture, he is all action, all visible life. Spiegelberg, Schweitzer, Hermann, are, in the strictest sense, personages for the stage; in a less degree, Amelia and the Father.

"Written and oral criticisms I have endeavored to turn to advantage. The alterations are important; certain scenes are altogether new. Of this number, are Hermann's counter-plots to undermine the schemes of Franz; his interview with that personage, which, in the first composition of the work, was entirely and very unhappily forgotten.

His interview with Amelia in the garden has been postponed to the succeeding act; and my friends tell me that I could have fixed upon no better act than this, no better time than a few moments prior to the meeting of Amelia with Moor. Franz is brought a little nearer human nature; but the mode of it is rather strange. A scene like his condemnation in the fifth act has never, to my knowledge, been exhibited on any stage; and the same may be said of the scene where Amelia is sacrificed by her lover.

"If the piece should be too long, it stands at the discretion of the manager to abbreviate the speculative parts of it, or here and there, without prejudice to the general impression, to omit them altogether. But in the printing, I use the freedom humbly to protest against the leaving out of anything. I had satisfactory reasons of my own for all that I allowed to pass; and my submission to the stage does not extend so far, that I can leave holes in my work, and mutilate the characters of men for the convenience of actors.

"In regard to the selection of costume, without wishing to prescribe any rules, I may be permitted to remark, that though in nature dress is unimportant, on the stage it is never so. In this particular, the taste of my Robber Moor will not be difficult to hit. He wears a plume; for this is mentioned expressly in the play, at the time when he abdicates his office. I have also given him a baton. His dress should always be noble without ornament, unstudied but not negligent.

"A young but excellent composer is working at a symphony for my unhappy prodigal: I know it will be masterly. So soon as it is finished, I shall take the liberty of offering it to you.

"I must also beg you to excuse the irregular state of the manuscript, the incorrectness of the penmanship. I was in haste to get the piece ready for you; hence the double sort of handwriting in it; hence also my forbearing to correct it. My copyist, according to the custom of all reforming caligraphers, I find, has wofully abused the spelling. To conclude, I recommend myself and my endeavors to the kindness of an honored judge. I am," &c.

"STUTTGARD, 19th December, 1781.

"With the change projected by your Excellency, in regard to the publishing of my play, I feel entirely contented, especially as I perceive that by this means two interests that had become very alien, are again made one, without, as I hope, any prejudice to the results and the success of my work. Your Excellency, however, touches on some other very weighty changes, which the piece has undergone from your hands; and these, in respect of myself, I feel to be so important, that I shall beg to explain my mind at some length regarding them. At the outset, then, I must honestly confess to you, I hold the projected transference of the action represented in my play to the epoch of the Landfried, and the Suppression of Private Wars, with the whole accompaniment which it gains by this new position, as infinitely better than mine; and must hold it so, although the whole piece should go to ruin thereby. Doubtless it is an objection, that in our enlightened century, with our watchful police and fixedness of statute, such a reckless gang should have arisen in the very bosom of the laws, and still more, have taken root and subsisted for years: doubtless the objection is well founded, and I have nothing to allege against it, but the license of Poetry to raise the probabilities of the real world to the rank of true, and its possibilities to the rank of probable.

"This excuse, it must be owned, is little adequate to the objection it opposes. But when I grant your Excellency so much (and I grant it honestly, and with complete conviction), what will follow? Simply that my play has got an ugly fault at its birth, which fault, if I may say so, it must carry with it to its grave, the fault being interwoven with its very nature, and not to be removed without destruction of the whole.

"In the first place, all my personages speak in a style too modern, too enlightened for that ancient time. The dialect is not the right one. That simplicity so vividly presented to us by the author of Göts von Berkingen, is altogether wanting. Many long tirades, touches great and small, nay entire characters, are taken from the aspect of the present world, and would not answer for the age of Maximilian. In a word, this change would reduce the piece into something like a certain woodcut which I remember meeting with in an edition of Virgil. The Trojans wore hussar boots, and King Agamemnon had a pair of pistols in his belt. I should commit a crime against the age of Maximilian, to avoid an error against the age of Frederick the Second.

"Again, my whole episode of Amelia's love would make a frightful contrast with the simple chivalry attachment of that period. Amelia would, at all hazards, need to be remoulded into a chivalry maiden; and I need not tell you that this character, and the sort of love which reigns in my work, are so deeply and broadly tinted into the whole picture of the Robber Moor, nay, into the whole piece, that every part of the delineation would require to be repainted, before those tints could be removed. So likewise is it with the character of Franz, that speculative, metaphysico-refining knave.

"In a word, I think I may affirm, that this projected transposition of my work, which, prior to the commencement, would have lent it the highest splendor and completeness, could not fail now, when the piece is planned and finished, to change it into a defective quodlibet, a crow with peacock's feathers.

"Your Excellency will forgive a father this earnest pleading in behalf of his son. These are but words, and in the long-run every theatre can make of any piece what they think proper; the author must content himself. In the present case, he looks upon it as a happiness that he has fallen into such hands. With Herr Schwann, however, I will make it a condition that, at least, he print the piece according to the first plan. In the theatre I pretend to no vote whatever.

"That other change relating to Amelia's death was perhaps even more interesting to me. Believe me, your Excellency, this was the portion of my play which cost me the greatest effort and deliberation, of all which the result was nothing else than this, that Moor must kill his Amelia, and that the action is even a positive beauty, in his character; on the one hand painting the ardent lover, on the other the Bandit Captain, with the liveliest colors. But the vindication of this part is not to be exhausted in a single letter. For the rest, the few words which you propose to substitute in place of this scene, are truly exquisite, and altogether worthy of the situation. I should be proud of having written them.

"As Herr Schwann informs me that the piece, with the music and indispensably necessary pauses, will last about five hours (too long for any piece!), a second curtailment of it will be called for. I should not wish that any but myself undertook this task, and I myself, without the sight of a rehearsal, or of the first representation, cannot undertake it.

"If it were possible that your Excellency could fix the general rehearsal of the piece some time between the twentieth and the thirtieth of this month, and make good to me the main expenses of a journey to you, I should hope, in some few days, I might unite the interest of the stage with my own, and give the piece that proper rounding-off, which, without an actual view of the representation, cannot well be given it. On this point, may I request the favor of your Excellency's decision soon, that I may be prepared for the event.

"Herr Schwann writes me that a Baron von Gemmingen has given himself the trouble and done me the honor to read my piece. This Herr von Gemmingen, I also hear, is author of the Deutsche Hausvater. I long to have the honor of assuring him that I liked his Hausvater uncommonly, and admired in it the traces of a most accomplished man and writer. But what does the author of the Deutsche Hausvater care about the babble of a young apprentice? If I should ever have the honor of meeting Dalberg at Mannheim, and testifying the affection and reverence I bear him, I will then also press into the arms of that other, and tell him how dear to me such souls are as Dalberg and Gemmingen.

"Your thought about the small Advertisement, before our production of the piece, I exceedingly approve of; along with this I have enclosed a sketch of one. For the rest, I have the honor, with perfect respect, to be always," &c.

This is the enclosed scheme of an Advertisement; which was afterwards adopted:—

"THE ROBBERS,

"A PLAY.

"THE picture of a great, misguided soul, furnished with every gift for excellence, and lost in spite of all its gifts: unchecked ardor and bad companionship contaminate his heart; hurry him from vice to vice, till at last he stands at the head of a gang of murderers, heaps horror upon horror, plunges from abyss to abyss into all the depths of desperation. Great and majestic in misfortune; and by misfortune improved, led back to virtue. Such a man in the Robber Moor you shall bewail and hate, abhor and love. A hypocritical, malicious deceiver, you shall likewise see unmasked, and blown to pieces in his own mines. A feeble, fond, and too indulgent father. The sorrows of enthusiastic love, and the torture of ungoverned passion. Here also, not without abhorrence, you shall cast a look into the interior economy of vice, and from the stage be taught how all the gilding of fortune cannot kill the inward worm; how terror, anguish, remorse, and despair follow close upon the heels of the wicked. Let the spectator weep to-day before our scene, and shudder, and learn to bend his passions under the laws of reason and religion. Let the youth behold with affright the end of unbridled extravagance; nor let the man depart from our theatre, without a feeling that Providence makes even villains instruments of His purposes and judgments, and can marvellously unravel the most intricate perplexities of fate."

Whatever reverence Schiller entertained for Dalberg as a critic and a patron, and however ready to adopt his alterations when they seemed judicious, it is plain, from various passages of these extracts, that in regard to writing, he had also firm persuasions of his own, and conscientiousness enough to adhere to them while they continued such. In regard to the conducting of his life, his views as yet were far less clear. The following fragments serve to trace him from the first exhibition of his play at Mannheim to his flight from Stuttgart: — “STUTTGARD, 17th January, 1782.

“I here in writing repeat my warmest thanks for the courtesies received from your Excellency, for your attention to my slender efforts, for the dignity and splendor you bestowed upon my piece, for all your Excellency did to exalt its little merits and hide its weaknesses by the greatest outlay of theatric art. The shortness of my stay at Mannheim would not allow me to go into details respecting the play or its representation; and as I could not say all, my time being meted out to me so sparingly, I thought it better to say absolutely nothing. I observed much, I learned much; and I believe, if Germany shall ever find in me a true dramatic poet, I must reckon the date of my commencement from the past week.” . . .

“STUTTGARD, 24th May, 1782.

. . . “My impatient wish to see the piece played a second time, and the absence of my Sovereign favoring that purpose, have induced me, with some ladies and male friends as full of curiosity respecting Dalberg’s theatre and Robbers as myself, to undertake a little journey to Mannheim, which we are to set about to-morrow. As this is the principal aim of our journey, and to me a more perfect enjoyment of my play is an exceedingly important object, especially since this would put it in my power to set about Fiasco under better auspices, I make it my earnest request of your Excellency, if possible, to procure me this enjoyment on Tuesday the 28th current.” . . .

“STUTTGARD, 4th June, 1782.

“The satisfaction I enjoyed at Mannheim in such copious fulness, I have paid, since my return, by this epidemical disorder, which has made me till to-day entirely unfit to thank your Excellency for so much regard and kindness. And yet I am forced almost to repent the happiest journey of my life; for by a truly mortifying contrast of Mannheim with my native country, it has pained me so much, that Stuttgart and all Swabian scenes are become intolerable to me. Unhappier than I am can no one be. I have feeling enough of my bad condition, perhaps also feeling enough of my meriting a better; and in both points of view but one prospect of relief.

“May I dare to cast myself into your arms, my generous benefactor? I know how soon your noble heart inflames when sympathy and humanity appeal to it; I know how strong your courage is to undertake a noble action, and how warm your zeal to finish it. My new friends in Mannheim, whose respect for you is boundless, told me this: but their assurance was not necessary; I myself in that hour of your time, which I had the happiness exclusively to enjoy, read in your countenance far more than they had told me. It is this which makes me bold to give myself without reserve to you, to put my whole fate into your hands, and look to you for the happiness of my life. As yet I am little or nothing. In this Arctic Zone of taste, I shall never grow to anything, unless happier stars and a Grecian climate warm me into genuine poetry. Need I say more, to expect from Dalberg all support?

"Your Excellency gave me every hope to this effect; the squeeze of the hand that sealed your promise, I shall forever feel. If your Excellency will adopt the two or three hints I have subjoined, and use them in a letter to the Duke, I have no very great misgivings as to the result.

"And now with a burning heart, I repeat the request, the soul of all this letter. Could you look into the interior of my soul, could you see what feelings agitate it, could I paint to you in proper colors how my spirit strains against the grievances of my condition, you would not, I know you would not, delay one hour the aid which an application from you to the Duke might procure me.

"Again I throw myself into your arms, and wish nothing more than soon, very soon, to have it in my power to show by personal exertions in your service, the reverence with which I could devote to you myself and all that I am."

The "hints" above alluded to, are given in a separate enclosure, the main part of which is this:—

"I earnestly desire that you could secure my union with the Mannheim Theatre for a specified period (which at your request might be lengthened), at the end of which I might again belong to the Duke. It will thus have the air rather of an excursion than a final abdication of my country, and will not strike them so ungraciously. In this case, however, it would be useful to suggest that means of practising and studying medicine might be afforded me at Mannheim. This will be peculiarly necessary, lest they sham, and higgie about letting me away."

"STUTTGARD, 15th July, 1782.

"My long silence must have almost drawn upon me the reproach of folly from your Excellency, especially as I have not only delayed answering your last kind letter, but also retained the two books by me. All this was occasioned by a harassing affair which I have had to do with here. Your Excellency will doubtless be surprised when you learn that, for my last journey to you, I have been confined a fortnight under arrest. Everything was punctually communicated to the Duke. On this matter I have had an interview with him.

"If your Excellency think my prospects of coming to you anywise attainable, my only prayer is to accelerate the fulfilment of them. The reason why I now wish this with double earnestness, is one which I dare trust no whisper of to paper. This alone I can declare for certain, that within a month or two, if I have not the happiness of being with you, there will remain no further hope of my ever being there. Ere that time, I shall be forced to take a step, which will render it impossible for me to stay at Mannheim." . . .

The next two extracts are from letters to another correspondent. Doering quotes them without name or date: their purport sufficiently points out their place.

"I must haste to get away from this: in the end they might find me an apartment in the Hohenasperg, as they have found the honest and ill-fated Schubart. They talk of better culture than I need. It is possible enough, they might cultivate me differently in Hohenasperg: but I had rather try to make shift with what culture I have got, or may still get, by my unassisted efforts. This at least I owe to no one but my own free choice, and volition that disdains constraint."

"In regard to those affairs, concerning which they wish to put my spirit under wardship, I have long reckoned my minority to be concluded. The best of it is, that one can cast away such clumsy manacles: me at least they shall not fetter."

[No date.]

"Your Excellency will have learned from my friends at Mannheim, what the history of my affairs was up to your arrival, which unhappily I could not wait for. When I tell you that I am flying my country, I have painted my whole fortune. But the worst is yet behind. I have not the necessary means of setting my mishap at defiance. For the sake of safety, I had to withdraw from Stuttgart with the utmost speed, at the time of the Prince's arrival. Thus were my economical arrangements suddenly snapped asunder: I could not even pay my debts. My hopes had been set on a removal to Mannheim ; there I trusted, by your Excellency's assistance, that my new play might not only have cleared me of debt, but have permanently put me into better circumstances. All this was frustrated by the necessity for hastening my removal. I went empty away ; empty in purse and hope. I blush at being forced to make such disclosures to you ; though I know they do not disgrace me. Sad enough for me to see realized in myself the hateful saying, that mental growth and full stature are things denied to every Swabian !

" If my former conduct, if all that your Excellency knows of my character, inspires you with confidence in my love of honor, permit me frankly to ask your assistance. Pressingly as I now need the profit I expect from my Fiesco, it will be impossible for me to have the piece in readiness before three weeks : my heart was oppressed ; the feeling of my own situation drove me back from my poetic dreams. But if at the specified period, I could make the play not only ready, but, as I also hope, worthy, I take courage from that persuasion, respectfully to ask that your Excellency would be so obliging as advance for me the price that will then become due. I need it now, perhaps more than I shall ever do again throughout my life. I had near 200 florins of debt in Stuttgart, which I could not pay. I may confess to you, that this gives me more uneasiness than anything about my future destiny. I shall have no rest till I am free on that side.

" In eight days, too, my travelling purse will be exhausted. It is yet utterly impossible for me to labor with my mind. In my hand, therefore, are at present no resources.

" My actual situation being clear enough from what I have already said, I hold it needless to afflict your Excellency with any importuning picture of my want. Speedy aid is all that I can now think of or wish. Herr Meyer has been requested to communicate your Excellency's resolution to me, and to save you from the task of writing to me in person at all. With peculiar respect, I call myself," &c.

It is pleasing to record that the humble aid so earnestly and modestly solicited by Schiller, was afforded him ; and that he never forgot to love the man who had afforded it ; who had assisted him, when assistance was of such essential value. In the first fervor of his gratitude, for this and other favors, the poet warmly declared that " he owed all, all to Dalberg ; " and in a state of society where Patronage, as Miss Edgeworth has observed, directly the antipodes of Mercy, is in general " twice cursed," cursing him that gives and him that takes, it says not a little for the character both of the obliged and the obliger in the present instance, that neither of them ever ceased to remember their connection with pleasure. Schiller's first play had been introduced to the Stage by Dalberg, and his last was dedicated to him.¹ The venerable critic, in his eighty-third year, must have received with a calm joy the tragedy of Tell, accompanied by an address so full of kindness and respect: it must have gratified him to think that the youth who was once his, and had now become the world's, could, after long experience, still say of him,

"And fearlessly to thee may Tell be shown,
For every noble feeling is thy own."

Except this early correspondence, very few of Schiller's letters have been given to the world.² In Doering's Appendix, we have found one written six years after the poet's voluntary exile, and agreeably contrasted in its purport with the agitation and despondency of that unhappy period. We translate it for the sake of those who, along with us, regret that while the world is deluged with insipid correspondences, and "pictures of mind" that were not worth drawing, the correspondence of a man who never wrote unwisely should lie mouldering in private repositories, ere long to be irretrievably destroyed; that the "picture of a mind" who was among the conscript fathers of the human race should still be left so vague and dim. This letter is addressed to Schwann, during Schiller's first residence in Weimar: it has already been referred to in the Text.

¹ It clearly appears I am wrong here; I have confounded the Freiherr Wolfgang Heribert von Dalberg, Director of the Mannheim Theatre, with Archduke and Fürst Primas Karl Theodor Dalberg, his younger Brother, — a man justly eminent in the Politico-Ecclesiastical world of his time, and still more distinguished for his patronage of letters, and other benefactions to his country, than the Freiherr was. Neither is the play of Tell "dedicated" to him, as stated in the text; there is merely a copy presented, with some verses by the Author inscribed in it; at which time Karl Theodor was in his sixtieth year. A man of conspicuous station, of wide activity, and high influence and esteem in Germany. He was the personal friend of Herder, Goethe, Schiller, Wieland; by Napoleon he was made Fürst Primas, Prince Primate of the Confederation of the Rhine, being already Archbishop, Elector of Mentz, &c. The good and brave deeds he did in his time appear to have been many, public and private. Pensions to deserving men of letters were among the number: Zacharias Werner, I remember, had a pension from him, — and still more to the purpose, Jean Paul. He died in 1817. There was a third Brother also memorable for his encouragement of Letters and Arts. "Ist kein Dalberg da, Is there no Dalberg here?" the Herald cries on a certain occasion. (See Conv. Lexicon, b. iii.)

To Sir Edward Bulwer, in his Sketch of the Life of Schiller (p. c.), I am indebted for very kindly pointing out this error; as well as for much other satisfaction derived from that work. (Note of 1845.)

² There have since been copious contributions: Correspondence with Goethe, Correspondence with Madam von Wollogon, and perhaps others which I have not seen. (Note of 1845.)

"WEIMAR, 2d May, 1788.

"You apologize for your long silence to spare me the pain of an apology. I feel this kindness, and thank you for it. You do not impute my silence to decay of friendship; a proof that you have read my heart more justly than my evil conscience allowed me to hope. Continue to believe that the memory of you lives ineffaceably in my mind, and needs not to be brightened up by the routine of visits, or letters of assurance. So no more of this.

"The peace and calmness of existence which breathes throughout your letter, gives me joy; I who am yet drifting to and fro between wind and waves, am forced to envy you that uniformity, that health of soul and body. To me also in time it will be granted, as a recompense for labors I have yet to undergo.

"I have now been in Weimar nearly three quarters of a year: after finishing my Carlos, I at last accomplished this long-projected journey. To speak honestly, I cannot say but that I am exceedingly contented with the place; and my reasons are not difficult to see.

"The utmost political tranquillity and freedom, a very tolerable disposition in the people, little constraint in social intercourse, a select circle of interesting persons and thinking heads, the respect paid to literary diligence: add to this the unexpensiveness to me of such a town as Weimar. Why should I not be satisfied?

"With Wieland I am pretty intimate, and to him I must attribute no small influence on my present happiness; for I like him, and have reason to believe that he likes me in return. My intercourse with Herder is more limited, though I esteem him highly as a writer and a man. It is the caprice of chance alone which causes this; for we opened our acquaintance under happy enough omens. Besides, I have not always time to act according to my likings. With Bode no one can be very friendly. I know not whether you think here as I do. Goethe is still but expected out of Italy. The Duchess Dowager is a lady of sense and talent, in whose society one does not feel constrained.

"I thank you for your tidings of the fate of Carlos on your stage. To speak candidly, my hopes of its success on any stage were not high; and I know my reasons. It is but fair that the Goddess of the Theatre avenge herself on me, for the little gallantry with which I was inspired in writing. In the mean time, though Carlos prove a never so decided failure on the stage, I engage for it, our public shall see it ten times acted, before they understand and fully estimate the merit that should counterbalance its defects. When one has seen the beauty of a work, and not till then, I think one is entitled to pronounce on its deformity. I hear, however, that the second representation succeeded better than the first. This arises either from the changes made upon the piece by Dalberg, or from the fact, that on a second view, the public comprehended certain things, which on a first, they — did not comprehend.

“For the rest, no one can be more satisfied than I am that Carlos, from causes honorable as well as causes dishonorable to it, is no speculation for the stage. Its very length were enough to banish it. Nor was it out of confidence or self-love that I forced the piece on such a trial; perhaps out of self-interest rather. If in the affair my vanity played any part, it was in this, that I thought the work had solid stuff in it sufficient to outweigh its sorry fortune on the boards.

“The present of your portrait gives me true pleasure. I think it a striking likeness; that of Schubart a little less so, though this opinion may proceed from my faulty memory as much as from the faultiness of Lobauer's drawing. The engraver merits all attention and encouragement; what I can do for the extension of his good repute shall not be wanting.

“To your dear children present my warmest love. At Wieland's I hear much and often of your eldest daughter; there in a few days she has won no little estimation and affection. Do I still hold any place in her remembrance? Indeed, I ought to blush, that by my long silence I so ill deserve it.

“That you are going to my dear native country, and will not pass my Father without seeing him, was most welcome news to me. The Swabians are a good people; this I more and more discover, the more I grow acquainted with the other provinces of Germany. To my family you will be cordially welcome. Will you take a pack of compliments from me to them? Salute my Father in my name; to my Mother and my Sisters your daughter will take my kiss.”

“And with these hearty words,” as Doering says, “we shall conclude this paper.”

No. 3. Page 96.

FRIENDSHIP WITH GOETHE.

THE history of Schiller's first intercourse with Goethe has been recorded by the latter in a paper published a few years ago in the Morphologie, a periodical work, which we believe he still occasionally continues, or purposes to continue. The paper is entitled Happy Incident; and may be found in Part I. Volume 1 (pp. 90-96) of the work referred to. The introductory portion of it we have inserted in the text at page 91; the remainder, relating to certain scientific matters, and anticipating some facts of our narrative, we judged it better to reserve for the Appendix. After mentioning the publication of Don Carlos, and adding that "each continued to go on his way apart," he proceeds:—

"His Essay on Grace and Dignity was yet less of a kind to reconcile me. The Philosophy of Kant, which exalts the dignity of mind so highly, while appearing to restrict it, Schiller had joyfully embraced: it unfolded the extraordinary qualities which Nature had implanted in him; and in the lively feeling of freedom and self-direction, he showed himself unthankful to the Great Mother, who surely had not acted like a step-dame towards him. Instead of viewing her as self-subsisting, as producing with a living force, and according to appointed laws, alike the highest and the lowest of her works, he took her up under the aspect of some empirical native qualities of the human mind. Certain harsh passages I could even directly apply to myself: they exhibited my confession of faith in a false light; and I felt that if written without particular attention to me, they were still worse; for in that case, the vast chasm which lay between us gaped but so much the more distinctly.

"There was no union to be dreamed of. Even the mild persuasion of Dalberg, who valued Schiller as he ought, was fruitless: indeed the reasons I set forth against any project of a union were difficult to contradict. No one could deny that between two spiritual antipodes there was more intervening than a simple diameter of the sphere: antipodes of that sort act as a sort of poles, and so can never coalesce. But that some relation may exist between them will appear from what follows.

"Schiller went to live at Jena, where I still continued unacquainted with him. About this time Batsch had set in motion a Society for Nataral History, aided by some handsome collections, and an extensive apparatus. I used to attend their periodical meetings: one day I found Schiller there; we happened to go out together; some discourse arose between us. He appeared to take an interest in what had been exhibited; but observed, with great acuteness and good sense, and much to my satisfaction, that such a disconnected way of treating Nature was by no means grateful to the exoteric, who desired to penetrate her mysteries.

"I answered, that perhaps the initiated themselves were never rightly at their ease in it, and that there surely was another way of representing Nature, not separated and disunited, but active and alive, and expanding from the whole into the parts. On this point he requested explanations, but did not hide his doubts; he would not allow that such a mode, as I was recommending, had been already pointed out by experiment.

"We reached his house; the talk induced me to go in. I then expounded to him with as much vivacity as possible, the Metamorphosis of Plants,¹ drawing out on paper, with many characteristic strokes, a symbolic Plant for him, as I proceeded. He heard and saw all this with much interest and distinct comprehension; but when I had done, he shook his head and said: 'This is no experiment, this is an idea.' I stopped with some degree of irritation; for the point which separated us was most luminously marked by this expression. The opinions in Dignity and Grace again occurred to me; the old grudge was just awakening; but I smothered it, and merely said: 'I was happy to find that I had got ideas without knowing it, nay that I saw them before my eyes.'

"Schiller had much more prudence and dexterity of management than I: he was also thinking of his periodical the Horen, about this time, and of course rather wished to attract than repel me. Accordingly he answered me like an accomplished Kantite; and as my stiff-necked Realism gave occasion to many contradictions, much battling took place between us, and at last a truce, in which neither party would consent to yield the victory, but each held himself invincible. Positions like the following grieved me to the very soul: How can there ever be an experiment that shall correspond with an idea? The specific quality of an idea is, that no experiment can reach it or agree with it.

¹ A curious physiologico-botanical theory by Goethe, which appears to be entirely unknown in this country; though several eminent continental botanists have noticed it with commendation. It is explained at considerable length in this same Morphologie.

Yet if he held as an idea the same thing which I looked upon as an experiment, there must certainly, I thought, be some community between us, some ground whereon both of us might meet! The first step was now taken; Schiller's attractive power was great, he held all firmly to him that came within his reach: I expressed an interest in his purposes, and promised to give out in the Horen many notions that were lying in my head; his wife, whom I had loved and valued since her childhood, did her part to strengthen our reciprocal intelligence; all friends on both sides rejoiced in it; and thus by means of that mighty and interminable controversy between object and subject, we two concluded an alliance, which remained unbroken, and produced much benefit to ourselves and others."

The friendship of Schiller and Goethe forms so delightful a chapter in their history, that we long for more and more details respecting it. Sincerity, true estimation of each other's merit, true sympathy in each other's character and purposes appear to have formed the basis of it, and maintained it unimpaired to the end. Goethe, we are told, was minute and sedulous in his attention to Schiller, whom he venerated as a good man and sympathized with as an afflicted one: when in mixed companies together, he constantly endeavored to draw out the stores of his modest and retiring friend; or to guard his sick and sensitive mind from annoyances that might have irritated him; now softening, now exciting conversation, guiding it with the address of a gifted and polished man, or lashing out of it with the scorpion-whip of his satire such that would have vexed the more soft and simple spirit of the valetudinarian. These are things which it is good to think of: it is good to know that there are literary men, who have other principles besides vanity; who can divide the approbation of their fellow mortals, without quarrelling over the lots; who in their solicitude about their "fame" do not forget the common charities of nature, in exchange for which the "fame" of most authors were but a poor bargain.

DEATH OF GUSTAVUS ADOLPHUS.

As a specimen of Schiller's historical style, we have extracted a few scenes from his masterly description of the Battle of Lützen. The whole forms a picture, executed in the spirit of Salvator; and though this is but a fragment, the importance of the figure represented in it will perhaps counterbalance that deficiency.

"At last the dreaded morning dawned; but a thick fog, which lay brooding over all the field, delayed the attack till noon. Kneeling in front of his lines, the King offered up his devotions; the whole army, at the same moment, dropping on their right knees, uplifted a moving hymn, and the field-music accompanied their singing. The King then mounted his horse; dressed in a jerkin of buff, with a surtout (for a late wound hindered him from wearing armor), he rode through the ranks, rousing the courage of his troops to a cheerful confidence, which his own forecasting bosom contradicted. God with us was the battle-word of the Swedes; that of the Imperialists was Jesus Maria. About eleven o'clock, the fog began to break, and Wallenstein's lines became visible. At the same time, too, were seen the flames of Lützen, which the Duke had ordered to be set on fire, that he might not be outflanked on this side. At length the signal pealed; the horse dashed forward on the enemy; the infantry advanced against his trenches.

"Meanwhile the right wing, led on by the King in person, had fallen on the left wing of the Friedlanders. The first strong onset of the heavy Finland Cuirassiers scattered the light-mounted Poles and Croats, who were stationed here, and their tumultuous flight spread fear and disorder over the rest of the cavalry. At this moment notice reached the King that his infantry were losing ground, and likely to be driven back from the trenches they had stormed; and also that his left, exposed to a tremendous fire from the Windmills behind Lützen, could no longer keep their place. With quick decision, he committed to Von Horn the task of pursuing the already beaten left wing of the enemy; and himself hastened, at the head of Steinbock's regiment, to restore the confusion of his own. His gallant horse bore him over the trenches with the speed of lightning; but the squadrons that came after him could not pass so rapidly; and none but a few horsemen, among whom Franz Albert, Duke of Sachsen-Lauenburg, is mentioned, were alert enough to keep beside him. He galloped right to the place where his infantry was most oppressed; and while looking round to spy out some weak point, on which his attack might be directed, his short-sightedness led him too near the enemy's lines. An Imperial sergeant (gefrevter), observing that every one respectfully made room for the advancing horseman, ordered a musketeer to fire on him. 'Aim at him there,' cried he; 'that must be a man of consequence.' The soldier drew his trigger; and the King's left arm was shattered by the ball. At this instant, his cavalry came galloping up, and a confused cry of 'The King bleeds! The King is shot!' spread horror and dismay through their ranks. 'It is nothing: follow me!' exclaimed the King, collecting all his strength; but overcome with pain, and on the point of fainting, he desired the Duke of Lauenburg, in French, to take him without notice from the tumult. The Duke then turned with him to the right wing, making a wide circuit to conceal this accident from the desponding infantry; but as they rode along, the King received a second bullet through the back, which took from him the last remainder of his strength. 'I have got enough, brother,' said he with a dying voice: 'haste, save thyself.' With these words he sank from his horse; and here, struck by several other bullets, far from his attendants, he breathed out his life beneath the plundering hands of a troop of Croats. His horse flying on without its rider, and bathed in blood, soon announced to the Swedish cavalry the fall of their King; with wild yells they rush to the spot, to snatch that sacred spoil from the enemy. A deadly fight ensues around the corpse, and the mangled remains are buried under a hill of slain men.

"The dreadful tidings hasten in a few minutes over all the Swedish army: but instead of deadening the courage of these hardy troops, they rouse it to a fierce consuming fire. Life falls in value, since the holiest of all lives is gone; and death has now no terror for the lowly, since it has not spared the anointed head. With the grim fury of lions, the Upland, Småland, Finnish, East and West Gothland regiments dash a second time upon the left wing of the enemy, which, already making but a feeble opposition to Von Horn, is now utterly driven from the field.

"But how dear a victory, how sad a triumph! Now first when the rage of battle has grown cold, do they feel the whole greatness of their loss, and the shout of the conqueror dies in a mute and gloomy despair. He who led them on to battle has not returned with them. Apart he lies, in his victorious field, confounded with the common heaps of humble dead. After long fruitless searching, they found the royal corpse, not far from the great stone, which had already stood for centuries between Lützen and the Merseburg Canal, but which, ever since this memorable incident, has borne the name of Schwedenstein, the Stone of the Swede. Defaced with wounds and blood, so as scarcely to be recognized, trodden under the hoofs of horses, stripped of his ornaments, even of his clothes, he is drawn from beneath a heap of dead bodies, brought to Weissenfels, and there delivered to the lamentations of his troops and the last embraces of his Queen. Vengeance had first required its tribute, and blood must flow as an offering to the Monarch ; now Love assumes its rights, and mild tears are shed for the Man. Individual grief is lost in the universal sorrow. Astounded by this overwhelming stroke, the generals in blank despondency stand round his bier, and none yet ventures to conceive the full extent of his loss."

The descriptive powers of the Historian, though the most popular, are among the lowest of his endowments. That Schiller was not wanting in the nobler requisites of his art, might be proved from his reflections on this very incident, "striking like a hand from the clouds into the calculated horologe of men's affairs, and directing the considerate mind to a higher plan of things." But the limits of our Work are already reached. Of Schiller's histories and dramas we can give no farther specimens : of his lyrical, didactic, moral poems we must take our leave without giving any. Perhaps the time may come, when all his writings, transplanted to our own soil, may be offered in their entire dimensions to the thinkers of these Islands ; a conquest by which our literature, rich as it is, might be enriched still farther.

GENERAL INDEX.

GENERAL INDEX.

For convenience of reference, the order of the Volumes is here set down: --

- I. SARTOR RESARTUS AND HEROES AND HERO-WORSHIP.
- II. LIFE OF STERLING, AND LATTER-DAY PAMPHLETS.
- III., IV. FRENCH REVOLUTION.
- V.-XI. FREDERICK THE GREAT.
- XII. PAST AND PRESENT, AND MISCELLANEOUS PAPERS.
- XIII.-XVI. MISCELLANIES.
- XVII.-XIX. CROMWELL'S LETTERS AND SPEECHES.
- XX. LIFE OF SCHILLER.

- AASTA, St. Olaf's mother, xix. 440, 444.
- Abbaye, massacres at, iv. 180; Jourgniac, Sicard and Maton's account of doings there, 184-191. See Prison.
- Abbot, Colonel, in Ireland, xvii. 496; xviii. 48.
- Abel, D. Otto, cited, vi. 430 n.
- Abelard, xvi. 392.
- Abercromby, at Ticonderoga, x. 175.
- Aberdeen, Provost, at Dunbar Fight, xviii. 132. See Jaffray.
- Able Man, the born soldier of Truth and Order, ii. 258; appointed by "divine right" to govern, 379; methods of summoning aloft, 428. See Wisest Man.
- Académie des Sciences of Berlin, v. 303; vi. 41.
- Acceptation, grande, by Louis XVI., iv. 47-54.
- Achard, M., vii. 26.
- Achilles, x. 46.
- Acres, Siege of, v. 90, 92.
- Action the true end of Man, i. 119, 122.
- Actual, the, the true Ideal, i. 148, 150.
- Adalbert's, St., attempt to convert Prousen to Christianity, v. 68, 93; vii. 290.
- Adam, Father. See St. Hüruge, Marquis.
- Adam, Johana, Burgermeister, complains of French rapacity, x. 34.
- Adam of Bremen, xix. 473 n., 480.
- Adamitium, i. 44.
- Adams, John Quincy, cited on Silesia, viii. 85.
- Adams of Boston, "American Cato," xi. 351.
- Adelung, cited, vii. 264 n., viii. 179 n., 333 n.; x. 381 n.
- Adieu, xiii. 347.
- Adlerfeld, cited, v. 355 n.
- Administrative Reform, ii. 345, 371. See Downing Street.
- Adolf Friedrich, Prince, viii. 351, 352; marries Princess Ulrique, 353; King of Sweden, xii. 300; his death, 333.
- Adolf of Nassau, Kaiser, v. 157.
- Adolphus, Gustavus, death of, xx. 307.
- Affectation, difference between, and genuine originality, xiii. 14, 19; the bane of Literature, 268.
- Afflictions, merciful, i. 146.
- Agamemnon's Sceptre, v. 3.
- Age, admonitions of our, ii. 183. See Epoch.
- Agincourt, Shakspeare's battle of, i. 336.
- Agoust, Captain d', seizes two Parlemeuteers, iii. 100.
- Aguessan, Chancellor d', ix. 80 n.
- Ahlden, Castle of, v. 29, 428, 437; vi. 52; the "Ahlden Heritage," 116, 139.
- Ahlden, die Herzogin von, v. 29 n.
- Ahrenberg, Duke d', viii. 376, 317; at Dettingen, 386, 383, 394, 437; gone all to hebetude, 484; at Sohr, 497; at Eger, ix. 380, 391; Leuthen, x. 69; Hochkirch, 153, 162; beaten by Prince Henri at Pretsch, 324.

- Aiguillon, Duke d', at Quiberon, iii. 4; account of, 5; in favor, 5; at death of Louis XV., 38.
- Aintrignes, Count d', notice of, iii. 115.
- Aix-la-Chapelle, Charlemagne at, viii. 183; Treaty of, ix. 67, 68, 350.
- Akasia, Doctor, Voltaire's, ix. 214; publicly burnt, 218.
- Alabaster, Dr., preaches Popery, xvii. 64.
- Alba, v. 208.
- Alberoni, v. 364.
- Albert I., Kaiser, harsh and ugly, v. 116; assassinated by his nephew, 119.
- Albert II., Kaiser, v. 158, 180; xi. 394.
- Albert Achilles, Kurfürst, xvi. 358; v. 177; how he managed the Bishop of Bamberg, 179.
- Albert Alcibiades, of Baireuth, xvi. 376; v. 190; a kind of "Failure of a Fritz," 209, 214, 228.
- Albert Archbishop of Mainz, v. 183; memorable Sale of Indulgences, 183; at the Diet of Augsburg, 197.
- Albert Friedrich, Second Duke of Prussia, v. 239; his marriage, 241; overclouding of mind, 243; death, 264.
- Albert Henry, Prince of Brunswick, xi. 343.
- Albert Hochmeister, v. 200; difficulties about homage to Poland, 201; getting deep into Protestantism, 205; Hereditary Duke of Prussia, 206; his Second Wife, 230; death, 239.
- Albert the Bear, the great Markgraf of Brandenburg, v. 74; origin of name, 79; descendants, 126.
- Albert, Prince, of Brunswick, viii. 472; killed at Sohr, 496.
- Albert, Prince, of Saxony, Saxon Line of, xvi. 356 (see Ernestine Line); his Horoscope and Pedigree, 384; xi. 164.
- Albert the Courageous, xvi. 370.
- Albertine Line of Saxon Princes, xvi. 370.
- Alembert, D', ix. 263; letters from Voltaire to, x. 395, 396; meets with the King at Gektern, xi. 198; declines the post of Perpetual President, 204; letter to Madame du Deffand, 205; recommends Helvetius to Friedrich, 206; leaves Potsdam, 219; becomes Friedrich's chief correspondent, xii. 347, 349; writes to him of his interview with Kaiser Joseph, 387; his death, 490; mentioned also, 332; xi. 399 n.
- Alexander, x. 63, 70.
- Alexius, Garowitz, vi. 671.
- Alfieri and Schiller contrasted, xx. 79.
- Algarotti, Signor, vii. 117; one of the first dessein-copris of his age, 196; with Friedrich at Straßburg, 198; mission to King of Sardinia, 339; at Breslau, viii. 44; position with Friedrich, ix. 169, 239; mentioned also, vii. 161, 181, 225, 321, 375.
- Ali, young, Mahomet's kinsman and convert, i. 383.
- Alison, Dr., xii. 5, 145.
- Allegory, the sportful shadow of earnest Faith, i. 239, 263.
- Allen, Trooper, examined, xvii. 260; Ludlow's mistake about, xviii. 453.
- Allen, Adjutant-General, his account of Prayer-Meeting at Windsor, xvii. 305-309; disturbances by, xviii. 453, 456.
- Allertoun House, Cromwell at, xviii. 237, 228.
- Almacks, high Art at, xiii. 294; gunflowers of, to be made living roses of Eden, xv. 324.
- Almon, cited, ix. 440.
- Alphonso, King of Castile and sham Kaiser, v. 105, 108.
- Aleace, viii. 247.
- Altar of Fatherland in Champ-de-Mars, iii. 323; petition and scene at, iv. 44; christening at, 103.
- Altenburg, vi. 232. See Prinzenraub.
- Althan, Count d', xii. 226.
- Altstadt, Treaty of, vii. 263, 267.
- Alured, Thos., M.P., letter by, xvii. 59.
- Alured, Colonel Matthew, captures Scots Committee, xviii. 256; Anabaptist, cashiered, 300, 302; Cromwell's letter to, 302.
- Alured, Colonel John, King's Judge, xviii. 392.
- Alyth, Scots Committee extinguished at, xviii. 268.
- Amber, v. 64.
- Ambition, i. 80; vii. 66; xv. 372, 420, 451, 463; foolish charge of, i. 441; laudable ambition, 443. See Love of Power.
- Ambitious, question for the, vii. 445.
- Amelia, Dowager Empress, viii. 84.
- Amelia, Princess of England, v. 426; vii. 90; xi. 192; ix. 150.
- Amelia, Princess of Prussia, v. 426; in pecuniary trouble, viii. 227; Abbess of Quedlinburg, 311; at Berlin Carrousel, ix. 107; income small, 202; letter from Friedrich, 421; visits Breslau, x. 74; gift from Friedrich, xi. 373; mentioned also, xii. 337, 340, 456, 477, 495.
- Amelot, M., viii. 373, 390, 323.
- America, v. 336; Salzburg Emigrants to, vi. 415; discovery of, in Hakon Jarl's reign, xix. 418. See United States.
- American Colonies in great need of a commander, ix. 440, 441; prediction (spurious) of their revolt, x. 305, 307; America to be English and not French, 340; xi. 61; a considerable Fact in the - History of the World, 181; unconscious Declaration of Anarchy, ending at last in hideous suicide, 181; America refuses to be taxed by a British Parliament, 350; Boston Tea-Catastrophe, 351, 352.

- American Cousins, our, no Model Commonwealth, ii. 378; their noblest Battle yet to fight, 379.
- American War, the late, xvi. 424.
- Amherst, General, worth of, discerned by Pitt, x. 91; captures Louisbourg, 113; Montreal, 343.
- Amiability, vii. 287.
- Amiral, assassin, iv. 408; guillotined, 410.
- Ammon, Von, ix. 147.
- Amöneburg, cannonade at, xi. 159, 160.
- Ampa, Mr. Thomas, plotting at his house, xviii. 333.
- Amusements, unvarnished, xvi. 345.
- Anabaptists favored by Cromwell, xvii. 309.
- Anarchies, Millennium of, xi. 181; not permitted in this World, 237.
- Anarchy, by nature, dragon's-teeth, iv. 414; no victory possible to, xvi. 461; or open "Kinglessness," ii. 206; Constituted Anarchy, 287, 337; xii. 319; Sorcerer's Sabbath of, 378.
- André, St., x. 321.
- Andrié, Excellencey, ix. 245.
- Andrieux, xii. 445 n.
- Anecdotes of Friedrich, x. 44, 46; xi. 183.
- Anger, xii. 91.
- Anglas, Boissy d', President, First of Frairial, iv. 446.
- Angoulême, Duchess d', parts from her father, iv. 253, 259.
- Angremont, Colleenot d', guillotined, iv. 163.
- Anhalt, Adjutant von, xi. 154, 195; xii. 287, 288, 363 n., 416, 435.
- Anhalt, Graf von, ix. 445; the Anhalt forced contributions to Friedrich's war-expenses, x. 188.
- Anhalt-Zerbst, v. 75, 127; vi. 206; viii. 303.
- Animal attachments, xv. 448; a wise little Blenheim cocker, 449; likeness to man, 449.
- Ankarström. See Sweden.
- Anne of Cleves, v. 241.
- Anne of Courland, afterwards Czarina, vi. 53, 85 n., 208, 259, 402, 494; vii. 282; death of, 76, 262.
- Anne, Princess, of Russia, formerly of Mecklenburg, vii. 262, 265, 287.
- Ansehn, travelling to Rome, xii. 238.
- Anson, Commodore, vii. 267, 490; his memorable Voyage, 487.
- Anspach, v. 103, 184; vi. 220. See Culmbach, Frederika Louisa.
- Anspach, Margraf of, ix. 477.
- Anspach, Margraf of (Lady Craven's), with Friedrich at Neisse, xii. 269, 270.
- Anspach, Margravine of. See Frederika Louisa.
- Antichrist, xviii. 13; designated by Cromwell, 404, 406; Magistracy considered Antichristian, 405; Spain, xix. 24, 56.
- Antoinette, Marie, splendor of, iii. 22; applauded, 41; compromised by Diamond Necklace, 87; griefs of, 92, 144; her presentiments, 106; weeps, unpopular, 216; at dinner of Guards, 238; courage of, 266; Fifth October, at Versailles, 269; shows herself to mob, 273; and Louis at Tuilleries, 283; and the Lorrainer, 337; and Mirabeau, 397, 411; previous to flight, iv. 10; flight from Tuilleries, 13; captured, 33; and Barnave, 39; in dilemma, 74; Coblenz intrigues, 76; and Lamotte's Mémoires, 89; during Twentieth June, 119; during Tenth August, 149, 144; behavior as captive, 182; and Princesses de Lamballe, 183; in Temple Prison, 232; parting scene with King, 258; to the Conciergerie, 289; trial of, 340; on quitting Vienna, 342; guillotined, 342.
- Antoinette Amelia, of Brunswick, vi. 373.
- Anton Ulrich, Czar Iwan's Father, xii. 76, 362; exile, 365, 368.
- Anton Ulrich, of Brunswick, v. 444; vi. 269, 372; his Great-grandson, 373; vii. 97, 120.
- Antoninus, xvi. 423.
- Antwerp, v. 59, 61.
- Apes, Dead-Sea, v. 169; xii. 149, 211, 212.
- Apologue, the age of, xiv. 276.
- Applauders, hired, iv. 78.
- Applewomen knitting at their stalls, v. 331, 340.
- Apprentices, riots of, xvii. 114, 118, 271, 304.
- Apprenticeships, i. 93.
- Approval, rightly or wrongly given, xii. 223, 341.
- Apraxin, Feldmarschall, in Prussen, ix. 474, 520, 534; retires slowly home, 521; indignantly dismissed by the Czarina, x. 77.
- Aprill, Dr., tries to serve Ctitato on Plottho, ix. 544, 549.
- Aprons, use and significance of, i. 23.
- Arab Poets, xii. 85.
- Arabia and the Arabs, i. 278.
- Archenholts, on the "Oblique Order," x. 52, 57; on Lord George Sackville, 240; Prince Henri's march of fifty

- hours, 328; Prussian recruiting-system, 406; at battle of Liegnitz, 479; wounded at Torgau, 520, 523; at Leipzig, noticing vividly to right and left, xi. 26; Prussian and French exactions, 96, 97; the Camp of Bunzelwitz, 46; siege of Colberg, 84; the Seven-Years War, 175; cited, ix. 281 n.; mentioned also, x. 482, 487, 488.
- Ardea, Lord of, assists Ormond, xvi. 462; at Wexford, 478; at Ross, 481.
- Argens, Marquis d', viii. 22, 38, 64, 126, 128, 136, 293; ix. 188, 222; the King's friend for nearly thirty years, 168; visits Friedrich at Breslau, x. 75; letters from Friedrich, 71, 184, 379, 380, 386, 387, 374; preface to Œuvres de Poësie, 375; the confidant of Friedrich's miseries, 414; letters from Friedrich to, 480, 488, 500; xi. 98, 113, 115; visits him at Leipzig, 9, 167; surprised to see him amusing himself with his dogs, 9, 10; his death, 293.
- Argenson, Marquis d', letter from Voltaire to, viii. 216; their personal friendship, 475; ix. 53.
- Argental, D', ix. 109, 113, 147, 164, 181, 523; letters from Voltaire about Friedrich, x. 391, 392, 394.
- Argonne Forest, occupied by Dumouriez, iv. 175; Brunswick at, 204.
- Argyle, Marquis, dines with Cromwell, xvii. 375; Cromwell's letter to, 356; his party in 1650, xviii. 270.
- Aristocracies, mutinous, tamed down, v. 159, 240, 244. See Pride of Place.
- Aristocracy, our, a word to, xvi. 145; ominous condition of our, 65, 81, 100; an Aristocracy a corporation of the Best and Bravest, 75; old Feudal Aristocracies, 77, 80; a glimpse of self-vision for them, 343; by nature infinitely important to us, 440; vocal and industrial, 441, 454, 462; our titled, still looked up to, 434; their remaining possibilities, 434, 439, 454; a wide field for younger sons, 434-436; the politest kind of nobleman going, 487; born brother to the industrial noble, 448; and to the teaching, 462; vulgar noble lords, intent on their own game, 464; of Talent, xii. 38; dreadfully difficult to attain, 31, 34, 232; our Phantasm-Aristocracy, 137, 168, 171, 189, 196, 210, 271, 383; duties of an Aristocracy, 166, 171, 186; Working Aristocracy, 169, 173, 260, 285; no true Aristocracy but must possess the Land, 170, 236; Nature's Aristocracies, 206; a Virtual Aristocracy everywhere and everywhen, 233; the Feudal Aristocracy no imaginary one, 236, 262; a true, or Government by the Best, ii. 370; "Aristocracy" of Popular Suffrage, 344, 350; veritable Hierarchy of Heaven, 342. See Peerage, Hierarchy.
- Aristocrats, officers in French army, iii. 249; number of, in Paris, iv. 163; seized, 168; condition in 1794, 368.
- Arklow, skirmish at, xviii. 492.
- Arkwright, Richard, historical importance of, xvi. 96.
- Arles, state of, iv. 69.
- Arms, smiths making, iii. 174, 177; search for, 175; at Charleville, 177; at Hôtel des Invalides, 180, 182; manufacture of, 408; iv. 4; in 1794, 378; scarcity of, in 1792, 165; Danton's search for, 168.
- Armstrong, Sir Thomas, notice of, xvii. 492.
- Army, French, after Bastille, iii. 347-353; officered by aristocrats, 349; to be disbanded, 353; demands arrears, 354, 361; general mutiny of, 355; outbreak of, 355, 361, 362, 374; Nanci military executions, 373; bad state of, iv. 84, 103, 172, 206 (see Prussia, Austrian); in want, 228; recruited, 373, 374; Revolutionary, 292, 326, 327, 358; fourteen armies on foot, 323, 426.
- Army, King's and Parliament's, xvii. 119; of Parliament in 1643, 144, 169; New Model, 189, 210; motions of, in 1645, 223; too near London, 255; against Parliament, 256; state of in 1647, 259; at Saffron Walden, 260, and App. xix. 323, 331; Agitators in, xvii. 261, 262; will not disband, 262; Rendezvous at Newmarket, 263; at Royston, 269; comes to St. Albans, 270; Manifesto and claims of, 271; Declaration against, expunged, 270; advances to London, 271; enters London, 273; Prayer-Meeting at Windsor Castle, 306; against Treaty with Charles I., 332, 337; Remonstrance, 337; at Windsor, 337; in London, St. James's, 336; equipments of, in 1651, xviii. 225; value of a good, v. 324; vi. 5.
- Arnald. See Levellers.
- Arnaut, M. Baculard d', ix. 111, 122, 123, 145, 148.
- Arneson, Finn, xix. 467.
- Arneson, Kalf, xix. 467.
- Arnim, Minister of Justice, ix. 65.
- Arnim's, Major, gallant defence at Frankfurt, x. 244, 246.
- Arnold, Miller, x. 224; his lawsuit, xi. 424, 449, 514.
- Arouet, M., Senior, vii. 41. See Voltaire.
- Arran, Earl of, xii. 431.
- Arras, gullotine at, iv. 368. See Lebon.

- Array, Commission of, xvii. 120 (see St. Albans); in Eastern Association, 131.
- Arrestment of the knaves and dastards, xii. 36, 236.
- Arrests in August, 1792, iv. 169.
- Arsenal, attempt to burn, iii. 183.
- Art, all true Works of, symbolic, i. 169; biographic interest in, xv. 238; necessity for veracity in, xvi. 351, 442, 443; a superabundance of, ii. 162; a windy gospel, 168.
- Arth, sermon by, xii. 423.
- Arthur Coningsby, Sterling's first Novel, ii. 61, 69, 90.
- Artificial, the, as contrasted with the natural, xiv. 356.
- Artist, German Ideal of the true, xiii. 55, 223; in History, xiv. 66; Opera Artists, xvi. 342.
- Artists in 1651, xviii. 207-209.
- Artois, M. d', ways of, iii. 33; unpopularity of, 88; memorial by, 115; died, 196; at Coblenz, iv. 81; will not return, 89.
- Arts, the Fine, a "Worship of the Beautiful," xii. 383; intolerable hypocrisy of, 386; taking into fiction, 391.
- Arundel, John, Cromwell's letter in behalf of, xix. 352.
- Arundel, Earl of, cited, v. 275 n.
- Ascanier Markgraves, v. 110, 126; resuscitated, 130, 138.
- Ascham, Anthony, slain in Spain, xix. 56, 69.
- Aschersleben, v. 74.
- Ashburnham, Mr., notice of, xviii. 396.
- Ashby-de-la-Zouch, fortified, xvii. 142.
- Ashdon, Knut's last victory at, xix. 443.
- Ashe, John, M.P., notice of, xvii. 383, 385; Cromwell's letter to, 384.
- Ashton, Colonel, at Preston, xvii. 337.
- Ashton, Sir Arthur, Governor of Tredah, xvii. 458; killed, 461.
- Asa, the, and the Moon, xiv. 61.
- Assas, D', at Kloster Kampen, x. 535.
- Asseburg finds a wife for Czarowitch Paul, xii. 348, 349.
- Assemblies, French, Primary and Secondary, iii. 119.
- Assembly, National, Third Estate becomes, iii. 155 (see Estate Third); to be extruded, 156; stands grouped in the rain, 157; occupies Tennis-Court, 157; scene there, 158; joined by clergy, &c., 159, 162; doings on King's speech, 159, 162; ratified by King, 162; cannon pointed at, 164; regrets Necker, 179; after Bastille, 183.
- Assembly, Constituent, National, becomes, iii. 207; pedantic Irregular Verbe, 208; what it can do, 209; Night of Pentecost, 212 (and iv. 80); Left and Right side, 212 (and iii. 290, 291, see Side); dull, 215; raises money, 233; on the Veto, 233; Fifth October, women, 251, 259, 262; in Paris Riding-Hall, 284; on deficit, assignats, 287; on clergy, 288; and riot, 296; prepares for Louis's visit, 312; on Federation, 326; Anacharis Clootz, 326, 328; eldest of men, 331; on Franklin's death, 342; on state of army, 357, 361; thanks Bouillé, 371; on Nanci affair, 373; on Emigrants, 404; on death of Mirabeau, 416; on escape of King, iv. 18; after capture of King, 40, 43; completes Constitution, 47; dissolves itself, what it has done, 52.
- Assembly, Legislative, First French Parliament, doings of, iv. 55-70; book of law, quarrel with King, 60; Baiser de Lamourette, 61; High Court, 83; decrees vetoed, 88; scenes in, 89; reprimands King's ministers, 91; smoked out, 92; declares war, 100, 104; Twentieth June, 109; declares France in danger, 119, 124; reinstates Pétion, 123; brayed glass, 129; nonplus, Lafayette, 133, 134; King and Swiss, August Tenth, 143-149; becoming defunct, 154, 159; September massacres, 193; dissolved, 211. See Convention, National.
- Assembly, General, answer Cromwell, xviii. 110; his letter to, 111; not allowed to sit, 260. See Divines.
- Assiento, Treaty of, vii. 475.
- Assignats, origin of, iii. 287; false Royalist, iv. 82; forgers of, 181; coach-fare in, 441.
- Associated Counties, origin of, xvii. 124, 134; raise an Army, 159.
- Astley, Sir Bernard, taken, xvii. 218.
- Astley, Sir Jacob, last of Royalist generals, xvii. 224.
- Astonishment, different quantities of, ii. 372.
- Astrua, Mamsell, an Italian singer, ix. 197.
- Astruc, Dr., ix. 170.
- Atheism, how, melts into nothingness, xiv. 28; Richter's Dream of, 131; an impossibility, xv. 20; proselyting Atheist, 135, 140; practical, xii. 144, 149; and Dupont, iv. 243.
- Athenæum, copyright of the, changes hands, ii. 43, 45, 61.
- Attila, xi. 210. See Huns.
- Attorneys, a fat affair for the, v. 251, 254, 253, 254.
- Attorney species, extirpation of the, ix. 78.
- Aubriot, Sieur, after King's capture, iv. 35.

- Anbry, Colonel, at Jales, iv. 86.
 Anch. M. Martin d', in Versailles Tennis-Court, iii. 158.
 Angsburg, Diet of, v. 196; vi. 235, 246.
 August Ferdinand, v. 442; vii. 139.
 August Tenth, 1793, iv. 134-153.
 August Theodor, Kur-Pfalz, viii. 484.
 August the Strong, of the three hundred and fifty-four bastards, xvi. 357; made King of Poland, v. 50, 246; vi. 202, 299, 406; objects to the Kaiser's Pragmatic Sanction, 450; quarrel with Friedrich Wilhelm, 64; invites him and Friedrich to Dresden, 69, 70; magnificent hospitalities and unspeakable pollutions, 71; his return vielt, 77; rumor of a projected marriage with Wilhelmina, 84; Camp of Radewitz, 208; King of Playhouse managers, 213; attained the maximum in several things, 217; meditates partition of Poland, 442; xi. 240; last interview with Grumkow, vi. 443; death and absolution, 457; his hunting-lodge, ix. 360.
 August III. of Poland, vi. 461, 465; vii. 13, 16; suggested for Kaiser, viii. 408; his antipathy to Friedrich, 409, 471; how he was benetted by Brühl and Guarini, 414; taken comfortably to Prag to be out of danger, ix. 4; glad to make peace, 16, 17; Hanbury's account of, 86; withdraws to Pirna, and tries negotiation with Friedrich, 321, 322; Head-quarters at Struppen, 322, 335; will not agree to Friedrich's terms, 335; snug in the Königstein, 360; goes to Warsaw, never to come back, 365; gets no compensation for his Saxon losses, xi. 228; nothing but confusions and contradictions in Poland, 228; difficulties with Czarina Catherine, and death, 228. See Kur-Sachsen.
 August Wilhelm, v. 440; with Friedrich at Strasburg, vii. 198; betrothed, 262; married, viii. 107; at his sister's wedding, 308; heir-apparent of Prussia, ix. 202; opposition views, 309, 310; letter to Valori, 350; lamentations and accusations, 463, 467; put in command at Jung-Bunzlau, 470, 474; finds the problem too hard for him, 481; council of war, 485; a disastrous march, 486; cannot save Zittau, 487; reaches Bautzen, happily unchased, 489; stern reception by the King, 492-494; his death, 494; x. 101; antipathy to Winterfeld, ix. 501; mentioned also, vii. 196, 226, 266, 279, 404; viii. 237.
 Augustin, Mosstrooper, xviii. 177, 203, 206.
 Aulaire, Marquis de St., ix. 50.
 Austrians, v. 9.
 Australia, v. 326.
 Austria, its quarrel with France, iv. 80. See Brunswick, Duke.
 Austria, v. 59, 61; Kaisers of, still riding on the shadow of a saddle, 117; the "Austrian lip," 181, 217; rejection of Protestantism, 217; an Austrian swindle, 296; vi. 436.
 Austrian Army invades France, iv. 167; unsuccessful there, 212; defeated at Jemappes, 235; Dumouriez escapes to, 295; repulsed, Watigny, 382.
 Austrian Committee, at Tuileries, iv. 77.
 Austrian-Succession War, vii. 434; viii. 185; conservatism, vii. 438; viii. 30; ponderous pedantry and helplessness, 31, 40; dumb stubborn pride, 178; extraordinary claim for damages, 270, 272; no longer the leading nation of Teutschland, ix. 30; share in projected partitioning of Prussia, ix. 378; fixed rage and hatred, 384; does not claim Parma and Piacenza, x. 401; gets into sore difficulties as to cash, xi. 87; anxious to get rid of its pledge to the Reich, truce with Friedrich, 196; peace and general As-you-were, 176; takes forcible possession of Zips, 298, 299; share in the partition of Poland, 307, 308; intrigues and bargains for succession of Bavaria, 391.
 Anteroche, Marquis d', at Fontenoy, vin. 438, 439.
 Autograph (fac-simile) of Friedrich's Letter of "Secret Instruction, &c.," ix. 374; Signature, xi. 390.
 Avignon, Union of, iv. 51; described, 63; state of, 64; riot in church at, 66; occupied by Jourdan, 67; massacre at, 68.
 Axtel, Colonel, regicide, xviii. 455.
 Aylesbury, Rupert at, xvii. 138.
 Ayr Citadel built by Cromwell, xviii. 280.
 Ayscough, Sir George, notice of, xvii. 446, 447; xviii. 320; his house like a ship at sea, xix. 61; cited, vi. 106 n.
 BAAS, M. DE, intriguer, xix. 369.
 Babœuf insurrection, iv. 459.
 Bachaumont and La Chapelle, Voyage de, xii. 211 n.: cited, x. 390 n.
 Bachmann for three days Russian Commandant of Berlin, x. 496.
 Backhoff, Lieutenant-Colonel von, xi. 532.
 Bacon, Roger, xiv. 256.
 Bacon, Nathaniel, author of Burton's Diary, xix. 121 n.
 Bacon, Lord, v. 262.
 Baden Durlach, Prince of, at Hochkirch, x. 153, 162.
 Badness by its nature negative, xiv. 414. See Evil.

- Baffometus, Werner's parable of, xiii. 96.
- Bagieu, Dr., ix. 290.
- Baiern, Kur, sends Embassy to Friedrich, ix. 426; in subsidy of France, x. 28, 384.
- Baillies, Dr., xii. 267.
- Baillie, involuntary epigram of, iv. 94.
- Baillet, cited, v. 66 n.
- Bailli de Froulay, x. 384, 389.
- Baillie the Covenanter, xvi. 168-204; Scotch Encampment on the Hill of Dunse, 180; domesticities of Kilwinning, 184; Impeachment and trial of Strafford, 190; on Scots Demands, xvii. 106; Apprentices in Palace-yard, 114; flies from Glasgow, xviii. 173; is at Perth, 183; sees Cromwell in Glasgow, 226.
- Baillie, General, at Preston fight, xvii. 325; perplexed, 324; surrenders, 325, 339.
- Bailly, Astronomer, account of, iii. 140; President of National Assembly, 155; Mayor of Paris, 195; receives Louis in Paris, 197; and Paris Parlement, 228; on Petition for Deposition, iv. 45; decline of, 93; in prison, 340; at Queen's trial, 341; guillotined cruelly, 356.
- Baireuth, v. 103, 184; genealogy, 309 a; vi. 409, 410. See Culmbach, Albert Alcibiades, Friedrich of.
- Baireuth, Margraf of, viii. 121, 122, 299; ix. 477; x. 202. Margravine of, see Wilhelmina.
- Baker, hanged, iii. 295; bakara, French in tail at, 224, 226; iv. 231, 268, 441.
- Balaam and his Ass, xvi. 146.
- Balaclava, vi. 415.
- Balance of Power, v. 460, 461, 464; viii. 284.
- Balbi, Engineer, ix. 268, 308; xii. 271; at siege of Olmütz, ix. 98, 100, 102; Schweidnitz, xi. 137.
- Balder, the white Sun-god, i. 261, 267; Allegory of, xvii. 12.
- Balfour, James, xii. 424.
- Ballenstädt, v. 74, 80.
- Ballet-girls, xvi. 342.
- Balloons invented, iii. 51; used as spies, iv. 387.
- Ballot-box delusion, xii. 309.
- Balmung, the wonderful Sword, xiv. 210.
- Balnaves of Hallhill, xii. 426.
- Baltimore, Lord, and Maryland, xviii. 451; vii. 119.
- Bamberg, v. 73; vi. 409; Bishop of, ix. 475; vii. 197; Croats driven out of, x. 202.
- Bamfield, Col., spy, xvii. 260; xix. 109.
- Bampton-in-the-Bush, App. xix. 317.
- Bankruptcy of Imposture, ii. 271, 282; xii. 285.
- Banks, Mr., on Cromwell, xvii. 18.
- Bannockburn, Cromwell at, xviii. 226.
- Baphometric Fire-baptism, i. 129.
- Bar, Confederation of, xi. 264, 268.
- Bar, Graf von, vi. 116.
- Barbadoes, delinquents sent to, xviii. 487.
- Barbarossa, Kaiser, v. 73, 76, 80, 84; the greatest of all the Kaisers, 82; German tradition about him, 84; vi. 401; changed times, v. 137; vi. 259, 404; vii. 178, 438.
- Barbarous nations, records of, xvii. 7.
- Barbaroux and Marat, iii. 294; Marseilles Deputy, iv. 69; and the Rolands, 70; on Map of France, 107; demand of, to Marseilles, 108; meets Marseillaise, 120; in National Convention, 202; against Robespierre, 227; cannot be heard, 238; the Girondins declining, 279; will not demit, 208; arrested, 210; and Charlotte Corday, 213; retreats to Bordeaux, 223, 226; farewell of, 245; shoots himself, 246.
- Barber, the, at Lille, iv. 213.
- Barberina, an Opera-dancer, viii. 204; engagement at Berlin, 220; hospitality to Collini, ix. 104, 106.
- Barbier, cited, v. 167 n., 426 n.; vii. 154 n.; viii. 333 n.; on the French account of their grand scheme for invasion, x. 272.
- Barbone, Mr. Praesegod, account of, xviii. 229.
- Barclay of Ury, Scotch Quaker, xviii. 201.
- Bardy, Abbé, massacred, iv. 186.
- Barebones's Parliament, xviii. 299, 326.
- Bärenklau, General von, viii. 104, 122; at Stockstadt, 122; swept from Bavaria, 262; returns with Bathyan, 417.
- Barentin, Keeper of Seals, iii. 154.
- Barkstead, Colonel, a Major-General, xix. 19 n., 76 n.
- Barlow, Mrs., and Charles II., xvii. 478.
- Barnard, Robert, Justice of Peace, xvii. 67, 125; his descendants, 126; Cromwell's letters to, 123, 129.
- Barnardiston, Sir Nathaniel, xvi. 299.
- Barnave, at Grenoble, iii. 103; member of Assembly, 139; one of a trio, 214; too reckless, 224; Jacobin, 208; duel with Cazalès, 290; escorts the King from Varennes, iv. 39; conciliates Queen, 40; becomes Constitutional, 41; retires to Grenoble, 98; treason, in prison, 241; guillotined, 267.
- Barnet, Colonel Wogan at, xvii. 203.
- Barnum, Yankee, methods, xvi. 350.
- Baronay, Major-General, at Rothschoon, vii. 490.

- Barras, Paul-François, in National Convention, iv. 203; commands in Thermidor, 422; appoints Napoleon in Vendémiaire, 456.
- Barrère, Editor, iii. 228; at King's trial, iv. 244; peace-maker, 278, 306; levy in mass, 336; Anacreon of Guillotine, 385; gives dinner-party, plot, 416; banished, 441.
- Bartenstein, Austrian Minister, vii. 261; viii. 32; ix. 123.
- Bartholomew massacre, iv. 196; night of, v. 218.
- Barton, Colonel, in Scotland, xviii. 241.
- Basel, v. 107.
- Basing House described, xvii. 225; taken, 225-230.
- Bastiani, promoted by Friedrich, xi. 455, 482.
- Bastille, Linguet's Book on, iii. 55; meaning of, 128; shots fired at, 180; summoned by insurgents, 184; besieged, 185; capitulates, 189; treatment of, captured, 190; Quérét-Demery, 192; demolished, key sent to Washington, 202; Heroes, 203; Electors, displaced, 226.
- Bastwick, Dr. John, in pillory, xvii. 93; his Widow provided for, 318.
- Bates, Dr., sent to Cromwell in Scotland, xviii. 230.
- Bathyan summoned to relief of Prag, viii. 250; at Beraun, 251; troubles Friedrich's march through Bohemia, 258, 259, 266; in Bavaria, 295, 402, 416; supersedes D'Ahrenberg, 427, 474.
- Battle, our life, i. 66; with Folly and Sin, 95, 98; life a continual, xiv. 880; all misunderstanding a battle, xvi. 41; the, appointed for us all, ii. 8; Sterling's gallant enthusiasm, 27, 38; pain and danger shall not be shirked, 60; a doomed voyage, 83, 94; the noblest struggle with the Church, 101; the battle's fury rages everywhere, 189; each man for himself must wage it, 213; like a true son, not like a mutinous rebel, 254, 257.
- Battle-field, a, i. 132; xii. 185.
- Battles, nature of, iii. 243. See Valmy, Jemappes, Nerwinden, Hondschooten, Watigny, Howe.
- Baty Kahn, vi. 423.
- Bauer, Colonel, at Wesel, xi. 171; in the Russian-Turk War, 291.
- Baumgarten, Skirmish of, vii. 377.
- Bavaria, Kurfürst of, v. 450; vi. 269.
- Bavarian-Succession War, xi. 391, 423, 515, 522.
- Baxter, Richard, opinion of Edgehill battle, xvii. 124; unfriendly to Cromwell, xviii. 337.
- Bayle, v. 38, 413.
- Bazire, of Mountain, iii. 297; iv. 59; imprisoned, 377.
- Beacham, Margery, case of, xix. 12.
- Beales, xvi. 423, 429; answers for the Queen's peace, 421.
- Beard, Dr., schoolmaster, xvii. 35, 64, 67.
- Bearn, riot at, iii. 103.
- Beaton, Cardinal, xii. 425, 426, 429; his death, 431, 432.
- Beaton, cited, viii. 313 n.; xi. 89.
- Beaton, Colonel, cited, x. 336 n.
- Beaufremont, x. 373.
- Beauharnais, in Champ-de-Mars, iii. 324, Josephine, imprisoned, iv. 352; and Napoleon, at La Cabarus's, 422, 423.
- Beaumarchais, Caron, his law-suit, iii. 43; his "Mariage de Figaro," 56; commissions arms from Holland, iv. 165; his distress, 170.
- Beaumarchais, Voltaire papers saved by, viii. 281, 284; cited, xi. 168 n.
- Beaumelle's, M. Angliviel de la, enmity to Voltaire, ix. 185-188, 224; cited, 118 n.; account of Maupertuis, x. 366, 367.
- Beaumont, Archbishop, notice of, iii. 17.
- Beaurepaire, Governor of Verdun, shoots himself, iv. 173.
- Beausobre, M. de, v. 40; vii. 35.
- Beauvais, women fighting at the siege of, xii. 462.
- Beauvau, Marquis de, French Ambassador to Berlin, vii. 273; Audience of leave, 282; mentioned also, 318.
- Beauvrye, Captain, xi. 154.
- Beck, General, advanced to relief of Prag, ix. 414; captures Düringshofen's battalion, x. 206; captures Dierecke and his post at Meissen, 259; attacks General Czetteritz, 406; with Loudon in Silesia, xi. 50; defeated at Reichenbach, 149, 150; mentioned also, ix. 485, 496; x. 464, 479; xi. 281.
- Becket, Thomas a, xii. 230, 239; v. 80.
- Beckwith, Colonel, at Warburg, x. 453; Wesel, 171.
- Bed of Justice, iii. 82.
- Bede, Venerable, xvi. 87.
- Bedford, Earl, chief of Puritans, xvii. 112; General of Parliament Horse, 122.
- Bedford Level, xvii. 95; xviii. 295.
- Beelzebub not God, v. 11; worshippers of, 166; August's Saxon Court of, vi. 74, 98.
- Beginnings, xii. 123; xiv. 10.
- Belin, Proviant-master, xii. 339.
- Being, the boundless Phantasmagoria of, i. 41; the lordliest Real-Phantasmagory, xv. 230.
- Belgard, vii. 116.
- Belief and Opinion, i. 147; French, iii. 146; the true god-announcing miracle,

- i. 288, 306, 369, 396; war of, 424; theoretic and actual, ii. 119. See Religion, Scepticism.
- Believing, glory of knowing and, xiii. 406; mystic power of belief, xiv. 329, 370, 378, 390, 416; the least spiritual belief conceivable, 141; superstitious belief, 197.
- Belleisle, Chevalier de, a magnanimous high-flown spirit, vii. 357; his brother's right hand, 463; viii. 169, 396, 399; death at the Pass of Col di Sieta, ix. 60, 61.
- Belleisle, Comte de, Soldier and Courtier, vi. 463, 468; vii. 11, 356; his German Enterprise, 357, 440; with Friedrich at Brieg, 431; mainly to blame for the Austrian-Succession War, 436; consummate skill, 452, 454; grandiose schemes, 454; viii. 11, 112; successful manipulation, vii. 455; visits Friedrich, 457; proceeds to Dresden and München, 483; takes up his abode in Frankfurt, 460; viii. 30; Treaty with Friedrich, 25; a kind of Dictator, 35; his Army crosses the Rhine, 59, 92; rheumatic fever, 96; partial recovery, 102; visits Wilhelmina, 121; Sahay, 185; interview with Friedrich at Kutenberg, 168; Colloquy with Broglie at Prag, 194; defends Prag, 197; much distinguishes himself, 205; gallant retreat, 222, 225; German Enterprise ruined, 260, 332; gives Friedrich bad advice about his Bohemian Campaign, 355; in München, ix. 15, 16; on his road to Berlin, 17, 18; arrested, and carried to England, 26, 27; in Italy, 42, 51, 61; his grand schemes all bankrupt, 71; War-Minister, x. 76, 176, 368, 374; loses his only son at Crefeld, 112; astonished at Friedrich's marching power, 174; letters to Contades, published by Ferdinand, 240, 374; dies of putrid fever, the last of the grand old Frenchmen, xi. 30; mentioned also, viii. 175; ix. 333.
- Belleisle, Madame de, interview with Wilhelmina, viii. 121.
- Bell, Herr Hofrath, ix. 138.
- Belling, Colonel, in Pommern, x. 81; looks after the Swedes, xi. 112; in battle of Freyberg, 163; in Bavarian War, xii. 416; mentioned also, 298.
- Benda, the Brothers, vii. 29.
- Beneckendorf, cited, vi. 49 n.
- Benefactresses, xii. 204.
- Beneschau, Schwerin takes, viii. 369.
- Benevolence, ii. 315; Benevolent-Platform Fever, 320, 326.
- Bénézet, Mamsell, xii. 73.
- Benkendorf, Lieut.-Colonel, turns the fortune of battle at Kolin, ix. 460; small recognition of his service, 465.
- Bennet, Richard, Cromwell's letter to, xviii. 451.
- Benoit, Prussian Secretary, ix. 264.
- Bentenrieder, the kidnapped Ambassador, vi. 13, 101.
- Bentham, Jeremy, naturalized, iv. 160; cited, v. 62 n.
- Benthames Radicalism, xii. 30.
- Benthamism, i. 305, 394.
- Bentlnck, Madam de, x. 393.
- Bentley, xvi. 406.
- Beraun, Action of, viii. 351.
- Berenhast, Heinrich von, ix. 458.
- Berenhorst, cited, vii. 100 n.; ix. 458 n.; pique against Friedrich, v. 521; his "Art of War," 522.
- Bergen-op-Zoom, Siege of, ix. 62.
- Bergen, battle of, x. 198, 199.
- Bergerie, M. de la, v. 36.
- Berghover, Legationsrath, viii. 119.
- Berg-Jülich, vii. 149, 446.
- Berkley, Sir John, tutor to Duke of York, xix. 109.
- Berlichingen, General, at Mollwitz, vii. 420, 421; in Silesia, viii. 453; Berlin, early condition of, v. 111; Palace at, 170; Royal Academy of, 302; vi. 42; St. Peter's Church burnt down, 201; Friedrich Wilhelm's building operations in, 355; Homaging at, vii. 185; Treaty of, viii. 170; opening of the Opera-house, 181; Carrousel, ix. 105, 109; entered by Haddick, 505, 542; agony of commotion at the news of Kunersdorf, x. 370; seized by Tottleben and Lacy, 491, 493.
- Berline (see Fersen), towards Varennes, iv. 21-23.
- Bernburg, Prince of, at siege of Schweidnitz, xi. 156.
- Bernburg, Regiment, at siege of Dresden, x. 442; at Liegnitz, 475, 478.
- Berne, Oligarchy of, ix. 206.
- Berneck, vi. 484.
- Berners, Lord, an ancestor of, xvii. 238.
- Berney, Sir Richard, fined, xviii. 135.
- Bernhard of Weimar, vi. 243; xvi. 38.
- Bernis, Cardinal de, ix. 297, 300; x. 182; letter from Voltaire, 391.
- Bernouilli, Jean, vii. 214.
- Bernouilli of Basel, vii. 214.
- Berry, Captain, slays General Cavenish, xix. 312, 316; Major, at Preston fight, xvii. 324; £200 voted to, 342; Colonel, a Major-General, xix. 19 n.; in favor of Kingship, 316.
- Berserkir rage, deep-hidden in the Saxon heart, xii. 159; xvi. 57.
- Berthier, Intendant, fled, iii. 196; arrested, 201; massacred, 201.

- Berthier, Commandant, at Versailles, iii. 400.
- Bertin, Captain, at Weissenfels, x. 6.
- Berwick summoned by Cromwell, xvii. 355, 359.
- Berwick, Maréchal Duc de, vi. 472; at Philipsburg, 477, 480.
- Besenval, Baron, Commandant of Paris, on French Finance, iii. 64; in riot of Rue St. Antoine, 127; on corruption of Guards, 165, 187; at Champ-de-Mars, 178; apparition to, 182; decamps, 193; and Louis XVI., 216.
- Besserer, vi. 297.
- Bestuchef, Russian Chancellor, ix. 294; dismissed, x. 77.
- Bethel, Major, at Bristol siege, xviii. 219.
- Béthune, riot at, iii. 166.
- Beurnonville, with Dumouriez, imprisoned, iv. 294.
- Beutelsbachers, the, vi. 249.
- Bever, Brunswick-, Duke of, ix. 320; in the battle of Lobositz, 348, 349; advances towards Prag, 389; defeats Königseck at Reichenberg, 392, 393; sent after Daun, 424; finds Daun too strong, 447; joined by the King, 448; retreat from Kolin, 463, 464; at Jung-Bunzlau, 483; at Görlitz to guard Silesia, 498, 499; jealous of Winterfeld, 500, 502; retires into Silesia, 503; x. 35; defeated at Breslau, 38; prisoner, 39; graciously sent home again, ordered to Stettin, 39; vigilant against the Swedes, 83; diligent at Stettin, xi. 67; defeats the Austrians at Reichenbach, 148-150; his great merit, not of dexterity alone, 149; left in charge of Silesia, 156.
- Beza, Theodore, Icones, dedication by, xii. 407, 409; Knox Icon, 407; inane account of Knox, 409; letter to Buchanan, 411; payment for "two pictures," 412; cited, 413.
- Bias, Sage, viii. 15.
- Bible of Universal History, i. 135, 147; xii. 231; the Hebrew, xiv. 47; xvi. 125; xv. 154; xii. 388; ii. 419; v. 19; a history of the primeval Church, xiv. 68; Bible of World-History, infinite in meaning as the Divine Mind it emblems, xv. 154: the truest of books, xvi. 443; Dr. Walton's Polyglot, xix. 365; the Bible of a Nation the authentic Biography of its Heroic Souls, xii. 350, 388; our "closed Bible," 379; the most earnest of books, ii. 248. See Israelitish History.
- Biddle, Mr., Socinian, xviii. 448.
- Bielfeld, vii. 94, 98, 118, 122; his description of George II., vii. 184; at siege of Neisse, viii. 80; Duchess of Württemberg, 125; Friedrich's victorious return from Silesia, 172; marriage of Princess Ulrique, 307; ix. 149; death, xi. 222: mentioned also, vii. 149, 150, 269, 272, 284; ix. 149; xi. 175: cited, vi. 10; ix. 191 n.
- Bieren of Courland, vi. 83, 359; vii. 76; sent to Siberia, 363; Bieren and Münnich refuse to be reconciled, xi. 119; to be again Duke of Courland, 228, 232.
- Billaut-Varennes, Jacobin, iv. 93; cruel, 178; at massacres, Sept. 1792, 192; in Salut Committee, 375; and Robespierre's Être Suprême, 409; accuses Robespierre, 419; accused, 440; banished, 442; at Surinam, 449.
- Billingsley, butcher, in Gerard's plot, xviii. 394.
- Bill-stickers, Paris, iii. 305, 381.
- Biographers of Cromwell criticised, xvii. 16. See Heath, Noble, Ludlow, Banks, Maidston, Kimber, Forster, Harris.
- Biography, meaning and uses of, i. 58; significance of biographic facts, 153; a good, almost as rare as a well-spent life, xiii. 3; xiv. 76; remarks on, xiv. 384-400; the basis of all that can interest, 385; of sparrows and cock-chafers, 399; need of brevity, 424; the highest Gospel a Biography, 437; "respectable" English Biographies, xv. 228, 407; no heroic Poem but is at bottom a Biography, 409; biographic worth of a true Portrait, xvi. 346; no Biography but wraps in it a message out of Heaven, xii. 390.
- Birch, Colonel, at Bristol Siege, xvii. 217.
- Birch, Dr., prints Hammond's letters, xvii. 288; as an editor, xix. 26.
- Birkebeins, xix. 486, 488.
- Birmingham riot, iv. 79.
- Bishops, pretended Scotch, xvii. 42; Bishops' lands sold, 20; xviii. 278, &c.; insulted, protest, twelve sent to the Tower, xvii. 118; our, and what comes of them, ii. 287, 408; xii. 383; our new Souls'-Overseers, ii. 441; not our ugliest anomalies, 337.
- Bishopsgate, mutiny in, xvii. 429.
- Bismarck's success with Germany, xvi. 422.
- Bismarck, Herr Minister von, ix. 139.
- Bjorn the Chapman, xix. 407, 440.
- Blörnstaht, M., xii. 342.
- Black Monday, xviii. 276; dragoon, a, in every parish, ii. 36; considerably silvered over, 62.
- Blackwood's Magazine, Sterling's connection with, ii. 146, 162.
- Blair in Athol, Siege of, ix. 418.
- Bake, Colonel Robert, relieved, xvii. 210; in Ireland, 483; as Admiral,

- beats the Dutch, xviii. 277, 289; in Little Parliament, 299; fires the Turkish ships, xix. 4; letters from Cromwell to, 4, 13, 17, 42, 45, 59, 220; letter to Cromwell, 8; sends thirty-eight wagon-loads of silver to London, 106; beats the Spaniards at Santa Cruz, 177, 218; death of, 178, 220.
- Blakeney, Governor, strives to defend Minorca, ix. 303; at Minorca, 504.
- Blanc, Le, landlord at Varennes, iv. 32; family take to woods, 174.
- Blas, Don, Governor of Carthage, vii. 477, 481.
- Blenheim, Battle of, v. 321; vi. 214.
- Bletchington House taken, xvii. 146; App. xix. 317.
- Bligh, General, at Morlaix, x. 175.
- Blockheads, danger of, xii. 89.
- Blonquet, General Thomas von, x. 286.
- Blood, baths of, iii. 15.
- Blücher, Prince of Wahlstatt, x. 469.
- Blumenthal, cited x. 69 n.; vii. 10 n.; Minister von, xi. 202.
- Blumenthal, Frau von, xii. 490 n.; cited, ix. 448.
- Blumine, i. 105; her environment, 106; character, and relation to Teufelsdröckh, 107; blissful bonds rent asunder, 113; on her way to England, 117.
- Bobus of Houndsditch, xii. 32, 34, 283, 339.
- Boden, Prussian Finance Minister, vii. 171, 189; viii. 428.
- Boerhaave, ix. 170.
- Boehm, Mr. J. E., xii. 422, 453.
- Bohemia, King of, dies, xvii. 70.
- Bohemian Papists, viii. 358, 371.
- Boleslaus, Duke of Poland, v. 68.
- Bolingbroke, vii. 48.
- Bolívar, "the Washington of Columbia," xvi. 206; Cavalry-uniform, i. 38.
- Boll, cited, xi. 35 n.
- Bollandus, cited, v. 67 n.
- Bonaparte, Napoleon, xv. 5, 10; xix. 29; his "Tools to him that can handle them," our ultimate Political Evangel, xv. 308, 414; Varnhagen at the Court of, xvi. 18; flung out to St. Helena, xii. 186. See Napoleon.
- Bonchamps, in La Vendée War, iv. 166.
- Boner, and his Edelstein, xiv. 370; The Frog and the Steer, 273.
- Boniface VIII., Pope, v. 117.
- Bonnemère, Aubin, at Siege of Bastille, iii. 185, 186.
- Bonneville, M. de, Revolutionary spiritual mountebank, v. 167 n.; x. 378.
- Bonneville, M. de, the demon News-writer, stealer and editor of Œuvres du Philosophe de Sans-Souci, and author of Matinées du Roi de Prusse, x. 378, 381; swindling exploit, and lodgment in Spandau, 380, 381.
- Bonpland, M., and how Dr. Francia treated him, xvi. 215, 261.
- Books, xii. 40; in, lie the creative phoenix-ashes of the past, xvi. 125; influence of, i. 131, 191; Collections of, xvi. 392; two kinds of, 403, 404; miraculous influence of, i. 382, 387; our modern University, Church and Parliament, 385.
- Bookseller-System, the, xiv. 109, 438.
- Borck, an Official not of the Grumkow party, vi. 122, 128, 152, 157, 160, 223, 311.
- Borck, Adjutant-General, accompanies the King to Silesia, vii. 294; at Breslau, 326, 330, 330.
- Borck, Finance Manager, quits Dresden, ix. 307; "old as the Devil," vii. 295.
- Borck, Major-General, manages the Herstal Affair, vii. 240; at Neisse, 346; mentioned also, 195, 196.
- Borelly, M., xi. 117.
- Borlace, Colonel, Cromwell's letter in behalf of, xix. 354.
- Borthwick, Lord, Cromwell's letter to, xviii. 178.
- Boscawen, Admiral, x. 118; chases and destroys the Toulon Fleet, 291, 292.
- Bose, Baron von, ix. 29.
- Boston refuses to admit taxed tea, xii. 349-351.
- Boswell, xiv. 398; i. 405; his character and gifts, 407; his true Hero-worship for Johnson, 410; his Johnsoniad, 418; no infringement of social privacy, 421; Life of Johnson cited, xii. 452.
- Bosworth Fight, v. 180.
- Boteler, Major. See Butler.
- Bothwell, Earl of, xii. 426, 428.
- Botta, Marchese di, Austrian Envoy to Berlin, vii. 239; to Russia, 365; ix. 42.
- Bougainville, M., at Quebec, x. 340.
- Bouillé, at Metz, iii. 345, 397; account of, 346; character of, 370; his troops mutinous, 354; and Salm Regiment, 355; intrepidity of, 356, 360; marches on Nancy, 366; quells Nancy mutineers, 367-370; at Mirabeau's funeral, 417; expects fugitive King, iv. 23; would liberate King, 36; emigrates, 37; his recollections of Friedrich, xi. 480-489.
- Bouillé, Junior, asleep at Varennes, iv. 32; flies to father, 35.
- Bourbon Family Compact, the, xi. 88, 89.
- Bourbonism, vii. 248.
- Bourcet, cited, xi. 55.
- Bourchier pedigree, xvii. 47.

- Bordeaux, priests hanged at, iv. 117; for Girondism, 300, 324; Sterling at, ii. 129.
- Boyd, Lieut. Robert, joins with Torrijos, ii. 68; at Gibraltar, 71, 73; death, 85.
- Boyd, Rev. Zachary, preaches against Cromwell, xviii. 173.
- Boyer, duellist, iii. 392.
- Boyer-Fonfrède, notice of, iii. 321.
- Boyer, cited, vi. 23 n.
- Braddock, General, sent to America, ix. 259; his death, 261; his field of battle, x. 176.
- Bradshaw, John, presides at trial of Charles I., xvii. 400; in Council of State, 404; President of, 409; Cromwell's letters to, 457; xviii. 32, 106, 143, 166, 218, 230, 234, 235; in Cromwell's First Parliament, 398; does not sign the Recognition, 446; a rejected M.P. candidate, xix. 58.
- Bramston, the Ship-money Judge, notice of, xvii. 122.
- Brandenburg, Duke of, mastered, xvii. 122.
- Brandenburg, early condition of, v. 55, 61, 62; early Markgraves, 69, 74; Ascanier Markgraves, 96, 110, 126; how Brandenburg and the Hohenzollern Family came together, 116, 127; Bavarian Kurfürsts, 127, 130; a resuscitated Ascanier, 130, 138; Luxemburg Kurfürsts, 141; Brandenburg in Pawn, 147; sold to Friedrich of Hohenzollern, 154; Noble refractory robber-lords, 160; Heavy Peg, 161; beginning of the Prussian Nation, 161; Brandenburg under the Hohenzollerns, 164; lucky enough to adopt the Reformation, 215; Nadir-point of the Brandenburg Hohenzollerns, 274; condition during the Thirty-Years War, 275; again a flourishing country, 279; the Swedes driven out, 289.
- Brandes, Colonel, at Prag, viii. 381.
- Brandy, Captain, at storm of Tredah, xvii. 458.
- Branicki, Polish Crown-General, xi. 249.
- Breda, Congress of, ix. 58.
- Bredow, leads charge at Chotusitz, viii. 157; ix. 178.
- Breeches, black, procession of the, iv. 107-112.
- Breitenbach, General, at Hastenbeck, ix. 490.
- Brender, Herr, vi. 504.
- Brenkenhof, Minister von, xi. 191; xii. 339, 514.
- Brennus, reminiscence of, iv. 224.
- Brentano, enters Saxony, x. 292; at siege of Dresden, 296, 327; at Maxen, 350, 353; at Reichenbach, xi. 180; mentioned also, xii. 281.
- Breslau, vii. 290; able to defend itself, 301, 302; bottled emotion, 323; quiet surrender to Friedrich, 329; unsettled condition, 380; attempted deliverance, viii. 46; wholly Friedrich's, 49; Homaging, 82; Treaty of, 170; battle of, x. 38, 39; surrendered to the Austrians, 41; recovered by Friedrich, 69; defended by Tauntzien against London, 458, 459.
- Brest, sailors revolt at, iii. 374; state of, in 1791, iv. 73; Fédérés in Paris, 129; in 1793, 359.
- Breteuil, Home-Secretary, iii. 96.
- Breteuil, at Congress of Teschen, xi. 423.
- Breton, Cape, capture of, viii. 445; ix. 251.
- Breton Club, germ of Jacobina, iii. 102.
- Bretons, deputations of, iii. 103; Girondins, iv. 322.
- Brewster, Col. Humphrey, xix. 375, 380.
- Brewster, Rev. Mr., xix. 7, 8.
- Brézé, Marquis de, his mode of ushering, iii. 129; and National Assembly, 156, 161; extraordinary etiquette, 161, 273.
- Bribery, xii. 243; Parliamentary, vii. 469.
- Brick-and-mortar Apostleship, ii. 116.
- Bricks, London, xvi. 451.
- Brieg, vii. 370; siege of, 457.
- Brienne, Loménie, anti-protéstant, iii. 37; in Notables, 73; Controller of Finance, 76; incapacity of, 77; edicts by, 80, 88, 89; failure of, 81; arrests Paris Parlement, 85; exasperated, sick, 95; secret scheme, 96; scheme discovered, 98; arrests two Parliementers, 100; bewildered, 106; desperate shifts by, 106; wishes for Necker, 106; dismissed, and provided for, 107; his effigy burnt, 109.
- Brigands, the, origin of, iii. 123; in Paris, 124, 169, 198; of Avignon, iv. 64.
- Bright, Colonel, at Preston, xvii. 336; notice of, 356.
- Briot, Nicholas, engraver, xviii. 206.
- Brindley, xii. 155.
- Brissac, Duke de, commands Constitutional Guard, iv. 48; disbanded, 90.
- Brissot, edits "Moniteur," iii. 133; friend of Blacks, 290; in First Parliament, iv. 57; plans in 1792, 85; active in Assembly, 91; in Jacobina, 96; at Roland's, 97; pelted in Assembly, 124; arrested, 310, 326; trial of, 343; guillotined, 345.
- Bristol, Parliament loses, xvii. 189; storm of, Sept. 1645, 216; Nayler's procession in, xix. 20.
- Britannic Army of observation, ix. 381.

- British Nation, the, a new set of lessons to learn, ii. 342, 404, 411, 421; no real concern with the Continental Anarchies, 392. See England.
- British Translators, xiv. 310; Critics, 30.
- Brittany, commotions in, iii. 14, 102, 190.
- Britton, cited, x. 90 n.
- Brocksmouth and House described, xviii. 126, 128.
- Brughil, Lord, in Ireland, xvii. 488, 490, 500; xviii. 26, 33; in Cromwell's First Parliament, 398; in Committee on Kingship, xix. 131, 138, 151.
- Broglie, Maréchal, surprised by the Austrians at Secchia, vi. 472; Commandant in Strasburg, vii. 204; receives Friedrich incognito, 204, 205; General of the French Army, viii. 96, 102, 108; Bivouac of Pisek, 102; general incompetency, 129, 150, 205, 236; Skirmish of Sahay, 165; demands D'Harcourt's reinforcements, 191; hurried retreat before Prince Karl, 195; Colloquy with Belleisle, 196; takes command of the Bavarian Army, 213; relieves Braunau, 226; interview with the Kaiser, 233; writes for Order home, 236; retreat across the Rhine, 237; ordered to his own estates, death, 269; mentioned, 257.
- Broglie, Maréchal, at Rossbach, x. 3, 7, 16, 17; the two extreme points of his career, Rossbach and the fall of the Bastille, 23; at Sangerhausen, 31; fight of Sandershausen, 177 n.; at Frankfurt-on-Mayn, 194; repulses Ferdinand at Bergen, 198-200; at Minden rather inert, 232-240; eagerly manoeuvres against Duke Ferdinand, 451-453; lays hold of Göttingen, 523; defeated at Langensalza, loses his winter magazines, xi. 22-24; gets into quarrel with Soubise, and is defeated by Ferdinand at Vellinghausen, 53-55; at Versailles, against Plenary Court, iii. 104; in command, 151, 165; in office, 170; dismissed, 196.
- Broglie, Excellency, ix. 314, 321; demands admission to the Saxon Camp at Pirna, 323; defends Cassel, xi. 25.
- Bromley's Collection of Royal Letters, v. 184 n.
- Brook, Lord, a Puritan, xvii. 52.
- Brotherhood with the base and foolish, ii. 320.
- Browne, General, born German, vii. 304; tries to defend Breslau, 323; a superior soldier, 334, 336, 337; back to Glatz, 376; at Mollwitz, 421; in Bavaria, vii. 178; in Italy, 313, 328; in Bohemia, ix. 325, 333; enthusiastic help to him, 336; marches to the relief of the Saxons, 337; battle of Lobositz, 338-340; retreats to Budin, 349; will try it another way, 352; arrives at Lichtenhayn, 353; hears nothing from the Saxons, 358; a right valiant soldier and man, 359; recommends Loudon, 372; securing post in the Metal Mountains, 389; has to retire suddenly to defend Prag, 390, 391, 395; altercations with Prince Karl, 396; battle of Prag, 403, 406, 408; mortally wounded, 410; his last counsel, 413; death, 413, 444, 470; mentioned also, vii. 399, 302, 393.
- Browne, Sir John, at Abingdon, xvii. 197; Major-General of Scots, xviii. 232; routed at Inverkeithing, 235.
- Brühl, Count, vi. 80; vii. 249; viii. 107; no friend to Friedrich, 246, 406; regards him with perfect hatred, 409, 413, 471, 475, 502; twelve tailors always sewing for him, 414; great schemes against Friedrich, 478, 502-504; cannot keep his secret, 505; rage yellower than ever, ix. 4; doom of nations governed by Brühls, 8, 13, 325, 357, 367; is a much-illuminated man, 14, 16; afraid of Friedrich, 275, 280; plots to set the Czarina against him, 280-285; Prussian invasion, 314; withdraws with Polish Majesty to Pirna, 321, 333, 361; communicates with Browne, 353; goes to Warsaw, 365; Brühl's property alone respected by the French, x. 30; enmity to Friedrich, 172; death, xi. 221, 229; his voracity for lands in Poland, 234.
- Brühl, Henry Count von, xlii. 329.
- Brühl, Madam, ix. 371.
- Brummel, Beau, xiv. 25; ix. 244.
- Brunout, M., among Menads, iii. 257.
- Brunswick-Bevern, Ferdinand Albert Duke of, vi. 372, 475, 480. See Elizabeth Christina and Karl, Duke of.
- Brunswick, Hereditary Prince of, dashes out of Fulda on the Reichs folk, x. 196; drives out the French post at Gohfeld, 234, 240; marches into Saxony to aid Friedrich, 380; drives the Duke of Würtemberg out of Fulda, 362, 363; at Korbach, x. 452; at Emsdorf, 452; Kloster Kampen, 533, 536; surprised by Broglie, xi. 24; generally had command of the English troops, 60; in the Bavarian war, 421; become Duke of, marches on France, iv. 104, 164; advances, Proclamation, 126; at Verdun, 172; at Argonne, 204; at Valmy, 208; retreats, 213; mentioned also, xi. 277, 505.
- Brunswick. See Anton Ulrich, and Christian of.

- Bucaniering, xli. 186.
 Buccow, General, killed at Torgau, x. 524.
 Buch, Johann von, v. 114.
 Buchanan, George, xix. 414, 490; tutor to James VI., xii. 404; Beza's letter to, 411; portrait of, in Royal Society, 453; History cited, xix. 414; Epistola cited, xli. 412; Irving's life of, cited, 446.
 Buchholz, vi. 411: cited, v. 330 n., 399 n.; viii. 363; x. 135 n.
 Buckingham, Duke, accused, xvii. 61; stabbed by Felton, 62; at Kingston, 320.
 Buckekin, the Hon. Hickory, xvi. 313.
 Buddäus, Dr., ix. 97: cited, v. 221 n.
 Buddenbrock, Feldmarschall, vi. 230, 243, 303, 422; at Chotusitz, viii. 157, 159; at Sohr, 495, 496.
 Buddenbrock, son of the above, vi. 399, 419; xi. 455.
 Buderich, Camp at, vii. 253.
 Budget, Fixed, vii. 179.
 Rue fights at Jonsburg, xix. 412.
 Buffon, Mme. de, and Duc d'Orléans, iii. 91; at D'Orléans' execution, iv. 363.
 Buller, Mrs., death of, ii. 47.
 Bülow, General, with Friedrich at Liegnitz, x. 468; at Camp of Bunselwitz, xi. 49, 68.
 Bülow, Mamsell, vi. 154, 164, 273, 286.
 Büнау, cited, v. 83 n.
 Bunyan, John, notice of, xvii. 209; Pilgrim's Progress, i. 240.
 Buonamici, cited, viii. 199 n.; ix. 43 n.
 Bureaucracy, ii. 391.
 Burford, Levellers at, xvii. 432.
 Burgess, Roger, Cromwell's letters to, xvii. 200: defends Farrington, 200.
 Burgoyne, Sir John, Cromwell's letter to, xvii. 128.
 Burgoyne, Brigadier, in Portugal, xi. 94.
 Burislav, xix. 429, 432.
 Burk, Lieutenant, in Portugal, xi. 94.
 Burke on French Revolution, iv. 78; ix. 103.
 Burkersdorf Heights, storming of, xi. 138-146.
 Burleigh House, xvii. 148.
 Burney's, Dr., account of his visit to Voltaire, xi. 352-355.
 Burns, xlii. 256-314; his hard conditions, 260; a true Poet-soul, 263; like a King in exile, 264; sincerity, 264; his Letters, 267; tenderness and piercing emphasis of thought, 271; the more delicate relations of things, 275; indignation, 278; Scots wha hae, Macpherson's Farewell, 279; Tom O'Shanter, The Jolly Beggars, 280; his Songs, 282; love of country, 287; passionate youth never became clear manhood, 288; his estimable Father, 289; xvi. 34; boyhood, and entrance into life, xlii. 290; invited to Edinburgh, 293; Sir Walter Scott's reminiscence of him, 294; Excise and Farm scheme, 299; calumny, isolation, death, 300; his failure chiefly in his own heart, 306; a divine behest lay smouldering within him, 312; his kinghood and kingdom, xiv. 430; a contemporary of Mirabeau, i. 409; xv. 333; xvi. 52, 79; his birth and humble heroic parents, 410; rustic dialect, 410; the most gifted British soul of his century, 411; resemblance to Mirabeau, 412; his sincerity, 413; his visit to Edinburgh, 414; Lion-hunted to death, 415; xii. 35, 86, 198, 272; like Apollo taken for a Neatherd, ii. 269; his chivalrous ways, 441; v. 384.
 "Burnt Njal," xix. 425.
 Burntisland surrenders to Cromwell xviii. 234, 240.
 Burton's Diary criticised, xix. 120.
 Burton, Rev. Henry, in pillory, xvii. 93.
 Büsching, crude authenticity, vi. 397, 399 n.; his Russian Mission, vii. 386; ix. 197; at Petersburg, xi. 116; homaging to Czar Peter, 120; sees the Czar on horseback, 122; tumult and revolution, 128-131; Nüsseler's interview with the King, 191-193; a dull, though solid accurate kind of man, 191; interviews with Queen Ulrique, xi. 335-337; gets a new Town School-house for Berlin, 338: cited, v. 247 n., 290 n.; vii. 172 n., 197 n., 349; viii. 442 n.; ix. 393: mentioned also, xi. 326, 456.
 Bussy, Sieur de, xi. 61, 68; conducts Choiseul's negotiations with Pitt, 80.
 Bute, Isle of, its climate and scenery, ii. 9, 16.
 Bute, Lord, ix. 514; xi. 5, 8, 90, 92, 96; his shameful peace, 145, 161, 170.
 Butler, Major, seizes Wildman, xviii. 484; a Major-General, xix. 19 n.
 Butler, Sir Walter, Governor of Kilkenney, xviii. 34; letters to Cromwell, 34, 36, 37, 41; Cromwell's letters to, 33, 35, 38, 41, 42.
 Buttafuoco, Napoleon's letter to, iii. 352.
 Butturlin, Feldmarschall, to command the Russian Army in Silesia, xi. 39; will not venture upon Friedrich at Bunselwitz, 47; altercations with Loudon, 49; returns homewards, accelerated by General Platen, 51, 52; sends reinforcements to Romansow at Colberg, 66; returns to Poland, 84.
 Buzot, in National Convention, iv. 201, 299; arrested, 310; retreats to Bordeaux, 325, 335; end of, 346.

- Byng, Admiral, v. 406, 454; ix. 303, 318; burnt in effigy, 318.
- Byron's short career, xiii. 68; life weariness, 213; xii. 150, 278; his manifold yet victorious struggle, xiii. 241; far enough from faultless, 266, 289; xiv. 151; sent forth as a missionary to his generation, xiii. 311; poor Byron who really had much substance in him, xv. 430.
- (AABAH, the, with its Black Stone and sacred Well, i. 280.
- Cabanis, physician to Mirabeau, iii. 414; metaphysical discoveries, xiii. 469; xiv. 235.
- Cabarus, Mlle., and Tallien, iv. 359; imprisoned, urgent, 414; her soirées, 432-435.
- Cadiz to be attempted, xix. 44; blockade of, viii. 200.
- Caen, Girondins at, iv. 311, 325.
- Cæsar, x. 52, 71, 486.
- Cagliostro, Count, xiv. 152-221; a Liar of the first magnitude, 167; singularly prosperous career, 158; birth and boyhood, 163; with a Convent Apothecary, 165; a touch of grim humor, 166; returns to Palermo, 167; Forgery and general Swindlery, 169; a Treasure-digging dodge, and consequent flight, 171; quick-talent, 177; marriage, and a new game opened out, 179; temporary reverses, 181; potions and love-philtres, 183; visits England, and drives a prosperous trade in the supernatural, 184; Freemasonry, 185; his gift of Tongue, 195; successes and exposures, 199; how he fleeced the Cardinal de Rohan, 205; the Diamond Necklace business, 208; xv. 248-300; again in England, xiv. 211; Goethe's visit to his family at Palermo, 211; Cagliostro's workday ended, 218; xi. 498, 508.
- Calatr Castle, Cromwell's letter to Governor of, xvii. 31; submits, 32.
- Caira, origin of, iii. 312.
- Calas, Widow, and Voltaire, x. 396.
- Calendar, Rome's new, iv. 329-331; comparative ground-scheme of, 330.
- Calendar, Earl, at Preston fight, xvii. 325, 329, 330, 333, 345.
- Calendar House taken by Cromwell, xviii. 232.
- Callenberg, Gräfin von, vii. 401; viii. 147.
- Calmet, Dom, ix. 237.
- Calonne, M. de, Financier, character of, iii. 66; suavity and genius of, 67; his difficulties, 69, 71; at bay, 72; dismissed, 74; marriage and after-course, 75.
- Calonne, Controller-General, xi. 497.
- Calvados, for Girondism, iv. 299. See Caen.
- Calvert, Dr., meets Sterling at Madeira, ii. 145; a touching bond of union, 148; accompanies him to Rome, 154, 158; Sterling nurses him in sickness, 162; weather-bound at Falmouth, 190; wearing visibly weaker, 204; death, 212.
- Calvin, v. 307, 413; vi. 287.
- Camas, Colonel, v. 394; sent to the French Court, vii. 149; to Glatz, 334, 337; death, 430.
- Camas, Madame, Friedrich's great respect for, v. 394; vii. 430; his Letters to, vi. 497; x. 531; xi. 31, 112, 114; her death, 221.
- Cambon, notice of, iv. 59.
- Cambral, Congress of, v. 407, 455.
- Cambridge, plate, xvii. 122; fortified, 127, 129; Committee, Cromwell's Letters to, 148, 156, 157, and App. xix. 306; royalist prisoners at, xvii. 175; University, Cromwell's letter to heads of Trinity Hall, 399; protected, App. xix. 361; Cromwell's letters to Vice-Chancellor of, 388; superiority of, ii. 35.
- Camdeners, the, xvii. 138.
- Cameron, Dr. Archibald, ix. 248; executed, 249; xi. 385.
- Cameron of Lochiel, ix. 247.
- Camille, Desmoulins, xv. 388.
- Campan, Mme., Memoirs by, iii. 26 n.
- Campbell, Lives of the Admirals, v. 406 n.
- Campbell, John, Duke of Argyle, viii. 188.
- Campitelli, General, marches to join Solतिकof, x. 319.
- Campitellis, xi. 162.
- Camus, Archivist, iv. 60; in National Convention, 211; with Dumouriez, imprisoned, 294.
- Canada rebellion, ii. 397, 401; English and French in, ix. 250.
- Candeille, Mlle., Goddess of Reason, iv. 371.
- Candidatus Theologie, a, and the King of Prussia, v. 340.
- Cannabich, Pastor, ix. 90.
- Cannon, Siamese, iii. 176; wooden, iv. 165; Fever, Goethe on, 207.
- Canopus, worship of, i. 243.
- Cant defined, iii. 54; xii. 60; xiii. 266; xiv. 412, 462; xv. 860; its effects and prevalence, xvii. 6, 78; xviii. 362; thrice-baleful universe of, ii. 322; sincere, xii. 375; dead and putrid, ii. 93.
- Cantwell Castle surrenders, xviii. 48.
- Canute, King, xii. 48.
- Capel, Lord, motions of, xvii. 127, 346; condemned, 412; dies nobly, 413.

- Capital punishment, ii. 328, 330, 332; xvi. 250.
- Carberry Hill, Battle of, xii. 441.
- Carisbrook Castle, Charles I. confined in, xvii. 285.
- Carlingford taken, xvii. 465.
- Carlisle demanded by Cromwell, xvii. 359; Cromwell at, 378.
- Carlos, Don*, Schiller's, published, xx. 61; critical account of, 63; scene of the King and Posa, 67; immediate and general approbation, 79; Schiller's own opinion of its worth, App. 302.
- Carlos II. of Spain, v. 52.
- Carlos III. of Spain, vi. 326, 469; King of the Two Sicilies, 470; vii. 15; viii. 202 n.; ix. 70 n.; x. 402; a diligent, indignant kind of man, 403; declares war against England, xi. 62, 88, 89; quarrels with Portugal on account of England, 92-95.
- Carlowitz, Captain, at Prag, viii. 381.
- Carlyle first hears definitely of Sterling, ii. 83; pleasantly impressed by Arthur Comingsby, 91; sees Sterling's Father, 98; first interview with Sterling, 102; listens unprofitably to friendly admonitions, 115; high topics, 119; insists upon the good of evil, 126; a rainy walk, 127; Sterling's friendly sympathy, 138; a sad farewell, 140; a hurried escort, 154; fruitful talk in straitened circumstances, 183; the first human recognition, 184; a strange effulgence, 234; the saddest of dinners, 242; sacred possessions, 251; a commission higher than the world's, 258; cited, xi. 498 n.
- Carlyle, Mrs., and Sterling's Mother, ii. 103; Sterling's affectionate remembrance, 131; a humble imitation, 143; a gentle message, 219; love in death, 250.
- Carmagnole costume, what, iv. 358; dances in Convention, 370.
- Carmarthen Committee, Cromwell's letter to, xix. 332.
- Carner, Silesian Chancellor von, xi. 424 n.
- Carmichaels, the Scottish, viii. 170.
- Carnival, the, ii. 170, 171.
- Carnot, Hippolyte, notice of, iv. 58, 374; plan for siege of Toulon, 363; discovery in Robespierre's pocket, 416.
- Caroline, Queen, v. 187, 428; vi. 114, 150, 169, 188; a beautiful Brandenburg-Anspach Princess, v. 443; refuses the Catholic Kaiser, 443; vi. 369; Friedrich's letters to, 89, 154; visit to her foolish son, vii. 80; modest stoicism and death, 81; mentioned also, 468.
- Carpentras, against Avignon, iv. 65.
- Carr, cited, v. 27 n.
- Carra, on plots for King's flight, iii. 306, in National Convention, iv. 301.
- Carre, Gibby. See Ker.
- Carrier, a Revolutionist, iii. 297; in National Assembly, 303; Nantes noyades, 358, 365, 366; guillotined, 443.
- Carstairs, Principal, a Whig, xviii. 301.
- Carstairs, Rev. John, at Dunbar battle, xviii. 133; in Edinburgh, 189, 190; account of, 301; preaches before Cromwell, 235.
- Cartaux, General, fights Girondins, iv. 320; at Toulon, 363.
- Carte, Jacobite, his opinion on Tredah, xvii. 464.
- Carteret, Lord, v. 363; viii. 7, 189, 229, 246; conferences at Hanau, 301; replies to Pitt's threat to resign, xi. 91; mentioned also, viii. 363; ix. 38, 245, 419, 431.
- Cartwright, Dr., message to Cromwell, xviii. 50.
- Carthage, Expedition against, vii. 267, 477, 487.
- Carzig, vi. 329, 338.
- Cash-payment, xvi. 78, 83; not the sole relation of human beings, xii. 143, 182, 189; love of men cannot be bought with cash, 262.
- Casimir IV., King of Poland, v. 190.
- Casimir V., vi. 444. See Poland.
- Casimir. See Culmbach.
- Cassano, Bridge of, v. 300, 321.
- Castéra, cited, xi. 245 n.
- Castle, Colonel, notice of, xvii. 185; killed at Tredah, 460.
- Castlehaven, Earl, assists Wexford, xvii. 471, 477; at Ross, 490.
- Castries, Duke de, duel with Lameth, iii. 391; result of, 391.
- Castries, Marquis de, defends Wesel, x. 534-536.
- Catechisms, Theological, v. 413.
- Catharine II. of Russia, v. 75, 127; vi. 208; Catherine-Alexiowna, formerly Sophie-Frederike of Anhalt-Zerbst, viii. 307; ix. 290, 294; one of the cleverest of young ladies, 295; Wife of Czar Peter, v. 367; at Berlin, 370, 463; her married life, xi. 108; rapid succession of lovers, 109, 245; books about her, 109; becomes Czarina of Russia, 110; shocked at Colonel Hordt's treatment, 118; misgivings about her husband's conduct, gracious attentions to Hordt, 125; discerns that either Peter or she must fall, 125; conspires for his destruction, 127-131; manifesto against Prussia, afterwards withdrawn, 132; treaty of alliance with Friedrich, 324; difficulties with Poland, 299; virtual sovereign of Poland, and intends to

- keep so, 243; a kind of she Louis-Quatorze; never in the least a Cat or a Devil towards Poland, 244; makes Poniatowski king, 245; gets impatient of the Dissident Question, 252; locks up the refractory Bishops, 253 (see Turk War); enmity to Maria Theresa, xii. 297, 304; sumptuously entertains Prince Henri, 300-303; proposes dismemberment of Poland, 303; her share in the partition, 307, 308, 319; mediates on the Bavarian-Succession question, 422, 423; forms alliance with Kaiser Joseph, and hopes to get Constantinople and a new Greek Empire, 451, 452; her kindness to Diderot, who pays her a visit at St. Petersburg, xiv. 129; mentioned also, xi. 107 n., 447, 470, 488.
- Cathcart, Charles Lord, vii. 481.
- Cathedral of Immensity, xvi. 230.
- Cathelineau of La Vendée, iv. 71, 86.
- Catholic Church, the old, in its terrestrial relations, ii. 380; Religion, mournful state of, vii. 217. See Pope.
- Catt's, De, first interview with Friedrich, ix. 269; enters his service, 271; at Breslau, x. 75; Hochkirch, 163; surprised at Friedrich's "Sermon on the Last Judgment," 185; introduces Zimmermann to the King, xi. 328, 332.
- Caulaincourt, x. 80 n.
- Caumartin, M., vii. 41.
- Cavaignac, Convention Representative, iv. 381.
- Cavendish, General, killed, xvii. 150; xix. 312, 316; account of, xvii. 153.
- Cazales, Royalist, iii. 139; in Constituent Assembly, 213; pathetic, 284; duel with Barnave, 390; in danger, iv. 19; emigrant, 81.
- Cazotte, author of "Diable Amoureux," iv. 98; seized, 169; saved for a time by his daughter, 184.
- Cecil, Trooper, and Sindercomb, xix. 113.
- Cellamare, Ambassador, v. 365.
- Celta, the, xvi. 88.
- Centuries, the, lineally related to each other, xii. 40, 50.
- Cercle Social of Fauchet, iii. 385.
- Ceremonialism in 1610, xvii. 38.
- Cerutti, his funeral oration on Mirabeau, iii. 417.
- Cervantes, xv. 412; his death, xvii. 41.
- Cevennes, revolt of, iv. 86.
- Chabot, of Mountain, iv. 59; against Kings, 150; imprisoned, 377.
- Chabray, Louison, at Versailles, October Fifth, iii. 266, 262.
- Choctaw Indian, xii. 185.
- Châlier, Jacobin, Lyons, iv. 275; executed, 319; body raised, 361.
- Chalmers, cited, xi. 5 n.
- Chaloner, M.P., a drunkard, xviii. 293.
- Chambers's Biographical Dictionary*, Knox's portrait in, xii. 421.
- Chambon, Dr., Mayor of Paris, iv. 229; retires, 249.
- Chamfort, Cynic, iii. 115; arrested, suicide, iv. 404.
- Champ-de-Mars, Federation, iii. 325; preparations for, 327, 331; accelerated by patriots, 332-336; anecdotes of, 334 (see Federation); Federation-scene at, 338-344; funeral-service, Nanci, 372; riot, Patriot petition (1791), iv. 45; new Federation (1792), 122; enlisting in, 177.
- Champs Elysées, Menads at, iii. 246; festivities in, 343.
- Champion of England, the, "lifted into his saddle," xii. 137.
- Chancellors, and their beaten road to the peerage, xii. 352.
- Chancery, Cromwell's reform of, xvi. 398, 400; xviii. 388, 489; law-courts, xii. 248, 251; records, xvii. 53; court to be abolished, xviii. 334.
- Change, the inevitable approach of, manifest everywhere, xiv. 363; xvi. 384; universal law of, xiv. 64, 378; xv. 10.
- Chantilly Palace, a prison, iv. 358.
- Chapelle, La. See Bachaumont.
- Chappe's Telegraph, iv. 386.
- Chapt-Rastignac, Abbé de, massacred, iv. 185.
- Characteristics, xiv. 344-383.
- Charenton, Marseillaise at, iv. 130.
- Charlemagne, v. 57; viii. 182; xv. 229.
- Charles, Chemist, improves balloons, iii. 51.
- Charles, Prince, returns from Spain, xvii. 48.
- Charles I., failures of, xvii. 57; devices to raise money, 66; goes to Scotland, 71; wars with Scots, 101; shifts to raise an army, 102; his Council of Peers, 103; endeavors to coalesce with Puritans, 112; his difficulties, 113; favors Army-plots, 113; yields a little, 115; goes to Scotland, 116; feasted by London City, 118; attempts to seize Five Members of Parliament, 119; his Queen pawns the crown-jewels, 120; attempts Hull, 120; his Commission of Array, 121; at Oxford, 126; his affairs in August, 1643, 159; sends for Irish Army, 181; is completely routed, 206; his motions after Naseby battle, 208; in Wales, 233; goes to Scots Army, 233; at Holmby, 238; carried off by Joyce, 263; his manœuvring, 270; at Hampton Court, 272, 302; escapes, 303;

- goes to Isle of Wight, 285; at Carisbrook Castle, 285; attempts to escape, 301; is denounced, 308; last Treaty with, 371; at Hurst Castle, 386; Trial of, 400; Death-Warrant, 400; execution of, 403; his goods, &c., to be sold, 410; Trial of, sold in Paris, iv. 233; vacuous, chimerical letters of, xvi. 177; judicial blindness, 184; at Strafford's Trial, 192; peers in his time, 402; fatally incapable of being dealt with, i. 433; xii. 291.
- Charles II. at Jersey, xvii. 478; character of, xviii. 97; with Scots Army, 108; repudiates his father's doings, 118; descended from Elizabeth Muir, 183; crowned at Scone Kirk, 196; at Perth, 22d Nov. 1650, 201; invades England, 240; at Worcester, 246; escapes from Worcester, 251; countenances assassins, xviii. 383; at Middleburg, 482; his embassy to Spain, xix. 86; quarrels with his brother, 108; designation of, by Cromwell, 255; cold reception of abroad, 276; mentioned, ii. 408; xii. 360; xiv. 393; desperate return of, xvi. 433, 438.
- Charles XII. of Sweden, v. 150; vi. 458; arrives suddenly at Stralsund, v. 345; his surprising career, 346, 353, 364; desperate defence of Stralsund, 362; assassinated at Frederickshall, 355; last of the Swedish Kings, 355; Treaty of Altranstadt, vii. 293, 307, 371.
- Charles Amadeus, King of Sardinia, vii. 449.
- Charles Edward, the Young Pretender, viii. 314.
- Charles Emanuel, King of Sardinia, viii. 198, 201, 295.
- Charleville Artillery, iii. 177.
- Charlotte, Old Queen, vi. 139, 413; vii. 76; her father, 74; ancestors of England, ix. 87; Princess of Mecklenburg, xi. 32; letter to the King of Prussia, 33-35; question of authenticity, 36.
- Charlotte. See Philippina.
- Charlottenburg, v. 38, 44; George I. at, 433.
- Charter House, Cromwell and the, xviii. 11, 12.
- Chartism, xvi. 36, 64, 73; history of, not mysterious, 100.
- Chartist Notabilities undergoing their term, ii. 309; Chartist Parliament, xii. 304.
- Chartres, Duke de. See Orléans.
- Chartres, grain-riot at, iv. 240.
- Chassot, Lieutenant, vi. 504; Lieutenant-Colonel, viii. 292, 466; ix. 239; affront on his Austrian friend, 87, 89; Voltaire's Hirsch affairs, 137, 139, 175; mentioned also, xi. 47.
- Châteaubriands, in French Revolution, iv. 403.
- Châteauroux, Madame de la, viii. 56, 277, 290, 299; her Ministry, 322; with Louis XV. in the Netherlands, 332; dismissed, 339; death, 341.
- Châtelet, Achille de, advises Republic, iv. 19. See Prison.
- Châtelet, the Marquise du, xiii. 422; her utter shamelessness, 425; unimaginable death-bed scene, 426.
- Châtelet, Madame du, vii. 54, 66; not invited by King Friedrich, 192; hope disappointed, 220; her relation to Voltaire not so celestial as it once was, viii. 278, 293; ix. 43; with Voltaire on a visit at Sceaux, 49-55; intrigue with M. de St. Lambert, 58; death from childbirth, 75, 76; mentioned also, viii. 214, 229.
- Châtelet, Marquis du, in Maillebois's Army, viii. 99; at Dingelfingen, 234, 237; mentioned also, ix. 57, 75, 109.
- Chatham-and-Dover Railway, xvi. 452.
- Chatham and his son Pitt, ii. 393.
- Châtillon-sur-Sèvre, insurrection at, iv. 166.
- Chaumette, notice of, iii. 296; iv. 376; signs petition, 44; in governing committee, 162; at King's trial, 243; his grandmother, 245; daily demands constitution, 320; on Feast of Reason, 368, 371; arrested, jeered, 392; guillotined, 401.
- Chauvelin, Marquis de, in London, iv. 54; dismissed, 263.
- Chauvelin, M. de, ix. 177.
- Cheap and Nasty, xvi. 422, 449-453.
- Cheapside. See Croes.
- Cheek, Sir Hatton, and Sir Thomas Dutton, xvi. 335, 337.
- Chemists. French, inventions of, iv. 378, 379.
- Chenaye, Baudin de la, massacred, iv. 187.
- Chénier, Poet, and Mlle. Théroigne, iv. 95.
- Chepstow Castle taken, xvii. 311.
- Chepy at La Force in September, iv. 188.
- Chesterfield, Lord, predicts French Revolution, iii. 16; Johnson's Letter to, xiv. 440; mentioned, vi. 169, 183, 276; viii. 329; ix. 67, 84, 245; cited, 60 n.
- Cheswick, Cromwell at, xvii. 360, 363.
- Chétardie, Marquis de la, vii. 4, 5, 366.
- Chevrot, French Brigadier, at Prag, viii. 223, 224; General, at Hastenbeck, ix. 491; Meer, x. 176 n.
- Childhood, happy season of, i. 69; early influences and sports, 70; fresh gaze of, xiv. 93, 485; happy Unconsciousness of, 346.

- Children, Sterling's letters to, ii. 165, 249.
- China, literary governors of, i. 391; Pontiff-Empperor of, xii. 226.
- Chivalry on the wane, xiv. 255, 268; gone, 268, 371; xv. 238; of Labor, xii. 184, 261, 265, 270, 277, 284; Orders, era of, v. 91.
- Chlum, Camp of, viii. 470.
- Chlumetz, vi. 495.
- Chodowiecki, v. 362; vi. 232; his Engravings, xi. 874 n., 427 n.
- Choiseul, Duke, why dismissed, iii. 5; Colonel Duke, assists Louis's flight, iv. 12, 22, 24, 31; too late at Varennes, 34.
- Choiseul, Duc de, French Minister of Foreign affairs, x. 193, 320, 322, 373; implicated in publication of Œuvres du Philosophe de Sans Souci, 373; tries to make mischief between Pitt and Friedrich, 388, 389; letter from Voltaire, 394; x. 419; issues peace-proposals, xi. 29; succeeds Belleisle as War-Minister, 30; spasmodic effort towards Hanover, 63, 57; artful negotiations with Pitt, 61, 62, 88; intrigues with Poland and Turkey, 262, 290; his death, 489.
- Choi, General, at Avignon, iv. 67.
- Cholmely, Colonel, notice of, xix. 341.
- Chotusitz, Battle of, viii. 154, 166; topography of, 162.
- Christ, the Divine Life of, xiii. 238; true reverence for his sufferings and death, 239; allusion to by Tacitus, 392; a Sanctuary for all the wretched, xv. 263.
- Christian Faith, a good Mother's simple version of the, i. 76; Temple of the, now in ruins, 146; Passive-half of, 148; Love, 143, 146; Religion, ineffaceable record of the, xiii. 450; its sacred silent unfathomable depths, 451; Novalis's thoughts on, xiv. 45; how it arose and spread abroad among men, xiii. 475; dissipating into metaphysics, xiv. 366; in the new epoch, xvi. 421; its dead body getting buried, 447.
- Christian Ernst of Baireuth, vi. 358.
- Christian Ernst of Saxe-Coburg, vi. 324.
- Christian of Anhalt, v. 256, 269.
- Christian of Brunswick, v. 268, 270.
- Christian II. of Denmark, a rash unwise explosive man, v. 220, 224.
- Christian IV. of Denmark, v. 270, 280.
- Christian Wilhelm, Archbishop of Magdeburg, v. 370, 277.
- Christianity, grave of, xii. 136; the Christian Law of God found difficult and inconvenient, 162; the Christian Religion not accomplished by Prize-Essays, 181, 183, 196; or by a minimum of Four-thousand-five-hundred a year, 283; ghastly phantasm of, ii. 323, 328; its hatred of Scoundrels, 224; so-called Christian Clerus, xii. 356, 366; Christian Repentance, 369; Gathercoal's account of the Christian Church, 395; beginning of, in Norway, xix. 401-403, 447; Gudbrand's dream, 449-452; fairly taken root, 454. See New Testament, Christian, Religion.
- Chronicle of Man, xix. 481.
- Chronology, Norse, uncertainty of, xix. 409, 434, 465.
- Church-Clothes, i. 162; living and dead Churches, 163; the modern Church and its Newspaper-Pulpits, 191; its spiritual guidance, iii. 10; of Rome, decay of, 13; and philosophy, 37 (see Clergy); lands sold, iii. 287; Church of Rome dead in France, iv. 5, 9; the, and what it might be, xvi. 71; "church" done by machinery, 109; History, a continued Holy Writ, xiv. 69; Mother-Church a superannuated stepmother, 370; the English, xii. 163, 251; Church Articles, 218; what a Church-Apparatus might do, 233; Irish Papist, Cromwell's opinion of, xviii. 11-15; government, Cromwell's, 385, 386 (see Bishops); formulas, Sterling's battle with, ii. 5; no living relation to him, 51; singular old rubrics, 52; the dead English, distilled into life again, 58; Sterling's fatal attempt to find sanctuary in it, 91, 94; commended for its very indifference, 104; thrashing of the straw, 134; found wanting, 214, 255. See Books, i. 385.
- Churches, our best-behaved of, xii. 329. See Law.
- Cicely, Colonel, Cromwell's letter to, xix. 324.
- Cideville, M. de, vii. 228; viii. 216.
- Cimburgia, v. 181.
- Circumstances, influence of, i. 72; man not the product of his, xiii. 350; the victorious subduer, xiv. 427; their inevitable influence, xv. 133, 419.
- Citizens, French, active and passive, iii. 303.
- Civil War. See War.
- Clairaut the Mathematician, letter from Voltaire to, x. 395.
- Clairfait, Commander of Austrians, iv. 167.
- Clamei, Meadow of, vi. 121, 124.
- Clarendon, Lord, character of, xvii. 79; his notice of Cromwell, 106; on Irish affairs, ix. 2; xviii. 67.
- Classicality, what meant by, ii. 34.

- Clavière, edits Moniteur, iii. 133; account of, 298; Finance Minister, 97, 153; arrested, iv. 310; suicide of, 358.
- Claypole, Lady, her character, xvii. 247; and family, xviii. 221; death of, xix. 290, 291.
- Claypoles, the, in Cromwell's First Parliament, xviii. 399.
- Clayton, Col., Cromwell's letter in behalf of, xix. 353; General, viii. 339.
- Clemence, adopts a Swiss, iv. 148.
- Clemence, Princess, Wife of Prince Clement, viii. 120.
- Clemens, Engraver, xi. 495 n.
- Clement, August. See Köln.
- Clement, the Hungarian Swindler, v. 395, 405.
- Clement, Duke of Baiern, viii. 117, 120.
- Clement XII., Pope, vii. 263.
- Clement, Prince, Nephew of Elector of Köln, viii. 120.
- Clement, Duchess, protests against the Austrian attempt on Bavaria, xi. 396, 399; writes to Friedrich, 398; counsels and aids Görtz in the matter, 400.
- Cleon the Tanner, xvi. 408, 423, 437.
- Clergy, the, with their surplices and cassock-aprons girt on, i. 33, 150; French, in States-General, iii. 143; conciliators of orders, 150, 154; joins Third Estate, 152, 154, 156, 158; lands, national? 287, 292; power of, 288; constitution for, 288.
- Clermont, flight of King through, iv. 29, 34; Prussians near, 174.
- Clermont, Prince de, vii. 353; succeeds Richelieu, ix. 24; beaten by Ferdinand at Crefeld, 112; dismissed, 112.
- Cléry, valet, on Louis's last scene, iv. 253.
- Cleve, Wilhelm Duke of, v. 241, 247; his Heritage Settlement, 248; death, his Son's tragic career, 249.
- Cleve, Duchy of, v. 246; a naturally opulent country, 247; disputed heritage, 250, 253, 263, 282; vi. 24, 256; occupied by Spanish and Dutch troops, v. 280, 284; Friedrich Wilhelm's interest in, v. 398, 460; vi. 23, 115, 256, 433; Friedrich at, receiving homage, vii. 186.
- Cleveland, John, poet, apprehended, xix. 38.
- Cleveland, Duchess of, v. 136.
- Clifton, Sterling at, ii. 176, 199.
- Clive, Robert, xvi. 98.
- Clogenson, Commentator on Voltaire's Letters, cited, viii. 299 n.: mentioned also, x. 390.
- Clonmacnoise Manifesto, xvii. 4-6.
- Clonmel stormed, xviii. 54.
- Clootz, Anacharsis, Baron de, account of, iii. 300; collects human species, 328; disparagement of, 330; in National Convention, iv. 201; universal republic of, 239; on nullity of religion, 368; purged from the Jacobins, 392; guillotined, 395.
- Clothes, not a spontaneous growth of the human animal, but an artificial device, i. 4; analogy between the Costumes of the body and the Customs of the spirit, 27; Decoration the first purpose of Clothes, 30; what Clothes have done for us, and what they threaten to do, 81, 43; fantastic garbs of the Middle Ages, 36; a simple costume, 38; tangible and mystic influences of Clothes, 39, 46; animal and human Clothing contrasted 42; a Court-Ceremonial misses Clothes, 47; necessity for Clothes, 49; transparent Clothes, 51; all Emblematic things are Clothes, 55, 204; Genesis of the modern Clothes-Philosopher, 62; Character and conditions needed, 154, 157; George Fox's suit of Leather, 158; Church-Clothes, 162; Old-Clothes, 180; practical inferences, 205; man never altogether a clothes-horse, xlv. 32.
- Clovis, in the Champ-de-Mars, iii. 12.
- Club, Electoral, at Paris, iii. 163, 191; becomes Provisional Municipality, 174; permanent, for arms, &c., 181. See Representatives.
- Club. See Breton, Jacobin, Enraged, Cordeliers, Feuillans, Royalist.
- Club, The Sterling, ii. 152, 153.
- Clubbism, nature of, iii. 354.
- Clubmen, account of, xvii. 211; put down, 213, 214; their designs discovered, 215.
- Clubs in Paris, 1788, iii. 114, 149; in 1790, 308; origin of the tabac, v. 91.
- Clue, De la, Admiral of the Toulon Fleet, x. 292.
- Clugny, M., as Finance Minister, iii. 46.
- Coaches, hackney, in 1654, xviii. 388, 389.
- Cobbett, William, a most brave phenomenon, xv. 416, 460.
- Cobenzl, Count, at Berlin, xi. 379, 409; at Congress of Teschen, 422.
- Coblentz, Royalist Emigrants at, iv. 71, 74, 81-84; vi. 267.
- Cobourg and Dymouriez, iv. 292, 294.
- Cobwebs, a world overhang with, ii. 36, 89.
- Cocceji, Samuel von, Chief Prussian Law-Minister, viii. 324, 396; ix. 33, 34, 64; finishes his Law-Reform, 78, 80; Voltaire's Lawsuit, 137; washes his hands of the sorry business, 143.
- Cocceji, jun., marries Barberina, viii. 324; with Collini at Berlin, ix. 104; at Hochkirch, x. 159 n.

- Cochius, vii. 186, 188.
 Cockades, green, iii. 170; tricolor, 174; black, 236, 240; national, trampled, 239, 241; white, 239.
 Cockburn. See Ormiston.
 Cockburnspath. See Copperpath.
 Cockpit, the, bestowed on Cromwell, xviii. 80.
 Codification, i. 52; the new trade of, xiii. 473; xiv. 833.
 Coehorn's masterpiece, ix. 63.
 Cœur-de-Lion, xii. 45, 103; King Richard, too, knew a man when he saw him, 118.
Cœur-de-Lion, the best of Sterling's Poems, ii. 213, 224, 240, 241; his own account of it, 246.
 Coffinhal, Judge, delivers Henriot, iv. 431.
 Cogniasso, cited, viii. 461 n.; ix. 270 n.; on Camp of Bunselwitz, xi. 46; mentioned also, xii. 413 n.
 Coligny, Duke de, a sinecurist, iii. 65.
 Coligny, Marechal de, viii. 260, 273, 313; at Stockstadt, 334; guarding Brisgau, 394, 398.
 Coke, Chief Justice, xvii. 41; weeps, 60.
 Colberg, Russian siege of, x. 139; again besieged by Russia, 483; siege raised, 490; third and toughest siege of all, xi. 63-68; garrison fairly starved out, 84-87.
 Colbert, vii. 355; ix. 53.
 Colchester, Cromwell's letters to Mayor of, xvii. 137, 146; tumults at, 310; siege of, 321, 346.
 Coleridge, xiv. 5; on Highgate Hill, a Dodona-Oracle, ii. 47, 52; Sterling's assiduous attendance, 54; a magical ingredient in the wild caldron of his mind, 60, 88, 91, 93, 101; waning influence, 124; a lesson for us all, 215.
 Collignon, Colonel, and his recruiting practices, x. 406.
 Collenbach, Plenipotentiary von, xi. 173.
 Collini, Voltaire's Secretary, viii. 324; ix. 104, 105; his first sight of Voltaire, 109; becomes his secretary, 123, 178, 219, 223, 223; at Frankfurt, 229, 236; cited, 105 n.; 478 n.
 Collins's Perage, an excellent book for diligence and fidelity, xvi. 401, 402; xii. 340.
 Collot d'Herbois. See Herbois.
 Coin on the Spree, v. 113.
 Cologne. See Köln.
 Colonial Vice-Kings, xvi. 435.
 Colonial Office, sad experiences in the, ii. 240; Constitutions for the Colonies on the anvil, 396, 400; our Colonies worth something to the Country, 307; new kind of Governors needed, 402.
 Colonies, England's sure markets among her, xii. 267.
 Columbus, royalist Sea-king of all, xii. 193; and the Atlantic, vii. 143.
 Colvil, Lord, in Ireland, xv. 284.
 Combination, value of, i. 102, 222.
 Comines, Philippe de, xi. 288.
 Command and obedience, ii. 413. See Obedience.
 Commerce, new Noblesse of, iii. 15.
 Commissioners, Convention, like Kings, iv. 377, 380, 381.
 Committee, Electoral. See Club, Electoral, Austrian.
 Committee of Defence, iv. 137, 290; Central, 127, 132, 133; of Watchfulness, of Public Salvation, 161, 178, 290, 336, 375, 427; Circular of, 196; of the Constitution, 220; Revolutionary, 229; of Sections, 301; Revolutionary, busy, 358; interim, 1641, xvii. 117; Lincoln, Cromwell's letter to, 142; of Safety, 148; Cambridge, Cromwell's letters to, 149, 156, 157; of Both Kingdoms, account of, 197; of Derby House, 283; Cromwell's letters to, 380, and App. xix. 338; Lancashire, Cromwell's letter to, xvii. 327; York, Cromwell's letters to, 243, 245; of Estates, Cromwell's letters to, 358, 365, 373; xviii. 171, 204; of Army, Cromwell's letter to, 306; of Customs, 329; Cromwell's letter to, 329; Committees of Eastern Association, Lists of, 368-373; of Kingship, — see Kingship.
 Committees, Forty-four Thousand, iv. 338.
 Common-weal, the, was a Common-woe, xvi. 132.
 Commonwealth established, xvii. 404; seal found, 426. See Seals.
 Commons, British House of, i. 32; xvi. 254.
 Commonweal, European, tendency to a, xiv. 343. See Europe, European Revolution.
 Commonwealth of England demanded, xvi. 432.
 Commune, Council General of the, iv. 153; Sovereign of France, 159; enlisting, 161, 178.
 Communes of France, iv. 327.
 Competition and Devil take the hindmost, xii. 178, 181; abatement of, 280.
 Concealment, Efficacies of, i. 165.
 Conciergerie. See Prison.
 Condamine, M. de la, xvi. 88.
 Condé, Prince de, attends Louis XV., iii. 19; emigrates, 196; Town, surrendered, iv. 326; xi. 158.
 Condorcet, Marquis, edits Moniteur, iii. 133; Girondist, iv. 57; prepares Ad-

- dress, 92; on Robespierre, 279; vanishes, 340; death of, 404.
- Conference. See Hampton Court.
- Confians, Admiral, ix. 292; his fleet utterly ruined by Hawke, 369, 373.
- Conisby, Sheriff Thomas, sent prisoner to Parliament, xvii. 131.
- Conquest, no, permanent if altogether unjust, xvi. 62.
- Conrad of Hohenzollern, v. 80; becomes Burggraf of Nürnberg, 84; vi. 239.
- Conrad of Thüringen, v. 98; "whip my Abbot?" 99; plunders Fritzlar, repentance, and Teutsch-Ritter vows, 100.
- Conradin, Boy, last of the Hohenstaufens, v. 105, 106.
- Conscience, leaders of, iii. 13; the only safehold, xiv. 139; singular forms of, 142; not found in every character named human, xii. 107, 219; xv. 253; of the English people, xvi. 92.
- Conscious and unconscious realities, ii. 90, 100.
- Conservatism, noble and ignoble, xii. 10, 13; John Bull a born Conservative, 158; Justice alone capable of being "conserved," 160; vii. 438.
- Constancy the root of all excellence, xiv. 18.
- Constantine of Russia, xi. 452, 453.
- Constituent Assembly. See Assembly.
- Constitution, French, completed, iv. 47-52; will not march, 62, 75, 78; burst in pieces, 150; new, of 1793, 227, 332. See Sieyès.
- Constitution, our invaluable British, i. 188; xvi. 90, 94. See Committee.
- Constitutional Government, vii. 468.
- Constitutions, how built, iii. 210; the true model of, ii. 280.
- Contades supersedes Clermont, x. 112; against Ferdinand in the Rhine Provinces, 176-178; defeated at Minden, 232-240.
- Contagion, spiritual, xiii. 462; xiv. 354.
- Conti, Prince de, joins the Army for relief of Prag, viii. 206; with Broglio at Wolnzach, 233; driven from Degendorf, 235; Army for Italy, 314; in the Middle-Rhine countries, 394, 416, 426; retreats across the Rhine, 474, 475; to be a General-in-Chief of the grand Invasion-of-England Army, x. 372; De Ligne's opinion of him, xi. 283.
- Contrat Social. See Rousseau.
- Convention, National, in what case to be summoned, iv. 50; demanded by some, 89; determined on, 152; coming, 154; Deputies elected, 160, 166, 201; constituted, 211; motions in, 211; work to be done, 220; hated, politeness, effervescence of, 222; on September Massacres, 224; guard for, 225; try the King, 245; debate on trial, 247; invite to revolt, 248; condemn Louls, 251-257; armed Girondins in, 287; power of, 290 (see Mountain, Girondins); removes to Tuileries, 299; besieged (June 2d, 1793), extinction of Girondins, 306-310; Jacobins and, 327; on forfeited property, 358; Carmagnole, Goddess of Reason, 371; awed to silence, 377; Representatives, 377; at Feast of Être Suprême, 407-409; to be butchered? 416; end of Robespierre, 417, 420, 424; retrospect of, 443-445; Féraud, Germinal, Prairial, 446-448; finishes, its successor, 455.
- Conversation, the phenomenon of, xiv. 385; xv. 76; sincere and insincere, 422.
- Conversion, i. 150.
- Conway Castle, fortified, xvii. 274. See Williams.
- Conway, Fieldmarshal, at Langensalza, xi. 26; account of King Friedrich at Potsdam, and at his Silesian Reviews, xii. 361-369; kindly entertained by Lord Marischal, 363, 367.
- Cook, Colonel, at Cambridge, xvii. 130; at Wexford, 479.
- Cook, Captain, at Quebec, xi. 340.
- Cooke, Henry, taken in Suffolk, xvii. 134.
- Cookery, spiritual, v. 16.
- Cooper, Fenimore, what he might have given us, xv. 405.
- Cooper, Anthony Ashley, in Little Parliament, xviii. 299; in Council of State, 334 n.; xvii. 385 n.; in Cromwell's First Parliament, 407; is refused the Lady Mary Cromwell, xix. 54 and n.; in Cromwell's Second Parliament, 58, 62; excluded, 103.
- Coote, Sir Charles, in Ireland, xvii. 465, 491.
- Cope, General, viii. 259, 316.
- Cöpenick, vi. 293.
- Cöper, Secretary, x. 269; xi. 199.
- Copperspath in Scotland, xviii. 106, 124.
- Copper-Captain, Imperial, xix. 491.
- Copyright Bill, Petition on the, xvi. 118.
- Coram, Captain, ix. 283.
- Corday, Charlotte, account of, iv. 313; in Paris, 314; stabs Marat, 316; examined, 317; executed, 318.
- Cordeliers Club, iii. 210 (see Danton); Hébert in, iv. 391; silent, 392.
- Coriolanus, position of, xviii. 423.
- Cork House, Dublin, xviii. 43.
- Corn-Law Rhymes and Rhymer, xvi. 120-149; an earnest truth-speaking man, 120; his bread-tax philosophy, 132; primary idea of all poetry, 135; defects of manner, 137; glimpses into the prophetic Book of Existence, 138;

- the poor workman's hopeless struggle, 141; Enoch Wray, an inarticulate half-audible Epic, 144.
- Corn-laws, unimaginable arguments for the, xii. 7, 26, 147, 168; bitter indignation in every just English heart, 161; ultimate basis of, 168; mischief and danger of, 171, 176, 201; after the Corn-Laws are ended, 180, 242, 247; what William the Conqueror would have thought of them, 207; and Sliding-Scales, xvi. 203.
- Corne, La, in America, ix. 264.
- Cornish heroism, li. 207.
- Cornwallis, Colonel Edward, ix. 253, 255.
- Cornwallis, Lord, xi. 494.
- Cory, John, his letter, xvii. 182.
- Cossack brutality, x. 118, 247, 271, 500.
- Côté Droit, &c. See Side.
- Cothenius, Dr., ix. 150, 176, 188, 220.
- Cotton, Rev. John, character of, xviii. 267, 268; Cromwell's letter to, 268.
- Council of Ancients, of Five Hundred, iv. 455; of State, members of, xvii. 403; first meeting, 409; Cromwell's letter to, xviii. 119; interim, 297, 325; Little Parliament, 334; Cromwell's, 385 n. See List.
- Councils, Church, v. 40; Council of Constance, 152, 156.
- Counties. See Associated.
- Courage, true, vi. 375; xiv. 458; xv. 12.
- Courland, Duke of, vi. 359. See Anne of.
- Court, Chevalier de, and his dagger, lii. 405.
- Court, French Plenary, lii. 96, 102, 103.
- Court-life, teetotum terrors of, xv. 246.
- Courten, Chevalier de, at Berlin, viii. 408.
- Courtenay, Mr. Hugh, royalist, xviii. 455.
- Courtesy due to all men, i. 180.
- Courtier, a luckless, i. 37.
- Couthon, of Mountain, in Legislative, iv. 59; in National Convention, 211; at Lyons, 361; in Salut Committee, 375; his question in Jacobins, 393; decree on plots, 409; arrested, executed, 420, 425.
- Covenant, Scotch, lii. 319, 325; French, 319, 325; Scots, taken by House of Commons, 1643, xvii. 165.
- Covent Garden, soldiers in, xvii. 234.
- Cowardice, xii. 343, 374, 376.
- Cowbridge, a smart little town, ii. 17.
- Cowell, Colonel, killed, xvii. 354.
- Cowper, Colonel, in Ulster, xix. 58.
- Cox, Colonel, Cromwell's letters to, xix. 379, 385.
- Coxe, cited, v. 436 n.; vi. 327 n.; viii. 403 n.
- Crabbe on British Liberty, ii. 288; our fatal Oblivion of Right and Wrong, 334; Administrative Reform, 345; Constituted Anarchy, 387; Ducal Costermongers, 416; Ballot-box, xii. 309; Machine for doing Government, 341; so-called Christian Clerus, 356.
- Cradock, Rev. Mr., xix. 8.
- Cramer, cited, vi. 83 n.
- Cramming, University, xvi. 391.
- Crane, Sir Richard, slain, xvii. 218.
- Craven, Lady, v. 187; vi. 143; xii. 270, 409.
- Crawford, Major-General, notice of, xvii. 176, 178, 179; Cromwell's letter to, 176.
- Creation and Manufacture, xiv. 348; what few things are made by man, xv. 235. See Man, Invention.
- Crébillon, ix. 48.
- Crecy, Battle of, v. 138; x. 18.
- Creed, every, and form of worship, a forma merely, xiii. 139.
- Crefeld, Battle of, x. 112.
- Crequi, Duc de, Ambassador to Cromwell, xix. 277.
- Creutz the Finance-Minister, v. 358; vi. 388.
- Crichton, Lord Sanquhar, xvi. 332.
- Crillon, Duc de, at Weissenfels, x. 6.
- Crillon, jun., xi. 348, 349.
- Crime, purpose and act of, iv. 179.
- Criminals, what to do with our, ii. 326; xii. 341.
- Crinoline, fashion of, xi. 177.
- Criticism, German Literary, xiii. 49; the Critical Philosophy, 72; petty critics, 250. See British.
- Crochardière, M. de la, at Strasburg, vii. 208.
- Crochet, vi. 418.
- Croker's, Mr., edition of Boswell, xiv. 401.
- Cromwell, Oliver, significance of, to the Puritan cause, xvii. 14; modern reaction in favor of, 17; birth, kindred, &c., 20, 21; youth of, 23; house where born, 24; his Father's character, 25; his poverty? 27; related to Earl of Essex, 27; his great-grandfather, 28; the "alias Williams," 31; his Welsh pedigree, 32; origin of the name, 33; death of his grandfather, 34; idle tales of his youth, 35; his schoolmaster, 35; admitted of Cambridge University, 40; death of his father, 43; death of his grandfather, 43; never of any Inn of Court, 44; marries Elizabeth Bourchier, 47; his uncle an M.P., 49; his hypochondria, 50; becomes Calvinist, 50; subscribes to Peoffes Fund, 52; is a Puritan, 52; visit to his royalist uncle, 54; heir to his uncle at Ely, 56; is M.P. for Huntingdon in 1628, 56; returns

- to Huntingdon, 61; first mention of, in Commons Journals, 64; is Justice of Peace, 67; sells his estate, 68. Of his Letters and Speeches, 74; how to read them, 76.
- Cromwell, his life at St. Ives, xvii. 83, 91; stories of, an enthusiast? 90; at Ely, 92; character of by Warwick, 96; draining of Fen Country, 96, and xviii. 296; related to Oliver St. John, xvii. 97; once dissolute? 45, 99.
- Cromwell is M.P. for Cambridge, xvii. 102, 104, and App. xix. 304; delivers Lilburn's Petition, xvii. 107; Sir P. Warwick's description of him, 108; dispute with Lord Mandevill, 109; reproved by Mr. Hyde, 109; time spent at Ely, 116; intends for New England? 117; subscribes £300 to reduce Ireland, 121.
- Cromwell, gets arms for Cambridge, xvii. 121; his soldiers on the alert, 123; is a Captain of Parliament horse, 123; at Edgehill battle, 124; his movements in 1643, 126; is Colonel, 128; his troopers at St. Albans, 131; takes Lowestoff, 123; preserves Associated Counties, 134; relieves Crovland, 140; skirmish at Grantham, 144; takes Stamford, 148; at Gainsborough fight, 148, and App. xix. 311; the beginning of his great fortunes, xvii. 153; is Governor of Isle of Ely, 159; his Ironsides, 160; nearly killed at Winceby, 171; complains of Lord Willoughby, 175; at Marston Moor, 181; proceeds with vigor, 189; complains of Earl Manchester, 190; would fire at the King in battle, 191; an incendiary? 193; besieges Farrington, 200; is Lieutenant-General of the Army, 202; at Naseby Battle, 206; heads Schismatic Party, 210; reduces the Clubmen, 212; at Bristol, 216; on uniformity in religion, 222; famous at sieges, 223; takes Winchester, 224; his justice, 225; takes Basing, 226; his character by Mr. Peters, 229.
- Cromwell, his duplicity? xvii. 258; his true character, 258; very busy, 279; lands voted to, 292; his Free Offer, 295; his two youngest daughters, 298, 299, 300.
- Cromwell in Wales, xvii. 311; goes north, 323; at Preston, 326; at Durham, 352; his justice, 366; at Berwick, 367, 369; at Beaton, and Morav House, Edinburgh, 371; feasted there, 375; at Carlisle, 379; his temper, 386; in London, 399; attends Trial of Charles I., 400.
- Cromwell made one of Council of State, xvii. 403; is Commander for Ireland, 419; routs Levellers, 432; at Oxford, 434; sets out for Ireland, 436; at Bristol, 442; at Dublin, 446; takes Tredah, 458; takes Ross, 485; at Cork, 500; wanted for Scotland, 504; his Declaration to Irish, xviii. 7; at Kilkenny, 33; returns to London, 56.
- Cromwell appointed Commander-in-chief against the Scots, xviii. 95, 102; conversation with Ludlow, 99; in Scotland, 106; his generosity to the Scots, 114; encamps on Pentland Hills, 118; comments on Scots Covenant, 116; at Dunbar, 123, 126; straitened at Dunbar, 125; battle of Dunbar, 125, 143; Letters to Edinburgh Ministers, 151, 164; in Glasgow, 175; Proclamation by, in Scotland, 177; another, on surrender of Edinburgh Castle, 193; in Edinburgh, 195; medal of him, 204-207; Chancellor of Oxford, 209, and App. xix. 360-362, 383; dangerously ill at Edinburgh, xviii. 218, 219, 229; at church in Glasgow, 225, 227; at Allertoun House, 227, 228; pursues the Scots into England, 244; Worcester battle, 248-254; comes to London, 255, 256; his government of Scotland, 258-260.
- Cromwell on future government of the State, xviii. 272, 273; disbands the Rump, 292-294; his mode of public speaking, 326; in Council of State, 334 n.; made Lord Protector, 337; personal appearance of, 337.
- Cromwell removes to Whitehall, xviii. 389; his First Parliament, 398, 399; difficult position of, 422, 423; accident to, in Hyde Park, 449; his Mother dies, 450.
- Cromwell appoints Major-Generals, xviii. 488; xix. 19; assists Piedmont, xviii. 490; xix. 278-287; dines with Triers, xviii. 492; receives Swedish Ambassador, xix. 15; interviews with George Fox, 21, 22, 292, 293; on Popery, 69.
- Cromwell fond of Music, xix. 119; is offered the title of King, 123, 127; recreations while debating Kingship, 151; refuses the title of King, 217; a second time installed Protector, 221; unwell, 238, 243; invincible, 277; age and appearance, 299; last sickness of, 291; death-bed sayings and prayer, 291-297; dies, 3d September, 1658, 298.
- Cromwell's Battles: Edgehill, 23d Oct. 1642, xvii. 124; Grantham, 13th May, 1643, 144, 145; Newbury (first), 20th Sept. 1643, 161; Winceby, 11th Oct. 1643, 170; Marston Moor 2d July, 1644, 181; Cropredy, 30th June, 1644, 189; Newbury (second), 27th Oct. 1644, 189; Naseby, 14th June, 1645, 206, and App. xix. 331-323; Langport, July, 1645, 326; Preston, 17th Aug. 1648,

- xvii. 327, and App. xix. 336; Dunbar, 3d Sept. 1650, xviii. 130-139, and App. xix. 350; Worcester, 3d Sept. 1651, 248-254.
- Cromwell's Letters. (In vol. xvii.) One abstracted, xvii. 54; App. xix. 301; how to read them, xvii. 75; corrections of originals, 77.
- i. To Mr. Storie (St. Ives, 11 Jan. 1635), 91.
 - ii. Mrs. St. John (Ely, 13 Oct. 1638), 92.
 - iii. Mr. Willingham (London, Feb. 1640), 104.
 - iv. R. Barnard, Esq. (Huntingdon, 23 Jan. 1642), 125.
 - v. Deputy - Lieutenants of Suffolk (Cambridge, 10 March, 1642), 130.
 - vi. Mayor of Colchester (Cambridge, 23 March, 1642), 137.
 - Sir Samuel Luke (8 March, 1643), App. xix. 316.
 - vii. Sir J. Burgoyne (Huntingdon, 10 April, 1643), 138.
 - viii. R. Barnard, Esq. (Huntingdon, 17 April, 1643), 140.
 - ix. Lincoln Committee (Lincolnshire, 3 May, 1643), 142.
 - x. Unknown (Grantham, 13 May, 1643), 144.
 - xi. Mayor of Colchester (Lincolnshire, 28 May, 1643), 146; App. xix. 311, 313.
 - xii. Cambridge Commissioners (Huntingdon, 31 July, 1643), 148.
 - xiii. Unknown (Huntingdon, 2 Aug. 1643), 153.
 - xiv. Cambridge Commissioners (Huntingdon, 6 Aug. 1643), 155.
 - xv. Cambridge Commissioners (Peterborough, 8 Aug. 1643), 157.
 - xvi. Suffolk Committee (Cambridge, Sept. 1643), 159.
 - xvii. O. St. John, Esq. (Eastern Association, 11 Sept. 1643), 163.
 - xviii. Suffolk Committee (Holland, Lincolnshire, 28 Sept. 1643), 165.
 - xix. Rev. Mr. Hitch (Ely, 10 Jan. 1643), 173.
 - xx. Major-General Crawford (Cambridge, 10 March, 1643), 175.
 - xxi. Colonel Walton (York, 5 July, 1644), 181.
 - xxii. Ely Committee (Lincoln, 1 Sept. 1644), 185.
 - xxiii. Col. Walton (Sleaford, 6 or 5 Sept. 1644), 187.
 - xxiv. Sir T. Fairfax (Salisbury, 9 April, 1645), 194; App. xix. 317.
 - xxv. Committee of Both Kingdoms (Bletchington, 25 April, 1645), 197.
 - Same (Farrington, 28 April, 1645), App. xix. 319.
- Cromwell's Letters: (in vol. xvii.)
- xxvi. To Governor R. Burgess (Farrington, 29 April, 1645), 199.
 - xxvii. The same, same date, 200.
 - xxviii. Sir T. Fairfax (Huntingdon, 4 June, 1645), 201.
 - By Express. To Deputy-Lieutenants of Suffolk (Cambridge, 6 June, 1645), 203.
 - xxix. Hon. W. Lenthall (Harborough, 14 June, 1645), 205.
 - xxx. Sir T. Fairfax (Shaftesbury, 4 Aug. 1645), 211.
 - xxxi. Hon. W. Lenthall (Bristol, 14 Sept. 1645), 216.
 - xxxii. Sir T. Fairfax (Winchester, 6 Oct. 1645), 223.
 - xxxiii. Hon. W. Lenthall (Basingstoke, 14 Oct. 1645), 225.
 - xxxiv. Sir T. Fairfax (Wallop, 16 Oct. 1645), 231.
 - xxxv. Hon. W. Lenthall (Salisbury, 17 Oct. 1645), 232.
 - xxxvi. T. Knyvett, Esq. (London, 27 July, 1646), 238.
 - xxxvii. Sir T. Fairfax (London, 31 July, 1646), 240.
 - xxxviii. Sir T. Fairfax (London, 10 Aug. 1646), 242.
 - xxxix. J. Rushworth, Esq. (London, 26 Aug. 1646), 244.
 - xl. Sir T. Fairfax (London, 6 Oct. 1646), 245.
 - xli. Mrs. Ireton (London, 25 Oct. 1646), 246.
 - xlii. Sir T. Fairfax (London, 21 Dec. 1646), 248.
 - xliii. The same (London, 11 March, 1646), 253.
 - xliv. The same (London, 19 March, 1646), 255; App. xix. 326, 328, 330.
 - xl. Archbishop of York (Putney, 1 Sept. 1647), 273.
 - xlvi. Col. Jones (Putney, 14 Sept. 1647), 276.
 - xlvii. Sir T. Fairfax (Putney, 13 Oct. 1647), 278.
 - xlvi. The same (Putney, 22 Oct. 1647), 280.
 - xlix. Hon. W. Lenthall (Hampton Court, 11 Nov. 1647), 282.
 - i. Colonel Whalley (Putney, Nov. 1647), 284.
 - li. Dr. T. Hill (Windsor, 23 Dec. 1647), 285.
 - lii. Col. Hammond (London, 3 Jan. 1647), 287.
 - liii. Col. Norton (London, 25 Feb. 1647), 290.
 - liv. Sir T. Fairfax (London, 7 March, 1647), 294.
 - lv. Colonel Norton (Farnham, 28 March, 1648), 296.

Cromwell's Letters: (in vol. xvii.)

- lvi. To The same (London, 8 April, 1648), 397.
- lvii. Colonel Hammond (London, 6 April, 1648), 300.
- lviii. Colonel Kenrick (London, 18 April, 1648), 302.
- lix. Hon. W. Lenthall (Pembroke, 14 June, 1648), 311.
- lx. Major Saunders (Pembroke, 17 June, 1648), 314.
- lxi. Lord Fairfax (Pembroke, 28 June, 1648), 317.
- lxii. Hon. W. Lenthall (Pembroke, 11 July, 1648), 322; App. xix, 334, 338.
- lxiii. Lancashire Committee (Preston, 17 Aug. 1648), 327.
- lxiv. Hon. W. Lenthall (Warrington, 20 Aug. 1648), 329.
- lxv. York Committee (Warrington, 20 Aug. 1648), 343.
- lxvi. The same (Wigan, 23 Aug. 1648), 345.
- lxvii. O. St. John, Esq. (Knaresborough, 1 Sept. 1648), 347.
- lxviii. Lord Wharton (Knaresborough, 2 Sept. 1648), 349.
- lxix. Lord Fairfax (Alnwick, 11 Sept. 1648), 354.
- lxx. Governor of Berwick (Alnwick, 15 Sept. 1648), 355.
- lxxi. Marquis of Argyle, and the well-affected Lords now in arms in Scotland (near Berwick, 16 Sept. 1648), 358.
- lxxii. Committee of Estates (near Berwick, 16 Sept. 1648), 358.
- lxxiii. Earl Loudon (Cheswick, 18 Sept. 1648), 360.
- lxxiv. Committee of Estates (Norham, 21 Sept. 1648), 365.
- lxxv. Hon. W. Lenthall (Berwick, 2 Oct. 1648), 367.
- lxxvi. Lord Fairfax (Berwick, 2 Oct. 1648), 370.
- lxxvii. Committee of Estates (Edinburgh, 5 Oct. 1648), 372.
- lxxviii. Hon. W. Lenthall (Dalhousie, 8 Oct. 1648), 375.
- lxxix. The same (Dalhousie, 9 Oct. 1648), 378; App. xix, 341.
- lxxx. Governor Morris (Ponteфраct, 9 Nov. 1648), 379.
- lxxxi. Derby-House Committee (Knottingley, near Ponteфраct, 15 Nov. 1648), 380.
- lxxxii. Jenner and Ashe (Knottingley, 20 Nov. 1648), 383.
- lxxxiii. Lord Fairfax (Knottingley, 20 Nov. 1648), 387.
- lxxxiv. T. St. Nicholas, Esq. (Knottingley, 25 Nov. 1648), 388.

Cromwell's Letters: (in vol. xvii.)

- lxxxv. To Colonel Hammond (Knottingley, 25 Nov. 1648), 390.
- lxxxvi. Master and Fellows of Trinity Hall, Cambridge (London, 18 Dec. 1648), 399.
- lxxxvii. Rev. Robinson (London, 1 Feb. 1648), 405.
- lxxxviii.-xc. R. Mayor, Esq., on Richard Cromwell's Marriage (12 Feb. to 8 March, 1648), 408-412.
- xc. Dr. Love (London, 14 March, 1648), 414.
- xcii.-xcvi. R. Mayor, Esq., on Richard Cromwell's Marriage (14 March, 1648, to 15 April, 1649), 416-424.
- xcvii. Hon. Sir James Harrington (London, 9 July, 1649), 436.
- xcviii. Hon. W. Lenthall (London, 10 July, 1649), 438.
- xcix. R. Mayor, Esq. (Bristol, 19 July, 1649), 440.
- c. The same (Milford Haven, 13 Aug. 1649), 443.
- ci. Mrs. R. Cromwell (Milford Haven, 13 Aug. 1649), 444.
- cii. Hon. W. Lenthall (Dublin, 22 Aug. 1649), 447.
- ciii. Governor of Dundalk (Tredah, 12 Sept. 1649), 456.
- civ. President Bradshaw (Dublin, 16 Sept. 1649), 457.
- cv. Hon. W. Lenthall (Dublin, 17 Sept. 1649), 458.
- cvi. The same (Dublin, 27 Sept. 1649), 465.
- cvii. The same (Wexford, 14 Oct. 1649), 467.
- cviii.-cxi. Siege of Ross (17-19 Oct. 1649), 470-483.
- cxii. Hon. W. Lenthall (Ross, 25 Oct. 1649), 484.
- cxiii. R. Mayor, Esq. (Ross, 13 Nov. 1649), 487.
- cxiv. Hon. Thomas Scott (Ross, 14 Nov. 1649), 488.
- cxv. Hon. W. Lenthall (Ross, 14 Nov. 1649), 489.
- cxvi. The same (Waterford, Nov. 1649), 495; App. xix, 502-505.
- cxvii. The same (Cork, 19 Dec. 1649), 500.
- cxviii. Right Hon. Lord Wharton (Cork, 1 Jan. 1649), 506; App. xix, 345.
- (In vol. xviii.)
- cxix. To Hon. W. Lenthall (Castletown, 15 Feb. 1649), 25.
- cxx. Governor of Cahir Castle (Cahir, 24 Feb. 1649), 31.
- cxxi. President Bradshaw (Cashel, 5 March, 1649), 32.

Cromwell's Letters: (in vol. xviii.)

- cxlii.-cxlviii. Kilkenny Siege (22-27 March, 1649-50), 32-42.
 cxlix. Dublin Commissioners (Carrick-on-Suir, 1 April, 1650), 43.
 cxxx. Hon. W. Lenthall (Carrick, 2 April, 1650), 44.
 cxxxi. R. Mayor, Esq. (Carrick, 2 April, 1650), 51.
 cxxxii. Richard Cromwell, Esq. (Carrick, 2 April, 1650), 52.
 cxxxiii. Hon. W. Lenthall (London, 20 June, 1650), 101.
 cxxxiv. R. Mayor, Esq. (Alnwick, 17 July, 1650), 103.
 cxxxv. President Bradshaw (Musselburgh, 30 July, 1650), 106.
 cxxxvi. General Assembly (Musselburgh, 3 Aug. 1650), 110.
 cxxxvii. General Leslie (Camp at Pentland Hills, 14 August, 1650), 116.
 cxxxviii. Council of State (Musselburgh, 30 Aug. 1650), 119.
 cxxxix. Sir A. Haselrig (Dunbar, 2 Sept. 1650), 124.
 cxl. Hon. W. Lenthall (Dunbar, 4 Sept. 1650), 134.
 cxli. Hon. Sir A. Haselrig (Dunbar, 4 Sept. 1650), 141.
 cxlii. President Bradshaw (Dunbar, 4 Sept. 1650), 143.
 cxliii. Mrs. E. Cromwell (Dunbar, 4 Sept. 1650), 145.
 cxliv. R. Mayor, Esq. (Dunbar, 4 Sept. 1650), 146.
 cxlv. Lieut.-Gen. Ireton (Dunbar, 4 Sept. 1650), 147.
 cxlvi. Right Hon. Lord Wharton (Dunbar, 4 Sept. 1650), 149; App. xix. 350, 351.
 cxlvii. Governor Dundas (Edinburgh, 9 Sept. 1650), 153.
 cxlviii. Governor Dundas (Edinburgh, 12 Sept. 1650), 156.
 cxlix. President Bradshaw (Edinburgh, 25 Sept. 1650), 166.
 cl. Committee of Estates (Linlithgow, 9 Oct. 1650), 171.
 cli. Col. Strahan (Edinburgh, 25 Oct. 1650), 174.
 clii. Lord Borthwick (Edinburgh, 18 Nov. 1650), 178.
 cliii. Hon. W. Lenthall (Edinburgh, 4 Dec. 1650), 180.
 cliv.-clx. Siege of Edinburgh Castle (12-18 Dec. 1650), 184-192.
 clxi. Hon. W. Lenthall (Edinburgh, 24 Dec. 1650), 194.
 clxii. Col. Hacker (Edinburgh, 25 Dec. 1650), 197.
 clxiii. Gen. Lealey (Edinburgh, 17 Jan. 1650), 199.

Cromwell's Letters: (in vol. xviii.)

- clxiv. To Committee of Estates (Edinburgh, 17 Jan. 1650), 203.
 clxv. Committee of Army (Edinburgh, 4 Feb. 1650), 205.
 clxvi. Rev. Dr. Greenwood (Edinburgh, 4 Feb. 1650), 209.
 clxvii. The same (Edinburgh, 14 Feb. 1650), 212.
 clxviii. Hon. W. Lenthall (Edinburgh, 8 March, 1650), 214.
 clxix. The same (Edinburgh, 11 Mar. 1650), 216.
 clxx. President Bradshaw (Edinburgh, 24 March, 1650), 218.
 clxxi. Mrs. E. Cromwell (Edinburgh, 12 April, 1651), 219.
 clxxii. Hon. A. Johnston (Edinburgh, 12 April, 1651), 222.
 clxxiii. Mrs. E. Cromwell (Edinburgh, 3 May, 1651), 228.
 — Hammond (Edinburgh, 3 May, 1651), App. xix. 355. clxxiv. President Bradshaw (Edinburgh, 3 June, 1651), 230.
 clxxv. Hon. W. Lenthall (Linlithgow, 21 July, 1651), 232.
 clxxvi. President Bradshaw (Dundas, 24 July, 1651), 234.
 clxxvii. The same (Linlithgow, 26 July, 1651), 236.
 clxxviii. R. Mayor, Esq. (Burntisland, 28 July, 1651), 237.
 clxxix. Hon. W. Lenthall (Burntisland, 29 July, 1651), 240.
 clxxx. The same (Leith, 4 Aug. 1651), 240.
 clxxxi. Lord Wharton (Stratford-on-Avon, 27 Aug. 1651), 246.
 clxxxii. Hon. W. Lenthall (near Worcester, 3 Sept. 1651), 251.
 clxxxiii. The same (Worcester, 4 Sept. 1651), 252.
 clxxxiv. Rev. J. Cotton (London, 2 Oct. 1651), 267.
 clxxxv. Mr. Hungerford (London, 30 July, 1652), 279.
 clxxxvi. A. Hungerford, Esq. (Cockpit, 10 Dec. 1652), 285.
 clxxxvii. Lieut.-General Fleetwood, (Cockpit, 1652), 287.
 clxxxviii. Mr. Parker (Whitehall, 23 April, 1653), 295; App. xix. 365.
 clxxxix. Lieut.-General Fleetwood, (Cockpit, 23 Aug. 1652), 329; App. xix. 368.
 cxc. Committee of Customs (Cockpit, Oct. 1653), 331.
 xcxi. H. Weston, Esq. (London, 16 Nov. 1653), 332.
 xcxi. R. Mayor, Esq. (Whitehall, 4 May, 1654), 339.

Cromwell's Letters : (in vol. xviii.)
 exciii. To Lord Fleetwood (Whitehall, 16 May, 1654), 390.
 exciv. Col. Alured (16 May, 1654), 392.
 excv. Sir T. Vyner (Whitehall, 5 July, 1654), 394.
 excvi. R. Bennet, Esq. (Whitehall, 12 Jan. 1654), 451.
 excvii. Capt. Unton Crook (Whitehall, 20 Jan. 1654), 452; App. xix. 373-379.
 [In vol. xix.]
 excviii. To Gen. Blake (Whitehall, 13 June, 1655), 3.
 — Edmund Waller (Whitehall, 13 June, 1655), App. 377.
 excix. Lord Fleetwood (Whitehall, 23 June, 1655), 6.
 xc. Secretary Thurloe (Whitehall, 28 July, 1655), 11.
 cci. Gen. Blake (Whitehall, 30 July, 1655), 13.
 ccii. General Blake (Whitehall, 13 Sept. 1655), 16.
 cciii. The Maryland Commissioners (Whitehall, 26 Sept. 1655), 18.
 cciv. Gen. Goodson (Whitehall, Oct. 1655), 27.
 ccv. D. Serie, Esq. (Whitehall, Oct. 1655), 30.
 ccvi. General Fortescue (Whitehall, Nov. 1655), 32.
 ccvii. Henry Cromwell (Whitehall, 21 Nov. 1655), 35.
 ccviii. The same (Whitehall, 21 April, 1656), 40.
 ccix. Generals Blake and Montague (Whitehall, 28 April, 1656), 42.
 ccx. The same (Whitehall, 6 May, 1656), 45.
 ccxi. Gresham College Committee (Whitehall, 9 May, 1656), 48.
 ccxii. Richard Cromwell (Whitehall, 29 May, 1656), 49.
 ccxiii. Henry Cromwell (Whitehall, 26 Aug. 1656), 55.
 ccxiv. Generals Blake and Montague (Whitehall, 28 Aug. 1656), 59.
 ccxv. Mayor of Newcastle (Whitehall, 18 Dec. 1656), 106.
 ccxvi. Cardinal Mazarin (Whitehall, 26 Dec. 1656), 108.
 ccxvii. Parliament (Whitehall, 25 Dec. 1656), 123.
 ccxviii. General Blake (Whitehall, 10 June, 1657), 220; App. 353, 384.
 ccxix. Gen. Montague (Whitehall, 11 Aug. 1657), 223.
 cxxx. J. Dunch, Esq. (Hampton Court, 27 Aug. 1657), 224.
 ccxxi. General Montague (Hampton Court, 30 Aug. 1657), 225.

Cromwell's Letters: (in vol. xix.)
 ccxxii. To Sir W. Lockhart (Whitehall, 31 Aug. 1657), 226.
 ccxxiii. The same, same date, 229.
 ccxxiv. Gen. Montague (Whitehall, 2 Oct. 1657), 231.
 ccxxv. Sir W. Lockhart (Whitehall, 26 May, 1658), 278; App. 388.
 (In App. vol. xix.)
 To Mr. H. Downhall (Huntingdon, 14 Oct. 1636), 301.
 Mr. Hand (Ely, 13 Sept. 1638), 303.
 Mayor of Cambridge (London, 8 May, 1641), 306.
 Deputy-Lieutenants of Norfolk (Cambridge, 26, 27 Jan. 1642), 306, 309.
 Hon. W. Lenthall (Lincoln, 29 July, 1643), 311.
 Sir John Wray (Eastern Association, 30 July, 1643), 314.
 Sir T. Fairfax (Bletchington, 24 April, 1645), 317.
 Committee of Both Kingdoms (Farringdon, 28 April, 1645), 319.
 Capt. Underwood (Huntingdon, 6 June, 1645), 325.
 A Worthy Member of the House of Commons, (Langport, July, 1645), 326.
 Colonel Cicely (Tiverton, 10 Dec. 1645), 324.
 Hon. Sir D. North (London, 30 March, 1647), 325.
 Hon. W. Lenthall, on Army Troubles (Saffron Walden, 3, 8, 17 May, 1647), 329-331.
 Carmarthen Committee (Pembroke, 9 June, 1648), 332.
 Colonel Hughes (Pembroke, 26 June, 1648), 332.
 Mayor, &c. of Haverfordwest (12 July, 1648), 334.
 The same (14 July, 1648), 335.
 Derby House Committee (Wigan, 23 Aug. 1648), 336.
 Committee of Derby House (Norham, 20 Sept. 1648), 338.
 Hon. W. Lenthall (Boroughbridge, 28 Oct. 1648), 341.
 Waterford Correspondence (21-24 Nov. 1649), 342-344.
 Lieutenant-General Farrell (Cork, 4 Jan. 1649), 345.
 Colonel Phayr (Fethard, 9 Feb. 1649), 349.
 John Sadler, Esq. (Cork, 31 Dec. 1649), 346.
 Hon. Sir A. Haselrig (Dunbar, 5 Sept. 1650), 350.
 Hon. Sir A. Haselrig (Edinburgh, 9 Sept. 1650), 350.
 Hon. W. Lenthall (Edinburgh, 28 Dec. 1650), 352.

- Cromwell's Letters: (in App. vol. xix.)
 To the same (Glasgow, 25 April, 1651), 353.
 The same (Edinburgh, 10 May, 1651), 354.
 The same (Edinburgh, 13 June, 1651), 355.
 Mayor of Doncaster (Ripon, 18 Aug. 1651), 356.
 Hon. W. Lenthall (Evesham, 8 Sept. 1651), 357.
 The same (Chipping Norton, 8 Sept. 1651), 358.
 Elizabeth Cromwell (Cockpit, 15 Dec. 1651), 359.
 Sequestration Committee (Cockpit, Dec. 1651), 360.
 Dr. Greenwood of Oxford (Cockpit, 12 April, 1652), 360.
 Lord Wharton (Cockpit, 30 June, 1652), 363.
 Dr. Walton (Whitehall, 16 May, 1653), 365.
 Lieutenant-Colonel Mitchell (Whitehall, 18 May, 1653), 365.
 Cardinal Mazarin (Westminster, 19 June, 1653), 368.
 Sir Bulstrode Whitlocke (Whitehall, 2 Sept. 1653), 368.
 Cardinal Mazarin (Whitehall, 26 Jan. 1653), 368.
 Mayor of Lynn Regis (Whitehall, 30 Jan. 1653), 368.
 Sir J. Wilde (Whitehall, 24 March, 1654), 373.
 Mayor of Gloucester (Whitehall, 24 March, 1654), 374.
 Cardinal Mazarin (Whitehall, 29 June, 1654), 369.
 Hon. W. Lenthall (Whitehall, 22 Sept. 1654), 371.
 The same (Whitehall, 5 Oct. 1654), 372.
 President of Rhode Island (Whitehall, 29 March, 1655), 377.
 Captain J. Leverett (Whitehall, 3 April, 1655), 378.
 Colonel A. Cox (Whitehall, 24 April, 1655), 379.
 Edmund Waller (Whitehall, 13 June, 1655), 377.
 Colonel H. Brewster (Whitehall, 26 Oct. 1655), 380.
 Vice-Chancellor of Oxford (Whitehall, 3 July, 1657), 383.
 Bailiffs of Oswestry (Whitehall, 13 July, 1657), 384.
 Mayor of Gloucester (Whitehall, 2 Dec. 1657), 385.
 Colonel Fox (Whitehall, 4 Feb. 1657), 385.
Commanders of Gloucester Militia (Whitehall, 11 March, 1657), 387.
- Cromwell's Letters: (in App. vol. xix.)
 To Vice-Chancellor of Cambridge (Whitehall, 28 May, 1658), 388.
 The same (Whitehall, 22 June, 1658), 387.
- Cromwell's Speeches:
 I. Opening of the Little Parliament, 4 July, 1653, xviii. 300-325.
 II. Meeting of the First Protectorate Parliament, 4 Sept. 1654: 400-419.
 III. To the same Parliament, 12 Sept. 1654: 424-446.
 IV. Dissolution of the First Protectorate Parliament, 23 Jan. 1654-5: 458-482.
 V. Meeting of the Second Protectorate Parliament, 17 Sept. 1656: xix. 63-102.
 VI. To the same, 23 Jan. 1656-7: 114-118.
 VII. To the same, 31 March, 1657: 128-130.
 VIII. To a Committee of the Second Protectorate Parliament, 3 April, 1657: 131-134.
 IX. To the Second Protectorate Parliament in a body, 8 April, 1657: 135-138.
 X. Conference with the Committee of Ninety-nine in regard to the title of King, 11 April, 1657: 141-151.
 XI. Second Conference with the same, 13 April, 1657: 152-168.
 XII. Third Conference with the same, 20 April, 1657: 170-176.
 XIII. Fourth Conference with the same, 21 April, 1657: 179-212.
 XIV. To the Second Protectorate Parliament in a body, 3 May, 1657: 214-216.
 ["xv." should be] To the Second Protectorate Parliament, 25 May, 1657: 382.
 XV. To the same, 9 June, 1657, on the presentation of some Bills for assent: 219.
 XVI. To the Two Houses of Parliament; Opening of the Second Session of the Second Protectorate Parliament, 20 Jan. 1657-8: 238-244.
 XVII. To the same Parliament, the Commons having raised debates as to the Title of the other House, 25 Jan. 1657-8: 247-266.
 XVIII. Dissolution of the Second Protectorate Parliament, 4 Feb. 1658: 268-272.
- Cromwell, what he did, xiv. 434; xvi. 75, 92, 200; his worth in history, 396; his Protectorate, 397, 398; dead body hung on the gibbet, 438; i. 427; his hypochondria, 431, 436; his early marriage and conversion, a quiet farmer, 431; his Ironsides, 434; his Speeches, 437,

- 452; his "ambition," and the like, 440; dismisses the Kump Parliament, 448; Protectorship and Parliamentary Futilities, 450; his last days, and closing sorrows, 454; his terrible lifelong wrestle, xii. 20; was by far our remarkablest Governor, 215; Christianity of, ii. 325, 328, 408; his Protestant war, 393; his notion of "voting," 314, 317; his Statue, 324; Sterling's feeling about him, 243, 245; what a German Cromwell might have done, v. 214; Cromwell and his Puritans, 217, 267, 289; his time, vii. 473; his soldiers, ix. 74; his worth to England, 433; his Ironsides, x. 66; Cromwell and Attila, xi. 310.
- Cromwell, Mrs. Elizabeth, letters from Oliver Cromwell to, xviii. 145, 219, 228; letter to Oliver Cromwell from, 200; retired to Norborough, 220.
- Cromwell, Elizabeth (sister of Protector), Oliver's letter to, xix. 358.
- Cromwell, Frances, and Mr. Rich, xix. 51-54; married, 54, 234.
- Cromwell, Henry (son of Protector), is of Grav's Inn, xvii. 45; is a captain, 290; in Ireland, xviii. 33, 221; in Little Parliament, 287, 334 n.; in First Parliament, 399; in Ireland, good conduct of, xix. 7, 8; appointed Lord Deputy, 8; Oliver Cromwell's letters to, 35, 41, 57; Mary, letters to, 39, 52.
- Cromwell, list of his Brothers and Sisters, xvii. 21; of his Uncles and Aunts, 26, 27 n.; of his Children, 68, 69.
- Cromwell, Major, wounded at Bristol, xvii. 220.
- Cromwell, Mary, her letters to Henry, xix. 39, 52; married, 54, 234.
- Cromwell, Oliver (son of Protector), Cornet of Horse, xvii. 418; death of, 475 n.
- Cromwell, Oliver, Memoirs of the Protector by, xvii. 54 n.
- Cromwell, Richard, Protector's great-grandfather, xvii. 28-33.
- Cromwell, Richard (son of Protector), character, xvii. 290; married, 404; death of, 496; his Wife, 426; Cromwell's letter to his Wife, 444; Oliver's letters to, xviii. 52; xix. 49; in first Parliament, xviii. 398; his estate, 51 n.
- Cromwell, Mrs. Richard, her child, xviii. 103.
- Cromwell, Robert (eldest son of Protector), his death in early manhood, xvii. 48 n.; his father's grief for, 183; xix. 291.
- Cromwell, Thomas, Earl of Essex, xvii. 24; Oliver related to, 27.
- Cromwells in the Civil War, xvii. 55.
- Cronström, Commandant of Bergen-op-Zoom, ix. 62.
- Crook, Captain Unton, xviii. 454; Cromwell's letter to, 454; pursues Wagstaff and Penruddock, 486.
- Cropredy. See Battle.
- Cross, Cheapside and Charing, destroyed, xvii. 145. See St. Paul's.
- Crossen, vi. 443.
- Croydon Races, a quarrel at, xvi. 333.
- Croyland relieved, xvii. 140.
- Croze, La, vii. 25.
- "Crucify him!" a considerable feat in the suppression of minorities, xvi. 304, 307; ii. 291. See "Ou' clo'."
- Crusades, the, xii. 112; xiii. 476.
- Crussol, Marquise de, guillotined, iv. 403.
- Cudworth, Dr., of Cambridge, xix. 48.
- Cuissas, massacred at La Force, iv. 186.
- Culloden, victory of, viii. 444.
- Culmbach, Margraf of, v. 184; Friedrich founder of the Elder Line, 188; Casimir, a severe, rather truculent Herr, 189; Margraf George and his connection with the King of Hungary, 190; gets the Duchy of Jägerndorf, 192; noble conduct in the Reformation, 194; at the Diet of Augsburg, 195; few truer specimens of the Honest Man, 198; his Son and Brothers, 198; troubles with Albert Akibladus, 209; Diagram of the Elder and Younger Culmbach Lines, 309 a. See Friedrich George of.
- Cumberland, Duke of, viii. 188; at Dettingen, 246, 257; in the Netherlands, 431; ix. 66, 67; at Fontenoy, viii. 432; at Culloden, 444; disagreements with the Duke of Newcastle, ix. 303, 304; takes command of Britannic Army, 382; to little purpose, 431, 478; aiming to oust the Duke of Newcastle, 431; opposition to Pitt, 437, 439; defeated at Hastenbeck, 489; Convention of Kloster-Zeven, 508; returns home and resigns his military offices, 510; mentioned also, viii. 332, 415; ix. 83, 150.
- Cunningham's Friedrich's Last Review, xii. 495 n.
- Cupar Muir, fight at, xii. 442.
- Curates abolished, iv. 369.
- Currie's, Dr., Life of Burns, xiii. 257.
- Cusay, Giroudin, retreats to Bordeaux, iv. 323.
- Custine, General, takes Mentz, &c., iv. 217; retreats, 281; blamed, 313, 327; guillotined, 339; his son guillotined, 357.
- Custom, the greatest of Weavers, i. 195; reverence for, xii. 158. See Habit.
- Customs and morals, iv. 200.

- Cüstrin, v. 235, 273, 275; Friedrich a prisoner at, vi. 283, 291; Katta's execution, 297; Friedrich's life at, 328; a rugged little town, with strong castle, 120; town burnt by the Russians, 117, 120, 121.
- Czarina. See Elizabeth, Catharine.
- Czartoryskies, the Polish, xi. 248, 251, 252.
- Czernichef, General, prisoner at Zorn-dorf, x. 140; with Soltikof in Silesia, 468, 479; marches on Berlin, 491, 493, 498; with Loudon in Silesia, xi. 50, 69, 75; ordered home by Czar Peter, 112; to join himself with Friedrich, 112; with less advantage than expected, 115; joins with him at Lissa, 135; recalled home, 140; generously stays three days, 141.
- Czetteritz, General, taken prisoner, with his copy of Military Instructions, x. 408.
- DAG, xix. 465, 467.
- Dahlmann, xix. 395, 419, 470: cited, 391.
- Dalberg, Wolfgang, Heribert von, brief account of, xx. 290.
- Dalbier, Colonel, at Basing siege, xvii. 227; account of him, 233; in revolt at Kingston, 321.
- Dalegarth Hall, notice of, xvii. 407.
- D'Alembert, xiv. 112.
- Dalgetty, Dugald. See Turner, Sir James.
- Dalhousie, Cromwell at, xvii. 376.
- Dalrymple, Major, at Berlin, xi. 379, 380, 509.
- Dalwig, Lieutenant-Colonel, x. 523; xi. 68, 416.
- Danas, Colonel Comte de, at Clermont, iv. 29, 30; at Varennes, 35.
- Damiens, ix. 381.
- Dampierre, General, killed, iv. 313.
- Dampmartin, Captain, at riot in Rue St. Antoine, iii. 127; on state of the Army, 351; on state of France, 393; at Avignon, iv. 67; on Marseille, 121.
- Dandoin, Captain, Flight to Varennes, iv. 24, 28.
- Dandy, mystic significance of the, i. 205; dandy worship, 208; sacred books, 209; articles of faith, 210; a dandy household, 214; tragically undermined by growing drudgery, 216; the genus, xii. 126.
- Danegelt, xix. 421, 438, 439.
- Danes in England, xix. 430; possessions of, massacre, 438.
- Danes, the, seize Schleswig-Holstein, xi. 106, 107.
- Danger, Scots Committee of, xvii. 296.
- Daniel, Colonel, at Inverkelthing fight, xviii. 234.
- Dankelmann, v. 47.
- Dante, i. 314; xv. 317, 458; biography in his Book and Portrait, 314; his birth, education and early career, 315; love for Beatrice, unhappy marriage, banishment, 316; uncourtier-like ways, 317; death, 318; his Divina Commedia genuinely a song, 319; the Unseen World, as figured in the Christianity of the Middle Ages, 324; "uses" of Dante, 327; ii. 319; v. 106, 118, 121.
- Danton, an earthborn, yet honestly born of earth, xv. 309; on government, xviii. 423; notice of, iii. 134; President of Cordeliers, 229; astir, 241, 297; and Marat, 303; served with writs, 303; in Cordeliers Club, 310. elected Councillor, 409; Mirabeau of Sansculottes, iv. 57; takes presents, 75; in Jacobins, 96; for Deposition, 118; of Committee (August Tenth), 127, 133; Minister of Justice, 153, 163; "faire peur," "de l'audace," 177; after September Massacre, 199; after Jemappes, 235; and Robespierre, 238; in Netherlands, 242; at King's trial, 252; on war, 263; rebukes Marat, 277; peace-maker, 278; "name be blighted," 283; and Dumouriez, 288; in Salut Committee, 290; breaks with Girondins, 297; his law of Forty sous, 336; and Revolutionary Government, 377; and Paris Municipality, 376; suspect, 392; retires to Arcis, 393; and Robespierre, 396; arrested, 397; prison-thoughts, 398; trial of, 398-400; guillotined, 401; character, 401.
- Dantzic, siege of, vi. 465, 483; not to belong to Friedrich, xi. 319.
- Danz, Dr., ix. 96.
- D'Arget, viii. 139; saves Valori from Pandours, 487; despatched to Friedrich at Dresden, ix. 17; letter to Valori describing his interview with the King, 17-21; taken into Friedrich's service, 21, 32, 113, 124, 178.
- Darlington, Countess of, v. 430; vi. 62, 294.
- Darmstadt, Landgravine of, visits the Czarina with her daughters, xi. 348. See Ernst Ludwig.
- Dashkof Princess, xi. 125.
- Daun, Leopold Graf von, viii. 294; under Bärenklau at Stockstadt, 334; advances to relief of Prag, ix. 414; retreats on hearing of the Prussian victory, 424; order from Vienna to proceed, 448; battle of Kolln, 448; orders retreat, 460; order disobeyed, 460; victory, 461; makes no chase of the Prussians,

- 462, 470; the first chief of the Order of Maria Theresa, 463; with Prince Karl, following the Prince of Prussia, 484; following Bevern, x. 36; at Breslau, 48; Leuthen, 56, 69; supersedes Prince Karl, 70; guarding the Bohemian Frontier, 94; on march to assist Olmütz, 96; at Leutomischl, 98; sits on his magazine, clear not to fight, 99; Bos against Leo, 99; encamps at Gewitsch, watching Friedrich, 100; gets cautiously on foot again, 102; gets reinforcements into Olmütz, 102; aware of Friedrich's convoys, 104; attack on Mosel, 105-108; siege of Olmütz ended, 109; cautiously follows Friedrich to Königgrätz, 111; to recapture Saxony, while Friedrich is engaged with the Russians, 140; at Zittau, 141; near Meissen, hears of Friedrich's approach, 144; a note sent to Fermor unexpectedly answered, 145; retires to Stolpen, 146; encamps ahead of Friedrich at Kittlitz, 148; surprisal of Friedrich in his camp at Hochkirch, 153; consecrated hat and sword from the Pope for his victory, 166, 207; cannot prevent Friedrich reaching Silesia, 169; tries to get Dresden, 170; wheels homeward, unsuccessful, 173; puzzled at having to take the offensive, 206; encamps near Mark-Lissa, 206, 212; content to play jackal to the Russian lion, 213; expects always to succeed by help of others, 275, 277; cannot persuade Soltikof to do all his fighting for him, 282-285; determines on siege of Dresden, 292; informs Soltikof of his success, 310; reason to be proud of his cunctatory method, 311; carting endless provisions for self and Soltikof, 312; almost captures Ziethen at Sorau, 316; sits on his magazine at Bautzen, 318; dare not attack Prince Henri, 318; concessions to Soltikof, 319; will attack Prince Henri to-morrow, 325; finds only an empty camp, Prince Henri vanished in unknown space, 326; Prince Henri out-manceuvres him in Saxony, 334; is compelled to retreat on Dresden, 334; going at his slowest step, 344; hears uncomfortably that Finck is at Maxen, but decides to attack, 348; three simultaneous assaults, 352; captures Finck and his whole army, 355; also another outpost of Friedrich's at Meissen, 358; dare not attack Friedrich, 358; contents himself with holding Dresden, 360; Vienna nightcaps, in token of his talent for sleep, 360; xl. 150; in winter-quarters, x. 361; again to have chief command in the new campaign, 406; continues near Dresden, 417, 424; intrenched and palisaded to the teeth, 424, 428; intercepts Friedrich's march for Silesia, 428-434; arrives to relief of Dresden, 440; safe on his northern side, 441; attends Friedrich's march into Silesia, 463-466; battle of Liegnitz, 469; his beautiful plan all gone to distraction, 476, 477; indolently allows Friedrich to get clear away, 479, 480; and has a troublesome time with him in consequence, 484-487; sends Lacy to join the Russians in seizing Berlin, 491; ordered to maintain Saxony, 504; inexpugnably encamped at Torgau, 506; moves to Eilenberg, 507; returns to Torgau, 508; attacked by Friedrich, 518; furious slaughter on both sides, 518-529; thinks the victory his, 524; defeat and swift retreat, 528; at Plauen, 529; his return to Vienna, 530; takes charge of Saxony, xi. 40, 41; attacks Prince Henri's outposts, 86; takes command in Silesia against Friedrich, 133, 134; skilfully defends himself, 137, 138; attacked and defeated by Friedrich at Burkersdorf, 138-144; attempts to break in on Friedrich's siege of Schweidnitz, 148, 149; defeated at Reichenbach, and gives up the enterprise, 150; his fighting all over, 156, 157; dies some three years afterwards, 157; mentioned also, 281.
- Dauphiness, the, intercedes for Polish Majesties, ix. 334.
- David, the Hebrew King, i. 277; xvi. 341; his Psalms, vii. 106; ix. 522.
- David, Painter, in National Convention, iv. 202; works by, 328, 386, 406; hamlock with Robespierre, 418.
- Davy, John. See Theauro.
- Dawkins, Admiral, a Major-General, xix. 19 n.
- Dean, Col., at Preston, xvii. 236; in Ireland, 488; General, in Scotland, xviii. 235; Major-General, at Worcester battle, 251; in Dutch War, 277.
- Dean, Cornet, Leveller, pardoned, xvii. 433.
- Death, nourishment even in, i. 82; kingly idea of, lii. 20; the seal and immortal consecration of Life, xiv. 358, 359; Eternity looking through Time, xv. 8; if not always the greatest epoch, yet the most noticeable, 16; eternal, xii. 223. See Life.
- Debentures of soldiers, xvii. 298.
- Deblin, Cordwainer, works against Browne at Breslau, vii. 322; ix. 69.
- Debt, xii. 90; National, sublime invention of, x. 186.
- Declaration, against Army, xvii. 269; expunged, 270; by Cromwell, 252;

- by Cromwell to the Army in Ireland, 248; by Cromwell to Irish, xviii. 7; by Charles Stuart against his Father, 118; by Lord General and Council of Officers, 296; of Parliament, xvii. 59.
- Defand, Madame du, ix. 51; letter from D'Alembert to, xi. 205.
- Deficit, Mirabeau on, iii. 233.
- Defoe, xiii. 273.
- Degenfeld, vi. 197; vii. 85.
- Deggendorf, viii. 235.
- Delinquents, Staffordshire, xvii. 245; are searched out, 292, 407; xviii. 278.
- Demikof, General (Thémicoud), with Fermor invading Prussia, x. 120; Zorn-dorf, 133, 134.
- Democracy, on Bunker Hill, iii. 9; spread of, in France, 45, 46, 116; stern Avatar of, xiv. 172; xv. 238; true meaning of, xvi. 74; Machiavelli's opinion of, 398; to complete itself, 431; xii. 202; close of kin to Atheism, 209; walking the streets everywhere, 241; an inevitable fact of the days we live in, ii. 268; not a "Kind of Government," 273; no Nation that could ever subsist upon, 277; the essence of whatever truth is in it, that the able man be promoted in whatever rank he is found, 370, 379.
- Demoussieu, Newspaper, ix. 172, 191; his eavesdropping account of Friedrich and his Court, 192-203; identification of, x. 377, 379.
- Demosthenes and Phocion, xvi. 408.
- Denbigh, Earl, and Duke Hamilton, xvii. 413; in Council of State, 413.
- Dendy, Edward, Sergeant-at-arms, xvii. 403.
- Denial and Destruction, xiii. 212, 405, 451; xiv. 442; xv. 85, 140; xvi. 148; change from, to affirmation and reconstruction, xiv. 319, 373.
- Denina comes to Berlin, xii. 454.
- Denis, Madame, xiv. 337; keeps house for Voltaire, ix. 109, 148; an expensive gay lady, 115; joins Voltaire in his Frankfurt troubles, 230, 231, 235; mentioned also, 238.
- Denmark. See Christian II. and IV. of; Friedrich IV. of; Danes.
- Dennington Castle, xvii. 190, 225.
- Departments, France divided into, iii. 287.
- Derby, Earl, routed at Wigan, xviii. 244; taken at Worcester, 255; beheaded, 255.
- Derby House. See Committee.
- Derby, Lord, xvi. 435.
- Derschau, vi. 36, 232, 355; vii. 18, 135; continued in office, 163.
- Desborow, Captain, at Cambridge, xvii. 199; Major, at Bristol siege, 218; Colonel, at Conference at Speaker's, xviii. 271-273; in Council of State, 334 n., 385 n.; made Major-General, 487; xix. 19 n.; on Committee of Kingship, 131; against title of King, 217; one of Cromwell's Lords, 236.
- Deschamps, M., vii. 82.
- Descriptive Power, vii. 396.
- Desèze, Pleader, for Louis, iv. 245, 264.
- Desfontaines, vii. 53; viii. 214; ix. 45.
- Deshuttes, massacred, October Fifth, iii. 270.
- Desilles, Captain, in Nanci, iii. 369.
- Deslons, Captain, at Varennes, iv. 35; would liberate the King, 37.
- Desmoulins, Camille, notice of, iii. 134; in arms at Café de Foy, 170; Editor, his title, 228; on Insurrection of Women, 243; in Cordeliers Club, 310; and Brissot, iv. 98; in National Convention, 201; on Sansculottism, 291; on plots, 303; suspect, 392; for a committee of mercy, 393; ridicules law of the suspect, 394; his Journal, 394; his wife, 398; trial of, 398-400; guillotined, 401; widow guillotined, 401.
- Despotism reconciled with Freedom, xii. 270.
- Dessau, v. 320. See Leopold of.
- Destiny, didactic, xii. 38.
- Dettingen, vi. 266; Battle of, vii. 434; viii. 246, 257.
- Devil, internecine war with the, i. 11, 92, 128, 140; cannot now so much as believe in him, 126; become an emancipated gentleman, xvi. 428; constant invocation of the, 452; his Elect in England, ii. 313; principal function of a, ix. 192.
- Déville, to try what he can do on Silesia, x. 141, 143, 146; hurries homewards, 170; makes an unsuccessful dash at Leobschütz, 204; at Landshut, 314; cashiered by Daun, 318.
- D'Ewes, Sir Simonds, High-Sheriff of Suffolk, xvi. 267; his immaculate election affidavits, 268; sat spotless for Sudbury, 289; took Notes of the Long Parliament, 289; purged out with some four or five score others, 289; xvii. 398; value of his MS. Notes, xvi. 290; notices of Cromwell, xvii. 121 n.: cited, 107, 132, 194, 386.
- Diamond Necklace, the, xv. 226-301; the various histories of those various Diamonds, 234; description of, 238; it changes hands, 279; Diamonds for sale, 285; extraordinary "Necklace Trial," 290.
- Diaze, Jean, xii. 414.
- Dick, Sir William, notice of, xvii. 374.
- Dickens, Captain Guy, vi. 188, 211, 218, 229, 281, 289, 315, 364; audiences with

- King Friedrich, vii. 186, 280: cited, 146 n.; ix. 63.
- Diderot, prisoner in Vincennes, iii. 402; xv. 88-161; his Father, 91; education, 92; precarious manner of life, 97; his marriage, 104; general scoundrelism, 105; authorship, 107; his letters, 111; incredible activity, 122; garbled proof-sheets, 123; free open-handed life in Paris, 126; visits Petersburg, 129; death, 132; mental gifts, 133; a proselyting Atheist, 134; utter shamelessness and uncleanness, 142; brilliant talk, 143; literary facility, 145; neither a coward nor in any sense a brave man, 150; visits Russia, xi. 349.
- Dierecke, Colonel, at Zittau, ix. 488; captured at Meissen, x. 359.
- Dieskau, Artillery-General, at Siege of Schweidnitz, xi. 155.
- Dieskau, Camp of, viii. 427, 477.
- Dietrich, Prince, of Anhalt-Dessau, viii. 181, 140; able soldier-like conduct, 141; at Olischau, 142, 392; sent to reinforce his Father, 478: mentioned also, ix. 14 n., 307.
- Dietrichstein, Graf von, xi. 270.
- Dietzman, the Thüringian Landgraf, v. 118.
- Dieulafoi, xi. 448.
- Digby, Captain, in the attack on Confians's fleet, x. 371.
- Dilettantes and Pedants, i. 53; patrons of Literature, 97.
- Dilettantism, reign of, xii. 47, 115, 121, 165; xiv. 55; gracefully idle in Mayfair, 147.
- Dilworth, Life &c. of Frederick, vii. 385, 385 n.
- Dingelfingen, burned by Daun, viii. 233.
- Dinners, defined, iii. 238; English public, xii. 289. See Guards.
- Diogenes, i. 160.
- Diplomacies, Imbroiglio of, viii. 17, 74, 79; huge, 407.
- Diplomatists, Devil-, vi. 103; an undiplomatic reflection, 125, 228; Smelfungus on Modern Diplomacy, 217; heavy-footed diplomacy, vii. 88.
- Directorate, seats of, iv. 459.
- Discipline in French Army, nature of, iii. 347-349; value of, viii. 10.
- Dismal Science, the, xvi. 298; Professors of, ii. 800, 398.
- Ditzmarch-Stade Markgraves, v. 71.
- Dives, Sir Lewis, notice of, xvii. 215.
- Divines, Westminster Assembly of, xvii. 106, 165, 173, 251.
- Divorce, new Sacrament of, ii. 283.
- D'O, Colonel, helplessly loses Glatz, x. 444, 445; court-martial, 445.
- Do-nothing, the vulgar, contrasted with the vulgar Drudge, xvi. 128.
- Dobryn, Knights of, v. 97.
- Dockum, General, vi. 320.
- Dodd, Dr., at French races, iii. 49.
- Dodsworth, Captain, character of, xvii. 137.
- Doeg, W. H., xi. 390 n.
- Dogs, dead, floating in the Westminster region, ii. 448.
- Dohm, cited, v. 331 n.; on Friedrich's Excise-system, xi. 210: mentioned also, 488 n.
- Dohna, tacit dusky figure, v. 350.
- Dohna, General, succeeds Lehwald in Pommern, x. 82, 96, 112; defends Frankfurt bridge against Fermor, 120; at Görgast, 122; sudden panic in his troops at Zorndorf, 130, 132; pursues Fermor, 139; marches for Saxony, 170; sent against the Russians, 212, 216; can do nothing on Soltikof, 217; superseded by Wedell, 218, 219.
- Dohna, Graf von, at Vienna, viii. 340.
- Dolgorucki, Prince, Russian Ambassador at Berlin, xi. 379.
- Dollar, origin of the word, ix. 339.
- Dollart, the, ix. 152, 153.
- Doll's shoes, a feat accomplished, ii. 182.
- Dombåle, General, with Zweibrück marching to Saxony, x. 141, 142.
- Domstadt, Pass of, x. 106.
- Donauwörth under ban, v. 253.
- Dönhof, vi. 304, 321.
- Donnel, O', with Daun at Torgau, x. 524, 526.
- Doon Hill, Scots Army at, xviii. 124.
- Doppet, General, at Lyons, iv. 363.
- Döring's Gallery of Weimar Authors, xiii. 4.
- Dorisslaus, Dr., notice of, xvii. 279, 399.
- Dorn, Freytag's clerk, ix. 233, 235.
- Dörnberg, Minister von, xi. 437.
- Dorothea, Electress, v. 47, 293, 296.
- Douai. See Parlement.
- Double-Marriage, the famous, of Prussia and England, v. 425, 440; Treaty cannot be signed, 464; grown plainly hopeless, vi. 51; yet far from dead, 87; re-emerges in an official shape, 92; drawing to an end, 150; England favorable, 168, 187; effulgent flaming-point, 173; as good as extinct, 196; ended, 227; revived, but to no purpose, 436.
- Doubt can only be removed by Action, i. 148; withering influence of, xiii. 212; the inexhaustible material which Action fashions into certainty, xiv. 367. See Infidelity, Scepticism, belief.
- Douglas, Will, his rhymes on Cromwell, xvii. 478.

- Douglas, his Scotch Peerage cited, viii. 188 n.; x. 91 n.
- Downhall, Mr., ejected, xvii. 86; account of, xix. 302; Cromwell's letter to, 301.
- Downing Street, ii. 339-376; reform in, 344, 356; two kinds of fundamental error, 347; abler Men in, 358, 379, 390; one such indispensable, 362, 371; xii. 305; a small Project of improvement, 364; the New, 376-417; what it might grow to, hard to say, 384; work enough before it, 396, 411.
- Draper, Brigadier-General, xi. 96 n.
- Drayton, Fen, Warrant to people of, xvii. 128.
- Dream of Enoch Wray, xvi. 186.
- Dresden, Friedrich's Visit to, vi. 70; fortified against the Prussians, viii. 243, 245; opens its gates to Friedrich, ix. 15; Treaty of, 23, 23, 68; Friedrich again enters and takes possession, 323; besieged and partially burnt by the Austrians, x. 173; surrendered by Schmettau, 293-301; capitulation scandalously ill kept, 306-309; furiously besieged by Friedrich, 426-443; bombardment of, xiii. 335.
- Driesen, at Leuthen, ix. 62, 63.
- Drogheda. See Tredah.
- Drouet, Jean B., notice of, iv. 26; discovers Royalty in flight, 27; raises Varennes, 32; blocks the bridge, 32; defends his prize, 35; rewarded, 51; to be in Convention, 174; captured by Austrians, 382.
- Drudgery contrasted with Dandyism, i. 211; "Communion of Drudges," and what may come of it, 215.
- Drummer, the Little, v. 359.
- Drury Lane, Cromwell lives in, xvii. 246.
- Drusus Germanicus, v. 56.
- Dryasdust, the Prussian, v. 12; vi. 177, 192; doing History, v. 20, 94, 164, 310; x. 45; Societies, xvii. 4, 5, 9.
- Dryden's cousin, xviii. 334 n.
- Dubarry, Dame, and Louis XV., iii. 4, 5; flight of, 24; imprisoned, iv. 352; her foul day done, xv. 238.
- Dublin, Cromwell in, xvii. 446; Cromwell's letter to Commissioners at, xviii. 48.
- Dubois-Crance, bombards Lyons, iv. 334; takes it, 360.
- Dubois, Cardinal, v. 436; ugliest of created souls, 456; vii. 43.
- Dubois killed at Kloster Kampen, x. 535 n.
- Dubourgay, vi. 62, 78, 123, 151, 164; Correspondence about the Double-Marriage, 62, 128, 148; proves Grumkow's treachery, 155; arrival of Hotham, 170; conversation with the King of Prussia, 170.
- Duchâtel votes wrapt in blankets, iv. 254; at Caen, 311.
- Duchene. See Père.
- Ducos, Girondin, iv. 57.
- Duelling, a picture of, i. 137; in French Revolution, iii. 390; xiv. 268.
- Dugdale, Lieutenant, xi. 293.
- Dugommier, General, at Toulon, iv. 363, 380.
- Duhamel, killed by Marseillaise, iv. 132.
- Duhan de Jandun, v. 359, 374, 409, 413; vi. 287; King Friedrich's thoughtfulness for, vii. 162; ix. 26.
- Duke of Trumpa, the, and his domestic service, xvi. 308.
- Duke, no one, in England so well lodged and tended as our prisoner-scoundrels, ii. 312; Ducal Costermongers, 416.
- Dukinfield, Governor of Chester, xvii. 318.
- Dulaure, cited, viii. 333 n.
- Dumb busy generations, v. 317, 323, 335.
- Dumont's Souvenirs sur Mirabeau, xv. 312; iii. 233, 413.
- Dumoulin, Colonel, vi. 272, 276.
- Dumoulin, in Silesia, viii. 451, 454, 456; Hohenfriedberg, 458; follows the Austrians into Bohemia, 468.
- Dumouriez, notice by, iii. 5; account of him, 297; in Brittany, iv. 9; in dressing-gown at Nantes, 20; in La Vendée, 71; sent for to Paris, 85; Foreign Minister, 97; dismissed to Army, 106; disobeys Lückner, 119; Commander-in-Chief, 155; his army, 173; Council of War, 175; seizes Argonne Forest, 175, 204; Grand-Pré, 205; and mutineers, 206; and Marat in Paris, 217; to Netherlands, 217; at Jemappes, 225; in Paris, 250; discontented, 262; retreats, 280; traitor? 280, 287; beaten, 287; will join the enemy, 292; arrests his arresters, 294; escapes to Austrians, 295; at Bilitz, xi. 282.
- Dunbar, Archbishop, xii. 429.
- Dunbar town described, xviii. 123; Cromwell at, 106, 114, 122, 123; battle of, 180-133; prisoners, sufferings of, 144 n.; xix. 350, 351; in New England, xviii. 268. See Battle.
- Duncannon, ships taken at, xvii. 422.
- Dunch of Pusey, John, collector of letters, xvii. 405; marries Ann Mayor, xviii. 240; in Cromwell's First Parliament, 399; Cromwell's letter to, xix. 224.
- Duncon's, Samuel, election affidavits, xvi. 270.
- Dundalk, Governor of, Cromwell's letter to, xvii. 456.
- Dundas, Governor Walter, letter to General Whalley, xviii. 152; letters to,

- from Cromwell, 153, 156, 185, 186, 187, 188, 191, 192; his letters to Cromwell, 155, 186, 187, 188, 191, 192.
- Dundee stormed by General Monk, xviii. 257.
- Dunkirk taken, viii. 187; xix. 232, 277; Louis XV. at, 337.
- Dunn, the Rev. Mr., ii. 124.
- Dunse, Scotch Encampment on the Hill of, xvi. 181; Law, Scots Army at, xvii. 101.
- Duperret, Girondin, draws sword in Convention, iv. 298; papers sealed, Charlotte Corday, 325.
- Dupes and Impostors, xvi. 67; Dupes and Quacks, xii. 27; a kind of inverse cheats, ii. 371.
- Dupont, Deputy, Atheist, iv. 248.
- Dupont, Adrien, in Paris Parlement, iii. 80; in Constituent Assembly, one of a trio, 214; law-reformer, 285.
- Duportail, in office, iii. 398.
- Duquesne, M., ix. 254, 258.
- Duquesne Fort, x. 175.
- Duren, Van, Printer of Anti-Machiavel, vii. 191; and Voltaire at Frankfurt, ix. 231.
- Durham College, xviii. 215-218.
- Düringshofen, Colonel, Battalion captured at Griefenberg, x. 205.
- Durosoy, Royalist, guillotined, iv. 164.
- Dusaulx, M., on taking of Bastille, iii. 203; notice of, iv. 192; will demit, 308.
- Düsseldorf, v. 250; vi. 270; a dinner-scene at, v. 258.
- Dutch War, xviii. 277, 289; Treaty, 388.
- Dutch, the, disinclined to join in the Austrian-Succession War, vii. 443; torpid response to his Britannic Majesty's enthusiasm, viii. 6, 187, 220; Carteret, strongly pulleying, succeeds in raising them, 239; Republic, end of the, ix. 60; Revolt, the world-famous, v. 252, 260, 263; Dutch Traders and Karl, vi. 451.
- Dutertre, in office, iii. 398.
- Duty, no longer a divine Messenger and Guide, but a false earthly Phantasm, i. 123, 125; infinite nature of, 148; xiv. 447; xv. 420; duty made easy, 150; i. 263, 294, 305, 325; xii. 108, 114; sceptical spiritual paralysis, i. 398.
- Duvernet, Biographer of Voltaire, ix. 113 n., 122, 124; cited, vii. 45 n.; viii. 281 n.; ix. 111 n.; xii. 405 n.
- FARLE, SIR WALTER, sent to Charles I., xvii. 242.
- Fbert, cited, xi. 13 n.
- Eckart, Prussian Finance Minister, dismissed, vii. 171.
- Economics, necessity of, xii. 90; national, v. 323, 337. See Thrift.
- Edda, the Scandinavian, i. 250.
- Edelsheim, Herr von, x. 384, 389, 418.
- Edelstein*. See Boner.
- Eden-House Correspondence, xi. 381 n., 384 n.
- Edgehill. See Battle.
- Edgeworth, Abbé, attends Louis, iv. 256; at his execution, 260.
- Edgeworth, Frank, account of, ii. 125.
- Edinburgh, riot in, xvii. 93; Cromwell in, 371, 375; Scots Army near, xviii. 109, 121, 122; Ministers and Cromwell, 151-164, 168; Castle besieged, 163, 184-194; High Church, Cromwell in, 168; Castle surrenders, 192-194.
- Editor's first acquaintance with Tenfeldröckh, and his Philosophy of Clothes, i. 6; efforts to make known his discovery to British readers, 8; admitted into the Tenfeldröckh watch-tower, 16, 26; first feels the pressure of his task, 30; his bulky Weissnichtwo Packet, 57; strenuous efforts to evolve some historic order out of such interminable documentary confusion, 60; partial success, 68, 77, 118; mysterious hints, 153, 178; astonishment and hesitation, 188; congratulations, 203; farewell, 220.
- Editor's, the, purpose to himself full of hope, xii. 38; his stipulated work, 268; interest in Friedrich, v. 14, 16; difficulties, vii. 39, 426; viii. 183; early recollections, ix. 31; note of 1863 on "A Day with Friedrich," xi. 511.
- Editors in 1789, iii. 227; times of perplexity, xvi. 121.
- Edmund Ironside, xix. 442.
- Edmund, St., xii. 51; on the rim of the horizon, 108; opening the shrine of, 119.
- Edmundsbury, St., xii. 47.
- Education, influence of early, i. 72; insignificant portion depending on Schools, 78; educational Architects, 81; the inspired Thinker, 173; real and so-called, xvi. 106, 110, 125; how young souls are trained to live on poison, 225; frightful waste of faculty and labor, 342; Service, an effective, possible, xii. 256; Minister of, ii. 206, 414; modern education all gone to tongue, 417; how it was in the old healthy times, 322; mainly trusted with the Clergy at present, 127; Sterling's opinion on, 179; the boy Friedrich's, v. 375; his father's notion of, 377, 408, 416, 422; vi. 3; influence of Nature, v. 391; teaching Religion, 412; Mother-wit squandered for long-earned erudition, vi. 39.

- Edward I. of England, v. 115.
Edward II., v. 134.
Edward III., v. 130.
Egalité, Philippe, xv. 371. See Orléans, Duke d'.
Eginhart and Emma, viii. 250.
Eglantine, Fabre d', in National Convention, iv. 203; assists in New Calendar, 330; imprisoned, 393.
Ehrenbreitstein, vi. 267.
Eichel, Prussian Secretary of State, vii. 171, 260, 404; viii. 293, 428; captured by Nadasti, 497; at Dresden, ix. 18; at Potsdam, 195, 196; sends keys to Dresden, 265; Prince Henri writes to, complaining of the King, xi. 101, 102; he consults with Nüssler about his ruined district, 193.
Eichsted, Franz von, v. 175.
Eighteenth Century, the, prosaic, xiii. 260, 306; in it all the elements of the French Revolution, 408, 454; xv. 84, 110, 344; an era of Cant, xiv. 412; Hypocrisy and Atheism dividing the world between them, 442; xv. 134; xvi. 82; Industrial victories of, 95; the sceptical, i. 393-399, 427; the fraudulent, and its suicidal end, v. 9; heroism in the, vii. 175.
Einar Tamberskelver, xix. 434, 473.
Einsiedel, General, has charge of Prag, viii. 355, 376; to quit Prag for Silesia, 378; his perilous retreat, 379; Hochwald, the hardest brush of all, 381; passes through Saxon territory, his last march, 383.
Elbe River, rise of the, viii. 488, 489; passes through Saxon Switzerland, ix. 327.
Elbingerode, Belleisle arrested at, viii. 399.
Elcheset, Sieur d', ix. 507.
Electing and electioneering, the meaning of, ii. 359; xii. 306.
Election for States-General, iii. 118.
Election, the one important social act, xii. 75; electoral winnowing-machines, 78, 84.
Election, the, a mock-heroic poem by Sterling, ii. 250; description, portrait of Mogg, a pretty picture, 209.
Electors. See Kurfürsts.
Eleven Members, the. See Members.
Elie, Captain, at siege of Bastille, iii. 187, 189; after victory, 190.
Eliot, Sir John, motion by, xvii. 59; dies in the Tower, 64.
Elizabeth, Princess, flight to Varennes, iv. 17; August 10th, 144; in Temple prison, 232; guillotined, 403.
Elizabeth, Queen of England, xx. 151; tuned the pulpits, v. 208; xvii. 64.
Elizabeth Christina, Empress, v. 444; vi. 369, 426; vii. 262.
Elizabeth Christina, of Brunswick-Bevern, vi. 367, 374; chosen for Friedrich, 375; what he thought of her, 380, 383, 385, 391, 433, 449; her Betrothal, 389; Wedding, 451; grand entrance into Berlin, Wilhelmina's Portrait of her, 453; her honest, guileless heart, 454; happy days at Reinsberg, vii. 23, 27, 122; Friedrich's gradual estrangement, 170; viii. 182, 185; Demon Newswriter's account of, ix. 201; visited by Friedrich, xi. 179, 457, 458; mentioned also, 505, 509.
Elizabeth, Czarina, vii. 364, 368; chooses a successor to the Swedish King, viii. 305; on good terms with Friedrich, 306, 308; takes offence at Friedrich, vii. 367; viii. 412; takes part with Saxony, ix. 4; increasing ill-will to Friedrich, 67, 82, 147 n.; in secret treaty with Austria, 274, 279; worked upon with cunningly devised fabrications, 281-284; will not be reconciled to Friedrich, 293; Hanbury William's account of her, 294, 295; takes possession of East-Prussen, x. 77, 78; fixed enmity to Friedrich, 182; signs peace-proposals, which end in nothing, xi. 29; her death, 104; makes her nephew Peter heir, 107; Catherine's respect for her, 110; lying in state, 122; funeral, 123.
Elizabeth Farnese, Queen of Spain, v. 406; her quarrel with Karl VI., 446, 452, 457; vi. 99; the little Spanish Infanta sent back from France, v. 458; Siege of Gibraltar, vi. 54, 88 n.; league with France, 469; West Indian procedures, vii. 102. See Termagant of Spain.
Elizabeth Frederike Sophie marries the Duke of Württemberg, ix. 77; finds it impossible to live with him, 78; visits Voltaire at Ferney, xi. 341-345; beautiful and unfortunate, 346.
Elizabeth, first wife of Crown-Prince of Prussia, chastises a custom-house officer, xi. 212; her marriage and divorce, 211-213.
Elizabeth of Russia, vi. 85.
Elizabeth, Saint, v. 98, 100.
Elizabeth, wife of Joachim I., v. 220; Protestantism, and escape to Lichtenberg, 221, 222; visits Luther, 223.
Elizabethan Era, i. 329; xvi. 95.
Eller, Dr., Chemist, vii. 136; viii. 292; ix. 422.
Elliott, at Emsdorf, x. 452.
Elliott, Excellency Hugh, at Berlin, xi. 378; letter about Friedrich, 379; commits a surprising piece of burglary,

- 383, 384; few men with less appetite for such a job, 386.
- Eloquence, long-eared, how to acquire the gift of, xv. 196; unperformed, a cure for, ii. 426.
- Elphegus baptizes Tryggvason, xix. 422.
- Elphinstone, Captain, in the Russian-Turk War, xi. 293; takes his tea in the Dardanelles, and throws up his command, 294.
- Elsner's preaching, viii. 429.
- Elton, Mr., builds ships for Nadir Shah, ix. 102.
- Ely, scene in Cathedral of, xvii. 174; fortified, 186; Charity, xix. 302, 303; Commission of peace in, 325; stove of the Monks at, v. 62.
- Emanuel, Prince of Portugal, vi. 461.
- Emblems, all visible things, i. 55.
- Emigrants, law against, iii. 404 (see Coblenz); errors of, iv. 82; regiment of, 204; retreat with Prussians, 215.
- Emigration, i. 174; first French, iii. 196, 223; second, 276, 380; iv. 42; necessary, xii. 266; xiv. 380; xvi. 112.
- Emilie. See Madame du Châtelet.
- Emma, Knut's widow, xix. 470.
- Empson, Lieut., in Scotland, rescues General Lambert, xviii. 108; character and promotion, 197, 198.
- Ensdorf, Fight of, x. 452.
- Endorf, Johann von, v. 129.
- Engagers, the, xvii. 369.
- England declares war on France, iv. 263, 282; gains Toulon, 333; condition of, question, xvi. 36, 46; England guilty towards Ireland, 53, 55; Eras of England, 85-99; whose the proprietorship of England, 88; two tasks assigned, 90; education of, 110; over-population, 113; her History worthy of study, 386-402; piety in, 441; History of, an Iliad, or even almost a kind of Bible, 444; needs to be rebuilt once every seventy years, 451; "prestige" of, on the Continent, 453; full of wealth, yet dying of inanition, xii. 3; the guidance of, not wise enough, 29, 261; England of the year "1200," 45, 48, 63, 109, 235; disappearance of our English forests, 97; this England, the practical summary of English Heroism, 131; now nearly eaten up by puffery and unfaithfulness, 140; real Hell of the English, 142; of all Nations, the stupidest in speech, the wisest in action, 163, 165; unspoken sadness, 166; conservatism, 158; Berserkir rage, 160; a Future, wide as the world, if we have heart and heroism for it, 268; in 1642, xvii. 122; deluded by Cant, xviii. 262; under Cromwell, xix. 55; and her unattainable "Model Constitution," ii. 288; called "a second time" to show the Nations how to live, 289; still contains many Kings, 289, 383; how the Devil provides for his own in England, 313; English veracity, fidelity, 318; what England wants, 346, 360, 395; and does not want, 351, 409; a strange feeling to be at the apex of English affairs, 372; England with the largest mass of real living interests ever intrusted to a Nation, 383; means to keep her Colonies a while yet, 397, 400; Englishmen dare not believe the truth, 407; English careers to born genius, 431; England's hope in her younger sons, 455; no longer an earnest Nation, xii. 298, 301; time of accounts fast arriving, 347; English Peerages once authentically real, 361; the English ramadhan, 362; poor scantling of "divine convictions," 280; the History of England, the record of Divine Appearances among us, 390; our restless gnawing ennui, the painful cry of an imprisoned heroism, not always to lie imprisoned, 399. See British Nation.
- English genius, xvii. 7; ix. 300; character of, xvii. 7, 57, 58, 65, 116; manifold style of, ii. 85; stoical pococurantism, 122; wise chiefly by instinct, 228.
- English Volunteers at the Siege of Jülich, v. 256; English treatment of the great Marlborough, 203, 442; how England got drilled into human order, 336; England and George I., 428; vi. 60; first triumph of the "Constitutional Principle," v. 431; vi. 61; English self-complacency, v. 434; Parliaments, vi. 30, 34, 185; an English Change of Ministry, 169; English influence on Voltaire, vii. 47; English thick-skin penetrated, 104, 197.
- English-Spanish War, merits of the, vii. 250, 388, 432, 436, 486; English Army and English Navy, 261; English share in the Austrian-Succession War, 444; viii. 12; English Parliament under Walpole, vii. 468; real cause of the War with Spain, 472; English toughness, 483; vii. 262, 266; tragic stupidity, vii. 485; what became of the Spanish War, 486; viii. 8, 12; a Disciplined England, 9; England with a George II. for Chief Captain, 23, 296; "Perfidious Albion," 200, 266.
- English indignation against Friedrich, viii. 344; ix. 247; their dull fire of deliriums, viii. 365; their mad method of fighting, 443; quarrel with Spain, ix. 69; Privateer controversy with Friedrich, 154, 245, 247; freedom of the Ocean Highway, 251; no prepara-

- tion for war, 288, 300-302; Prussian-English Neutrality Convention, 292, 293; relation to Hanover, 296; French-English War, 300; English treaties with Prussia, 382, 383; Government imbecility, 430; hour of tide for England, 432; joy at news of Rossbach and Leuthen, x. 25, 71-73; four subsidies, 84-86; enthusiasm about Friedrich, 85, 87; troops to join Ferdinand, 176; National Debt, 187; French invasion preparing, 224; damaged by Rodney at Havre, 225; by Boecawen, off Cadiz, 291, 292; capture of Quebec, 335, 336; America to be English and not French, 340; England lucky to have a King, though a temporary, in Pitt, 341; victory in India, 343; Confians's fleet and the French Invasion-scheme utterly spoiled by Hawke, 369-373; English soldiers under Duke Ferdinand, xi. 60, 61; love for their horses, 60; war with Spain, and its results, 92-96, 160; liberty of the seas, English America, universal uproar of "Unexampled Prosperities," 177; the Constitutional system, 382.
- Ennisecorthy Castle taken, xvii. 468; surprised, xviii. 25.
- Ennui, xii. 400.
- Enraged Club, the, iii. 114.
- Ense's, Varnhagen von, Memoirs, xvi. 3-35; his peculiar qualifications, 6; visit to Jean Paul, 8; fighting at Wagram, 14; his experiences at the Court of Napoleon, 18; Rahel, his Wife, a kind of spiritual queen in Germany, 23; her letters, 25; brilliant talk, 26; death, 31.
- Envy, a putrid corruption of sympathy, xv. 20.
- Epaminondas, ix. 52.
- Ephraim, a Berlin Jew, ix. 130, 131, 135; coins base money for Friedrich, x. 190, 498; xi. 7.
- Epic Poems, v. 18.
- Epic, modern, xx. 116; the old, believed Histories, xiv. 389; the true Epic of our Time, 390.
- Episcopacy in danger, xvii. 118. See Church-government.
- Epoch, a bewildered, ii. 38, 101.
- Equality (see Liberty), reign of, iv. 165.
- Era, a New, began with Goethe, xv. 8, 13, 64. See Spiritual.
- Erasmus, xii. 407; xiii. 28; his ape, xvii. 117.
- Erasmus Reinhold, v. 208.
- Erfurt, v. 99; entered by General Oldenburg, ix. 429.
- Erfurt, Menzel's brother-in-law, ix. 266, 267.
- Eric Blood-axe, xix. 396; sons of, made kings, 406.
- Eric, Jarl, xix. 413, 481, 484; governor of Norway, 485.
- Erlach, Major-General, xi. 482, 483.
- Erlangen, v. 89; vi. 409.
- Erman, cited, v. 31 n., 44 n., 286 n.; ix. 216 n.
- Ernest the Pious, ix. 515.
- Ernesti, Professor, xi. 10.
- Ernst August. See Bishop of Osnabrück.
- Ernst, Elector, v. 27, 50, 78.
- Ernst Ludwig of Darmstadt, vi. 264; addicted to "Ivory-turning," 265.
- Error, and how to confute it, xiv. 6.
- Erthorn, Van, of Embden, x. 87; complaint to Friedrich against him, 87, 88.
- Escuyer, Patriot l', at Avignon, iv. 66.
- Esmonda, the, seat of, xvii. 468.
- Espagnac, Biographer of Comte de Saxe, &c., cited, vi. 83 n.; viii. 68 n., 338 n.
- Espréménil, Duval d', notice of, iii. 80; patriot, speaker in Paris Parlement, 82, 85; with crucifix, 93; discovers Brienne's plot, 97; arrest and speech of, 98-100; turncoat, 143; in Constituent Assembly, 213; beaten by populace, 406; guillotined, iv. 403; his widow guillotined, 410.
- Essen, General Von, xi. 263.
- Essex, Henry Earl of, xii. 105, 219.
- Essex, Earl, General of Parliament Army, xvii. 123; is discontented, 145; relieves Gloucester, 161; is defeated in Cornwall in 1644, 188; is pensioned and dies, 194; funeral of, 248.
- Essex, Earl of, has many Hanbury papers, ix. 85.
- Estaing, Count d', notice of, iii. 226; National Colonel, 252, 256; Royalist, 259; at Queen's trial, iv. 340.
- Estate, Third, in 1614, iii. 113; what it is in 1788, and will do, 115, 117; deputies to (1789), 141 (see States-General); a separate order? 148; inertia, 149; declares itself "National Assembly," 155; Fourth, of Editors, &c., 227.
- Esterhazy, Prince, at Presburg, viii. 208; in Berlin, x. 497.
- Fatoc, L', returns from Siberia, xi. 119.
- Fatras, d', Maréchal, invades Prussia, ix. 381; something of a soldier, 430, 478; battle of Hastenbeck, 489, 490; superseded by Richelieu, 497, 508; profligate condition of his army, x. 27, 28; with Soubise in his final Campaign, xi. 145; Cannonade of Amöneburg, 158, 159.
- Etampes. See Simoneau.
- Etat, Tiers. See Estate, Third.
- External Melodies and grinding Discords, ii. 88.

- Eternity looking through Time, i. 17, 56, 169.
- Ethelred the Unready pays Danegelt, xix. 421, 422; condition of England under, 436; driven into Normandy, 437, 438, 470.
- Etienne, Printer, xii. 407.
- Etiquette, acme of. See Brézé.
- Etoile, beginning of Federation at, iii. 319.
- Etons and Oxfords, with their broken crumbs of mere speech, ii. 413, 454.
- Etruscan pottery, xvi. 451.
- Ettlingen, Lines of, vi. 480.
- Eugene, v. 26, 300, 321; vi. 436, 441; a bright little soul, growing very old and snuffy, v. 450; his crowning feat, 263 n.; receives Friedrich Wilhelm, vi. 425, 428; his Rhine Campaign, 474, 481, 496, 505; Friedrich's respect for him, xii. 469.
- Euler, vii. 167; Curator of the Berlin Academy, ix. 210.
- Eure, Lord, one of Cromwell's Lords, xix. 236.
- Europe, like a set of parishes, xv. 435; modern revolutionary, xvi. 66; overcrowded, 116. See Commonwealth, Feudal.
- European explosions of "1848," ii. 265; wars since Cromwell, 393; modern luxurious Europe, xii. 392.
- Evangelical Union, v. 252, 256, 267, 269; vi. 400.
- Evelyn of Wilts, Sir John, in Derby-House Committee, xvii. 289.
- Everard, Leveller, xvii. 427.
- Eversmann, vi. 311.
- Evil, origin of, i. 144; nature of, iii. 37; speculations on the origin of, xiv. 366; evil, in the widest sense of the word, 370; manfully fronted, xvi. 105; no evil ever wrought its own cure, ii. 378. See Badness, Right and Wrong.
- Ewer, Colonel, takes Chepstow Castle, xvii. 311; presents Army Remonstrance, 388; succeeds Colonel Hammond, 396; at Tredah, 473; at Kilkenney, xviii. 37, 39, 47.
- Exchange, Royal, has been twice burned, xvii. 88.
- Exeter, Bishop of, resemblance between the, and the Archbishop of Tuam, ii. 162.
- Exeter-Hall, twaddle, ii. 323, 325; and its Puritan mummies, 245.
- Exilles, Chevalier Belleisle perishes at, ix. 61.
- Experience, xii. 281.
- Eye-service, ii. 453.
- Eyes and Spectacles, i. 52.
- Eylert, cited, xii. 458 n.
- Eyre, Governor, rabid persecution of, xvi. 431.
- Eyvind, the Skaldaspillir, xix. 404, 408.
- TABLES, Four, xiii. 10; the fourteenth century an age of Fable, xiv. 376.
- Fabrice, vi. 60, 63; vii. 49.
- Fact, the smallest historical, contrasts with the grandest fictitious event, xiv. 393, 417; and Semblance, xii. 15; and Fiction, 46; inexorable nature of, v. 16, 420; vi. 292: the one asbestos which survives all fire, v. 17; vi. 440. See Reality.
- Facts, engraved Hieroglyphs, for which the fewest have the key, i. 153.
- Fairfax, Lord, in Yorkshire, xvii. 135; victory by, 146; beaten, 158; besieged in Hull, 166; death of, 318.
- Fairfax, Sir Thomas, serves under Earl Manchester, xvii. 170; General of New Model Army, 194 n.; interview with Clubmen, 211; at Bath, 241; adheres to Commons, 244; meets the King, 251; Governor of Hull, 261; in Kent, 317; becomes Lord Fairfax, 318; at trial of Charles I., 400; of Council of State, 403; half Presbyterian, 504; refuses to fight the Scots, xviii. 98; gives up his Commission, 98; in Church Commission, 387; in Cromwell's First Parliament, 398; Cromwell's letters to, xvii. 194, 201, 213, 223, 232, 240, 242, 246, 248, 253, 255, 278, 280, 294, 318, 354, 370, 387; xix. 317.
- Faith, the one thing needful, i. 123. See Believing.
- Falkland, xii. 442.
- Falkland, Lord, killed, xvii. 161.
- Falmouth, Sterling at, ii. 191, 200.
- False, the, already dead, xvi. 148.
- Falsehood, doom of, iii. 306; living under, v. 216.
- Fame, no test of merit, xiii. 202; the fantastic article so called, xiv. 452; the thing called, ii. 6, 43; xii. 127, 131. See Popularity, Posterity.
- Family likenesses between Sterling and his parents, ii. 14; contrasts and concordances, 99, 149, 229.
- Famine, in France, iii. 35, 52; in 1788-1792, 105, 153, 164, 217, 225; Louis and Assembly try to relieve, 262, 326; iv. 94 (see Bakers); in 1782, and remedy, iv. 230; remedy by maximum, &c., 291; in Ireland, xvii. 496.
- Fanaticism and Formula, iii. 305.
- Fantasy, the true Heaven-gate c. Hell-gate of man, i. 110, 166.
- Farer Saga, xix. 418, 419.

Farley mansion, xviii. 279.
 Fasch, Musician, with the King at Leipzig, xi. 9.
 Fashionable Novels, i. 209.
 Faßmann, vi. 7, 46, 97, 110, 142, 201, 336, 407; cited, v. 342 n., 461 n.; vi. 80 n.; vii. 198.
 Fast, Monthly, xviii. 315 n.
 Fate, different ideas of, xiii. 383; of Sophocles, xvi. 341.
 Fatherhood, i. 66. See Altar.
 Fauchet, Abbé, at siege of Bastille, iii. 187; famous for Te-Deums, 225, 342; his Cercle Social, 385; in First Parliament, iv. 57; motion by, 69; strips off his insignia, 90; King's death, lamentation, 362; will demit, 308; trial of, 343.
 Fauconberg, Lord, marries Mary Cromwell, xix. 54, 234; character of, 234; his letter on Cromwell's death, 298.
 Fault, what we mean by a, xiii. 351; his faults not the criterion of any man, i. 377.
 Fausseignay, sabre in hand, iii. 389.
 Faust, Goethe's, emphatically a work of Art, xiii. 148; the story a Christian mythus, 150; several attempts to body it forth, 151; Goethe's success, 152; his conception of Mephistopheles, 152; of Faust himself, 153; of Margaret, 158; the original legend, 282; like a death-song of departing worlds, xv. 61.
 Favart, M., Saxe's Theatre-Director and his wife, ix. 73, 74.
 Favras, Chevalier, executed, iii. 292.
 Fawcener, Sir Edward, vii. 48.
 Fawley Park for sale, xviii. 390.
 Feak, Anabaptist, against Cromwell, xviii. 381.
 Feast of Reason, iv. 368-373; of Être Suprême, 406, 409.
 Feder, cited, vi. 117.
 Federation, becoming general, iii. 331; of Champs-de-Mars, 325; deputies to, 327, 336; human species at, 328; ceremonies of, 338-343; a new, to be (1793), iv. 117; is held, 123.
 Feebleness, the true misery, i. 125.
 Fehrbellin, Battle of, v. 267; xii. 513, 532; Friedrich visits, 516; the Prussian Bannockburn, 532.
 Fell, Dr., at Oxford, xviii. 209.
 Felsted Free-School, xvii. 47, 94.
 Felton, John, his character and death, xvii. 62.
 Fénelon, vii. 7, 58.
 Fens, draining of the, xvii. 95; drained, xviii. 296.
 Fenton, Sir William, Commissioner at Cork, xvii. 490, 500.
 Fenwick, Colonel, besieges Hume Castle, xviii. 196.

Feoffees, purchases by, xvii. 51; prosecuted by Land, 52; suppressed, 72; losses of, 89.
 Féraud, in National Convention, iv. 202; massacred there, 446.
 Ferbers, Hofrath, ix. 264.
 Ferdinand I., Kaiser, Settlement by, vii. 446.
 Ferdinand, Prince, of Brunswick, viii. 184, 287, 309; at Nahorzan (singular interview), 472; Sohr, 496; collecting his troops at Halle, letters from the King, ix. 314-316; at Leipzig, 320; Cotta, 323; on the Bohemian frontier, 332, 336; at Prag, 410, 468; in retreat, 468, 471; with the King, 491; march to Erfurt, 508; to Magdeburg, 519; to be General of Britannic Army, 547; Rossbach, x. 3, 8; gets his Britannic Commission, 28; vigorous speed upon the French, 23, 26; every feather of them over the Rhine, 90; congratulations from Friedrich, 92; across the Rhine, after the French, 101; beats Clermont at Crefeld, 112; re-crosses the Rhine, 176; sends a detachment to clear Erfurt, 195; Battle of Bergen, cannot get Frankfurt, 198, 200; recommends Guichard to Friedrich, 211; battle of Minden, and defeat of Contades, 232-241; sends the Hereditary Prince with 12,000 to aid Friedrich, 360; very busy on the French, 362; has a difficult Campaign against Broglio's superior forces, 451-456; Korbach, 451; Emsdorf, 452; Warburg, 453; Kloster Kampen, 533-537; successfully defends Hanover, 537; determines to have a sudden stroke at Broglio, xi. 23; Langensalza, Cassel, 24; defeats Broglio at Vellinghausen, 53-58; difficulties with his English troops, 59, 60; beats Soubise at Wilhelmsthal, 145, 146; drives the French from their strongholds, 158; Cannonade of Amöneburg, and end of the war, 158-160; visits Westphalia with Friedrich, 195; estranged from Potsdam, 363; mentioned also, viii. 465, 507; ix. 150; x. 211.
 Ferdinand II., Kaiser, v. 254 n., 267; high-handed proceedings against the Protestants, 269; all Europe to be converted to Orthodoxy, 271; his Restitution-Edict, 274; seizes Jägerndorf, 278.
 Ferdinand III., Kaiser, v. 254 n.
 Ferdinand VI. of Spain, ix. 69; x. 400.
 Ferdinand King of the Romans, v. 232.
 Ferdinand, Prince, of Prussia, ix. 77, 196, 443; at Leuthen, x. 61; at Breu-lau, 74; ill at Berlin, 320-323, 451; mentioned also, 215.

- Ferguson on Roman History, xvi. 395.
 Fernor succeeds Apraxin, and takes possession of East Prussia, x. 77; wending towards Brandenburg, 101; at Konitz, 111; Posen, 112; red-hot savagery on Cüstrin, 116, 122; cannot get Cüstrin Castle, 120; prepares hastily for Prussian attack, 127; battle of Zorndorf, 127-133; retires towards Königsberg, 138, 139; again invades Prussia, under Soltikof, 215; succeeds Soltikof, and marches on Berlin, 491; with Romanzow at Colberg, xi. 67.
 Ferral, Lieutenant-General, attacks Passage, xvii. 602.
 Ferrand, cited, xi. 227 n.
 Ferrar's, Nicholas, establishment, xvii. 73.
 Fersen, Count, iv. 11; gets berline built, 12; acts coachman (King's flight), 14-16.
 Festitz and his Tolpatches, viii. 210, 221, 223.
 Fethard Town, described, xvii. 27.
 Fetishes, reckoned respectable, xii. 347, 366.
 Feudal Europe, old, fallen a-dozing to die, xv. 171.
 Feudalism, death of, in France, iii. 130.
 Feuillans Club, iii. 310; iv. 42; denounce Jacobins, 50; decline, 93; extinguished, 93; Battalion, 106; Justices and Patriotism, 116; Directory, 116.
 Fichte's notion of the Literary Man, i. 379; xiii. 57; his Philosophy, 75; xiv. 27.
 Fiction, and its kinship to lying, v. 19, 420; xiv. 389; xvi. 443; idle, intolerable to a serious soul, xii. 392.
 Fiddlestring, Mr. Hesperus, ii. 325.
 Fienne, Madame de, of Strasburg, vii. 206.
 Fiennes, Nathaniel, surrenders Bristol, xvii. 158; in Derby-House Committee, 289; in Council of State, xviii. 385 n.; Keeper of Great Seal, 490; in Committee of Kingship, xix. 138, 145; his speech analyzed, 244.
 Fiesco, Verachtung des, Schiller's tragedy of the, xx. 31.
 Figaro, Marriage de, iii. 58; iv. 171.
 Fighting, all, an ascertainment who has the right to rule over whom, xii. 16, 224; murderous Fighting become a "glorious Chivalry," 184.
 Filibusters, "Filibusters," vii. 473.
 Finances, bad state of, iii. 46, 64, 87, 106; how to be improved, 80, 88, 96, 287.
 Finch, Colonel, in Gerard's plot, xviii. 394.
 Finch, Minister at Petersburg, viii. 19.
 Finch, Speaker, his conduct, xvii. 65; dies, 107.
 Fincham, Thomas, Cromwell's letter in behalf of, xix. 360.
 Finck, General, ix. 495; left in charge of Saxony, 537; x. 163, 171; attacking the Austrian Magazines, 202; with Prince Henri at Bautzen, 226; vanguard at Kunersdorf, 249-251, 257, 259, 262; the King hands over command of the Army to him, 268; resumes it, 273; sent into Saxony, 291; indignation at the loss of Dresden, 311; ordered by the King to plant himself in Maxen, 246; expostulates in vain, 347; sees his enemies gathering round him, 350; such a sphinx-riddle as soldier seldom had, 351; determines to remain, hoping Friedrich may do something, 351; arranges himself with his utmost skill, 352; total defeat, and absolute surrender, 355; tried by court-martial, 358.
 Finckenstein, Minister, Friedrich's Secret Instructions to, ix. 374-377; letters from Friedrich to, x. 231, 243, 268; xi. 113; in the Bavarian business, 409, 415.
 Finkenstein, Count Fink von, v. 359, 374; vi. 152, 157; his Wife, 273.
 Finkenstein, vii. 186, 259, 422.
 Finlater, Countess of, xi. 457 n.
 Fire, and vital fire, i. 54, 130; miraculous nature of, 250.
 Firebrace, Henry, notice of, xvii. 301.
 Firmian, Count, and the Salzburg Protestants, vi. 402.
 Firmian, Archbishop, viii. 402.
 Fischer, cited, v. 103 n.; xi. 398 n.
 Fischer, Hussar, at Sangerhausen, x. 31.
 Fischer, J. D., viii. 85, 89.
 Fischhausen, vi. 320.
 Fitz-James, Cardinal Grand Almoner, viii. 316.
 Five Members, the, xvii. 119.
 Flanders, how Louis XV. conquers, iii. 8.
 Flandre, regiment de, at Versailles, iii. 236, 237, 255.
 Fleet, revolt of, xvii. 323.
 Fleetwood, Captain, at Cambridge, xvii. 129; is Lieutenant-Colonel, 179; Lieutenant-General at Dunbar, xviii. 138; at Worcester, 240, 250; Deputy in Ireland, 275; Cromwell's letters to, 288, 329, 391; xix. 9; of Council of State, xviii. 383 n.; in Cromwell's First Parliament, 398; conduct in Ireland, xix. 7; Major-General, 19 n.; against King, 217.
 Fleming, Adjutant, notice of, xvii. 240; killed, 310.
 Fleming, Sir Oliver, Master of Ceremonies, xvii. 410.

- Flemming, Countess, ix. 24.
 Flemming, Fieldmarshal, vi. 68, 70.
 Fleasselles, Paris Provost, iii. 108, 174; shot, 191.
 Fleuriot, Mayor, guillotined, iv. 425.
 Fleury, Joly de, Controller of Finance, iii. 64.
 Fleury, Cardinal, v. 459, 461; vi. 56, 99, 107, 325, 382, 462, 468; vii. 15; thinks Voltaire might find out Friedrich's secret, 273; viii. 217; sends Maillebois to relief of Prag, 204; letter from Voltaire, 217, 219; obliged to yield to Belleisle's war-schemes, 392, 416; bad faith with King Friedrich, ix. 183.
 Flunkies, whom no Hero-King can reign over, xii. 36; flunky, the white, the flower of nomadic servitude, xvi. 308. See Valets.
 Fontaine, La, xvi. 8.
 Fontenai, Mme., iv. 359, 414. See Cabarus.
 Fontenoy, Battle of, vii. 434; viii. 434, 444.
 Foolish, privilege of the, to be governed by the Wise, ii. 281, 292; foolishness of existing mortals, xiv. 388.
 Forbes, General, at Pittsburg, x. 175.
 Forcade, General, at Zornsdorf, x. 135; takes the place of Prince Henri in Silesia, 485.
 Force, La. See Prison.
 Force, universal presence of, i. 55.
 Foreign Office, our, astonishing condition of, ii. 341; reformed, 392.
 Forests, disappearance of, xii. 97.
 Formey, vii. 32, 35, 159; viii. 304; his account of Voltaire, ix. 115, 138, 147; of Maupertuis's quarrel with König, 117; his own share in it, 208-211; letter from Voltaire to, x. 393; letters from Lefebvre to, xi. 269, 270; honored by Queen Ulrique, 334; cited, vii. 35 n.; ix. 115 n.; xi. 270 n.
 Formica-leo, natural history of the, xv. 127.
 Forms, necessity for, i. 425.
 Formula, iii. 305; and Fanaticism destroyed, 217; essential to man, iv. 220; Formulas, the very skin and muscular tissue of Man's Life, xii. 123, 126.
 Fornham, battle of, xii. 51.
 Forster and French soldier, iv. 217; account of, 281.
 Forster, John, on Cromwell, xvii. 19.
 Förster, cited, v. 22 n., 461 n.; vi. 6 n.; vii. 19 n., 179 n.
 Fortescue, Major-General, in Jamaica, xix. 26; Cromwell's letter to, 32 n.; death of, 34.
 Fortsch, Dr., ix. 96.
 Fortunatus's wishing-hat, i. 197, 199.
 Fos, Mamsell, of Dessau, v. 218.
 Fouché, at Lyons, iv. 361.
 Foulon, bad repute of, iii. 66; nicknamed, 88; advises grass for the people, 110; funeral of, 196; alive, judged, massacred, 199.
 Fouquet, Intendant, Belleisle's Grandfather, vii. 355.
 Fouquet with Friedrich at Cüstrin, vi. 293; at Reinsberg, vii. 65; his march from Fulnek, viii. 142 n.; at Glatz, 473, 498; at Battle of Prag, ix. 418; with the Prince of Prussia, 483; Glatz, x. 94; Olmütz, 97; Leutomischl, extremely strict, almost pedantic man, 109; with Margraf Karl, guarding Silesia, 116, 142; Friedrich's kindly thought of him, 186, 330; at Leobschütz, 201, 204; at Landshut, 218, 314; truce with Loudon, 333; fortifies himself firmly about Landshut, 409; with Prince Henri, defends Silesia against the Russians, 418, 420; outmanœuvred by Loudon, deeply hurt by Friedrich's reproof, speech to his Generals, 420, 421; catastrophe at Landshut, 425-427; his death, xi. 376.
 Fouquier-Tinville. See Tinville.
 Fournier, and Orléans Prisoners, iv. 197.
 Fourteenth and Fifteenth Centuries, German Literature of the, xiv. 250-306.
 "Four eights," the reformed workman's, xvi. 449, 453.
 Fourth Estate, beginnings of the, xiv. 449; its energetic youth, vii. 469; xv. 108.
 Fowler, John, Esq., cited, x. 89 n.
 Fox, George, Quaker, xiii. 71; xviii. 448; and Cromwell, xix. 21, 22, 293; heavenward aspirations, and earthly independence, i. 158.
 Fox, Right Hon. Henry, ix. 83, 411, 439.
 Fox, Somerset, his plot, xviii. 393, 394. See Gerard, Vowel.
 Foxes, the, a pleasant Quaker family, ii. 192, 197, 198, 200, 203; most Anti-Hudson testimonial, 208.
 Foy, Café de, revolutionary, iii. 167, 221, 234.
 France, abject, under Louis XV., iii. 6, 14-16; Kings of, 8; early history of, 9; decay of Kingship in, 12; on accession of Louis XVI., 29; and Philosophy, 30, 31; famine in (1775), 35, 36, 53 (see Famine); state of, prior to Revolution, 37; aids America, 44; in 1788, 104; inflammable (July 1789), 171; gibbets, general overturn, 222; how to be regenerated, 293, 294; riotousness of, 394; Mirabeau and, 411; after King's flight, iv. 20; petitions against Royalty, 42; warfare of towns in, 65; Europe

- leagues against, 80; terror of (in Spring 1792), 87; decree of war, 100; country in danger, 119, 124; general enlisting, 124; rage of (in Autumn 1792), 158, 157; Marat's Circular, September, 196; Sansculottic, 219; declaration of war, 263; Mountain and Girondins divide, 274; communes of, 327; coalition against, 333; levy in mass, 336; prisons, in 1793, 358; one large "Committee of Mercy" (in 1795), 431; state of, since the Revolution, 459-461; scandalous condition of, xvi. 440; Cromwell's letter to King of, xix. 379; treaty with, xviii. 491; xix. 6, 26, 226. See French.
- Francis, Dr., xvi. 205-263; the notablest of South-American Dictators, 214; parentage and schooling, 224; perhaps the justest Advocate that ever took briefs in that distant country, 228; an unjust judge discomfited, 234; hypochondria, 235; Secretary of a Paraguay National Congress, 237; retires into privacy, 238; his personal appearance, and library, 239; gets himself declared Dictator, 241; a conspiracy detected, and forty persons executed, 243; two harvests in one season, 245; his lease of Paraguay, 247; Funeral Eulogium, 249; his message to the English Nation, 254; his "Workman's Gallows," 256; mode of life, 259; treatment of M. Bonpland, 261; rumored quarrel with his Father, 262; his life of labor ended, 263.
- Francke, Archidiaconus, vi. 411.
- François I., vii. 439; ix. 350.
- Franke, August Hermann, founder of the "Pietists," vi. 66.
- Frankfurt, vi. 266; Union of, viii. 299, 340; ix. 394, 404; what Friedrich got by it, viii. 363, 385; is seized by the French, x. 193, 194.
- Frankfurt-on-Oder, in possession of the Russians, x. 244-248, 257; the environs, 251-255.
- Franklin, Benjamin, Ambassador to France, iii. 44; his death lamented, 342; bust in Jacobins, iv. 95; brings supplies to Braddock, ix. 259; xi. 383.
- Franquini tries to capture Valori, viii. 486, 488.
- Franz, Grand Duke, his prospects of Kaisership, vii. 450, 458; a good-tempered, well-conditioned Duke, viii. 34, 227; Hungarian Diet, 70; joins Neipperg at Frating, 95; marches towards Prag, 99, 102; joins the main Army at Königsau, 197, 426; with Traun in the Rhine countries, 474; elected Kaiser, 483; opposes the Austrian-French alliance, ix. 296; deals largely in stores, 296; forging Reich thunder against Friedrich, 369; a solid pacific gentleman, 383; official violence against Friedrich, 383, 385, 396; advises Prince Karl's dismissal, x. 70; his sudden death, xi. 222; mentioned also, vii. 261, 263, 357, 431; viii. 436.
- Franz Josias of Coburg, genealogical fact concerning, vi. 235.
- Franz of Brunswick, killed at Hochkirch, x. 160.
- Franz of Dessau, ix. 457, 458.
- Fraser's Magazine, i. 8, 227.
- Fraternity, doctrine of, iv. 350; and Equality, ii. 282, 307, 324.
- Frederick, Elector, der Streitbare, xvi. 356.
- Frederick the Pacific, xvi. 356; differences with Kunz von Kaufungen, 358; his two children stolen, and recovered, 361.
- Frederick the Wise, who saved Luther from the Diet of Worms, xvi. 368.
- Frederick August, the big King of Poland, xvi. 377.
- Frederick the Great, symbolic glimpse of, i. 62; at Dresden, xiii. 331, 334; Voltaire's visit to, 420; his notion of Shakspeare, 445; a Philosophie King, xv. 119.
- Frederick, Prince, of England, v. 426, 466; intended visit to Berlin, vi. 78; arrival in England, 109; letters from, 174; Queen of Prussia's opinion of, 315; his three demands, 493; strange treatment of his young wife, vii. 80; his death, ix. 150; his epitaph, 150; mentioned also, 438.
- Fredericksball, Charles XII. killed at, v. 355.
- Frederika Louisa of Prussia, v. 439; demanded in marriage, vi. 110; married to the Margraf of Anspach, 141; visited by her father and brother, 240; visits Wilhelmina, 434, 435; vii. 197.
- Frederika Louisa of Hessen Darmstadt marries Prince of Prussia, xi. 215.
- Friedersdorf, M., vii. 123, 195, 259, 406, 426; ix. 219; his share in the Voltaire arrest, 226-233.
- Free Corps, Prussian, ix. 497.
- Free Men, the Nobles of the World, ii. 298; xii. 321; Press, 293; Trade, in all senses and to all lengths, xvi. 422, 449; ix. 156; Litany, xi. 190; World, a, viii. 215.
- Freedom, meaning of, iii. 178; a higher than freedom from oppression, xiii. 486; of the Press, vii. 180.
- Freemasonry, vii. 93; Cagliostro's, xv. 185.
- French, Philosophy, xiii. 456, 469; Anglomania, iii. 49; character of the, 57;

- literature in 1784, 55, 59; Parlements, nature of, 61; Mirabeau, type of the, 134; Guards (see Guards); Seigneurs (see Seigneurs); mob, character of, 242; Julius Caesar on the, 383; Millennium, iv. 268; poetry, xiii. 447; Revolution, not yet completed, xvi. 65; Convention, 74; xii. 302; Priesthood destroyed, xvi. 77; do-nothing Aristocracy, xii. 173; the French Revolution a voice of God, though in wrath, 223, 262; Revolution compared to English, xvii. 258; People, the, a kind of Messiah People, very glorious indeed, ii. 264; bitter aggravations, 264; rage against Britain, 222.
- French Revolution, v. 7; a grand universal Suicide of a despicable Century, 10; what is to follow it, 17; French Protestantism, 218; French Cooks, 339; Fashions, 340; French Protestants of Erlangen, vi. 409; War with Karl VI., 468; Camp at Philipsburg, 496, 503; France the top of the Universe, vii. 359; urges Sweden to War, 370; viii. 56; originates the Austrian-Succession War, vii. 336; many wars kindled on poor Teutschland, 439; evasion of Pragmatic Sanction, 440; ushering in a French Revolution, 442; French Ambition versus the stingy Fact, 454; viii. 12, 57, 90, 224; ruin of German Enterprise, 260; Army in the Netherlands, 331; ix. 42; at Stockstadt, viii. 333; imminent peril of, 339; Friedrich decides to intervene, 339; little grateful for their deliverance, 360; magnanimous promises ending in nothing, 373, 393-396, 402; not even money-payment, 476; pique against him, ix. 5; invade Holland, 59; First Nation of the Universe, 71; an Army of extreme dissoluteness and levity, 74, 75; of two Frenchmen in a Foreign Court, one must die, 161; French claims to North America, 250-256, 262; French-English War, 299; France joins Austria and the Reich, 370; France intrigues with Sweden against Friedrich, 377; share of the expected plunder, 378; the first in the field, 379; "L'Armée de la Dauphine," 477, 504; intent to deliver Saxony, 504, 506; at Gotha, 516; ventures forward on hearing of the Haddick Invasion, 546; retreats at sound of Friedrich, x. 4; puffed up with vanity, 5, Rosbach, 8, exultant spirits, 13; never was army better beaten, 15, 18; rapacity and profligate subordination, 23-34; France will not have peace, 76; incredible pains with the Swedes, 81; financial difficulties, 178; getting weary of the war, 182; joy over the battle of Bergen, 199; invasion of England, 223; flat-bottomed fleet destroyed at Havre, 224; Toulon fleet chased and ruined, 291, 292; Conflans's fleet and the grand Invasion-scheme entirely wrecked, 369-373; temporary bankruptcy, and melting of the national spoons, 374; French exactions on Germany, xi. 28; preparation for the General Overturn, 31; anxious for peace, 87, 171, 173; results of the war, 177; the French Revolution, Part Third of World-History, 180, 181; Kaiser Joseph's visit, and opinion of French society, 387, 388.
- French Revolution*, Carlyle's, published, ii. 138.
- Fréron, notice of, iii. 304; renegade, iv. 430; Gilt Youth of, 434; poor joke of Voltaire's on, vii. 53; ix. 146, 148.
- Fréteau, at Royal Session, iii. 90; arrested, 91; liberated, 94.
- Freyberg, Battle of, xi. 162.
- Freyburg, Siege of, viii. 360, 393.
- Freys, the Jew brokers, iii. 298; imprisoned, iv. 377.
- Freytag, Baron, and his Austrian Swindling, v. 297.
- Freytag, arrest of Voltaire, ix. 226-236.
- Freytag's, Dr., account of West Prussen, xi. 314.
- Friedel, Kammergericht Rath, xi. 436, 437.
- Friedland, Friedrich at, vii. 401.
- Friedrich August of Saxony, left under the guardianship of his Mother, xi. 230; lived to see strange things in the world, 231.
- Friedrich Christian, Kurprinz of Saxony, in Dresden, during siege of, x. 295; negotiates peace, xi. 173; King Friedrich dines with him at Moritzburg, 179; death, 221, 230; Elector little more than two months, 231.
- Friedrich Eugen of Württemberg, viii. 124, 127; ix. 78. (See Duchess of Württemberg.)
- Friedrich IV. of Denmark, v. 346.
- Friedrich IV., Duke of Holstein-Gottorp and Schleswig, xi. 106.
- Friedrich, King of Bohemia, Winter-König, v. 150, 262, 263, 265; ex-King, 266, 268.
- Friedrich, Landgraf of Hessen, viii. 119.
- Friedrich, Madam, lately garden-maid at Seidlitz, xi. 174.
- Friedrich, Margraf of Schwedt, vii. 417.
- Friedrich of Bairuth, vi. 160, 237, 309; arrives at Berlin, 314; introduced to Wilhelmina, 314; an honorable and eligible young Prince, 315; betrothal, 315; a narrow escape, 354; marries

- Wilhelmina, 357; full of honest sunshine towards her, 448, 486; at the Rhine Campaign, 501.
- Friedrich of Meissen, Hochmeister, v. 201, 202.
- Friedrich, Prince, and his Hessians, viii, 363; at Vilshofen, 417; Edinburgh, 417.
- Friedrich the Fair, Duke of Austria, v. 123.
- Friedrich II., Kaiser, v. 92.
- Friedrich III., Kaiser, v. 251.
- Friedrich II., Kurfürst of Brandenburg, recovers Neumark from the Teutsch Ritters, v. 170, 174; his Pomeranian War, 170, 174.
- Friedrich III., Burggraf of Nürnberg, v. 103; troubles with the Nürnberger, 104; Burggraviate made hereditary, 104; Kaiser Rudolf's friend and helper, 107, 109.
- Friedrich IV., v. 120, 127; aids Kaiser Ludwig, 123.
- Friedrich V., v. 143; his Daughter, 146.
- Friedrich VI., v. 128, 144, 146; helps Sigismund, 152; buys Brandenburg, 154; Noble Robber-lords brought to reason, 159; Heavy Peg, 161; tap-root of the Prussian Nation, 163.
- Friedrich I., King, and his Grandchildren, v. 22; rather "an expensive Herr," 43; the first King of Prussia, 45; his back injured in infancy, 46, 800; quarrels with his Stepmother, 46; how he came by his "Kingship," 49; his sublime Coronation, 52; his Father's Death, 295; how Austria swindled him out of Schwiebus, 297; his true Hohenzollern character, 300; closing days, 302; his third marriage, 305; death, 307, 324.
- Friedrich II., sauntering on the terraces of Sans Souci, v. 3; physiognomic traits, 4; human interest in what he did, 5; the Last of the Kings, 7, 18; English prepossessions about him, 13; by no means a perfect demigod, yet a true man and King, 15, 23; joy at his birth, 21; his christening, 24; his ancestors, 163, 274, 294; not a skilful gambler and worshipper of Beelzebub, 166; recovery of Jägerndorf, 278; interest in Jülich, 283; opening the Great Kurfürst's coffin, 295; infancy, 304, 312; French educational element, 311; vi. 57; one of the prettiest vividest little boys, v. 312; his affectionate disposition, 314, 375, 393, 408; bad spelling, 315, 409, 421; German element, 316; his Father's Spartan discipline, 324, 422; vi. 3, 57; one of his first impressions of war, v. 344, his Tutors, 359, 374, 408; Portraits of him, 360; the commonly received Portrait, 362; his education, 375, 408, 419; vi. 66; his Father's notions about it, v. 377; miniature Soldiering, 379; his Cousins, 392; love for his Sister Wilhelmina, 393; at the Roucoules Soirée, 393; troubles preparing from afar, 408, 466; his contraband Latin lessons, 410; French fashions, his bright locks to be ruthlessly shorn away, 412; his Theological drill-sergeants, 419; division fearfully widening between Father and Son, 417; vi. 90; George I. pleased with him, v. 434; goes into the Potsdam Guards, vi. 3; surrounded by intrigues and treachery, 15; unwillingly at the Tobacco-Parliament, 36, 57; his life heavy at Potsdam, 57; his Books, 57; visit to King August at Dresden, 70; dissolute seductions, 71, 79; poor Fritz fallen into the wake of Beelzebub, 75, 244; miserable health, 76, 80; his soul tragically dimmed for the remainder of Life, 77; pleased with Maréchal de Saxe, 83; writes to Queen Caroline, unknown to his Father, 89, 164; letter to his father, and angry reply, 90; his Father's ill-treatment, 94, 102, 112, 125; thoughts of flight, 129, 148, 164, 167; his regiment on the march, 134; his Father surprises him at unlawful amusements, 145; publicly beaten by his Father, 147, 210, 226; makes a companion of Katte, 149, 226; his debts, 164, 455; off to Dresden, 167; Father will not agree to his marriage, 175; Hotham's testimony of him, 188; letter to Hotham, 198; at King August's Camp of Radewitz, 203, 207, 210, 214; attempted flight, 210; rumor of marriage with Maria Theresa, 212, England will not sanction flight, 219; letter to Hotham, 225; will fly, in spite of all, 226, 229, 241; Journey to the Reich, 220; arrangements for flight, 242, 254, 259; more ill-usage, 243; flight prevented, 261; paternal taunts, 265; a detective prisoner, 266, 268; chaotic like a dog, 267; confesses nothing, and narrowly escapes his Father's sword, 275; an arrested Deserter, 276, 278; a prisoner at Mittenwalde, interrogated and threatened by Grumkow, 283; rigorous confinement at Cüstrin, 283, 291; his notion of Predestination, 287, 334; to be tried by Court-Martial, 291; a lucid human judgment in him, 291; sees poor Katte led to execution, 298; crushed down by sorrow and despair, 299; Chaplain Müller's favorable testimony, 300, 305; condemned to death, 303; to repent, and not perish, 304; takes an Oath of repentance and prostrate submission, 305,

606; letter to his Father, begins gradually a new career, 306; corresponds with Grunkow, 308, 376, 383, 384, 386, 417; among the Domain Sciences at Cüstrin, 327, 329; efforts to regain favor, 336; polite cloak-of-darkness, 331; visited by his Father, 331; loyalty to fact, 335; his life at Cüstrin, as reported by Schulenburg, 339; the beautiful Madame de Wreech, 341, 345; glimpses of Friedrich's habits, 348, 352; returns to Berlin at his Sister's Wedding, 362; a much-changed Crown-Prince, 362; solitude of soul, 364; Colonel of the Goltz Regiment, 368, 392; whom shall he marry? 367; all romance too sorrowfully swept out of him, 368; what he thought of his destined Wife, 376, 383, 384, 389, 390, 433, 448; continued love for Wilhelmina, 382, 389, 391, 451, 484; his Betrothal, 390; Life at Ruppın, 393; anxiety to learn what seemed worth learning, military studies, 394; love for his rugged Father, 395; vii. 112, 144; spirit of frolic, vi. 398, 501; letter to Captain Hacke, 419; to Seckendorf, 420; what he thought of the Kaiser, 432; his Marriage, 447; back to Ruppın, 464; at Philipshurg, his first experience of arms, 417, 490; his interest in the war, 477, 483; a difficult meeting with Wilhelmina, 486; what he thought of the Rhine Campaign, 498; news of his Father's illness, 502, 506; visits the French Camp, 503; visits Wilhelmina at Baireuth, and talks of his future plans, 507; in his Father's sick-room, vii. 3; sent to Prussen, 10, 11; his Father's growing satisfaction with him, 11, 91; his Apprenticeship completed, 91; life at Reinsberg, an actual snatch of something like the Idyllic, 23, 66, 105, 117, 124; love of Music, 29; choice of associates, 34; religious doubts, 36; literary correspondence, 37; writes to Voltaire, 39; ardent admiration, 58, 59, 107; their correspondence, 58, 91; correspondence with Suhm, 69; with Mantuffel, 69; Dr. Zimmermann's puddle of calumnies, 69; a visit to the Prince of Mirow, 70; return visits, 74; quality of his Letters to his Father, 78; visits Loo with his Father, 90; his Anti-Machiavel, 91, 108; becomes a Freemason, 93, 96; his literary achievements, 105; journey to Prussen with his Father, 112; visit of Lord Baltimore and others, 119; his poor Father's last illness, 132, 136; long private dialogues with him, 138; his Father's death, 142, 143; Friedrich is King, 144; his Accession, 146; editorial prophecies about, 147; old veracity shining through the giddy new element, 148; wishes to keep well with France and Hanover, a cask of wine to Voltaire, 149; surrounded by adventurers, a new knighthood, fine free expressive face, 150; would make men happy, 151; opens the public granaries, 153; finds employment for a thousand poor old women, 153; abolishes the use of torture, 154; will build up the Academy of Sciences, 155; invites Wolf, 155; and Maupertuis, 156; enjoins toleration for all Religions, 158; tries Free Press, 159; his activity wonderful, 161; writes many letters, 161; increases his Army, 162; conduct to old companions, every inch a King, 163; loves men of merit, 167; affection for his Mother, 168; filial piety, lessening intimacy with his own Queen, 170; minimum of change in his Father's methods or men, 171; what he will grow to, 173; his Biographers, 174; he considers it unnecessary to be crowned, 177; accepts Homages, personally, in three places, 181; interview with Dickens, 186; best to be frank with him, 187; difficult for a Diplomatist to deal with, 190; invitations to Voltaire, 191; visits Wilhelmina at Baireuth, 194; two days incognito at Strasburg, 198; arrives at Wesel, 211; ague, 218, 254, 259; light contempt for Cleve Monks and their Masses, 217; Berg-Jülich preparations, 218, 253; first meeting with Voltaire, 219; takes Herstal in hand, 235; a long account to settle with Karl VI., 243; returns home without seeing George II., 246; means to do his work like a King, 254; Wilhelmina's account of him, 256; not amiable to everybody, 257; news of the Kaiser's death, 259; momentous resolution formed in consequence, 268; to seize Silesia, 269; mysterious preparations, 271; Voltaire tries to discover his secret, 274; he knows his own mind clearly, 276; candor of confession, 279; pliqued with the Old Dessauer, 279; audiences at Berlin, the secret out, 280; Address to his Generals, 284; away, Frankfurtward, 286, 295; crossing the Rubicon, 296; at Cossen, 296; steps into Silesia, 297; Grünberg, 298; Glogau Church, 303; Schloss of Weichau, 305; industriously conciliatory, 306; Milkau, two Messengers from Breslau, a wet march, 310; Herrendorf, 313; before Glogau, 313; Proposals at Vienna, 315; refusal with mockery, 316; "la Gloire," 320, 321, 374; viii. 45, 174; to Breslau, vii. 324; gains possession, 326; festivities, 329;

at Ottmachau, 337; high moods, 339; bombardment of Neisse, 343; home to Berlin, a life of labor cut out for himself, 348; quizzing the Czarina, 367; returns to Silesia, 373; tries to make terms with Austria, 374; at Schweidnitz, 375; narrow escape at Baumgarten, 377; hears of project for partitioning Prussia, 385; his Life-element, 386; insists that Glogau be taken, 390; his high satisfaction, 392; takes the Field in Jägerndorf country, 395, 406; Battle of Mollwitz, 407; slow exactitude, 412, 424; seeming ruin, and flight to Oppeln, 418, 425; back to Mollwitz, 427; Austrians totally beaten, 429; takes Brieg, 431; Excellencies from the four winds take wing towards Friedrich, 434; his business in the Austrian-Succession War, 436; his account with Pragmatic Sanction, 446; visited by Belleisle, 457; seizes Brieg, 458; rests on his oars, 489; recognizes Ziethen's worth, 490; improves his Cavalry, 491; Camp of Strehlen, viii. 13; diplomatic veracity and skill, 16; audience with Hyndford, 18; "mendacity," 21; Treaty with France, 24; Valori's diplomatic note, 25; will renounce the Berg-Jülich Controversy, 25; misunderstands the English, 29; vividly characteristic interview with Robinson and Hyndford, 37; practical insight and singular human faculty, 45, 74; cavalry review at Strehlen, 48; takes the field again, 51; encamps at Gross Neundorf, 52; refuses to treat with Austria, 60; secret negotiations, 62; urges Karl Albert, 65; questionable diplomacies, 74, 79; meeting at Klein-Schnellendorf, 76; secret treaty with Austria, 77; sham-siege at Neisse, 78; homaged at Breslau, 82; home to Berlin, 84; secret treaty divulged, 85, 99; prompt action thereupon, 104, 106; boundary stones of Silesia, 106; visits Dresden, urges attack on Vienna, 107; off for Prag, 108; determined to have Glatz, 109; gives a new Dress to the Virgin, 110; at Olmütz, 111; disappointed with his Moravian Expedition, 128; urges the taking of Iglau, 131; cannot get Brünn, 134; gossip Letters, 136; trouble with the Saxons, 137; their partnership ended, 138; resentment, 139; getting instructed by the stripes of experience, 139; in full march out of Moravia, 139; at Chrudim, 140; Schwerin piqued at preference shown to the Old Dessauer, 142; Synopsis of the Moravian Failure, 142, 143; Winter Campaigns, 143; reins up the Old Dessauer, 144; humors Walrave, 148; preparations for meeting Prince Karl, 149; on march from Chrudim, 151; takes a baking of bread from the Austrians, 152; Battle of Chotusitz, 154, 158; sympathy for General Pallandt, 166; interview with Belleisle, 169; Treaty of peace with Austria, 170; triumphant return homewards, 172; hopes for a general peace, 174; veracity of intellect, 176; life at Reinsberg, 176; begins writing his Memoirs, 177; could recognize the uses of religion, 179; opens his Opera, 181, 227, 292; takes the waters at Aachen, 183; a king thoroughly practical, 183; assurances of friendship to the new Kaiser, 184; watching the omens, 187, 269; receives Voltaire at Aachen, 216, 219; exertions to bring about peace, 242, 245; his patience exhausted, 271, 273; Austria to take back Silesia, 276; receives Voltaire's fourth visit, 277; sees what he has come about, 280; his characteristic "Marginalia," 281-284; visits Baireuth, 285; gets notice of Treaty of Worms, 296; preparations for War, 298, 302; skilful diplomacies, 298; Union of Frankfurt, 299; French Treaty, 301; arts and business of Peace, 303; grants right of appeal to himself in person, 304; suggests a Wife for the Heir of Russia, 306; on good terms with the Czarina, 307, 310; his Sister's marriage, 307; preparations for a Campaign, 312; Parting Letter to the Duke of Württemberg, 317; writes a quizzing Testimonial to Pöllnitz, 318; engages the Barberina for his Opera, 320; takes possession of Ost-Friesland 325; how forsaken by the French, 332 his praise of Prince Karl's Rhine campaign, 337; decides to invade Bohemia, 339; marches upon Prag, 343, 348; h. Manifesto, 344; English theory of him, 344; secret article of treaty with the French, 344; anxious to keep well with Saxony, 345; interview with the Duke of Weissenfels, puts military problems to himself in all manner of scenery, 348; in haste to get hold of Prag, 350; indifference to personal danger, 351; captures Prag, 353; admits he did not understand War at this period, 354; dreads public opinion in France too much, 355; marches, amid difficulties, towards Austria, 356; shut out from all news by Pandour swarms, 359; hears that the French have left him to his fate, and that Prince Karl is close upon him, 366; tries to have battle with Prince Karl, 366; is out-manœuvred by Traun, who schools him in the art of War, 370, 371, 384; loses three garrisons, encamped at Konopischt, 371; has to retire northward, 372; a heavy-laden sorely exasperated man, 372; gathers himself at Kolin, 374; posts himself on the north shore of the Elbe, 375; retreats to Silesia, 378; foiled on every point, his veracity of mind, 383; general impression that he had ruined himself, 386; private inexpugnability of mind, delivers Silesian Army to Old Dessauer, and hastens to Berlin, 387, spurt of impatience, 388; his feelings towards the French, 393-396; informed of Belleisle's capture, 400; proposes Peace, 405; thinks to make friends with Saxony, 406; financial difficulties, and dexterity of management, 406; changed for the better by his reverses, 407; King of Poland for Kaiser, 408; Saxon antipathies, 409, 415, 460, 471; anger at Sockendorf, 419; army preparations in Silesia, 420; letters unusually frank, 420, 428; Austrian invasion to recover Silesia, 423; studies to be ready for Prince Karl, 424, 426; indignation against Saxony, establishes Camp of Observation, 427; will play his part among the crowned heads of Europe, 429; Headquarter at Camenz, 431; surprises Valori in not defending his mountain passes, 446; full of silent finesse, very dangerous to play with at games of skill, 447; much satisfied with his Cousin Margarl Karl, 449; decoys Prince Karl on, 450; the big moment approaching, 452, 453; Hohenfriedberg, 461-465; God has helped me very wonderfully this day, 468; receives Protestant deputation at Landshut, 468; Camp of Chlum, 469; hopes for peace, Convention of Hanover, 471, 499; snubbed by Brühl, 475; writes to France for help in money, but to no purpose, 476; voluntary subsidy from Brandenburg, 477; indignant Manifesto against Saxony, 478; does not yet strike, 478; no peace with Austria and Saxony, 479; no braver little figure on the earth at that epoch, 483; admires Maria Theresa after a sort, 484; still in Bohemia, watching Prince Karl's movements, 485; at Jaronitz, 489; moves northward, 490; at Staudentz, hears of Prince Karl's advance, 492; rapidly forms his plans, 492, 493; battle of Sohr, 494-497; returns to Berlin, 499; new hope of peace, 502; combined Austrian-Saxon scheme of attack on

Brandenburg, 502-506; instant preparations to meet it, 506; hard words to the Old Dessauer, 507; takes command of Silesian Army, 507, 508; hoodwinks Prince Karl, 509, 510; crosses the Queiss at Naumburg, 511, 512; beats the Saxons at Hennersdorf, 512, 513; cannot catch Prince Karl, who tumbles home double-quick, 514, 515; renews proposals for peace, ix. 4; finds Brühl's rage yellower than ever, 5; runs his risks with the Czarina, 5; again snubbed by France, 6; Old Dessauer conducts him over the field of Kesselsdorf, 15; lodges in Dresden, 15; his enemies compelled at last to come to terms, 16; interview with D'Arget, "would not henceforth attack a cat, except to defend myself," 18, 21; Treaty of Dresden, 22-26; sees strange changes since his first visit to Dresden, 24; welcome in Berlin, "long live Friedrich the Great," 25; has climbed the heights, 27; hopes for Peace to the end of his life, 28; the chief memory of him, that of a King and man who fought consummately well, 29; difficulty of narrating his peaceful conquests, 32; he takes the waters at Pyrmont, 33; pays with exactness all losses incurred during the war, 33; goes into Law-Reform, 33, 34, 64, 78, 79, 155; temptations from England to play Conquering Hero, Stadtholder of Holland, 35, 36; Sans-Souci, 36, 37; renewal of the Reinsberg Program, 40, 155, 158; attaches the two Keiths to his service, 63, 64; something like a stroke of apoplexy, 65; Silesia guaranteed by all the Powers, 68; getting decidedly deep into snuff, 69; visited by Maréchal de Saxe, 72, 74; strikes a medal to celebrate his Law-Reforms, 79; literary works, wishes Voltaire were with him, 81, 109; a Land's Husband, not inferior to his Father, 82, 155, 159; Army-Reviews, 83; audience with Sir Hanbury Williams, 84; pays back an Austrian-Review affront, 88, 90; rights Candidatus Linsebarth's wrongs, 90-99; interview in the garden, 95, 97; Wilhelmina at Berlin-reception of Voltaire, 102; refuses to know the Pompadour, 102; a present to his old friend Keith, 104; Berlin Carrousel, 106-111; experiences of Voltaire which he does not like, 110; Voltaire's visit much misunderstood to this day, 112; Friedrich's royal provision for him, 113; recognizes his Pope, 114, 116, 117; painfully sensible what a skinless explosive Trismegistus he has got, 123, 160; hears of Voltaire's Steuer-Scheine proceedings, 131; takes the matter silently, but with boundless contempt, 144; two letters to Voltaire, rough common-sense of a German, who speaks what he thinks, 146, 148; anxiety for Wilhelmina's health, 150; visits Ost-Friesland, 151; Shipping companies and Sea-Enterprises, 158, 155; English Privateer controversy, 156, 245-249; no faith in Free-Trade, 156; grateful for Voltaire's honest literary help, 165, 167; how he regards Maupertuis, D'Argens, Algarotti, 167-169; a great appetite for conversation and turn for bantering, 169; La Mettrie, 170-172, 182; esteem for Rothenburg, 178; for Marshal Keith, 173; quits Rothenburg's death-bed in tears, 179; writes to Wilhelmina, 181, 182; his French Colony of Wits a sorry set, 190; "Ach, mein lieber Sulzer," 191; domestic details from Prussia and Demon Newswriter, 192, 196, 199, 202; fantasizing on his flute, 194; diabolic rumors about his private life, 196, 198; defends Maupertuis against Voltaire, 214; peals of laughter at reading Akalia, 215; in a towering passion with Voltaire, 217, 218; outward reconciliation, 219; last interview, 222; determines to have his Book of Poesies back from Voltaire at Frankfurt, 225, 226; no farther correspondence with him, 239; no Muses'-Heaven on Telluric terms, 240; sees indications of approaching War, 240, 262, 268; indifferent to the King of the Romans Question, 240, 242; anxious to establish a Foreign Trade, 245; minds his own affairs, 249; his Third Silesian War, 268; visits Holland, interview with De Catt, 268-271; the Menzel Documents, 275, 278, 281, 285; irritated with the Czarina, 284; a very stormy and dubious future, 287, 291, 292; Neutrality Convention with England, 293; no intention to be Adjunct and Satellite of France, 298, 299; perplexity of his situation, 305, 307; army in the perfection of order, 307; puts a question at Vienna, 310, 313; consults with his principal Generals, 310, 311; marches towards Saxony, 314, 318; letters to Duke Ferdinand, army arrangements, 315, 316; to his Brother and Sister, war inevitable, 316; consultations with Mitchell, 318, 319; enters Saxony, 320; cannot make terms with Polish Majesty, 321, 322, 334; secures the originals of the Menzel Documents, 323, 324; blockades the Saxons in

Pirna country, 325, 330, 333; joins Keith in Bohemia, 339, 340; battle of Lobositz, 341-351; writes to Wilhelmina, 349; compels his Saxon prisoners to enter his army, 362-365; prepares to winter in Dresden, 367; all Europe against him, 369, 370; no King living has better servants, 371; begins his Prussian Free Corps, 373; his life in Dresden, 371, 373, 374; visit to his Mother, 374; Secret Letter of Instructions to Finckenstein, 375, 376; provides himself with poison, in case of the worst, last adieu to his Mother, 374; anger of the Great Powers against him, 377; withdraws the Wesel-d'leve garrisons, 382; gets little immediate help from England, 383; remonstrates against Austria's unseemly language, 384; for what small sums he got his work well done, 386; his Instructions to Count Finck, 386; four Invasions advancing on him, 387; suddenly marches on Prag, 387, 390; before the city, 395; junction with Schwerin, 397, 398; got to know his man, after fighting him a month or two, 398; battle of Prag, and defeat of the Austrians, 404-416; over-haste, dispute with Schwerin, 404, 414; exultation and congratulations, 422; Prag not captured, 423, 425; general discouragement of his enemies, 423; Friedrich and Chatham, 435; Ban of the Reich, 442, 544; finds siege of Prag unexpectedly tedious, 442-446; rumors of Daun's approach, 447; sets forth to meet him, 448; battle of Kolin, 447-463; hasty orders to Moritz of Dessau, 457, 458; retreat to Nimburg, 462; tears for his lost soldiers, 466; at Leitmeritz, 468; grief at hearing of his Mother's death, 471-474; predestination, 478; would bribe the Pompadour to obtain peace, 479; his own view of his troubles, 480; indignation at the Prince of Prussia's disastrous folly, 489; meeting of the Brothers, stern condemnation, 491-494; well-nigh desperate, 495; vain efforts to get battle with the Austrians, 495, 496; marches to Dresden to look into the French movement., 497, 504; hears of Winterfeld's death, 502; near Erfurt, on march for Berlin, against Haddick, 505, 537; back towards Erfurt, writes to Richelieu, urging peace, 506; sees hope of help from England and Pitt, 511; enters Erfurt, 511; visits the Duke and Duchess of Sachsen-Gotha, 513, 514; writes to the Duchess, to Wilhelmina, 515; high opinion of Prince Henri

515; writes to Duchess, 518; hears bad news from Preussen, 519; a bright-glancing articulate man, not to be struck dumb by the face of Death itself, 520; fighting for existence, and yet going into verse in addition, 521; Lamentation Psalms, on strange conditions, 522, 525, 535; again brought into correspondence with Voltaire, 524, 529; letter to Wilhelmina, utterly resolved not to survive defeat, 531-534; will die, if he needs must, in utmost spasm of battle to the last, 536; interviews with Gottsched at Leipzig, 538, 539; a word of encouragement to Wilhelm, 541; cheering prospect of work now ahead, Ferdinand of Brunswick to be General of Britannic Army, 546; Pitt again in power, 547; Friedrich marches after Combined Army, x. 3; at Weissenfels, 5; Rossbach, 8; watching the enemy, 12; a wager of life, with glorious possibilities, 13; has got the flank of Dauphiness, and means to keep it, 17; never was Army better beaten, 19; his famed Conge de l'Armée, 21; marches for Silesia, the news ominously doubtful, 35, 37; Schweidnitz and Breslau lost, 38, 40; rigorous indignant messages, 41; addresses his Generals at Parchwitz, "We must beat the enemy, or perish all," 41-44; snatches of Camp Dialogue, 44, 46; hears with joy that the Austrians are advancing on him, 48; captures their bakery, 48; full view of the Austrian Army, his plan of battle soon clear to him, 51; the "Oblique Order," 51, 56; hears, amid his field-music, the sound of Psalms, 53; battle of Leuthen, no finer bit of work for hundreds of years, 54-64, 71; talks with a landlord at Saara, 64; at Lissa comes unexpectedly on a party of Austrian Officers, 66; a homely Te-Deum from his soldiers, 67; a pious people of right Teutsch stuff, 67; recovers Breslau, 68; popular astonishment and enthusiasm, 71; an English Pottery-Apotheosis, 71; winter in Breslau, 75-77; writes pacifically to Maria Theresa, 76; hears with disgust that East-Preussen has become Russian, 78; raises no new taxes, 83; English subsidies, 84-87; present from Miss Wyndham, 87-89; letter to an English lady, 88; good news of Ferdinand's Rhine Campaign, 92; recaptures Schweidnitz, 93; marches for Olmütz, 94; lays siege, 98; not thought to shine in the sieging line, 98; Daun feels his procedures to be altogether feline, 99; impatient of his slow siege, 101; hears of August

Wilhelm's death, 101; mistakes Daun's movements for an intention to give him battle, 102; one more convoy indispensable 102; convoy lost, and Olmütz siege over, 108; masterly retreat to Leutomischl, 109; near Königsgrätz, planted impregnable inside the Daun redoubts, 111; marches against Fermor, 115; extremity of grief on account of Wilhelmina, 114, 115; Paper of Directions for Prince Henri, in case of death, 115; straight for Frankfurt, 116; unduly despises Russian soldiery, 123, 138; inspects Dohna's camp at Görgast, 123; joy of the country people on his appearance among them, 123; hastens to attack the Russian Army, 125; neglects to abolish the Russian Baggage, 128, 137; battle of Zorndorf, 127-138; praises Seidlitz, 136; marches for Saxony, 138; replies to Daun's cautionary note to Fermor, 145; with Prince Henri in Dresden, 146; cannot draw Daun from his intrenchments, 146; suddenly takes the road for Neisse, 147; piqued at seeing Daun ahead of him, and encamps directly in front of him, 148; obstinate rashness, and contempt for Daun, 148; anxious to get out of his bad post, 153; battle of Hochkirch, 153-162; orders retreat, 163; takes his punishment with wonderful cheerfulness, 163; hears of Wilhelmina's death, 164; fixed intention to march to Neisse, 168; sends his wounded to Hoyerswerda, 168; sweeps past Daun, and arrives at Görlitz, 169; Silesia brushed clear, back to Dresden, 173; his marches wonderful this year, 174; a sad and silent winter for him, 179, 184; the campaign over, and nothing come of it, on either side, but frightful loss, 179; mutually vigilant Winter-quarters, 180, 181; vain hopes of peace, 182; must stand on the defensive henceforth, 184, 206; writes considerably in the intervals of business, 185; affectionate consideration for Fouquet, 186; his heavy Finance problem, 187; miraculously meagre War-Budget, and methods of gathering it, 187-191; issue of base money, 190; opening of spring campaign, 192; drives Deville from Leobschütz, 204; at Reich-Hennersdorf, 207; introduces Horse-Artillery, 208; changes Guichard into Quintus Icilius, 209; encamped at Schmützeifen, 212, 213; watching Daun, 216; sends Wedell against Soltikof, 218, 220, 222; must look to the Russian problem himself, 223; rendezvous at Sagan, 228; tries to intercept

Loudon and Haddick, 228; attacks Haddick, 230; marches towards Frankfurt, 231; at Lebus, 243; out reconnoitring, 249; battle of Kunersdorf, 249-272; a peasant brings a draught of water, 251-255; not so despondent as might be imagined, 256; reckons that the victory is his, 261; three horses shot under him, "I, like the rest, must stand to my duty here!" 265; passionately struggles, commands, entreats, 265; the Prussian Army all in flight, Friedrich among the last to quit the ground, 266; looks after two wounded Lieutenants, 267; taking leave both of Kingship and of life, hands over the Army to Finck's charge, 268; writes to Schmettau in Dresden, authorizing capitulation, 269; despair did not last quite four days, 273; a most lone soul of a man, but continually toiling forward, 274; might have been ruined now, had his enemies been diligent about it, 275; utterances to D'Arrens, heavy-laden, nearly desperate, 279, 280; second letter to Schmettau, must defend Dresden to the utmost, 281; thanks Wolfersdorf for his defence of Torgau, 281; grief and indignation at loss of Dresden, 301, 306; lays hold of Sagan, and establishes communication with Prince Henri, 320; Voltaire peace-expectations, anxieties, private and public, 321, 323; manoeuvring against Soltikof, 324, 330; on the Heights of Zöbelwitz, getting tragically scarce of persons to consult, 330; much risen in hope, 331; ill of gout, for three weeks cannot stir from his room, 332; takes to writing about Charles XII., 332; carried on a litter to Glogau, 333; arrives in Prince Henri's Camp, free of his gout, in joyful spirits and high humor, 344; procedures against Daun too rapid and rash, 345; a proud Friedrich, got on his feet again, 346; orders Finck to plant himself in Maxen, 347; will not be dissuaded, 347; himself follows, at Wildruf, 349; messages to Finck, 349, 350; whirlwind of grief and indignation at the catastrophe of Maxen, 356; no ray of pity visible for poor Finck then or afterwards, 358; sets Daun at utter defiance, 358; mutually hostile Winter-quarters, 360; "Protestant Hero," 365; amused at the French resource of borrowing Plate for coining, 374; publishes an expurgated edition of his Poems, 375; Voltaire Peace-negotiations, 381; their characteristic correspondence, 385-400; rebukes his persevering ridicule of

Maupertuis, "trouble not the ashes of the dead," 398-400; sends Lord Marischal to Spain on a diplomatic mission, 400; many fallacies of hope, almost pathetic to think of, 408; one hope that did not deceive him, hope in his own best exertion to the very death, 403; his enemies more confident than ever, refuse to exchange prisoners, 404; wholesale recruiting or crimping, 405; is considered to be ruined, 413; gloom or censure among his own people, 413; incredible diligence and persistence, 413; a man drenched in misery, but doing his very utmost in it, with or without success, 415; his ill-luck does not yet cease its sad company, 416; his marches exceed all calculation and example, 417; encamped near Meissen, 417; clings to the hope of peace, and of extraneous help, 418; finds the Russian movements full of enigma, 419; reproaches Fouquet for losing Landshut, 420; tries to get a stroke on Lacy, and to get well into Silesia, 421, 422; without success, 424; visible ill-humor, 425; hears of Fouquet's catastrophe, 425; prepares for siege of Dresden, 427, 428; tries to decoy Daun from his intrenchments, marches for Silesia, 428; is himself decoyed by Lacy, 429, 430; hears that Daun is at Bautzen before him, and hastens onward, such a march for heat and difficulty as he never had before, 430; hears that Daun has reached Görlitz, and determines again to turn on Lacy, 431, 433; skirmish of horse, and personal jeopardy, 433; besieges Dresden, one of the rapidest and most furious sieges on record, 437; expects to be master of the town in a few days, 439; hears of Daun's arrival, 440; his soul black and wrathful, worn almost desperate, 442; deals hard measure on Regiment Bernburg, 442; retires from Dresden, hears of the loss of Glatz, 443; beaten on every hand, 446; will make for Silesia without loss of an hour, 447; dissatisfied with Prince Henri's cautious proceedings, 448-450; more Alcides-like than ever, 455; arranges his march beforehand to the last item, 461, 462; on to Liegnitz, attended all the way by Daun and Lacy, 463-468; Daun, Lacy and Loudon all agape for him, in scientific postures, 468; provisions all but run out, 469; marches, during night, unobserved through Liegnitz, 470; Austrian-Irish deserter, 471; leaves his camp-fires all carefully burning, 471; arranges himself in order of battle, and tries for a snatch of sleep, 473; suddenly attacked by Loudon, springs to horse, and is rapidly ready to receive him, 473; uncommonly stiff fighting, Regiment Bernburg doing wonders, Loudon sorely beaten, 474, 475; Daun and Lacy can do nothing on him, 475, 476; gathers up his spoil and marches victorious; one of the succinctest of Kings, 477; takes Regiment Bernburg into favor again, 478; still utterly dark as to the course his enemies will take, 479; secure at last of Breslau, and of junction with Henri, 480; does not deceive himself with these bits of successes, letter to D'Argens, 481, 482; finds an unexpected recoil among his enemies, 484; beautifully marches and manoeuvres upon Daun and his chain of army-posts, 485, 486; worn down into utter weariness, sickness and disgust, 487, 488; hears that Berlin is seized, and hastens to its relief, 494; finding Berlin again free, he marches to Lübben, 500; interview with Gotskowaky, "Merchants' Bills a sacred thing," 501; resolved to dare all things rather than sign a humiliating peace, 506; skilfully manoeuvres upon Daun, 506-507; marches towards Torgau, 508; determines to attack Daun's impregnable position, 512; arrangements and marchings, 514, 515; unexpected delays, 517; obliged to attack with but a fraction of his forces, 518; such a problem as human bravery seldom had, 519; a Grandson of the Old Deseauer shot dead, 520; reinforcement and renewed effort, 521; himself wounded, 521; attack upon attack, but without adequate result, 521, 522; night sinks and nothing more can be made of it, 523; unexpected turn of affairs, and Daun in full retreat, 524-529; the campaign ended, 530; Friedrich takes to his winter-quarters, Leipzig, 530; sees all black, as if at the bottom of a tomb, 531; writes a sadly playful letter to his old friend Madame Camas, 532; his winter in Leipzig cheerfulest than expected, D'Argens and other faithful friends about him, xi. 8; amuses himself with feeding his dogs, 9; always an appetite for a snatch of talk with anybody of sense, 10; interview and dialogue with Gellert, 11-17; resolves to retaliate on the Saxon plunderings at Berlin, 19; dialogue with General Saldern, who refuses to act contrary to his honor and oath, 20; sends Quintus Icilius, and banters him about it ever afterwards, 21; sends a small expedition to Langensalza, 22-27; levies contributions on Leipzig, 27; sends Madame Camas a porcelain box, 31; a King risen from the deeps again, more incalculable than ever, 36; his stoical and manful figure of demeanor, 37; marches into Silesia for Loudon and the Russians, 39, 40; swift skilful manoeuvrings, 41, 42; tries to seize Kunzendorf, but finds Loudon too quick for him, 44; digs and intrenches his world-famous Camp of Bunzelwitz, 44-47; beaten here, he is beaten altogether, his last stronghold in the world, 48; constant vigilance, and expectation of attack, like an Arab Sheikh among his tribesmen, 49; finds the Russian Army has given it up, and returned homewards, 51; sends General Platen to quicken their march, 51, stays a fortnight longer at Bunzelwitz, 52; gets very anxious about Colberg, 53; quits Bunzelwitz and loses Schweidnitz, 58, 72; surprising inattention to the state of his Garrisons, 70; falls ill of gout, the inflexible heart of him at last like to break, 73; on march towards Strehlen, 75; lodges with Traitor Warkotsch, 76; a night-ride with Kappel for guide, 76, 77; narrowly escapes betrayal to the Austrians, 78-84; loses Colberg, 85, 86; a gloomy winter in Breslau, 87, 88; loses his English subsidy, puts more alloy into his currency, 86; all gift-moneys in abeyance, succeeds in raising his army to the necessary number, 97; grim letter to D'Argens, becoming wise by stripes, 98; tiff of quarrel with Prince Henri, 99-103; his darkest hour, and dawning of a brighter day, 104, 106; death of the Czarina, 106; finds a warm friend in Czar Peter, 106, 115; liberates all his Russian prisoners, 111; Treaty of Peace with the Czar, 112; the way out from destruction now a thing credible and visible to him, 112; hopeful letters, 113-116; opens his seventh campaign, with Daun, not Loudon, for enemy, 123; joined by Czernichef with a Russian reinforcement, 126, 126; makes unsuccessful attempts on Daun, 127; dismayed to hear that Czar Peter is murdered, and Czernichef recalled, 140, 141; storms Burkersdorf, and drives Daun clear of Schweidnitz, 141-144; his contempt for Lord Buta, 145, 161, 170; besieges Schweidnitz, 147; Battle of Reichenbach, 149, 150; Schweidnitz proves unexpectedly difficult, 151; gets it at last, and praises the Commandant for his excellent defence, 156; marches into Saxony, 157; congratulates Prince Henri on his victory of Freyberg, 165; truce with Austria, 166; visits Gotha, dialogue with Professor Futter, 168; terms of peace, 170; Austria tries to get his Rhine provinces, but cannot, 171; he ruthlessly pays off all superfluous men, 172; treaty for general peace as good as certain, 173; dines with Kurprince of Saxony, 179; home once more at Berlin, supper with the Queen and Court, 179; his part in World-History now played out, 180; reads no sign of the coming French Revolution, 181-184; his history henceforth interesting to Prussia chiefly, not so peculiar as to authorize much painting of character, 184; sets earnestly to work to repair his ruined Prussia, 188, 189; listens to the distresses of Nüssler and company, and helps those who most need it, 190-193; rapidly restores his debased currency, 194; visits Westphalia with Duke Ferdinand, 195; dialogue with Roden, 196; picks up D'Alembert at Geldern, 198; second dialogue with Roden, 198; prouder of his victories over his social chaos than of his other victories, 199; has great difficulty in finding fit persons for his different employments, 202; obliges all the rich Abbays to establish manufactures, 203; induces the rich landlords to give up their encroachments on the poor farmers, 203, 204; D'Alembert's report of him, 205; he adopts the French Excise-system, much to the dissatisfaction of Prussia, 206, 211; caricatured as a miser grinding coffee, 210; his method with the Caricature department of things, 210; procurator of the poor, 211; replies to the Douanier at Stettin, 212; account of his nephew's divorce, 212, 214; builds his Neue Palais of Sans Souci, 215, 216; affection for Lord Marischal, 217-220; shows kindness to Rousseau, 218; footfalls of departing guests, 221, 222; makes treaty of Alliance with Czarina Catherine, 224; corresponds with the Electress of Saxony about the Polish Crown, 232-237; takes little interest in the Polish quarrels, his one rule of policy to keep well with the Czarina, 246-251; alarmed at the suggestion of Prince Henri for King of Poland, 247; strives to dissuade the Turks from their Polish war with Russia, 262; dreads another European outbreak, 263, 265; has a friendly visit from Kaiser Joseph, 269-273; suggests at Petersburg a cutting down of Poland, 275; pleasant visit from Electress Marie-

Antoine, 275; fulminates a Royal Bull concerning eternal punishment, 276; makes a return visit to the Kaiser, Prince de Ligne's account, 278-289; would rather have Loudon at his side than before him, 285; ceremoniously respectful to the Kaiser, 289; interview with Kaunitz on the Russian-Turk war, 295, 296; mediates with the Czarina, 297; she proposes dismemberment of Poland, 304; he gladly undertakes to negotiate the matter, 305-307; has his difficulties with Kaunitz, 305, 307; final agreement between the Partitioning Powers, 308, 309; no alternative left, but either that same Partition, or all Europe kindled into war, 309; at no pains to conceal his great sense of the value of West Preussen to him, 310, 311; how he set to work, and what he made of it, 315-319; keeps an eye on Kaiser Joseph, 321; long dialogue with Zimmermann, 322, 327-332; receives a visit from his sister Ulrique, 334, 335; school improvements, 338, 339; sets out for his Silesian Reviews, 340; his later correspondence with Voltaire, 347; his annual Reviews, matters of rigorous business, 361, 362; Conway's account of him and them, 363-369; Major Kaltenborn's, 370, 371; two famous anecdotes of him and Ziethen, 371, 372; suffers from a severe attack of gout, 374; the Kaiser thinking him dying marches on Brandenburg, 374; entertains Czarowitch Paul at Berlin, 376; expresses esteem for Pitt, 379, 381; correspondence with D'Alembert on the Kaiser's French tour, 388, 389; Cabinet-Order, with fac-simile of Signature, 389, 390; forbids the Austrian attempt on Bavaria, 391; letter from Duchess Clement on the subject, 399; instantly gets to work, 399, 403; fruitless negotiations with Austria, 404; speech to his Generals, 406; marches to Silesia, 406; Kaunitz's high tone becomes notably altered, 409, 411; correspondence with the Kaiser, 410, 411; highly unwilling to begin a war which nobody can see the end of, 412; crosses into Bohemia, 413; regardless of personal risks, 414; humor very sour and severe, 414, 417; letter from Maria Theresa, 414, 415; returns homewards, 417, 420; difficulties mediated by the Czarina, 421, 422; has put a spoke in Austria's proud wheel, and managed to see fair play in the Reich, 422; his second Law-Reform, 424; appoints Heucking to see justice done to Müller Arnold, 429; indignant at the

- Lawyers, 434; orders the judges to appear before him, and passes judgment on them, 437-447; never neglected this part of his function, 449; still watchful of Austrian encroachments on the Reich, 453; produces a Fürstenbund, or general confederation of German Princes, 453, 486; an unaffectedly vigorous, simple and manful old age, 454; his old companions dropping off, 454; domestic anecdotes, 457, 458; industrial matters a large item in his daily business, 459; the strictest husbandman not busier with his farm than he with his Kingdom, 460; Prince de Ligne reports several pleasant interviews with him, 461-471; Marwitz's recollections, 472-479; Marquis de Bouillé's, 480-484, 489; severe letter to General Taubentzien on the state of the Silesian Army, 485, 490; Comte de Ségur's description of his appearance, 490; goes to his last Silesian Review, 492; takes severe cold, 494; returns to Potsdam, 494; increasing illness, 496; interview with Mirabeau, 497; cannot take his usual ride, 499; sends for Zimmermann, hoping to get relief, 502; does faithfully to the end the work that comes to hand, 506; his last day's work over, 507; his life-battle fought out, 508; the Last of the Kings, 509. — "A Day with Friedrich," 458, 512, 533; day's drive through the Rhyn-Luch, and direct personal inspection, 512; many old remembrances, 513; agricultural improvements, 514, 527; personal kindnesses, 516, 526, 530; interest for old Ziethen, 518; affectionate interview, 522-524; questions about the condition of the country and of the people, 524-528; satisfaction, and farther improvements, 530, 532; Fehrbellin, the Prussian Bannockburn, 532, 533.
- Friedrich's Letters: — quality of, vi. 330; vii. 38, 39, 57, 58; to Duhan, v. 409; his Father, vi. 90, 306, 338, 490; vii. 11, 70, 74, 77, 94; his Mother, vi. 148; viii. 467, 500; ix. 422; Wilhelmina, vi. 389, 391, 456, 485, 487, 490; vii. 429; ix. 182, 349, 478-481, 515, 531-534, 541; x. 22, 115; Hotham, vi. 198, 200, 225; Grumkow, 380, 383, 384, 417; Hacke, 419; Seckendorf, 420; Margraf Heinrich, 478; Madame Camas, 498; x. 532, xi. 31, 113, 114; Gröben, vi. 499; Karl of Brunswick, vii. 14; Voltaire, 60, 92, 112, 192, 220, 321; viii. 285, 286; ix. 145, 146, 178, 218, 220, 221, 529, 535; x. 322, 356, 386, 397-400; xi. 278, 309, 320, 344; Maupertuis, vii. 157; Jordan, 230, 274, 320, 324, 339, 403; viii. 142; the Bishop of Liège, vii. 237, 238; Algarotti, 274, 339; Old Dessauer, 278, 394; viii. 388; Young Dessauer, vii. 390; August Wilhelm, 404; ix. 493; Duke Ferdinand, 316, 317; Podewils, viii. 420, 423, 431; Fouquet, 472; x. 231; Prince of Prussia and Princess Amelia, ix. 317; Princess Amelia, 421; Schwerin, 347; Finkenstein, 374; x. 231, 243, 268; xi. 113; Duchess of Sachsen-Gotha, ix. 515, 519; x. 322, 382; xi. 169; Duc de Richelieu, ix. 506; D'Argens, x. 71, 75, 186, 279, 280, 356, 374, 375, 414, 481, 488, 501, 504, 531; xi. 98, 113-115; to an English lady, x. 88; Prince Henri, 114, 207, 448, 449, 488, 489; xi. 100, 102, 163, 165, 174; xii. 386; Daun (as if from Fernor), x. 145; Lord Marischal, xi. 219, 220; Finck, x. 268, 350; Schmettau, 269, 299, 308; Wunsch, 273; Prince Ferdinand, 320, 323; Zastrow, xi. 71; De Launay, 211; Douanier at Stettin, 212; Electress Marie-Antoine, 232-236, 275, 276, 334; D'Alembert, 343, 388; Kaiser Joseph, 410; Taubentzien, 485; Duchess-Dowager of Brunswick, 505; Note on Toleration, vii. 158; the Strasburg Adventure, 199; Silesian Project, 277; Marginalia for Voltaire, viii. 281, 284; quizzing Testimonial to Pölnitz, 318; his opinion of Traun, 384; of an Austrian Battalion, 466; of D'Ahremberg, 484; account of straw sentry, 478; Le Palladium, 487; Speech to his Generals before Leuthen, ix. 42; closing paragraph of his "History of the Seven-Years War," x. 192; on the ruined condition of Prussia at the close of the War, xi. 200; account of the Prince of Prussia's divorce, 213; newspaper article, 253; on Russian and Turk tactics, 264; suggestion for cutting down Poland, 275; Speech to his Generals on occasion of the Bavarian War, 404.
- Friedrich's Mother. See Sophie Dorothee.
- Friedrich's Wife. See Elizabeth Christina.
- Friedrich Wilhelm, Eleventh or Great Kurfürst, v. 45, 46, 48, 279; his wariness and dexterity, 280; gets Hinder-Pommern, 282; marches into Jülich, 283; his Polish-Swedish War, 283; essentially an industrial man, 286; character and portrait, 287; Battle of Fehrbellin, 287; beats the Swedes out of Prussen, 289; conquers Swedish Pommern, but cannot keep it, 291; his true Wife, Louisa of Nassau-Orange, 289, 292; his second Wife, Dorothea, 293; mutinies quenched out, 293;

- death, 295; how Austria settled his Silesian claims, 296; mentioned also, viii. 449; ix. 158, 216; xi. 199, 238.
- Friedrich Wilhelm, King, as Crown-Prince, v. 24, 34; taken to Hanover in childhood, 27; a rough unruly boy from the first, 31, 35, 52, 324; an abrupt peremptory young King, 317; his Spartan habits, 324; his Father's death, 324; the new King's house swept clear of mendacity and idle hypocrisy, 325; his strange wild ways, 327; love of justice, 329; vi. 30; the first years of his laborious reign, v. 329; a "man of genius," fated to work in National Husbandry, 332, 351; vi. 5, 9, 14, 440; his tall Potsdam Regiment, v. 333, 373; vi. 4, 396; vii. 143; the great Drill-sergeant of the Prussian Nation, v. 335; his faculty of minding his own business, 337, 404; vi. 218; Portraits of him, v. 337; vi. 75, 413; personal habits, v. 338; no love for the French or their fashions, 340; Broddignagian waggeries, 342; vi. 39; an original North-German Spartan, v. 342, 390; charge of avarice, v. 344; vi. 94; siege of Stralsund, v. 345, 351; regard for Charles XII., 349, 354; and original farewell Letter of Instructions, 350; makes his Will in favor of the Queen, 350, 395; vi. 15; returns victorious, v. 355, 362; visited by Czar Peter, 364; Tutors selected for Fritz, 374; his notions about education, 377; fond of hunting, 382; vi. 95; habits at Wusterhausen, v. 389; his Tobacco-Parliament, 391; vi. 29 (see Tobacco-Parliament); alarming attack of "nephritic cholera," v. 395; interest in Cleve-Jülich, the Pfalz-Neuburg Heritage, 397, 460; vi. 23, 255; vii. 85; interferes for the Heidelberg Protestants, v. 398; a King who stayed well at home, 404; vi. 218; loses favor with the Kaiser, v. 405; disappointed with his son Fritz, 416; assists at the birth of Princess Amelia, 438; list of his ten children, 439; signs Treaty of Hanover, 460; is annoyed with the Double-Marriage Treaty, 466; vi. 92 (see Double-Marriage); his recruiting difficulties and predatory encroachments, 9, 65; George I. fires up, 13; surrounded by intrigues, 14; snared for the Kaiser by Grumkow and Seckendorf, 18 (see Grumkow); Treaty of Wusterhausen, 23, 50; "possessed" as by two devils, 27, 50, 103, 125, 157, 228; horse-play with Gundling, 44; his irreverence for the Sciences and Fine Arts, 42; summary treatment of Wolf, 49; how Queen Sophie might have managed him, 51; his sorrow at the death of George I., 63; unsuspected tears in the rugged man, 62; hypochondriacal fits, 64; talks of abdicating, 66; visits King August at Dresden, 70, 166; dissolute entertainments, 71-73; singular mutual liking of the two, 75; Friedrich Wilhelm receives a return visit at Berlin, 77; increased dislike for his Son, 89, 433; contemptuous Letter to him, 91; a grand slaughter of wild swine, and what his Majesty did with the pork, 95; a bad attack of the gout, 96, 110; ill-treatment of his family, 102, 112, 125, 145, 147, 243; quarrels with George II., 113, 122; troubles of Mecklenburg, &c., 120; resolves to challenge George II. to single combat, 127; imminency of War between them, 128, 184; arbitration, 135; publicly cares the Crown-Prince, 148, 210, 228; will end the Double-Marriage speculation, 150; Wilhelmina to have Friedrich of Bai-reuth, 160; a conversation with Dubourgay, 170; jealous of the Crown-Prince, 171, 175; joyful reception of Hotham, 172; will not consent to Friedrich's marriage, 176; looks sour on Hotham, 189; apprised of Grumkow's treachery, but refuses to believe it, 193, 196; will agree to Single Marriage, not Double, 196; King August's Camp of Rade-witz, 203; extraordinary conduct of Hotham, 219; passionate vexation with himself and others, 227; Journey to the Reich, 230; no taste for salutations in the market-place, 232; a Bridal-procession, 247; visits the Duke of Würtemberg, 247; gives him good advice, 252; visits Karl Philip, 254, 263; a simple dinner, 258; discovers Friedrich's attempt at flight, 262; suppressed rage, 263; visits Ernest Ludwig, 264; can suppress no longer, 267; summary orders, 268; visits Clement August, 269; letter home announcing arrest, 274; draws his sword upon his Son, 275; "let him take the doom the Laws have appointed," 275; arrives at Berlin, 278; almost mad at the turn things have taken, 279; receives a packet of fictitious Letters, assaults Wilhelmina in a frenzy of rage and disappointment, 279; no more negotiations with England, 285; cannot get to the bottom of the conspiracy, 285; wholesale punishments, 286; anxiety to save Friedrich's soul, 288; something of the nature of real prayer, 280, 334; his conduct, looked at from without and from within, 289, 302; distracted wanderings, 290; will have Katta and Crown-

- Prince tried by Court-Martial, 291, 293; Katte must die, 295; the King's troubled thoughts, 302; spares his Son's life, 304; and even hopes to save his soul, 305; resolves on Wilhelmina's Marriage, 309; preparations for her Betrothal, 313; never neglects public business, 316; the Salzburg Protestants, 317, 399; hangs Schlubhut for theft, 318; elk-hunting at Pillau, 320; cudgels his Criminal-Collegium, 322; excessively severe on defalcations, 323; reconciled to his Son, 331, 338; narrow escape from a bullet, 354; his Majesty's building operations, and infringements of Free-Trade, 354; vii. 18; his store of silver, vi. 360; takes Friedrich into favor, 362, 393; repentant love for Wilhelmina, 364; decides on a Bride for Friedrich, 375; his Letters, 378; receives the Salzburg Protestants at Berlin, 413; a man skilful in investments, 415; his Majesty visits the Kaiser, 416, 421; contempt for their ceremonials, 421, 426; dines at Prag with Prince Eugene, 428; meetings with the Kaiser, 430, 431; returns home with new experiences of his high friends, 432; visits Wilhelmina, 434; passes Leipzig, 435; total change of mind towards the Kaiser, 438, 442, 450; a strange Session of the Tobacco-Parliament, 438; a ride with Seckendorf, 441; vii. 7; passionate remorse, vi. 442; interest in West-Prussen, 446; rough banter with Wilhelmina, 447; provision for Friedrich on his marriage, 454; vii. 22; small interest in the Polish Election, vi. 461; connection with the Rhine Campaign, 474, 476; grants asylum to Stanislaus, 483; Friedrich still finds him difficult to please, 485; at Philipsburg, 492; steadily refuses to give up Stanislaus, 494; vii. 9; falls seriously ill, vi. 502; pleased with Friedrich's success in Prussen, vii. 13; continued illness, 18, 104; fallen out with the Kaiser, 18, 86, 87; a visit to Loo, 90, 93; growing favor for Friedrich, 91, 114; renewed anxiety about his Heterodoxies, 97; Friedrich's testimony to his noble kingly qualities, 112; a new fit of illness, 115; the final shadows closing in upon him, 126, 131; his last Tobacco-Parliament, 133; how he shall stand justified before Almighty God, 134, 139; much affected at seeing his Son, 137; Instructions for his Funeral, 137; abdicates in favor of Friedrich, 138, 141; death, 142; his Spartan Funeral, 143; his dealings with the old Stände, 179; his troubles about Herstal, 233, 235; though dead, still fights, 424; Law-Reform, ix. 33; the Great Elector 158, 215; viii. 217: mentioned, xi. 419.
- Friedrich Wilhelm, Cousin of Friedrich, v. 392, 393 n.; vi. 87, 478, 505.
- Friedrich Wilhelm III.'s monument to Schwerin, ix. 420, 422; his parentage, xi. 214, 215; boyish recollection of the Great Friedrich, 458.
- Friedrich Wilhelm, Prince (afterwards King), with Friedrich at Leipzig, xi. 8; at Siege of Schweidnitz, 153, 154; Westphalia, 194; married to Elizabeth of Brunswick, 212; headlong, and dreadfully dissolute, 213, 214; divorce, and second marriage, 215; his curious death-bed, 220; at Friedrich's Silesian Reviews, 179, 369, 481: mentioned also, 9 n., 269, 270, 276, 369, 449, 467.
- Friedrichfelde, vi. 329. See Carzig.
- Friendship, now obsolete, i. 91; an incredible tradition, 126, 176; how it were possible, 162, 223; in the old heroic sense, xiii. 304.
- Friesack demolished, v. 161, 163, 269.
- Friesland, v. 299.
- Fritsch, Baron von, negotiates peace, xi. 170, 172, 173.
- Fritz of Prussia, ii. 393.
- Fritz, M., xi. 352.
- Fritzlar plundered and burnt, v. 99.
- Froben, Printer, xii. 407.
- Fromm's account of "a Day with Friedrich," xi. 512-533; a man of excellent disposition, with a good stroke of work in him, 512; talks with the King, 516-531.
- Frost, i. 251. See Fire.
- Froste-Thing, xix. 401.
- Fuchs, Dr., monument at Mollwitz, vii. 408.
- Fugger, Anton, of Augsburg, xiv. 288; Fuggers, the, v. 183, 195; vi. 246.
- Fugleman, vii. 374.
- Fuller, Church History cited, xii. 407.
- Fuller's Ephemeris Parliamentaria, xvii. 64.
- Funccius of Nürnberg, v. 208.
- Funck, Sieur de, ix. 281, 282.
- Funerals, Cockney, xii. 122.
- Furnes, viii. 333.
- Fürst, Grand-Chancellor von, xi. 424 n., 430, 434; dismissed by the King, 440; crowd of carriages offering sympathy, 444.
- Füssen, Peace of, viii. 419, 421.
- Futtermal, Andreas and his Wife, i. 62.
- Future, organic filaments of the, i. 184; already extant though unseen, xii. 240; England's Future, 257. See Past.

GADARENES SWINERY, xvi. 306.
Gages, Señor de, ix. 42.
Gainsborough relieved, x. 311; xvii. 148, 155.
Gaillon, Count, at siege of Prag, viii. 97.
Galtzín, Prince, commands the Russian Army against the Turks, xi. 265, 266, 273, 290; at Vienna, 421.
Gallas, Austrian, v. 280.
Gallisonnière, La, ix. 254, 300; sails for Minorca, 302.
Galliois, to La Vendée, iv. 71.
Gallows, terror of the, xv. 294; Dr. Francia's "workman's gallows," xvi. 266.
Gamaín, Sieur, locksmith, informer, iv. 240.
Game, iii. 223.
Garat, Minister of Justice, iv. 255.
Gardes, Françaises, Suisses, Du Corps, &c. See Guards.
Gardot, Avocat, xi. 276.
Garve, Professor, xi. 419: cited ix. 474 n.
Gathercoals, Yankee, torch-gleams, xli. 395.
Gaudi, Adjutant, at Rossbach, x. 13; Hochkirch, 159.
Gazette, origin of the term, iii. 307.
Gebhardus of Milan, v. 83.
Geddard village, murder at, xviii. 106.
Geddes, Jenny, and her stool, xvii. 94.
Geese, with feathers and without, xli. 146.
Geldern, v. 242; vi. 271; vii. 90.
Gell, Sir John, notice of, xvii. 142.
Gellert, Professor, a kind of oracle in his day, xi. 10-12; his interview with King Friedrich, 13-17; his peaceful death, 17.
Generals, Major, their office, xviii. 488; names of, xix. 19 n.; withdrawn, 104.
Genius, the world's treatment of, i. 94; has no sex, xvi. 122; ever a secret to itself, xiv. 348, 353; xv. 426; what meant by, v. 23, 329, 332; vi. 57; xli. 85, 280. See Original Man.
Genlis, Mme., account of, iii. 302; and D'Orléans, iv. 277; to Switzerland, 283.
Gensonné, Girondist, iv. 57; to La Vendée, 71; arrested, 310; trial of, 343.
Gentleman, modern, and meagre Pattern-Figure, xv. 227. See Respectability.
George, Duke of Saxony, whom Luther thought so little of, xvi. 370, 371.
George I. of England, v. 27, 350, 351, 354; the Pretender coming, 364; his Majesty visits Berlin, 381, 425; assists the Heidelberg Protestants, 402; English troubles, 428; first triumph of the "Constitutional Principle," 431; vi. 51; consents to the Double-Marriage scheme, v. 433; Treaty of Hanover, 460; does not sign the Double-Marriage Treaty, 465; fires up at Friedrich Wilhelm's predatory recruitings, vi. 13; his smoking-room, 31; not inclined for War, 56; death by apoplexy, on the road to Osnabrück, 58.

George II. of England, v. 13, 138; as Prince of Wales, 426, 466; gives no help to the Double-Marriage scheme, vi. 87; quarrels with Friedrich Wilhelm, 114, 122; his dapper, self-satisfied character, 114; coerces the Duke of Mecklenburg, 119; discovers Grumkow's treachery, 157, 221; helps the Salzburg Protestants, 415; his quarrel with the Prince of Wales, vii. 79; his Wife's death, 81; in a conciliatory humor towards Friedrich, 149; perplexed about his Spanish War, 186; described by Biefeld, 188; thick-coming difficulties, 247; news of the Kaiser's death, 267, 271; against Friedrich, 374; assists Austria, 343, 383; distracted procedures, 464, 468; viii. 3; a strange Curator of England, vii. 486; Austrian subsidy, viii. 4; difficulty of moving the Dutch, 6, 220; of saving Hanover from War, 8; sees that Friedrich must be bargained with, 20, 29, 55; consequences of having a George II. for Chief Captain, 33, 296; can do no more for Austria, 68, 71, 91; tries a second time to draw his sword, 187; but to no purpose, 220; sword actually drawn, 238; at Dettingen, 246, 266; Conferences at Hanau, 262; receives Prince Karl, 267; projected invasion of Alsace, 273; Austria to take back Silesia, 276; Treaty of Worms, 294; French Treaty, 301; threatened with invasion, 317; litigation with Friedrich about Ost-Friesland, 325; his feelings, 340; rather a dear morsel for England, 365; difficulties in Highlands and Netherlands, 431, 445, 481; agreement with Friedrich, 471, 479, 481, 482, 499; the Young Pretender in Edinburgh, 500; helps the Dutch, ix. 59; hires Russian troops, 62, 66; Treaty of Aix-la-Chapelle, 68; King-of-Romans Question, 240-243; Privateer difficulties with Friedrich, 246; deaf ear to Cameron's Wife, 248; feels that war with France is inevitable, 287; refuses the French a passage through Hanover, 381; finds no help in Kur-Mainz, 383; anger at the Duke of Cumberland, 509; disgraces Lord George Sackville, x. 240; his sudden death, xi. 3; Smeltungus on, 362; mentioned also, viii. 340; xi. 531, 536.

- George III. of England, vi. 139; ix. 514; becomes King of England, xi. 4; his future Wife, 32; saves Queen Matilda of Denmark, 365.
- George, Markgraf. See Culmbach.
- George, Duke of Saxony, v. 230.
- George Friedrich of Culmbach, v. 198, 214, 230, 234; goes to Preussen, to administer, 244.
- George Ludwig, Bishop of Liège, vii. 234. See Affair of Herstal.
- George, Prince of Hessen-Cassel, viii. 113, 240.
- George the Pious, of Liegnitz, vii. 335.
- George Wilhelm, Tenth Kurfürst, helpless amid the hot ashes of the Thirty-Years War, v. 295, 272.
- Georges-Cadoudal, in La Vendée, iv. 438.
- Georget, at siege of Bastille, iii. 186.
- Gera Bond, the, an excellent piece of Hohenzollern thrift, v. 186, 245, 295, 296; vi. 234; the Salzburg Protestants at Gera, 410; Friedrich delayed at, 484.
- Gérard, Farmer, Rennes deputy, iii. 139.
- Gerard, translator of "Dialogues on Poland," xi. 320.
- Gerard's plot, xviii. 393; he is beheaded, 396.
- Gerber, vi. 283, 295.
- Gerhard, Engineer-Lieutenant, xi. 155.
- Gerlach, Reverend Herr, assists Kappel in saving Friedrich from betrayal, xi. 80, 81, 83.
- Gerle, Dom, at Théot's, iv. 409.
- Germain, St., at Rossbach, x. 12, 14, 18, 19; rapacity and insubordination of the French Army, 34.
- German speculative Thought, i. 5, 12, 25, 29, 50; historical researches, 34, 66; meaning of term, iii. 383.
- German Literature, State of, xiii. 26-83; foreign ignorance of, 29; charge of bad taste, 36; German authors not specially poor, 42; high character of German poetry, 62; charge of Mysticism, 43; Irreligion, 82; First era of German Literature, xiv. 252, 317; physical science unfolds itself, 256; Didactic period, 259; Fable literature, 278; on all hands an aspect of full progress, 286; rudiments of a new spiritual era, 318; for two centuries in the sere leaf, xv. 56; German language, v. 316; Names, viii. 452, 513; Nation, the, ix. 20.
- Germany become honorably Prussian, xvi. 422; Emperor of, Papist, xix. 250.
- German Twelfth (First of April), 1795, iv. 441, 442.
- Gersdorf, Baron von, takes the water from Arnold's Mill, xi. 428; the King's Judgment, 439; Judgment reversed, 449.
- Gerund-grinding, i. 81.
- Geassler, General, at Hohenfriedberg, viii. 464, 466; sent to reinforce the Old Dessauer, 478; ix. 7; mentioned also, xi. 47.
- Gesta Romanorum*, the, xiv. 276, 379.
- Geusan, Anton von, at Versailles, vii. 350, 360.
- Geyler, v. 287 n.
- Ghost, an authentic, i. 200.
- Gibbon's only instructions in Ancient War, x. 211.
- Gibbons, Major, defeats Royalists, xvii. 321.
- Gibraltar besieged, iii. 46; Cromwell's idea of, xix. 44, 58, 59; Spanish siege of, vi. 54, 58, 99.
- Gibson, Bishop, on Cromwell, xvii. 19.
- Gibson, cited, viii. 445 n.
- Gideon's fleece, xii. 193.
- Giesebrecht, cited, xi. 32 n.
- Gifted, the, xii. 276.
- Gifts, patriotic, iv. 165.
- Gigmanity, literary, xiii. 105; xv. 26.
- Gilge, v. 290.
- Gillespie, Rev. Patrick, interview with Cromwell, xviii. 226.
- Gin, the most authentic demon in our times, xvi. 60.
- Ginkel, General, vi. 289, 336, 422, 502; Dutch Ambassador to King Friedrich, viii. 23, 26.
- Giordina, origin of term, iv. 57; in National Convention, 224; against Robespierre, 226; on King's trial, 237, 251-255; and Jacobins, 238-240; formula of, 264 (see Mountain); favorers of, 272; schemes of, 273, 286; to be seized? 286; break with Danton, 296; armed against Mountain, 298; accuse Marat, 298; departments, 299; commission of twelve, 303; commission broken, 304; arrested, 310, 340; dispersed, 312; war by, 321; retreat of eleven, 323; trial of, 343; last supper of, 344; guillotined, 345; fate in history, xvi. 102.
- Gisors, Comte de, killed at Crefeld, x. 112.
- Glamorgan, Vale of, ii. 17.
- Glasenapp, Grenadiers of, vii. 392.
- Glasgow, Assembly there, xvii. 101; Cromwell at, xviii. 173, 174, 225; riot in, 228; Thugs, xvi. 37, 60, 64.
- Glasgow University, portrait of Knox in, xii. 421.
- Glasnevin, in Ireland, xvi. 457.
- Glatz, vi. 423; viii. 109; captured by General Loudon, x. 444, 445.
- Gleim, poet, canon of Halberstadt, xi. 459, 512.

- Glenbucket, Laird of, ix. 248.
 Glencairn's rebellion in Highlands, xviii. 358, 390.
 Glendinas, viii. 481.
 Glinde, Albrecht, v. 175.
 Glogau, vii. 302, 312, 324; capture of, 389.
 Gloucester besieged, xvii. 160; relieved by Earl of Essex, 160; Cromwell's letters for defence of, xix. 374, 387, 394.
 Glume, vii. 30.
 Glynn, Recorder, in the Tower, xvii. 289 n.; Chief-Justice on Committee of Kingship, xix. 144.
 Gobel, to be Archbishop, iii. 285, 416; renounces religion, iv. 368; arrested, 392; guillotined, 402.
 Göbel, vi. 412.
 God, the unslumbering, omnipresent, eternal, i. 41; his Presence manifested to our eyes and hearts, 50; an absentee God, 124; the living, no cunningly devised fable, xv. 126; judgments of, 174; forgetting, xii. 133; his Justice, 185, 222; belief in, 215; proceeding "to invent God," 219.
 Goddard, Guilbon, in Cromwell's First Parliament, xviii. 398; his narrative of, 421, 446, 447.
 Godlike, the, vanished from the world, xiv. 372.
 Goethe, his inspired melody, i. 191; at Argonne, iv. 207; in Prussian retreat, 213-216; at Mentz, 326; intercourse and connection with Schiller, xx. 89, 96, 119, 304; his composure amid the Kantian turmoil, 109; his reverent and stubborn Realism, 304; pictorial criticism, xiii. 61; his Poetry, 64; his Works, 194-256; his Autobiography, 199; unexampled reputation, 201; the Teacher and Exemplar of his age, 204; Werter and Götz von Berlichingen, 206, 213; xv. 434; his notions on suicide, xiii. 218; Wilhelm Meister, 230-240; spiritual manhood, 240; singularly emblematic intellect, 242; a master of Humanity and of Poetry, 244; not a "German Voltaire," 247, 249; his faults, 251; Sketch of his life and works, 194-256; his prose, xiv. 124; his intercourse with Schiller, 192; his Portrait, xv. 3; his Death, 6-15; beginning of a New Era, 9; his Works, 16-73; his greatness, 29; Wahrheit und Dichtung, 32; childhood and parentage, 37; his father's hatred of French Army, 39; beautiful Gretchen, 46; at Leipzig University, 47; studies for the Law, 49; the good Frederike, 50; his goodness and badness, 52; the German Chace, 55; his first literary productions, 58; settles in Weimar, 59; inward life as recorded in his Writings, 60; tribute from Fifteen Englishmen, 62; his spiritual significance, 71; a contemporary of Mirabeau, 333; on Reverence and Education, xvi. 411-413; his Mason's Song, 418; his notion about the Christian Religion, 447; non-vocal schools, 457 (see Faust, Helena, Novelle, The Tale, Madame de Staël); his "characters," i. 332; notablest of literary men, 380; his last birthday, ii. 82; Epigram, 126; Sterling's gradual recognition of his worth, 122, 147; cannot find in him what he would expect in Jean Paul, 133; looks at him like a shying horse at a post, 141; his Mason-Lodge, xii. 228, 293; influence on the German language, v. 216; Hermann and Dorothea, vi. 416; vii. 359; ix. 20; a boy at Frankfurt, x. 195; his and his father's interest in the battle of Bergen, 200; his recollection of Gellert, xi. 18; mentioned also, vi. 266; xi. 58 n., 318, 348, 399, 508; cited, 18 n.
 Goffe, Major, exhorts at Windsor Castle, xvii. 307; is at Dunbar, xviii. 138; a Major-General, xix. 19 n.; is in favor of Kingship, 217.
 Goguelat, Engineer, assists Louis's flight, iv. 12, 22-24 (see Choiseul, Colonel-Duke); intrigues, 75.
 Gold Harald, xix. 408, 409.
 Goldlein, General, vii. 412, 419.
 Goldsmith, xiii. 209; xiv. 453.
 Goltz, Colonel von der, accompanies the King to Silesia, vii. 295; despatched to Prince Leopold of Glogau, 389; escalade of Glogau, 390, 393; secret Treaty of Klein-Schnellendorf, viii. 61, 73, 76; shot at Prag, ix. 419.
 Goltz, General, under Prince of Prussia, ix. 483; not condemned with him, 492; defends Landshut, x. 301, 333; chief post at Neustadt, 410; retires towards Neisse, 411; summoned by London to surrender, 412; stubbornly repels every attack, and reaches his destination, 412; in Silesia, 485; reinforced to look after Loudon, 505, 529; flings himself upon his task in a way pleasant to look at, xi. 38; taken with sudden fever and dies, 41.
 Goltz, Kammerherr von, goes to Petersburg, xi. 111.
 Gompert, v. 331.
 Gondran, captain of French Guard, iii. 271.
 Good, growth and propagation of, i. 76; no good that is possible but shall one

- day be real, xiv. 377; the good Man ever a mystic creative centre of Goodness, xvi. 143; in Goodness the surest instinct for the good, 175; the working of the good and brave endures literally forever, 34. See Man.
- Goodman, Bishop, character of, xviii. 28.
- Goodson, Vice-Admiral, character of, xix. 36; Cromwell's letter to, 27.
- Goodwin, Robert, M.P., sent to Charles I., xvii. 243.
- Goodwin, Rev. Thomas, preaches to Parliament, xviii. 399.
- Gorgas of Genser, xi. 527.
- Goring, Lord, pardoned, xvii. 412.
- Gorm of Denmark, xix. 394, 400, 455, 459.
- Gorras, Journalist, pleads for Swiss, iv. 148; in National Convention, 201; his house broken into, 285; guillotined, first Deputy that suffers, 339.
- Görtz, v. 364.
- Görtz, Eustace von, employed by Friedrich in the Bavarian business, xi. 100-102; Minister to Petersburg, 480.
- Görtz, General von, xi. 400; with Friedrich, during his Rhyn-Luch inspection, 515, 516, 527.
- Gossip preferable to pedantry, xii. 50; seven centuries off, 73, 77.
- Gotha, Sachsen-, Duke and Duchess of, visited by Friedrich, ix. 513, 514; brief account of them, 514; letters from Friedrich to the Duchess, 515, 519; x. 322, 382; timber cut down by Reichs Army, 195; Duchess of, visited by Friedrich, xi. 167; her death, 223; letter from Friedrich, 169.
- Gottfried, cited, vi. 60 n.
- Gottsched's' Professor, interviews with Friedrich, ix. 538, 539; his wife a fine graceful loyal creature, 540; the King amused at his conceit, xi. 169; Goethe's interview with, xv. 48; mentioned also, ix. 394, 400, 401.
- Götter, Count, vii. 375, 309; Proposals to Austria, 315, 374; at Breslau, 380; at Princess Ulrique's Wedding, viii. 309.
- Götting, Camp of, vii. 394; viii. 8, 41.
- Götze, Kriegsrath von, ix. 264.
- Götzinger, Wilhelm Lebrecht, ix. 361.
- Gotskowsky, the good genius of Berlin, x. 484-489; interview with Friedrich about payment of ransom, 501; at Leipzig, xi. 27, 29.
- Gough, cited, v. 106 n.
- Goujon, Member of Convention, in riot of Prairial, iv. 447; suicide, 449.
- Goulart, Simon, xii. 404, 413; gives Tyndale's portrait for Knox's, 415, 418.
- Goupil, on extreme left, iv. 42.
- Gouvion, Major-General, at Paris, iii. 244; flight to Varennes, iv. 12, 14, 18; death of, 103.
- Governing, art of, xii. 87, 89; Lazy Governments, 248; every Government the symbol of its People, 259.
- Government, Maurepas', iii. 40; bad state of French, 115; real, 209; French revolutionary, iv. 374, 390; Danton on, 397; true, the showing what to do, xv. 173; Offices, who made our, ii. 353; beautiful notion of No-Government, 387; Phantasm Governors, xii. 287; need of a real, in England, xix. 491.
- Grafigny, Madame de, vii. 55 n. : cited, ix. 56 n.
- Grahame, Colonel, xi. 36.
- Grammont, Duke of, viii. 289; killed at Fontenoy, 435, 444.
- Grampian Hills, Charles II. flies to, xviii. 170.
- Granaries, Public, vii. 153.
- Granby, Lord, at Minden, x. 236; leads an attack at Warburg, 455; his portrait by Reynolds, 455; at Vellinghausen, xi. 55, 56; character of his English troops, 56, 60; at Wilhelmsthal, 145; Amönsburg, 160.
- Grand, Le. See Grant.
- Granger, xii. 419.
- Grant, Lieutenant-Colonel, at Kolin, ix. 461; at Leobschütz, x. 410.
- Grantham. See Battle.
- Granville, Earl. See Cartaret.
- Graphic, secret of being, i. 319; xiv. 398.
- Grätz, Fortress of, vii. 102.
- Graun, the Brothers, vii. 29.
- Graun, the Composer, vii. 258.
- Graun, Kammergericht, Rath, xi. 435.
- Grave, Chev. de, War Minister, loses head, iv. 100.
- Grävenitz, Countess, and the Duke of Württemberg, vi. 248; becoming much of a Hecate, 251; stowed away, 253, 342.
- Gray, his Letters, xiii. 209; his misconception of Norse lore, i. 266; his Elegy quoted by Wolfe on the night preceding Quebec, x. 335.
- Gray-goose law-book, xix. 477.
- Great Elector, the. See Friedrich Wilhelm.
- Great Men, i. 135; the Fire-pillars of the world, xiv. 144, 426; xv. 9, 64; and Fire-eaters, 414; the Greatness of, 18, 410; xii. 194. See Man, Wisdom.
- Greek, Consecration of the Flesh, xv. 155; History, xvi. 334, 395; Dramatic forms, ii. 202.

- Greenwood, Dr., Cromwell's letters to, xviii. 210, 213; xix. 360.
- Gregg, Captain, xi. 293.
- Grégoire, Curé, notice of, iii. 148; in National Convention, iv. 201; detained in Convention, 308; and destruction of religion, 369.
- Gregory Nazianzen, St., v. 41.
- Grenoble, riot at, iii. 103.
- Gresham College, Cromwell's letter to Governors of, xix. 48.
- Grey of Groby, Lord, in Civil War, xviii. 142; assists in Pride's Purge, xvii. 397; in prison, xviii. 485.
- Grey of Wark, Lord, commands Eastern Association, xvii. 124.
- Gribeauval, M., Engineer in defence of Schweidnitz, xi. 148, 151-155.
- Grievances, writ of, iii. 119.
- Griffet, Father, xi. 285.
- Grillparzer's, Franz, superior merits for a playwright, xiii. 356; his worst Play, the Ahnfrau, 358; his König Ottokars Glück und Ende, 360.
- Grimm and Diderot, xv. 113; visits Russia, xi. 349.
- Grimnitz, Schloss of, v. 229.
- Grimston, Harbottle, after Restoration, xvii. 257.
- Gröben, Lieutenant, vi. 399, 498.
- Gröben, President von der, xi. 193.
- Grocers' Hall, dinner at, xvii. 435.
- Gross, Russian Excellency, ix. 145, 149, 281, 282.
- Grotkau, in Silesia, vii. 403; viii. 26.
- Grove, Major, beheaded, xviii. 486.
- Grumkow, Baron, v. 317, 333; vi. 72; a cunning, greedy-hearted, long-headed fellow, v. 317; sets a spy on Creutz, 357; challenged by the Old Dessauer, and humbly apologizes, vi. 17; introduces Seckendorf to Friedrich Wilhelm, 19; bribed by the Kaiser, 21, 27; he and Seckendorf Black-Artists of the first quality, 21, 228; how they "possessed" Friedrich Wilhelm, 27, 103, 125, 228; skilful manoeuvres in the Tobacco Parliament, 33, 73, 93, 103, 121, 172, 178; deputation to the Queen, 152, 158; Cipher-Correspondence with Reichenbach, 156, 177, 189; their treachery brought home to them, and denied, 194; an intercepted Letter, 220; Grumkow interrogates Friedrich at Mittenwalde, 283; becoming almost too victorious, 285, 290, 303; if the King should suddenly die on us, 292, 303; Grumkow visits Friedrich at Cüstrin, 292, 304; is one of the Court-Martial to try him, 294; correspondence with Friedrich, 308, 378, 383-385, 417; deputation to Wilhelmina, 311; his account of the King's interview with Friedrich at Cüstrin, 331; receives a private report of Friedrich from Schulenburg, 339; introduces Friedrich to Wilhelmina, 362; with the King at his visit to the Kaiser, 425, 427, 429; visits Wilhelmina, 435; will have nothing to do with Kaiser's Double-Marriage project, 437; last interviews with the King of Poland, 443, 456.
- Grünberg, Bürgermeister of, vii. 298.
- Grüne, General, viii. 502; on march for Brandenburg, 503, 504; joins Rutowski in Saxony, ix. 6; at Kesselsdorf, 10, 13.
- Guadet, Girondin, iv. 57; cross-questions Ministers, 91; arrested, 310; guillotined, 346.
- Guards, Swiss, and French, at Réveillon riot, iii. 126; French, won't fire, 161, 166; come to Palais-Royal, 167, fire on Royal-Allemand, 172; to Bastille, 177, 187, 190, 191; name changed, 192; Lafayette and, 249; National, origin of, 165; number of, 177; Body, at Versailles, October Fifth, 258; fight there, 268; fly in Château, 271; Body, and French, at Versailles, 270; National, at Nanci, 364; French, last appearance of, iv. 48; National, how commanded (1791), 54; Constitutional, dismissed, 90; Filles-St.-Thomas, 106, 131; routed, 131; Swiss, at Tuileries, 137, 145; fire, 146; ordered to cease, destroyed, 148, 149; eulogy of, 149; Departmental, for National Convention, 225.
- Guarini, Jesuit, and King of Poland, viii. 414; ix. 325, 373.
- Guasco, General, at Siege of Dresden, x. 209; skilfully defends Schweidnitz, xi. 147, 156; obliged to surrender at last, and dies a prisoner, 156.
- Guastalla, Monsignore di, vii. 450.
- Gudbrand, xix. 448-452.
- Gudowitch, Adjutant, xi. 111.
- Gudröd Ljome, xix. 396.
- Gudrun, Sunbeam of the Grove, xix. 417.
- Guhrauer, cited, v. 429 n.
- Guibert, Colonel, xi. 347, 348.
- Guichard. See Quintus Icilius.
- Guildhall, scene at, xvii. 272.
- Guillams, Captain, slain, xvii. 218.
- Guillaume, Clerk, pursues King, iv. 28. See Drouet.
- Guillot, Doctor, summoned by Paris Parlement, iii. 123; invents the guillotine, 140; deputed to King, 254, 261; at Louis's visit to Assembly, 312.
- Guillotine, invented, iii. 140; described, iv. 163; in action, 339, 352, 359; to be improved, 410; number of sufferers by, 450.

Guizot, M., criticised, xvii. 211 n.
 Gule-Thing, xix. 401.
 Gullibility, blessings of, i. 86.
 Gumbrecht, v. 199.
 Gundling, Jakob Paul, and his sublime long-eared erudition, vi. 37; Friedrich Wilhelm's rough sport with him, 39; quarrels with Fassmann, 48; strange burial, 49; mentioned also, xi. 420.
 Gunhild, xix. 400, 408.
 Gunpowder, invention and benefit of, xiv. 291; use of, i. 31, 137.
 Gurth, born thrall of Cedric the Saxon, xii. 205, 235, 241.
 Gustaf Adolf, the great, v. 265, 266, 272, 275; ix. 174; x. 9; dies, xvii. 70. See Sweden.
 Gustav III. See Karl Gustav.
 Gustav IV., xii. 341 n.
 Guthry, Rev. James, interview with Cromwell, xviii. 226.
 Gutzmar, Mayor of Breslau, vii. 327, 330; viii. 45, 49.
 Guyon, Captain, xi. 155.
 Gyda, wife of Fairhair, xix. 394.
 Gylle Krist, xix. 483, 484.

HABELSCHWERT, Action of, viii. 391.

Habit, how it makes dullards of us all, i. 43; the deepest law of human nature, xii. 124. See Custom.
 Hacke's wedding, vi. 338; his advancement, 418, 422, 429; vii. 140; letter from Friedrich, vi. 419; Friedrich's regard for him, vii. 404; at Beraun, viii. 350; in attendance on Friedrich, ix. 194.
 Hacker, Col., at execution of Charles I., xvii. 400; routs Mastroopers, xviii. 196, 197; Cromwell's letter to, 197.
 Haddick, General, in Berlin, ix. 505, 537, 542; defends Torgau, x. 171; in the Lausitz, 214; to join with Soltikof, 217; attacked by Friedrich, 230; by Finck, 311; dismissed from service, 325.
 Haddington, Oliver Cromwell at, xviii. 106, 135.
 Haddock, Admiral, viii. 200.
 Hagar's Well, i. 280.
 Hagen, Minister von, xi. 202.
 Hague, Friedrich's letters at the, xii. 378 n.
 Hailes, Lord, character of, xviii. 223.
 Hakon Jarl, xix. 408-418; a heathen "ritualist," 411-413; forced to fly, killed by slave, last support of heathenry, 417; becomes Hakon the Bad, 417; discovery of America in reign of, 418.
 Hakon Jarl, tilted into the sea, xix. 444,

446; breaks his oath, drowned in Pentland Firth, 463.
 Hakon the Good, adopted by Athelstan, xix. 400; King of Norway, 401; zealous Christian, 399-403; alarm-fires, death, 405.
 Hakon the Old, xix. 489-491.
 Hakon's Heila, xix. 406.
 Halfdan Haaleg, xix. 395.
 Half-men, i. 140.
 Half-and-halfness, xiii. 151; xiv. 444 xv. 188; the one thing wholly despicable and forgettable, xv. 156.
 Halifax, Lord, ix. 253.
 Hall, Bishop, pamphlet of, xvii. 105.
 Hall, Captain of the Ship "Dartmouth," xii. 350.
 Halle, University of, v. 302; controversy with Wolf, vi. 43; the Salzburg Protestants at, 411.
 Haller, Dr., xi. 323, 329.
 Hamann, Custom-house clerk, xi. 206.
 Hameln, v. 270.
 Hamersleben, v. 402.
 Hamilton, Archbishop, xii. 443.
 Hamilton, Duke James, flies to King, xvii. 165; taken, 243; prepares an army, 296; his army ready, 321; defeated at Preston, taken at Uttoxeter, 324-346; escapes, and is retaken, 406; condemned, 412; executed, 413.
 Hamilton, Duke William, succeeds his brother, xvii. 413; taken at Worcester, xviii. 253; dies, 255.
 Hamilton Palace, absurd portrait of Knox in, xii. 421.
 Hamilton, Patrick, xii. 407.
 Hammond, Lieut.-Gen., summoned by Commons, xvii. 280; notice of, 287.
 Hammond, Col. Robert, at Bristol siege, xvii. 219; the King flies to, 284; character of, 287; provided for, 300; letters from Cromwell to, 288, 300, 390.
 Hammond, Dr., King's chaplain, xvii. 288.
 Hampden, John, xvi. 264; i. 427; his mother, xvii. 27; a Puritan, 52; ship-money, 74, 91; trial of, 95; is Colonel in Parliament Army, 123; impatient, 136, 137; proposed as Lord General, 145; mortally wounded, 148; Cromwell to, on Ironsides, xix. 161; his coffin opened, xii. 117.
 Hampton-Court Conference, xvii. 36, 37. See Charles I.
 Hanau, Conferences at, viii. 262; Belleisle at, 398.
 Hand, Mr., Cromwell's letter to, xix. 303.
 Hanover, Electorate of, v. 28; Linder Avenue at, 39; Treaty of, 460; vi. 18, 23; our Hanover Series of Kings, 61.

- Hanover, Convention of, viii. 471, 479, 480, 499; ix. 16.
- Hanoverian difficulties, George II.'s, vii. 8, 71, 221; little profit from her English honors, ix. 296.
- Hanway, Sir Jonas, ix. 102, 153: cited, vii. 165 n.; ix. 191 n.
- Happiness, the whim of, i. 144.
- Happiness-controversy, the foolish, xiv. 107; illustration of the "Greatest-Happiness" principle, xv. 183.
- Happy, pitiful pretensions to be, xii. 160; happiness of getting one's work done, 161. See Unhappy.
- Hapsburg Kaisers. See Rudolf.
- Hapton parishioners, letter concerning, xvii. 239.
- Harald Blue-tooth, xix. 401, 403, 410, 413, 430, 450.
- Harald Grønaka, xix. 426, 440.
- Harald Greyfell, xix. 407-410.
- Harald Haarlagr, xix. 398; marries Gyda, six or seven wives, 394, 395; parts his kingdom, 398; sends Baby Hakon to Atheistan, 398.
- Harald Hardrade, xix. 474; joins King of Norway, 476; death at Stamford Bridge, 480.
- Harald Harefoot, xix. 464, 470.
- Harald Herdebreð, xix. 486.
- Harald Mund, xix. 496.
- Harde-Knut, xix. 464, 470-473.
- Harcourt, Duc d', viii. 150, 191.
- Hardenberg, Prince, xi. 472.
- Hardwicke, Lord, ix. 439; xi. 4, 8.
- Hare, Archdeacon, and his Biography of Sterling, ii. 3; his testimony to Sterling's high character, 33; their opportune meeting at Bonn, 92; Sterling becomes his Curate, 93; a welcome fellow-laborer, 97.
- Haren, Van, viii. 217.
- Harley, Colonel, Presbyterian, xvii. 259, 398.
- Harrach, Count, ix. 23, 24, 375.
- Harrington, Sir James, Cromwell's letter to, xvii. 437.
- Harrington, James, author of Oceana, xvii. 301.
- Harrington, Lord, vi. 100, 212; vii. 187, 218; viii. 3; tries to negotiate peace, 479.
- Harris, Excellency, xi. 378.
- Harris's Life of Cromwell, xvii. 87 n.
- Harrison, Thomas, notice of, xvii. 24; at Basing siege, 228; at Preston, 336; Major-General, in Scotland, xviii. 243; Letter to, by Cromwell, (App.) xix. 355; at Conference at Speaker's, xviii. 270, 271; at disbanding of Rump, 292, 293; in Council of State, 334 n.; Anabaptist, dismissed, 381; and Fifth Monarchy, 406; in prison, 486; xix. 139.
- Harsch, General, defends Prag, viii. 347, 350; obliged to surrender, 353; to remain near Silesia, x. 141, 142, 147; hurries homewards, 170; attacks Landshut, 314; with Loudon at capture of Glatz, 445.
- Hartfell, Lord, in Cromwell's First Parliament, xviii. 398.
- Hartlib, Samuel, letter on dissolution of Cromwell's Second Parliament, xix. 273.
- Hartmann, Herr von, vi. 445.
- Hartoff, Herr von, vi. 180.
- Harvey, on Cromwell's death, xix. 290-299.
- Haselrig, Sir Arthur, one of the Five Members, xvii. 119; Governor of Newcastle, 369, 370; Cromwell's letters to, xviii. 124, 142, 144 n.; xix. 350, 351; in Cromwell's First Parliament, xviii. 398; opposed to Cromwell, 446; in Cromwell's Second Parliament, xix. 62; excluded, 104; readmitted, 235; one of Cromwell's Lords, 236; sits in the Commons, 247, 267; his death, 264 n.
- Haslang, viii. 419.
- Hassan-Bey, in the Turkish fleet, xi. 293.
- Hassenfratz, in War-office, iv. 223, 224.
- Hastenbeck, Battle of, ix. 480, 490.
- Hastings, Mr., for the King, xvii. 142.
- Hat, perambulating, seven-feet high, xii. 138.
- Hater, a good, still a desideratum, xiii. 273.
- Hatred an inverse love, xv. 19; of scoundrels, the backbone of all religion, ii. 324; Divine Hatred, 331.
- Haude, Bookseller, and the Mercury newspaper, vii. 158.
- Hautcharmol, General, viii. 424, 446, 473.
- Havelberg, v. 365; vi. 413.
- Haverfordwest, Cromwell's letters to Mayor of, xix. 334, 335.
- Havre-de-Grace attacked by Rodney, x. 224.
- Hawke, with a Channel Fleet, watches Vannes, x. 225, 291, 292; utterly ruins Conflans's fleet, 369-373.
- Hawley, General, viii. 259.
- Haxthausen, Count, Danish Ambassador at Petersburg, xi. 130.
- Hay, Lord Charles, at Fontenoy, viii. 438; quizzes Lord Loudon, ix. 441.
- Haynes, Colonel, Deputy Major-General, xix. 19 n.; apprehends post Cleveland, 36.
- Hazlitt, xiv. 373.
- Healing Art, the, a sacred one, xii. 5.
- Health, meaning and value of, xv. 415, 428; the highest temporal good, xvi. 416.

Hearne, xix. 437 n.
 Heart, a loving, the beginning of knowledge, xiv. 396; xv. 24.
 Heath, James, "Carrión Heath," his Life of Oliver Cromwell, xvi. 265; on Cromwell, xvii. 15, 16.
 Heaven and Hell, our notions of, xii. 141.
 Heaven's Chancery, xii. 183, 188.
 Heavy Peg, v. 161, 335.
 Heavyside, the solid Englishman, ii. 373; xii. 348.
 Hébert, Editor of "Père Duchesne," iii. 381; signs petition, iv. 44 (see "Père Duchesne"); arrested, 304; at Queen's trial, 341; quickens Revolutionary Tribunal, 344; arrested, 391; guillotined, 394; as also his widow, 401.
 Hecht, Prussian Secretary, ix. 265.
 Hedwig, Grandmother of Peter III., xi. 107.
 Heeren, Professor, and his rub-a-dub style of moral-sublime, xiii. 315.
 Hefner, Kapellmeister, xi. 210.
 Heidelberg Protestants, v. 394.
 Heiden, Colonel, defends Colberg, x. 139.
 Heilbronn, vi. 259; viii. 333.
 Hellsbronn, v. 86, 207; vi. 239.
 Heinrich Friedrich, Cousin of Friedrich, v. 392, 393 n.; vi. 478, 501; vii. 75, 77, 162.
Heidenbuch, xiv. 198; specimen of the old poetry, 201; connection with the Nibelungen, 207.
Heiden-Geschichte, cited, vi. 203 n.; ix. 381 n.; x. 428 n.
Helena, Goethe's, a dainty little Phantasmagoria, xiii. 142; half-literal, half-parabolic style, 144; is part of a continuation of Faust, 148; introductory Notice by the Author, 169; condensed elucidatory sketch of the poem, with extracts, 162-166.
 Hell, real, of a man, xii. 67; of the English, 142, 280; Sterling's desire for earnest well-doing, were it even in, ii. 104; no perdition so perilous as a faithless lying spirit, 101.
 Helvetius's game-preserves, xv. 116; he arranges an Excise-system for Prussia, xi. 206.
 Hénault, President, on Surnames, iii. 1; ix. 51.
 Henderson, Sir John, renegade Scot, xvii. 141, 170.
 Henderson, cited, viii. 274 n., 418 n.
 Hengst and Horsa, xv. 81; xvi. 87.
 Henkel, Count, at Berlin: supper with the Queen Mother, vii. 168.
 Hennersdorf, Fight of, viii. 512, 513.
 Hennert, cited, vii. 24 n.
 Henri II., vii. 439.

Henri, Prince, with the King at Aachen, viii. 184; marches upon Prag, 342; at Tabor, 363; at battle of Hohenfriedberg, 464; at Pyrmont, ix. 32; Demon-News-writer's account of, 303; at battle of Prag, 410, 411, 415, 419; in retreat, 468, 472; with the King, 491; a grudge of peculiar intensity, 495; enters Erfurt, 512; at Gotha, 513; Friedrich's high opinion of him, 516; x. 329; slightly wounded, 23; to guard Saxony, 37, 96, 140; visits Wilhelmina, 101; at Tschopau, 112; letter from Friedrich, grieving for Wilhelmina, 114; secret Paper of Directions, 116; at Gross Seidlitz, 142, 143; suddenly posts himself on the heights of Gahmig, 143; with Friedrich in Dresden, 146; on march for Neisse, 168; despatches Knobloch to clear Erfurt, 195; swift work on the Austrian Magazines, 201, 202; congratulated by Friedrich, 207; called away from Saxony, 214; at Bautzen, looking after Loudon and Haddick, 225; at Schmötseifen, 227; hears of the Kunersdorf disaster, 281; at Sagan, looking after Daun, 313, 316; makes extraordinary exertions, 316; moves southward after the Austrian Magazines, 317; march of fifty hours from the Landskron to Hoyerswerda, 326-328; captures Hoyerswerda, 328; "the only one who never committed a mistake," 329; beautifully outmanœuvres Daun, 334; defeats D'Ahrenberg at Pretsch, 334; judiciously pricks into Daun, meeting with Friedrich, 344; advises the slow and sure method, 344; threatening to resign, 413; to look after the Russians and Silesia, 417; cannot see his way to attack, 419, 447; correspondence with Friedrich, mutual dissatisfaction, 448-450; makes one of his winged marches, and saves Breslau, 460; crosses Oder, to watch Soltikof, 466; out of health, nurses himself in Breslau and Glogau, 484; letters from Friedrich, longing for his return, 488, 489; presents his horse to Gellert, xi. 18, 103; takes charge of Saxony against Daun, 40, 52; driven into straiter quarters, 86; tiff of quarrel with Friedrich, 90-102; writes to Eichel, 101; brilliant successes in Saxony, 103; letters from Friedrich, 162; attacked by Stollberg and driven from Freyberg, 167; defeats Stollberg in battle of Freyberg, 162; letter to Friedrich, 163; goes home to recruit his health, 167; letter from Friedrich, 174; Friedrich forbids him the offer of the Polish Crown, 248; with Friedrich

- at the visit of Kaiser Joseph, 269, 270; visits his Sister the Queen of Sweden, 277, 299; visits the Czarina, sumptuous entertainments at Petersburg, 300-303; Czarina proposes the dismemberment of Poland, 303; again at Petersburg, 377; in the Bavarian War, 413; visits Paris, 484; mentioned also, ix. 77, 287, 374; xi. 216, 476, 499.
- Henri, Prince, Friedrich's Nephew, with him at Leipzig, xi. 9; his good opinion of him, 215, 330.
- Henri II. of France, v. 211.
- Henri IV., v. 252, 256.
- Henriot, General of National Guard, iv. 306, 307; and the Convention, 309; to deliver Robespierre, 421; seized, rescued, 421; end of, 424.
- Henry II. choosing an Abbot, xii. 79; his Welsh wars, 106; on his way to the Crusades, 113; our brave Plantagenet Henry, 234; his daughter married to Henry the Lion, v. 85.
- Henry VIII., v. 241; xii. 97.
- Henry, Prince, death of, xvii. 39.
- Henry IV., Kaiser, v. 73.
- Henry VII., Luxemburg Kaiser, v. 119, 157; poisoned in sacramental wine, 120; his descendants, 182.
- Henry the Fowler, beginning of German Kings, v. 57; his six Markgraviates, 59; a valiant son of Cosmos, 60; vii. 439.
- Henry the Lion, v. 76, 85.
- Henshaw, Major, in Gerard's plot, xviii. 393.
- Henzi, Conspirator, of Berne, ix. 205.
- Heptarchy, the, xvi. 421.
- Herbert, Philip, and James Ramsay, xvi. 333.
- Herbert, Col., at Bristol siege, xvii. 220; in Wales, 315.
- Herbert, Lord, afterwards Duke Beaufort, xviii. 221, 222; in Cromwell's first Parliament, 398.
- Herbois, Collot d', notice of, iii. 296; in National Convention, iv. 202; at Lyons massacre, 361. 362; in Salut Committee, 375; attempt to assassinate, 406; bullied at Jacobins, 418; President, night of Thermidor, 422; accused, 440; banished, 441; at Surinam, 449.
- Hercules, xii. 175, 189.
- Hercules-Harlequin in the Foreign Office, not pleasant to think of, ii. 341.
- Herder, xiv. 123; xv. 53.
- Héritier, Jérôme l', shot at Versailles, iii. 268.
- Hermann, cited, xi. 109 n.
- Heroes, Universal History the United biographies of, i. 235, 261; how "little critics" account for great men, 246; all Heroes fundamentally of the same stuff, 260, 274, 308, 342, 377, 412; Heroism possible to all, 353, 369, 398; Intellect the primary outfit, 333; no man a hero to a valet-soul, 405, 427, 435.
- Heroic poems and heroic lives, xiv. 76; xv. 153; heroic promised land, xii. 38; heroic and unheroic ages, xvii. 82.
- Heroine-worship, xiv. 154; xvi. 23.
- Heroism, Puritan, xvii. 3, 11.
- Heroisms, why not done now, xvi. 345.
- Hero-worship, the corner-stone of all society, i. 190; perennial in the human bosom, xiv. 412; xv. 400; almost the only creed that can never grow obsolete, 20; the tap-root of all religion, i. 244-248, 273; ever-during in man, 217, 313, 352, 423; xii. 34, 55, 117, 120, 220, 237, 275; what Heroes have done for us, 131, 140; nature of, 345; a man's "religion" the practical Hero-worship that is in him, 347, 399; a thrice-lamentable, viii. 338, 340. See Religion.
- Herrenhausen, v. 432.
- Herrnhuth, founded by Count Zinzendorf, viii. 509, 514.
- Herrstadt burnt by Soltikof, x. 332.
- Herstal, vii. 86; the affair of, 219, 225, 231.
- Hertzberg at Congress of Hubertsburg, xi. 173; with Friedrich in his last illness, 500, 504, 508; mentioned also, 325, 386, 409, 415, 422, 487.
- Hervey, Lord, vi. 127; cited, 127 n.
- Herzen, cited, xi. 109 n.
- Hesse, poor old, his sad end, vi. 322.
- Hessen-Darmstadt, Prince of, joins the Reichs Army, ix. 476.
- Hessian troops in Scotland, viii. 417; in England, ix. 301.
- Heterodoxy and Orthodoxy, iv. 10.
- Heucking, Colonel, xi. 432.
- Heuschrecke and his biographic documents, i. 9; his loose, zigzag, thin-visaged character, 20; unaccustomed eloquence, and interminable documentary superfluities, 58; bewildered darkness, 224.
- Hewit, Dr., plot and execution of, xix. 274-276.
- Hewson, Col., at Langford House, xvii. 232; at Tredah, 463; Governor of Dublin, xviii. 43; joins Cromwell in the South, 45, 46; one of Cromwell's Lords, xix. 235.
- Heyde defends Colberg, x. 483, 491; thanks from the King, 490; third siege, xi. 63-66; utterly starved out, and honorably surrenders, 85, 86.
- Heylin, lying Peter, xvii. 70.

- Heyne, Life of, xiii. 315-350; parentage, boyhood and extreme penury, 318; a poor incipient gerund-grinder, 322; a school-triumph, 324; miseries of a poor scholar, 326; his edition of Tibullus, 331; first interview with Theresa Weiss, 333; driven out of Dresden by the Prussian bombardment, 335; marries, 338; his Wife's devoted courage, 338; appointed to a professorship in Göttingen, 338; his Wife's death, 343; marries again, 345; University labors, 345; death, 347; successful struggle with adversity, xvi. 406.
- Heywood, General, at Brussels, viii. 239.
- Hierarchy of Beneficences, xii. 329, 341; Religion the parent of social Hierarchies, 344; England once a Hierarchy, 353, 389. See Aristocracy.
- Hierusalem, Rev. M., cited, xi. 58 n.
- Higgins, General O', Director of Chile, xvi. 211.
- Highgate Hill, a view from, ii. 53.
- Hildburghausen, Prince of, vii. 84; takes command of Reichs Army, ix. 476; Rossbach, x. 3, 4, 6, 15, 16; retreat by Naumburg, flings down his truncheon, and goes home, 19.
- Hildburghausen, Duke of, ix. 475.
- Hildebrand, Pope, v. 73.
- Hildebrandt, cited, vii. 217 n.; xi. 512 n.
- Hildorf, Kreis-Commissariat x. 30, 33.
- Hill, Dr. Thomas, Master of Trinity College, Cambridge, Cromwell's letter to, xvii. 286.
- Hill, William, notice of, xvii. 351.
- Hille, vi. 328, 330.
- Hills, Henry, printer to Protector, xviii. 457.
- Hilsen House taken, xvii. 175.
- Himmelstädt, vi. 329.
- Hinchinbrook House, xvii. 22; sale of, 54; Charles I. at, 263.
- Hippesley, Sir John, sent to Charles I., xvii. 243.
- Hirsch, the Voltaire-Lawsuit, ix. 124, 144.
- Hispaniola, failure of attack on, xix. 22, 23.
- Historians, character of good, xvii. 9; labor of, 13.
- History, all-inweaving tissue of, i. 16; by what strange chances do we live in, 38; a perpetual revelation, 135, 146, 192; methods on writing, xx. 94, 98; on, xiv. 60-71; basis of all knowledge, 60; vain Philosophies of, 60, 386; the more important part of, lost without recovery, 63, 145; artists and artisans of, 67; infinity, 68; xv. 110; the history of a nation's Poetry the essence of its entire doings, xiv. 315; History the essence of innumerable Biographies, 386; the true Poetry, 417; what things are called "Histories," 418; xv. 228; on History again, 74-82; the Message from the whole Past to each man, 76; Universal History the Autobiography of Mankind, 80; the grand sacred Epos, or Bible of World-History, 154; Scott's Historical Novels, 456; unspeakable value of contemporary memoirs, xvi. 176; of a sincere Portrait, 346; who is a historical character, 353; study of, 394; philosophical, xii. 230, 231; of Puritanism, its difficulties, xvii. 3-11; of England, in a strange condition, xii. 351, 389; all, an imprisoned Epic, Psalm and Prophecy, v. 18; fleeting rumors of, 73; use of, vi. 394; of the Seven-Years War, by the Royal Staff Officers, cited, ix. 403 n.
- Histriomastix. See Prynne.
- Hitch, Rev. Mr., Cromwell's letter to, xvii. 174.
- Hitzig's Lives of Hoffmann and Werner, xiii. 86.
- Hoadly, Bishop, ix. 249.
- Hoare, cited, x. 90 n.
- Hobart, Colonel Sir Miles, xvii. 141.
- Hoche, Sergeant Lazarus, in Bastille time, iii. 166; General against Prussia, iv. 383; pacifies La Vendée, 438.
- Hochkirch, and its environs, x. 149; battle, 152-164; Hochkirch Church, 166.
- Hochstädt, v. 300.
- Hocke, Baron von, deputation from Grünberg, vii. 297.
- Hodgson, Captain, character of, xvii. 324; in Scots War, xviii. 102; narrative by, 105.
- Hof, v. 128; vi. 484.
- Hoffmann, Colonel, killed at Dresden, x. 301.
- Hoffmann's quick eye and fastidious feelings, xiii. 117.
- Hoffmannswaldau, Silesian poet, vii. 293.
- Hofmann, Brunswick Envoy, ix. 89.
- Hohenfriedberg, viii. 455, 456; battle of, 461-467.
- Hohenlohe, Reichs-Fürst von, ix. 426.
- Hohenstauffen Emperors, last of the, xiv. 253; Dynasty, v. 74; tragic end of the, 105, 106.
- Hohenzollerns, the Brandenburg, and their talent for annihilating rubbish, vi. 234; xvi. 375; Burgraves of Nürnberg, v. 85; vi. 238; a thrifty, steadfast, clear-sighted line of men, v. 88, 104; how they obtained Baireuth and Anspach, 103; Burgraviate made hereditary, 104; farther acquisitions, 124; become connected with Brandenburg, 127, 142; become Kurfürsts, 159; contrast between guidance and no-guidance, 164; not worshippers of Beelze-

- bub, 166; not speckless paragons of all the virtues, 169; their practical notions of Fairplay, 286; the Twelve Hohenzollern Electors, 308; National Drill-sergeants, 335; Prussia's debt to her Hohenzollern Kings, xi. 186. See Brandenburg, Prussia.
- Holbach, Baron d', xv. 116; his Philosophes and Philosophesses, 124; xi. 278.
- Holberg, cited, v. 221 n.
- Holborn, General, invites Cromwell to Edinburgh, xvii. 377; at Dunbar battle, xviii. 180 n.
- Holderness, Lord, making for Venice, viii. 384; mentioned also, ix. 423.
- Holland, Earl, at Kingston, xvii. 321; condemned, 412; executed, 413.
- Holland House, xvii. 272.
- Holland, invaded by Prussia, 1787, iii. 88; a Stadtholder chosen for, ix. 59, 60. See Dutch.
- Hollar, Wenceslaus, taken at Basing, xvii. 231.
- Holle, cited, v. 102 n.; ix. 228 n.
- Holles, John, and his quarrel with George Markham, xvi. 328.
- Holles, Denzil, holds down the Speaker, xvii. 66; imprisoned, 66; Presbyterian, 259; a leader in Parliament, 262. See Members, Eleven.
- Holmby, Charles I. at, xvii. 251, 263.
- Holstein, v. 348, 356.
- Holstein-Beck, Prince of, vi. 207; accompanies King Friedrich into Silesia, vii. 296; at Frankenstein, 396, 400.
- Holstein, Prince George of, xi. 124.
- Holstein, Prince von, at siege of Dresden, x. 438, 441; in Battle of Torgau, 514, 517, 522.
- Holstein-Plön, Duke of, xi. 7.
- Holyrood House, spurious Knox portrait in, xii. 422.
- Home Office, William Conqueror's, ii. 355; the Home Office our grand primary concern, 403, 410.
- Home-poetry, xiii. 288, 284.
- Homer, xiii. 273; xiv. 247; his Iliad, i. 170; xvii. 7; a Ballad History, xii. 388; v. 19.
- Hompesch, Baron von, vi. 12.
- Hondschooten, battle of, iv. 381.
- Hooke, Alderman, notice of, xviii. 100.
- Hoop, Père, xv. 124.
- Hope, this world is emphatically the place of, i. 123; false shadows of, 141; and Man, iii. 40; sometimes a godlike thing, x. 42; very beautiful, sometimes even when fallacious, 403.
- Hope's, Mr., Essay on the Origin and Prospects of Man, xiv. 374.
- Hopfgarten, General, and his complimentary balderdash, vi. 231.
- Hoppe, cited, vi. 117 n.
- Hopton, Sir Ingram, at Winceby, xvii. 172.
- Hopton, Sir Ralph, character of, xvii. 223.
- Hordt, Colonel of the Prussian Free-Corps, ix. 428; sharp on the Cossecks, x. 111; charge of baggage during battle of Zorndorf, 123; taken prisoner to Petersburg, 815; at Petersburg, xi. 111, 116; hears in his prison of the accession of Peter III., 118; presented at Court, 118; sees the deceased Czarina lying in state, 122; sups with the Czar, 123; with the Czarina, 124; paid off, at close of the war, 172.
- Hormayr, cited, v. 119 n.; vi. 368 n.; vii. 446 n.; viii. 337 n.; ix. 402 n.; xi. 157 n.
- Horn, cited, v. 48 n.
- Horn's, Franz, merits as a literary historian, xiii. 26.
- Hornoi, M. d', xi. 356.
- Horse, the, his own tailor, i. 42; when willing to work can find food and shelter, xvi. 52; Laissez-faire applied to, 58; able and willing to work, xii. 23; Goethe's thoughts about, 183; wooden, described, xvii. 421; Farmer Hodge's horses quite emancipated, ii. 284; xvi. 313; the horse's "vote," xii. 316.
- Horse Artillery first introduced by Friedrich, x. 208.
- Horsemanship, Gaucho, xvi. 231.
- Horst, Minister von der, xi. 202.
- Horton, Colonel, defeats Welsh, xvii. 311; dies, 430.
- Hôtel des Invalides, plundered, iii. 182.
- Hôtel de Ville, after Bastille taken, iii. 190; harangues at, 195; nearly fired by women, 245; Louis in, 279.
- Hotham, Captain, doings and arrest of, xvii. 148.
- Hotham, Sir Charles, English Envoy to Prussia, vi. 169; welcomed at Berlin, 172; dinner with the King, 173; his Despatches, 186; Double-Marriage scheme as good as ended, 196, 198, 219; amazing interview with the King, 219, 221; no choice but to return home at once, 222.
- Hothams, the, executed, xvii. 256.
- Houchard, General, unsuccessful, iv. 333, 382; guillotined, 357.
- Howard's, Dr., Letters, xvii. 12 n.
- Howard, Colonel, in Little Parliament, xviii. 299; attends Cromwell to Parliament, 399; Deputy Major-General, xix. 19 n.; one of Cromwell's Lords, 236.
- Howard, the beatified Philanthropist, ii. 317.

- Howe, Lord, beats French navy, iv. 384; in the attack on Conflans's fleet, x. 371.
- Howel Davies, the Bucanier, xii. 186.
- Howlet, Mr., tutor to Cromwell, xvii. 40, 41.
- Hoym, Graf von, vi. 211.
- Hubbert, Captain, passed over, xviii. 198.
- Hubertsburg, sacking of, xi. 18-21, 173; Congress for peace held at, 173-176.
- Hübner, cited, v. 62 n.; vi. 459 n.; xi. 107 n.
- Hudson's Statue, xii. 324-359; what the Hudson worshippers ought to have done, while they were about it, 325; his Popular Election, 335; his value as a railway-maker, 335. See Statues.
- Hughes, Colonel, Governor of Chepstow, Cromwell's letter to, xix. 332.
- Hugo, Abbot, old, feeble and improvident, xii. 58; his death, 61; difficulties with Monk Samson, 72.
- Huguenin, Patriot, tocsin in heart, iv. 91; 20th June (1792), 110.
- Hulin, Half-pay, at siege of Bastille, iii. 189.
- Hull, Charles I. attempts, xvii. 120; besieged, 163, 166, 172; Governors of, 281.
- Hülßen, at Kolin, ix. 454, 460, 461, 463; with Prince Henri in Bohemia, x. 201; with Dohna, against the Russians, 216; at Züllichau, 222; marches into Saxony, 333, 334; with Friedrich in Saxony, 423, 424; assists at siege of Dresden, 437; defeats the Reichsfolk on the Dürrenberg, 482; hastens to the assistance of Berlin, 493; returns to Saxony, 503; with Friedrich, 506; despatched to Leipzig, to clear out the Reichs Army, 508; battle of Torgau, 514, 517, 520; getting into bivouac, 523; hears renewed firing, and hastens to it, through the darkness of night, 524-526; his respect for Gellert, xi. 11; sends reinforcements to Prince Henri, 165.
- Hume Castle besieged, xviii. 196.
- Hume's scepticism, xiii. 78; xiv. 28; xv. 10; Hume and Johnson contrasted, xiv. 469; fifteen Atheists at one cast, xv. 82.
- Humility, Christian, xiii. 451; blessed are the humble, they that are not known, xvi. 33.
- Humor, sensibility the essence of, xiii. 16, 280; the finest perfection of poetic genius, xiv. 178.
- Hungarian Diet, viii. 67; enthusiasm for Maria Theresa, 346.
- Hungary, King of, Papist, xix. 250; it becomes part of Austria, v. 192.
- Hunger, war waged by, v. 275.
- Hungerford, Anthony, Royalist, xviii. 280, 285; Cromwell's letters to, 281, 286.
- Hungerford, Henry, notice of, xviii. 279.
- Hungerford, Sir Edward, notice of, xviii. 279, 280.
- Hunolstein, cited, spurious, xi. 499.
- Huns, Attila's, long arms of, iv. 157.
- Huntingdon described, xvii. 23.
- Huntly, Marquis, for Charles II., xviii. 170, 236.
- Hurry, Colonel Sir John, wounded at Preston, xvii. 331; taken with Montrose, and executed, 339 n.
- Hursley described, xvii. 291.
- Hurst Castle, Charles I. at, xvii. 396.
- Huss, John, v. 152, 156; viii. 164; xiv. 293.
- Hussites, viii. 376.
- Hutchinson, Colonel, a kind of hero, i. 427; and Cromwell, 454; Governor of Nottingham, xvii. 383.
- Hyde, Mr. See Clarendon, Lord.
- Hyde Park, Army near, xvii. 272; accident to Cromwell in, xviii. 449.
- Hyndford, Lord, at Breslau, viii. 17, 18, 23; audience with King Friedrich, 18, 26; again, with Robinson, 37; at Gross Neundorf, 53, 60; two notes, 61; interview with Goltz, 63; meeting at Klein-Schnellendorf, 72; at Berlin, 84; Order of the Thistle, and Silver Dinner-Service, 170; mentioned also, vii. 387; viii. 13, 144, 167; ix. 84.
- Hypocrisy, old-established, xvi. 432; the old true paths submerged in, ii. 93; the one thing bad, 101, 127; silence far preferable, 168; duty of abhorrence, 170.
- Hypocrites, sincere, v. 376.
- ICELAND, the home of Norse Poets, i. 249.
- Ich dien, v. 138.
- Idea, society the embodiment of an, xiv. 356; great men, xv. 414. See Man.
- Ideal, the, exists only in the Actual, i. 148, 150; good, xx. 45; in the Real, xii. 68, 184.
- Idealism, xiv. 25.
- Ideals, realized, iii. 10; xvi. 80.
- Idleness, Misery of, xx. 46; doom of, xvi. 49; how it inevitably rots, 300; black and white, 321; alone without hope, xii. 142; idle Aristocracy, 168, 173, 197, 271; lying in wait round all labor-offices, ii. 348; organized, 394; in Rome, 164.
- Idolatry, i. 346; criminal only when insincere, 348.
- Idols, all, have to fall, xii. 338.

- Igdrasil, the Life-Tree, i. 263, 329, 393; xii. 89, 127, 240.
- Ignavia, the general demon of, xvi. 306.
- Ignon, St., General, at Torgau, x. 515.
- Ignorance, our period of, xii. 232.
- Ignorant, right of the, to be guided by the Wise, xvi. 73.
- Ilgén, v. 350; vii. 189.
- Iliad, Homer's, xii. 128; xvi. 443.
- Imagination. See Fantasy.
- Imhoff defends the bridge at Rees, x. 176 n.
- Immortality, a glimpse of, i. 198.
- Impossibility, every genius an, till he appear, xiii. 270; Mirabeau's notion of impossibilities, xv. 345.
- Impossible, not a good word to have often in the mouth, xvi. 104; xii. 20, 24; without soul, all things impossible, 146; every noble work at first "impossible," 193, 199, 284. See New.
- Imposture, statistics of, i. 85; empire of, in flames, xv. 298. See Bankruptcy.
- Impropriations, lay, meaning of, xvii. 38. See Feoffees.
- Improvisators, literary, xiv. 4; xv. 461.
- Inchgarvie taken, xviii. 234, 237.
- Inchiquin, Lord, assaults Carrick, xviii. 498.
- Incontinence, the half of all our sins, ii. 454.
- Incumbrance, Parliamentary defining of, xviii. 276, 309; xix. 203.
- Independence, foolish parade of, i. 176, 190; xii. 275.
- Independents and Presbyterians, xvii. 190, 249, 256.
- India, England victorious in, x. 343.
- Indies, West, expedition to, failed, xix. 16, 22.
- Indifference, centre of, i. 129.
- Indigence, made human, vii. 153.
- Indignation, xiii. 278.
- Individual responsibility, xii. 306.
- Industrialisms, English, xvi. 90.
- Industrv. Captains of, xii. 186, 201, 261, 277, 282; ii. 292, 300; our industrial ages, xii. 240; or death, ii. 303; Industrial Regimenta, 395, 411; English career of Industrialism, 429.
- Infame, L', chief monster of chaos, xi. 182; may again need to be tied up, 183.
- Infancy and Maturity, xii. 125.
- Infant intuitions and acquirements, i. 67; genius and dulness, 72.
- Infidelity, xv. 442.
- Ingoldsbv, Colonel, at Bristol siege, xvii. 220.
- Ingoldsbv, Brigadier, at Fontenoy, viii. 436.
- Inheritance, infinite, of every human soul, xv. 208.
- Inisdal's, Count d', plot, iii. 395.
- Injustice, the one thing utterly intolerable, xvi. 61, 64; xii. 204; nothing unjust can continue in this world, xvi. 69, 81.
- Innes, Lieutenant-Colonel, taken, xviii. 339.
- Insanity, strange affinity of Wisdom and, xii. 199.
- Inspiration, perennial, i. 147, 158, 192; still possible, xiv. 319, 348, 392; xv. 9; of God the only real intelligence, ii. 38; the unforgivable sin, to swerve from, 51, 59.
- Instrument of Government, the, xviii. 327, 380; new, xix. 125, 179.
- Insurrection, most sacred of duties, iii. 242; of Women, 231-273; of August Tenth, v. 134-139; difficult, 138; of Paris, against Girondins (1793), 305-310; sacred right of, 391, 394, 418, 419, 422, 430, 435, 454, 457, 458; last Sansculottic, 445-448; of Babouv, 459; Manchester, xii. 16. See Riot.
- Intellect, celebrated march of, xiv. 360; what might be done, with intellect enough, xvi. 177; the summary of man's gifts, i. 333, 392; tragic consequences of insufficient, ii. 348, 360, 363, 374, 376, 428; human, the exact summary of human Worth, 357; how to increase the supply, 363, 364; English beaver intellect, 430; and virtue, one great summary of gifts, 185; the best symptom of, v. 420; uttered and unuttered, vi. 375; and vulpinism, 440; love of, vii. 34.
- Intellects, twenty-four million, awakened into action, xvi. 107; female, v. 44.
- Invention, i. 31, 121; xii. 127.
- Inventions, human, xiii. 456, 475; German contributions to the general store, xv. 291; Irish ditto, xiv. 392.
- Inverkeithing, battle of, xviii. 232, 233; Colors taken at, xix. 357.
- Inverness Citadel built by Cromwell, xviii. 260.
- Invisible, the, Nature the visible Garment of, i. 43; bonds, binding all Men together, 48; the Visible and Invisible, 50, 165; World, the, within and about us, xiv. 29.
- Ipres, viii. 333.
- Ireland, tragic mismanagement of, xvi. 53; Irish national character degraded, 54; England invaded by Irish destitution, 55; a black, 298; misrepresentation of Cromwell's doings in, xviii. 6, 20; narrative of Cromwell's campaign in, 81; state of, in 1649, 450, 451.

- Ireton, Commissary-General, at Bristol siege, xvii. 217; weds Bridget Cromwell, 235; character of, 246, 265; in Ireland, 442; President of Munster, xviii. 45; Deputy in Ireland, 56; dies in Ireland, 56; Cromwell's letter to, 147; character of, 274.
- Ireton, Mrs., Cromwell's letter to, xvii. 247; widow, married to Fleetwood, xviii. 275; notice of, 330; xix. 10.
- Ireton, Alderman, in Little Parliament, xviii. 299; of Customs Committee, 331.
- Irish Poor-Slave, the, i. 212; Sans-Potato, iv. 451; Widow proving her sisterhood, xii. 145, 204; Massacre in 1641, xvii. 117; Charles I. sends for Army of, 181; Papists found in arms in England to be hanged, 185; Cromwell's declaration to the, xviii. 7; forces go abroad, 55; Puritan settlement, 57; and British Pauperism, ii. 294; the Irish Giant seeking whom he may devour, 346, 403. See Papists.
- Ironbeard, xix. 428; Tryggvesson married to daughter of, 429.
- Ironsides, Cromwell's, described, xvii. 160; first glimpse of, 163; Cromwell to Hampden on the, xix. 162, 163.
- Irving, Death of Edward, xv. 232.
- Islam, i. 287.
- Isnard, Max, notice of, iii. 321; in First Parliament, iv. 57; on Ministers, 92; to demolish Paris, 304; will demit, 308; recalled, 430.
- Isolation, i. 83; the sum-total of wretchedness, xii. 263.
- Israelitish History, significance of, xiii. 236; xv. 151. See Bible.
- Italian Liberty, v. 121; Italy extinguishing its Protestantism, 218; Italian War, viii. 196.
- Iturbide, "the Napoleon of Mexico," xvi. 205.
- Itzig of Berlin, x. 498.
- Iwan, v. 369; vi. 374; childhood of, vii. 276, 262; death, 368.
- Iwanowna. See Anne of Courland.
- JACOB, JEAN CLAUDE, eldest of men, iii. 321.
- Jacobae of Baden, v. 249.
- Jacobinism, spirit of, iv. 380.
- Jacobins, Society, germ of, iii. 103; Hall, described, and members, 308; Journal, &c. of, 309; daughters of, 310, 384; at Nanci, suppressed, 373; Club increases, 384; and Mirabeau, 387, 410; prospers, iv. 92; "Lords of the Articles," 94; extinguishes Feuillans, 94; Hall enlarged, described, 94; and Marseillaise, 120; and Lavergne, 167; message to Dumouriez, 216; mission-
- aries in Army, 235, 288; on King's trial, 236; on accusation of Robespierre, 238; against Girondins, 239, 240, 300; National Convention and, 327, 376; Popular Tribunals of, 359; Couthon's Question in, 390; purges members, 392; to become dominant, 416; locked out by Legendre, 423; begs back its keys, 430; decline of, 440; mobbed, suspended, 440; hunted down, 444.
- Jacobis, the two, xiii. 47; xiv. 123.
- Jaffray, Provost, at Dunbar battle, xviii. 132; at Edinburgh, 189, 190, 201; account of, 200; a Quaker, &c., 201; in Little Parliament, 299.
- Jägerndorf, Duchy of, v. 192, 214, 234, 244, 276, 292; vi. 424; country, vii. 293, 398.
- Jahnus, Colonel, death of, viii. 368.
- Jalès, Camp of, iii. 289; Royalists at, iv. 86; destroyed, 86.
- Jamaica Committee, the, xvi. 431; Island of, taken, xix. 22.
- James, Colonel John, Governor of Worcester, after the Battle, xviii. 255 n.
- James I., xvi. 331, 334; visits Hinchinbrook, xvii. 35; a theologian, 37; his falling-off, 39; returns to Scotland, 42; his miscalculations, 49; dies, 50; his bad reign, v. 261, 269, 270.
- James Sobieski of Poland, v. 396.
- James VI., Beza's dedication to, xii. 403; Icon of, 404.
- Jandun, Duhan de. See Duhan.
- Jaromierz (Jaromirz), vi. 424; viii. 486; Friedrich Wilhelm at, vii. 113; D'Arget saves Valori from the Pandours at, viii. 486.
- Jarriges, M., a Prussian judge, ix. 125, 138, 161.
- Jaucourt, Chev., and Liberty, iv. 58.
- Jauernik, viii. 146.
- Jay, Dame le, bookseller, iii. 304.
- Jean Paul, v. 88.
- Jeanne d'Arc, character of, xx. 152.
- Jedburgh. See Geddard.
- Jeetz, General, at Breslau, vii. 330; cannot take Namslau, 333, 335; succeeds at last, 338; siege of Brieg, 338, 459.
- Jefferson, Brick, answer to, xii. 337.
- Jeffrey, bookseller, ix. 84 n.
- Jemappes, battle of, iv. 235.
- Jena University, viii. 96, 97.
- Jenkins, Captain Robert, scandalous treatment of, by the Spaniards, vi. 323; his "Ear" re-emerges, and produces effects, vii. 103, 127, 247, 250, 432, 436, 476; ix. 68, 70, 260; Jenkins-Ear Controversy at last settled, xi. 177.

- Jenner, Robert, M.P., notice of, xvii. 383; Cromwell's letter to, 383.
- Jenning, Sarah, Duchess of Marlborough, xii. 382.
- Jenny Geddes's stool, flight of, xvi. 168, 180.
- Jephson, Governor of Bandon, xvii. 498.
- Jerome's, St., method of Scripture commentary, v. 40.
- Jericho, one's, apt to fall, viii. 166.
- Jesuit practices in England, xviii. 410.
- Jesuit stabs Henry IV., xvii. 44. See Papist.
- Jesuitism and Dame Dubarry, iii. 17; sick unto death, xv. 118; xvi. 225; character and influence of, xii. 360-400; age and gospel of, 360; its stupendous achievements, 371; how the computation quite broke down, 371; "vivaciousness" of, 372; the Jesuit soul nestled amongst us, 375; necessity of putting it away, 379; in the Fine Arts, 384, 392; celebrated "virtues," 394.
- Jesuits, their skill and zeal, xv. 93; Georgel, 242; priests, v. 249, 256, 261, 267, 269, 399; vi. 11; vii. 50; busy in Glatz, x. 444; fanaticism in Poland, 242.
- Jesus of Nazareth our divinest Symbol, i. 170, 173; the most indubitable of facts, xii. 396. See Crucify.
- Jew debts and creditors, xii. 50, 91, 93; Benedict and the tooth-forceps, 176.
- Jews endeavor to settle in England, xix. 37, 38.
- J. F. S., Author of a Life of Brown, cited, vii. 404 n.; ix. 475 n.
- Joachim Ernst, Markgraf, v. 268.
- Joachim Friedrich, Eighth Kurfürst, v. 229, 238; fairly gets hold of Preussen, 245; death, 246.
- Joachim I., Kur-Brandenburg, v. 182, 184, 197; his character, 219; his Protestant Wife, 220; death-bed, 223.
- Joachim II., Sixth Kurfürst, v. 224; abhorrence of chicanery, 228; accident to his poor Wife in the Schloss of Grimnitz, 229; gets co-infertment in Preussen, 230; Heritage-Brotherhood with the Duke of Liegnitz, 230; stiff debates with King Ferdinand, 232; stanch to the great cause of Protestantism, 234; on good terms with Karl V., 236.
- Joachimsthal, ix. 339.
- Joachimsthal Gymnasium, v. 229, 238.
- Joh, the Book of, i. 230.
- Jobst of Mähren, v. 135, 144, 147, 148, 151.
- Jocelin of Brakelond, xii. 40; his Boswellian Note-book seven Centuries old, 41.
- Jockey. See Jokei.
- Johann II., Burggraf of Nürnberg, v. 128, 142.
- Johann Friedrich the Magnanimous taken captive by Karl V., v. 225, 228, 236; vi. 204; ix. 515; his Wife, v. 241.
- Johann George, Elector of Saxony, v. 274.
- Johann George of Jägerndorf, v. 245 276; vii. 292.
- Johann George, Seventh Kurfürst, v. 185, 240, 243; Gera Bond, 186; with Karl V. at the siege of Wittenberg, 236; a prudent, thrifty, just-minded Herr, 238.
- Johann, King of Bohemia, v. 132, 134; death on the field of Crecy, 138; vii. 291.
- Johann of Cüstrin, v. 235.
- Johann of Nepomuk, v. 144; vi. 430.
- Johann Sigismund, Ninth Kurfürst, v. 245, 246; interest in the Cleve Heritage, 247; his claims disputed, 249; slaps young Pfalz-Neuburg's face, 259; gets possession of Prussia, 264.
- Johann the Alchemist, v. 176.
- Johanna Elizabeth, Wife of Duke of Württemberg, vi. 248; steadily refuses an iniquitous divorce, 250.
- Johannes Cicero, Fourth Kurfürst, v. 181.
- Johannes of Valencia, v. 199.
- Johannes Parricida, v. 119.
- John of Leyden, of Bromwicham, xvi. 423, 432.
- John Frederick the Magnanimous, xvi. 370, 373, 375, 380.
- John, King, xii. 45, 103.
- John Casimir, King of Poland, v. 284; gives up the Homage of Preussen, 284; abdicates, 285; foretells fate of Poland, vi. 444; xi. 236; his valedictory speech, 239.
- John, St., Hospitallers of, v. 93; vi. 336.
- John the Steadfast, Kur-Sachsen, v. 197; xvi. 369.
- Johnson, Colonel, shot, xvii. 45.
- Johnson, Samuel, his hypochondria, v. 7, 44, 168, 332, 384; vi. 144; xvii. 50; his preventive against bad biographies, xiii. 3; his sound practical sense, 210; a small occurrence, xiv. 395; Boswell's Life of, 401-470; his existence a reality which he transacted awake, 427; poverty and sore obstruction, 428; boyish turn for royalty, 430; college mortifications and stubborn pride, 431; his brave-hearted Wife, 434; a literary career, 436; letter to Lord Chesterfield, 440; his distracted era, and manful honesty, 442; his Parliamentary Debates, 449; tears of sacred triumph,

- 451; a little circle around the Wise man, 454; the conservation of what was genuine in Toryism, 457; a brave man, 458; a clear hater of Cant, 462; merciful, affectionate nature, 463; market-place at Uttoxeter, 464; politeness, 466; ii. 440; prejudices, ix. 467; Johnson and Hume, 469; a visit to his house in Gough Square, 460; his difficulties, poverty, hypochondria, i. 400; rude self-help, stands genuinely by the old formulae, 401; his noble unconscious sincerity, 402; twofold Gospel, of Prudence and hatred of Cant, 404; his Dictionary, 404; the brave old Samuel, 444; mentioned, xvi. 84, 438; cited, vi. 110 n.
- Johnston, Archibald, Lord Registrar of Scotland, account of, xvii. 197; xviii. 223, 223; Cromwell's letter to, 224.
- Jokei, French, described, iii. 49.
- Jomini, cited, ix. 460 n.
- Jonsburg, celebrated vikings of, xix. 411, 413, 431.
- Jones, Paul, equipped for America, iii. 44; at Paris, account of, 299, 327; burial of, iv. 124.
- Jones, Colonel Michael, occupies Dublin, xvii. 376; routs Irish at Dungan Hill, 376; Cromwell's letter to, 376; routs Ormond's Army, 442; vote in favor of, 444, 488; dies, 601.
- Jones, Colonel John, regicide, xvii. 277.
- Jones, Colonel Philip, in Council of State, xviii. 325 n.; on Committee of Kingship, xix. 169.
- Jones, Inigo, taken at Basing, xvii. 231.
- Jones, Quartermaster Samuel, notice of, xvii. 315.
- Jonson's, Ben, war-tuck, xvi. 335.
- Jordan, Charles Etienne, vii. 30, 32, 123; gossipy Letters to Friedrich, 336, 430; viii. 135; mentioned also, vii. 155, 158, 166, 269, 320, 404; viii. 44, 126, 292.
- Jordan, ix. 26.
- Jördens, cited, xi. 12 n.
- Jore, bookseller, ix. 146.
- Joseph I., Kaiser, vii. 293, 307.
- Joseph II., Kaiser, birth, vii. 263; a thriving child, viii. 63; shown to the Hungarian Diet, 70; King of the Romans, ix. 240, 241; xi. 228; becomes Kaiser, 223; does honor to Schwerin's memory, ix. 420; pays Friedrich a friendly visit at Neisse, xi. 268-273; receives return-visit at Neustadt, Prince de Ligne's account of, 279-289; informed that Friedrich is dying, and marches on Brandenburg, 274; visits Paris, and converses with D'Alembert, 287, 288; thinks France a beautifully united country, 289; tries to get Bavaria, 301, 392; bullies Karl Theodor, 409; writes to King Friedrich, 410; at the head of his troops, 413; ingratiate himself with the Czarina, and hopes to have a clear stage for his ambition, 451, 452; a grandly attempting man, who could succeed in nothing, 491, 492; mentioned also, 321, 361, 483.
- Jötuns, i. 250.
- Jounneau, Deputy, in danger in September, iv. 192.
- Jourdan, General, repels Austria, iv. 382.
- Jourdan, Coupe-tête, at Versailles, iii. 255, 272; leader of Avignon Brigands, iv. 64; costume of, 64; supreme in Avignon, 67; massacre by, 68; flight of (cities of the South), 68; guillotined, 360.
- Journiac. See St. Méard.
- Journals (see Paris); placard, iii. 305, 381.
- Joyce, Cornet, carries off the King, xvii. 263; Lieutenant-Colonel, imprisoned, xviii. 390.
- Jülich, v. 242, 247, 282; siege of, 255; a carpenter of, kidnapped, vi. 13. See Cleve.
- Jülich and Berg. See Berg-Jülich.
- Julien, Sieur Jean, guillotined, iv. 176.
- Juliers, siege of, xvi. 337.
- June Twentieth (1793), iv. 107-112.
- Junius, xi. 96 n.
- Justice, bed of, iii. 81; the basis of all things, xii. 11, 20, 108, 160; what it is, 15, 207; a just judge, 94; venerable wigged-justice began in wild-justice, 129; strong, 185, 279; God's Justice alone the one indispensable thing, ii. 323, 327; unspeakably difficult of attainment, xii. 341; voice of, to a repentant sinner, 369; pig-justice, 382; love of, v. 329; vi. 30, 323; persistence in, v. 330, 404; vi. 375. See Parchments.

KABALE UND LIEBE, Schiller's, a domestic tragedy of high merit, xx. 36.

Kadijah, the good, Mahomet's first Wife, i. 284, 288.

Kahlbutz, Colonel, at Tetschen, viii. 349.

Kainardschi, Peace of, xii. 305 n.

Kaisers, the early, v. 58, 71; three futile Kaisers, 105; a new Kaiser, 108; a contested election, 116; seven Non-Hapsburg Kaisers, 157.

Kaiserwahl, vii. 451.

Kalkreuth, Adjutant, x. 229; in battle of Freyberg, xi. 164, 165.

Kalkstein, Baron von, kidnapped at Warsaw, v. 294, 376.

- Kalkstein, Lieutenant-Colonel, v. 359, 375.
 Kalkstein, General, vii. 395, 398, 400, 458 n.
 Kaltenborn's, Major, account of King Friedrich's Reviews, xi. 370, 371.
 Kamecke, Frau von, v. 311; letter from the King to, vi. 274; defends Wilhelmina from her Father's violence, 280, 281.
 Kamenz, Abbey of, vii. 377.
 Kamken. See Kamecke.
 Kannegiesser, vi. 116, 117, 129, 139.
 Kant, xi. 445; his Philosophy, xx. 108; Goethe's opinion of, 304; xiii. 72; xiv. 25; Schiller's opinion of, 190; two things that strike one dumb, xvi. 446, 448.
 Kanzler von Ludwig, vi. 356; vii. 318; Silesian Manifesto, 467.
 Kapp, cited, v. 213 n.
 Kappel saves Friedrich from betrayal to the Austrians, xi. 76-83.
 Karl Albert, Kur-Bairern, vii. 266, 357, 439; protests against Pragmatic Sanction, 444; treaty with Belleisle for Kaisership, 453; elected, 456, 461; viii. 112; Unertl's urgent appeal, vii. 461; public declaration, viii. 35; enters Linz, 65; dreams of sovereignty, 72, 94, 101; across to Mannheim, 103; at the topgallant of his hopes, 113; his strangely chequered career, 113, 116; Kaiser Karl VII., 117; coronation and illness, 118; series of disasters, 123; terror on Friedrich's making peace for himself, 184; D'Harcourt's futile reinforcements, 191; "Kaiser and Nothing," 207; returns to München, 213, 223; takes Broglie in hand, and flings down his Patent, 233; hurries back to Frankfurt, 237; Conferences at Hanau, 262; becomes tragical to think of, 269; "Kaiser, as you call him," 271; gets back to München, 365, 396; death, 403, 404; mentioned also, xi. 230.
 Karl Alexander, Duke of Württemberg, viii. 124.
 Karl August Christian of Zweibrück, Heir of Bavaria, xi. 396, 399; glad to resist Austrian encroachments, 402, 486, 487.
 Karl, Duke of Brunswick, vi. 373; vii. 14, 97.
 Karl, Duke of Courland, xi. 296.
 Karl Edzard of Ost-Friesland, viii. 327.
 Karl Eugen, Prince, of Württemberg, boyish gallantries, viii. 124; Schiller's Duke, 127; parting letter from Friedrich, 371. See Württemberg.
 Karl, Grand-Master of the Knights of St. John, vi. 336.
 Karl Gustaf of Sweden, v. 150; war with Poland, 233; dream of a new Goth Empire, death, 285.
 Karl Gustav III. becomes King of Sweden, xi. 338; tries to muzzle his monster of a Senate, and gets killed, 341.
 Karl IV., Kaiser, v. 181, 135, 136, 157, 292, 439; buys Brandenburg, 292, 293.
 Karl V., Kaiser, v. 191, 195, 207, 210, 214, 232, 242; vi. 235; at the siege of Metz, v. 211; vi. 236; his Sister married to Christian II. of Denmark, v. 220; triumph at Mühlberg, 225; vi. 204; his haughty ways, v. 226; reverses and abdication, 228; at siege of Wittenberg, 236.
 Karl VI., Kaiser, v. 24, 303, 441, 451; vi. 425; his feebly virulent quarrel with the Queen of Spain, v. 406; a fearful affair, though a ludicrous one, 407, 444, 452, 466; vi. 99; converts and marries a Protestant Princess, v. 444; vi. 369; his Pragmatic Sanction in favor of Maria Theresa, v. 447; vi. 100, 264, 382; his Ostend East-India Company, v. 451; Congress of Cambrai, 455; Treaty of Vienna, 459; vi. 325; sends Seckendorf to Berlin to snare Friedrich Wilhelm, 19, 101; bribes Grumkow, 21; high-sniffing contempt for Friedrich Wilhelm, 23; a treacherous bargain, 23, 115; Congress of Soissons, 99; suspends the Duke of Mecklenburg, 119; a visit from Friedrich Wilhelm, 421; dreadful doubts about the ceremonial, 421, 424; unceremonial meetings, 430; what Friedrich thought of his Father's visit, 432; attempt to resuscitate the Double-Marriage, 436, 449; interferes in the Polish Election, 461; attacked by the French, 468; applies to the Reich for help, 474; high demands on Friedrich Wilhelm, vii. 9; second Rhine Campaign, 9; the damages he had to pay, 16; fallen out with Friedrich Wilhelm, 18; declares war against the Turks, 83; disastrous results, 100; shameful Peace, 126; a Kaiser much beggared and disgraced, 127; his orthodoxy, 308; tries to settle the Herstal Affair, 243; will not declare for England against France, 249; news of his death reaches Berlin, 269; particulars of his last illness, 280; angry controversy with Karl Albert, viii. 116.
 Karl VII., Kaiser, v. 122, 158. See Karl Albert.
 Karl, Margraf, at scalade of Glogau, vii. 391; wounded at Mollwitz, 417; vii. 351; in Silesia, 426, 446; a brilliant passage of arms, 448; refuses Broglie admission to the Saxon Camp, ix. 224; to guard Silesia, x. 116; at Grüssau,

- 149; marching towards Daun, 144; meets the King at Grossenhayn, 145; in battle of Hochkirch, 158, 180.
- Karl Peter Ulrich, afterwards Czar Peter III., viii. 306.
- Karl Philip, Kur-Pfalz, v. 396; vii. 85; xi. 391; runs off with James Sobieski's Bride, v. 397; becomes Pfalz-Neuberg, 397; tribulations of Heidelberg Protestants, 398; Friedrich Wilhelm's visit, vi. 264, 262; his Mistress, 342.
- Karl, Prince, viii. 100; takes command of the Austrian Army, 102, 132, 137; advances towards Chrudin, 149; at Chotusitz, 155, 160; chases Broglio, 195; besieges Prag, 197, 223; off to meet Maillebois, 209; at Braunau, 225, 223; Deggendorf, 235; visits George II. at Hanau, 267; projected invasion of Alsace, 273; marriage, 275; Rhine Campaign, 333; the acme of his life, 337, 341; distracted books about him, 336 n.; hastens to relief of Prag, 354; recrosses the Rhine, 360; follows Friedrich into Bohemia, 366; having pushed his enemy over the Elbe, wishes to close the campaign, 375; his Wife's sad death, 389; marches against Friedrich in Silesia, 426, 448, 451; very capable of certainty, and also of doubt, the wrong way, 451; Hohenfriedberg, 469, 463, 466; will have to go, 466; beats retreat, 467; skill in choosing camps and positions, 469; at Königgrätz, 470; urged to try another battle, 484; advances towards Friedrich, 491; battle of Sohr, 493-498; tumultuous retreat, 496; falls back to Königgrätz, 497; on march to Brandenburg, 503, 504; quite unaware that Friedrich has got ready for him, 506, 510; after Hengersdorf, tumbles home double-quick, 514; hastens to join Rutowski, 519; arrives at Dresden, but does nothing, ix. 13; vanishes into Bohemia, 15; takes command in defence of Prag, 391, 394, 395, 403; attack of spasm, 410; frantic efforts to prevent defeat, 413; will not surrender, 445; not very broad awake, 468; follows the Prince of Prussia, 484; burns Zittau to ashes, 487; sends Nadasti to attack Winterfeld, 499; follows Bevern into Silesia, x. 26; battle of Breslau, 88; Breslau capitulates, 40; Council of War, will go out to meet Friedrich, and finish him, 47; puffed up with high thoughts, 49; battle of Leuthen, Prince Karl and Austria fallen from their high hopes in one day, 50-63, 69; relieved from his military employments, 70; withdraws to his government of the Netherlands, 70; his death, xi. 464, 465.
- Karl, Theodor, bargains with Austria to give up his succession to Bavaria, xi. 391; a poor, idle, egotistic creature, 395; legally installed, 398; signs the Austrian bargain, 399; remains dead to the matter, 399, 400, 452, 487.
- Karl XII. of Sweden, xi. 331, 333; how he first took arms, x. 106. See Charles XII.
- Karl XIII., xi. 341 n.
- Károly, General, viii. 424.
- Karsch, Frau, the Berlin literary prodigy, xi. 426, 427 n.
- Kasebier, a celebrated Prussian thief, ix. 446.
- Katholische Kirche, ix. 172.
- Katsbach, the, vi. 423.
- Katsch, vi. 65.
- Katte, Lieutenant, vi. 76, 145; a dangerous companion for Friedrich, 149, 211, 226; Wilhelmina's Miniature, 227; Friedrich's projected flight, 229, 241, 245; news of his Arrest, 272; sends Writing-desk and money to the Queen, 273; arrested, 274; the King's ungovernable rage, 279, 281; Katte and the Crown-Prince to be tried by Court-Martial, 290; Katte's iron doom, 296; piously prepares himself to die, 296; last words with the Prince, and death, 298.
- Katte, Lieutenant-General von, vi. 495; vii. 17, 165, 181, 395.
- Katte, Minister, x. 231.
- Katte, Rittmeister von, vi. 238, 241.
- Katzenellenbogen, vi. 266.
- Katzler, Colonel, vill. 492; at Hengersdorf, 512.
- Kaufbeuren, vi. 407.
- Kaufungen, Kunz von, xvi. 357, 387; exasperations with Elector Frederick, 358; steals his two Sons, 361; beheaded, 364.
- Kaunitz, Prince, denounces Jacobins, iv. 94.
- Kaunitz-Rietberg, Count von, ix. 67; greatest of diplomatists, 71, 72, 286, 288; Sinelfungus's estimate of him, 242, 243; arranges Klinggräf's audience with the Empress, 312; despatched to Prince Karl at Zittau, 498; snubs Lord Bute, xi. 146; at interview of the Kaiser with Friedrich, 268, 289; discusses with Friedrich the Russian-Turk war, 295-299; hard-mouthed negotiations on the Polish Question, 304-306; indignant letter from Maria Theresa, 309; intrigues and bargains to get Bavaria, 391, 393-395, 406; tries to mollify Friedrich, 408, 409; his fine schemes all spoiled, 488; mentioned also, x. 76, 152, 393; xi. 368, 299, 321, 451.

- Kausler, cited, v. 289 n.; vii. 414 n.; ix. 450 n.; x. 529 n.
- Kayserling, Russian Ambassador at Warsaw, xi. 239.
- Keats's weak-eyed sensibility, xiii. 274.
- Kehl, vi. 468.
- Keinton fight. See Battle, Edgehill.
- Keith, Excellency Robert, at Vienna, ix. 240, 289; at Petersburg, entertains Czar Peter, xi. 119.
- Keith, Excellency Sir Robert Murray (son of the foregoing), cited, x. 167 n.; Minister at Dresden, &c., xi. 362; rescues Queen Matilda from a Danish prison, 369; visits Lord Marischal, 366, 367.
- Keith, Feldmarschall, in the Russian service, at the siege of Oczakow, vii. 82; at Stockholm, 373; takes service with Friedrich, ix. 63; much esteemed by him, 173; on march into Saxony, 330; interviews with her Polish Majesty, 322; marches to Aussig, to meet the Austrians, 331, 337; joined by Friedrich, 339; before Prag, 338, 413, 424, 443, 444; skilful retreat, 467; with the King at Bornstadt, 495; march to Erfurt, 505; Rossbach, x. 3, 4, 7; to march into Bohemia, 37; with Friedrich at the siege of Olmütz, 94, 97, 98, 109; retreat to Königsgrätz, 110; prompt enough with his stroke, when wanted, 110; Breslau 116; experience of Russian soldiering, 123; joins Zieten in Saxony, 142; expostulates with Friedrich at Hochkirch, 151; has command of right wing, 151; death, 159; honorable soldier's-burial, "a noble legacy," monuments to his memory, 166, 167; his ancestry, 402.
- Keith, Lieutenant, vi. 76, 211; stationed at Wesel, 149, 211; a party to Friedrich's projected flight, 242; news of its discovery by the King, 269; escapes, 271, 276; safe in England, 277; sentence, 295; returns to Prussia, vii. 164; receives a present from Friedrich, ix. 103; in the König-Maupertuis controversy, 309, 310.
- Keith, Page (brother of the above), vi. 244, 246; will get horses for Friedrich, 258; attempted flight at Steinfurth, 261; confesses all to the King, 263; packed into the Fusilier Regiment, 277; mentioned, vii. 165.
- Kellermann at Valmy, iv. 208.
- Kelly, O', with Daun at Burkersdorf, xi. 142, 143.
- Kelsey, Major, at Langford House, xvii. 222; becomes Colonel, a Major-General, xix. 19 n.
- Kemble, Fanny, Sterling's admiration for, ii. 47, 49.
- Kemeter, vii. 22.
- Kempis, Thomas à, xiv. 285.
- Kendal, Duchess of, v. 136, 430; vi. 62, 186, 294.
- Kenner, xix. 438 n.
- Kenning and can-ning, xvi. 126.
- Kenrick, Colonel, Cromwell's letter to, xvii. 302.
- Kent in insurrection, xvii. 297; xviii. 67.
- Kepler, ii. 318; v. 262; viii. 66; his true love of wisdom, xiii. 410.
- Keppel, in the attack on Confians's fleet, x. 371.
- Ker, Colonel Gilbert, interview with, xviii. 118; at Glasgow, 166; in Scots Army, 171; Remonstrance by, 174-178, 179, 182, 183; his forces routed, 180.
- Ker, Earl Somerset. See Overbury.
- Ker, Sir Andrew, notice of, xvii. 363.
- Ker of Kersland, v. 429 n.
- Kestlitz, Baron von, deputation from Grünberg, vii. 296.
- Kettenbeil, Herr, ix. 90, 91.
- Kettlers, the, vi. 359.
- Keyserling, vi. 451; vii. 30, 66, 124, 166, 224, 502; ix. 26.
- Khan, Thomas Kouli, ix. 102.
- Khevenhüller, General, fortifies Vienna, viii. 68, 79; collects an Army, 97; sweeps Ségur back, 103; takes Linz, 111; master of nearly all Bavaria, 191; visits King George at Hanau, 267; mentioned also, ix. 338.
- Kielmannsegge, Graf von, vii. 95.
- Kilkenny taken, xvii. 33-43, 47, 48; Irish at, 33; Cats, xii. 248.
- Killing no murder, xix. 118 n.
- Kimber, Rev., on Cromwell, xvii. 19.
- Kimbolton, Lord, with the Five Members, xvii. 119. See Mandevil, Manchester.
- King, our true, chosen for us in Heaven, i. 188; primitive, iii. 11; divine right of, 11; Nature's, and their poor dog-hutch kingdoms, xv. 429; a true man must tend to be King of his own world, xvi. 247; and slaves, 52; a summary of all the various figures of heroism, i. 416; indispensable in all movements of men, 447; the true and the sham, xii. 62, 88, 213; the ablest man the virtual King, 215; again be a King, 240; the proper name of all Kings, Minister, Servant, 249; everywhere, in sudden horror, conscious of being playactors, ii. 265; the true king and commander of men, 290, 292, 309; not to be dispensed with anywhere, 362; xii. 287; true fane

- tion of a King, ii. 387; xii. 312, 316; no King in Parliament, 294, 296, 303; Parliament an "impossible King," 305; without the trappings, v. 3; sham kingship, 8; the true King, 327, 330; worth of, 335; an economist King, 337; a constitutional King, 431; vi. 61; a working King, 9; vii. 105; an absolute King, 46; a kingly fight lost to the world, vi. 127; modern Kings, vii. 144; cannot steer by count of votes, 143; cannot be amiable all round, 257; a George II. for King, viii. 33; unfortunate and guilty, 365; a born King with his kingdom to seek, ix. 436; Kings true and false, xi. 187, 188. See Able Man, Wisest Man, Premier, Sovereignities, Original Man.
- Kingdom, a man's, i. 92.
- Kingship, decline of, in France, iii. 12; and politeness, xvi. 437; Oliver Cromwell's, xix. 124, 128, 131, 141, 151, 169, 170, 212; Committee on, 130, 138; he refuses it, 217. See Royalty.
- Kingston, insurrection at, xvii. 320.
- Kingston, Duchess of, xi. 276, 279.
- King Street, Cromwell lives in, xviii. 303.
- Kintore, Earldom of, x. 402.
- Kirkcaldy of Grange, xix. 436.
- Kirkcudbright, Lord, invites Cromwell to Edinburgh, xvii. 337.
- Kirkman, James, the Irish Giant, vi. 6, 8; vii. 144.
- Kladrup, vi. 426; viii. 376.
- Klaproth, Medicinal-Assessor, ix. 100.
- Klausius, Amstrath, xi. 528.
- Kleefeld, General, attacks Torgau, xi. 383, 304.
- Klein, cited, ix. 125 n.
- Klein-Schnellendorf, secret treaty at, viii. 76.
- Kleist, General, vii. 333, 335; summoned from Pommern, x. 272.
- Kleist, Colonel, of the Green Hussars, x. 303, 276; at Aussig, 348; with Hülsen on the Dürenberg, 482; pounces on the Duke of Würtemberg, 506; with Friedrich at Torgau, 514, 515, 517; with Prince Henri, xi. 52, 103; tries to relieve Colberg, 84; at Freyberg, 165; attacks the Bohemian magazines, 167; seizes Nürnberg, 167; paid off at close of the war, 172.
- Kleist's, Major, tragic fate at Kunersdorf, x. 270; death and soldier's funeral at Frankfurt, 371.
- Kleist, von, Engineer-Lieutenant, xi. 155; at Fortzen, 522.
- Klingsmann, Dr. August, the most indisputable of playwrights, xiii. 364; his Ahamer, 365; Feust, and his melodramatic contract with the Devil, 367.
- Klinggräf, vi. 356; at Conferences of Hanau, viii. 263; ix. 310; audience with the Empress of Austria, 313; farther question from Friedrich, 314, 315.
- Klootz, Anacharsis, xi. 456.
- Klopstock, xiii. 46; xiv. 124; his Allegory of The Two Muses, 335; naturalized, iv. 160.
- Kloes, cited, v. 70 n.
- Kloster-Kampen, Fight of, x. 533-536.
- Kloster-Zeven, Convention of, ix. 508, 509; renounced by England and Hanover, 546.
- Knaves, given a world of, what must come of it, xiv. 382.
- Knesebeck, cited, x. 92 n., 455 n.; xi. 520.
- Knight, Charles, xi. 382 n.; xii. 448.
- Knoblesdorf, vi. 487; vii. 30, 123; ix. 37.
- Knobloch, General, at Erfurt, x. 195; attacking the Austrian magazines, 202; drives the Croats out of Bamberg, 203; tries to relieve Colberg, xi. 84.
- Knock, Fort of, viii. 333.
- Know thyself, and what thou canst work at, i. 125; xii. 190; xv. 154.
- Knox, John, and the Virgin, iii. 373; one of the truest of the true, xv. 420; Wilkie's picture of, a worthless failure, xvi. 351; author of the Puritan revolution, 396; his influence on Scotland, 397; i. 369; beautiful Scotch humor in him, xvi. 417; the bravest of Scotchmen, i. 370; his unassuming career, is sent to the French Galleys, 371; his colloquies with Queen Mary, 373; vein of drollery, a brother to high and to low, his death, 375; Beza's Icon of, and inane article on, xii. 409; illustrative pieces from writings and actions of, 423; called to ministry, 432; in French Galleys, 433, 434; royal chaplain in England, 436; marries Margery Bowes, 437; History of the Reformation, 443.
- Knox, Miss, portrait in possession of, xii. 420.
- Knut, v. 62 n.
- Knyphausen, Baron von, vi. 93, 136, 164, 187, 193, 286; ix. 287, 298; x. 84.
- Knyphausen, Madame, ix. 103.
- Knyvett, Thomas, taken at Lowestoff, xvii. 134; Cromwell's letter to him, 238.
- Koch, vi. 386; cited, ix. 383 n.
- Köhler, cited, v. 57 n., 59 n., 73 n.; 101 n., 120, 172 n.; vii. 380 n.; x. 469 n.
- Kolin Battle, vi. 427; ix. 447-463.
- Kolitz, vii. 84.
- Kollas, Captain, at siege of Dresden, x. 297, 299, 301, 311.

- Köln, Clement August, Kurfürst of, vi. 269, 351; famed old City of, 270.
 Köln, Elector of, and his troops, viii. 373.
 König, dispute between Madame du Châtelet and, vii. 213; visits Maupertuis about his "Law of Thrift," is not handsomely received, ix. 117-121; publishes his strictures, 203, 204; correspondence with Maupertuis, 117; summoned by the Berlin Academy, 207, 208; resigns his membership, 211; appeals to the public, 211: cited, 205 n.
 Königsberg, v. 82, 96, 201, 289; University of, 208; Bürgemeister of, seized in open Hall, 293; Stanislaus at, vii. 18; homage at, 181.
 Königseck, Graf von, vi. 471; with Prince Karl, viii. 137; at Chotusitz, 159; at Dresden, 415; in the Netherlands, 431; at Fontenoy, 432; ordered to Prag, ix. 389, 391; defeated at Reichenberg, 392, 393.
 Königsmark tragedy, the, v. 29.
 Königsmark, Aurora von, viii. 95.
 Konopischt, Camp of, viii. 369.
 Köppen, Lieutenant, v. 352.
 Koran, the, i. 294.
 Korbach, Fight of, x. 452, 453.
 Korbitz, Action of, x. 311.
 Korf, General, introduces Hordt to the Russian Court, xi. 118, 122; great expectations of the new reign, 121.
 Korf, Baroness de, in flight to Varennes, iv. 12; is Dame de Tourzel, 16.
 Kosel, vii. 425: cited, 473 n.
 Köslin, Town in Pommern, vii. 181.
 Kotzebue, August von, a warning to all playwrights, xiii. 366; xiv. 334, 338; xv. 412.
 Kreutzen, Colonel, at Liège, vii. 234.
 Kriels, Johann Ludwig, on Kunersdorf, x. 248, 254, 267, 271: cited, 244 n.
 Krocher, Colonel, vi. 231.
 Krockow, commander of Prussian vanguard at Domstädtl, x. 107; recommends the French Excise-system to Friedrich, xi. 206.
 Krusemark, Colonel, xi. 77, 81.
 Kunersdorf, vi. 346; battle of, x. 249-271; description of the country, 251-254.
 Kunz von Kauffungen, v. 178; vi. 233.
 Kuppisch, cess-collector, xi. 439.
 Kur-Baiern, the young, viii. 404, 419, 422.
 Kurfürsts and their function, v. 77; the Twelve Hohenzollerns, 308.
 Kuriseses, Irish, go abroad, xvii. 55; in Piedmont, xviii. 491.
 Kur-Köln dances with Wilhelmina at Frankfurt, viii. 120.
 Kur-Mainz, viii. 241, 271.
 Kur-Pfalz, vii. 451. See Philip.
 Kur-Sachsen protests against Pragmatic Sanction, vii. 446; helps Belleisle, 462; "King of Moravia," 481; Copartnery with France and Bavaria, viii. 67, 93, 94, 105; green diamond, 137; resentment against Friedrich, 139: mentioned also, vii. 374, 380, 385, 441. See August III. of Poland.
 Kurt, vi. 236. See Schwerin.
 Küster, army chaplain, xi. 21, 73, 77 n.: cited, vii. 166 n.; xi. 20 n.
 Kutzen, cited, ix. 450 n.
 Kyau, General, takes Bevern's command, and retires towards Glogau, x. 39; superseded by Ziethen, 42.
 LABOR, sacredness of, i. 172; and free effort, xiv. 370; infinite significance of, xv. 154; true organization of, xvi. 201; only the Noble labor willingly with their whole strength, 303; to be king of this earth, xii. 165; organization of, 190, 202, 247; ii. 293; perennial nobleness and sacredness in, xii. 190. See Industry, Work, Working Classes, Chivalry.
 Lacretelle, cited, v. 436 n.
 Lacroix, of Mountain, iv. 59.
 Lacy, Marshal, vi. 463; vii. 10, 304; commands the Russian Army, 372; at Riga, 387: mentioned also, ix. 63.
 Lacy, Junior, vii. 304; at Hochkirch, x. 163; Keith's chief-mourner, 166; message to Soltikof, 283; urges Daun, 349; with Daun in Saxony, 418, 421, 424; follows Friedrich's march for Silesia, 429; vanishes from Lichtenberg at Friedrich's approach, 430; skirmish of horse at Gödau, 433; hastily quits Gödau, 435; arrives in Dresden, 435; leaves Dresden to its fate, 438; with Daun attends Friedrich's march into Silesia, 463-466; at battle of Liegnitz, 469, 471, 476; joins with the Russians to seize Berlin, 491; flies into open rage at Tottleben's terms of capitulation, 494; for three days the evil genius of Berlin, 495; off quicker than he came, at Friedrich's approach, 498; with Daun in battle of Torpau, 516, 524, 526; in retreat, 527; defeated at Reichenbach, xl. 150; in the Bavarian War, 413, 414: mentioned also, 269, 270, 280, 285, 464.
 Ladies taken at Naseby, xvii. 207; at Basing House, 229.
 Lafarge, President of Jacobins, Madame Lavergne and, iv. 167.
 Lafayette, bust of, erected, iii. 46; against Calonne, 72; demands by, in Notables, 78; Cromwell-Grandison, 142; Bastille

- time, Vice-President of National Assembly, 179, 193; General of National Guard, 195; resigns and reaccepts, 202; Scipio-Americanus, 225; thanked, rewarded, 234; French Guards and, 249; to Versailles, 250; at Versailles, Fifth October, 264; swears the Guards, 274; Feuillant, 310; on abolition of Titles, 329; at 'Champ-de-Mars' Federation, 339, 342; at De Castries' riot, 392; character of, 393; in Day of Poniards, 403; difficult position of, 406; at King's going to St. Cloud, iv. 6; resigns and reaccepts, 7; at flight from Tuilleries, 14; after escape of King, 17; on Petition for Deposition, 44; moves for amnesty, 51; resigns, 54; decline of, 98; doubtful against Jacobins, 104, 107, 119; fruitless journey to Paris, 114; to be accused? 123; flies to Holland, 164; prisoner in Olmütz, x. 95; mentioned also, xi. 479, 494.
- Lafotte, prison-plot informer, iv. 400, 411.
- La Force. See Prison.
- Lals, Sieur, Jacobin, with Louis-Philippe, iii. 810.
- Lalng, David, xii. 412, 438; Works of Knox cited, 424.
- Lalng, S., xix. 481 n.; translation of Suorzo-faire, 405.
- Laissez-faire, xvi. 48; applied to horses, 58; has as good as done its part in many provinces, 71, 116; when a reasonable cry, 78; xii. 178; general breakdown of, 180, 181.
- Lakenbeath eels, xii. 64.
- Lally, Count, at Fontenoy, viii. 442; at Madras, x. 178; nearly the most unfortunate and worst-used "man of genius," 343, 344; death of, iii. 85. See Tollendal.
- Lamaism, Grand, i. 238.
- Lamarche, guillotined, iv. 355.
- Lamarck's, Mirabeau sick at, iii. 413.
- Lamartine, M. de, at the Hôtel-de-Ville, ii. 256.
- Lamballe, Princess de, to England, iv. 22; intrigues for Royalists, 77, 96; at La Force, 170; massacred, 183.
- Lambert, General, described, xvii. 265; in the North, 318; at Edinburgh, 368, 375, 378; at Pontefract, 398; Major-General in Scots War, xviii. 102; skirmishes with the Scots, 106, 108; at Dunbar battle, 131, 138; routs Colonel Ker, 179, 180; at Glasgow, 226; routs General Browne at Inverkeithing, 233, 234; at Worcester battle, 248; in the Highlands, 258; of Council of State, 385 n.; in Cromwell's First Parliament, 399; a Major-General of Counties, xix. 19 n.; against title of King, 217; dismissed, 217.
- Lambert, M. de St., ix. 58, 76.
- Lambesc, Prince, attacks Bust-Procession (July, 1788), iii. 171, 172.
- Lameth, in Constituent Assembly, one of a trio, iii. 214; brothers, notice of, 285; Jacobins, 308; Charles, duel with Duke de Castries, 391; brothers become constitutional, iv. 41; Theodore, in First Parliament, 58.
- Lammermoor Hills described, xviii. 123; Scots Army at, 124.
- Lamoignon, Keeper of Seals, iii. 73, 89, 95; dismissed, 110; effigy burned, and death of, 111.
- Lamotte, Countess de, and Diamond Necklace, iii. 56; in the Salpêtrière, 68, 92; "Memoirs" burned, iv. 89; in London, 170; M. de, in prison, 170, 186.
- Lamotte-Valois, the Countess de, xv. 208; her pedigree, birth, character and career, 251-297.
- Lamourette, Abbé, kiss of, iv. 62; guillotined, 360.
- Landlords, past and present, xii. 53; Land-owning, 168; whom the Land belongs to, 170; the mission of a Land Aristocracy a sacred one, 236, 271.
- Land-owning, trade of, i. 97.
- Landshut, viii. 85; Protestants of, 468.
- Langdale, Sir Marmaduke, joins Scots, xvii. 317; escapes, 383.
- Lange, vi. 42; Wolf's old enemy, vii. 320.
- Lange, Major, killed at Hochkirch, x. 158.
- Langebek, cited, xix. 437.
- Langensalsza, fight of, xi. 22-24.
- Langley, Colchester Captain, xvii. 136.
- Langniddry, Laird of, xii. 410, 426.
- Langport, battle of, xix. 326.
- Language, the Garment of Thought, i. 56; dead vocables, 81.
- Lanjuinais, Girondin, skirts torn, iv. 308; arrested, 310; recalled, 420.
- Lanterne, death by the, iii. 300, 301.
- Lapérouse, voyage of, iii. 46.
- Laporte, Intendant, guillotined, iv. 163.
- Larga, battle of, xix. 489-491.
- Larivière, Justice, imprisoned, iv. 116.
- Larochejaqueiin in La Vendée, iv. 166; death of, 438.
- Lasource accuses Danton, iv. 297; president and Marat, 300; arrested, 310; condemned, his saying, 344.
- Latin, learning, v. 378. See Education.
- Latour, De, viii. 458, 460.
- Latour, Father, chief Jesuit, ix. 88.
- Latour-Maubourg, notice of, iv. 39.
- Lattorf defends Koel, x. 170.
- Laud, William, Archdeacon of Huntingdon, xvii. 39; finds no religion in Scotland, 43; persecutions by, 52; inclined - to Popery, 64; Parliament intends to accuse, 66; accompanies Charles I. to Scotland, 72; roots out Feoffees, 73; is in the Tower, 107, 118; beheaded, 256.

- Lauderdale, Earl, taken at Worcester, xviii. 253; incident to, in London, 255; notice of, 255.
- Lauffeld, battle of, ix. 41 n., 59.
- Laughern, Lieutenant-Colonel, shot, xviii. 45.
- Laughern, Major-General, revolts, xviii. 310; condemned to death, 414.
- Laughter, significance of, i. 28; worth of true, xii. 147; xvi. 345.
- Launay, Marquis de, Governor of Bastille, iii. 180; besieged, 183; unassisted, 184; to blow up Bastille, 189, 190; massacred, 191.
- Launay, De, head of the Excise department, xi. 208, 210, 211, 506.
- Laurence, Mr. Samuel, xii. 451 n.
- lausitz, v. 59, 61.
- Lautensack, Prussian Secretary, vii. 171.
- Lauterburg, Lines of, viii. 386.
- Lavater and Cagliostro, xv. 198.
- Laveaux, Editor, vii. 159 n., 217; ix. 269, 271 n.; xi. 211 n.
- Lavergne, surrenders Longwi, iv. 167.
- Lavoisier, chemist, guillotined, iv. 404.
- Law, martial, in Paris, iii. 295; iv. 45; Book of the, 60; gradual growth of, xii. 129; the Maker's laws, 222; reform of, xviii. 275, 276, 283, 334; and Church, angry basilisks of, ii. 433; injustice decreed by a "law," xii. 384; omnipresence of, viii. 483; reform of, vii. 154; ix. 33, 34, 78-80. See Chancery.
- Law, the finance-wizard, v. 365, 436.
- Lawrence, Colonel Henry, of Council of State, xviii. 385 n.
- Laws and regulations of the Universe, how decipher the, ii. 276, 332; such laws do verily exist, silent, but inflexibly sure, 447; not to be decided by our paltry "votings," 306; in the way of abatement, of oblivion, neither gods nor men prevail, 355. See Universe.
- Lawyers, their influence on the Revolution, iii. 15; number of, in Tiers État, 141; in Parliament First, iv. 56; supreme stump-orators, xii. 352, 383.
- Lazare, Maison de St., plundered, iii. 175.
- Lea Hamlet, described, xvii. 152.
- Lebas, at Strasburg, iv. 378; arrested, 420.
- Lebon, priest, in National Convention, iv. 202; at Arras, 366; guillotined, 444.
- Lebrun, forger of assignats, iv. 82.
- Lechapelier, Deputy, and Insurrection of Women, iii. 243.
- Lecointre, National Major, iii. 237, 256; will not duel, 239; active, 259; in First Parliament, iv. 59.
- Lecouvreur, Adrienne, vi. 83; vii. 306.
- Lecturers, running, described, xvii. 81, 89.
- Lediard, cited, vi. 119 n.
- Lee, from America, at Berlin, xi. 383-386.
- Lefebvre, Mining Engineer, at siege of Schweidnitz, xi. 148, 151-156; writes to Formey of the meeting of Friedrich and Kaiser Joseph, 269-272; in a fit of excitement destroys himself, 272.
- Lefèvre, Abbé, distributes powder, iii. 191; in procession, 195; is nearly hanged, 245.
- Legendre, butcher, in danger, iv. 106; at Tuileries riot, 110; in National Convention, 202; against Girondins, 306; for Danton, 397; locks out Jacobins, 423; in First of Prairial, 447.
- Legge, ex-exchequer, ix. 83, 473.
- Legislation. See Assembly.
- Legislative interference, xii. 254.
- Lehmann, Dr., xi. 107 n.
- Lehant, Colonel, commissioned, xvii. 320.
- Lehwald, General, viii. 157; at Habelschwert, 391; at Sohr, 497; joins the Old Dessauer at Meissen, ix. 7; to defend the Baltic parts, 388, 474, 480, 520; resignation, x. 79, 82; assists in defending Berlin, 492.
- Leibnitz, v. 27; Leibnitzian "justification of the ways of God," 32; sage Leibnitz a rather weak but hugely ingenious old gentleman, 39, 43, 429; Letter, quoted by König, ix. 204; cited, v. 60 n.
- Leicester taken and retaken, xviii. 203, 210.
- Leif Erricson, xix. 454.
- Leipe, hamlet near Grotkan, vii. 403.
- Leipzig, vi. 231; Treaty of, ix. 279; under Prussian military contribution, xi. 27.
- Leith Citadel built by Cromwell, xviii. 260.
- Leland's Itinerary, xvii. 31.
- Leming-rat, the, xii. 312.
- Lemon, Mr., classified Records, xvii. 409.
- Lenfant, Abbé, on Protestant claims, iii. 93; massacred, iv. 185.
- Lenthall, Hon. William, Speaker, Cromwell's letters to, xvii. 208, 216, 229, 232, 283, 312, 322, 335, 367, 375, 378, 438, 447, 456, 465, 467, 484, 489, 498, 500; xviii. 26, 44, 101, 134, 180, 194, 214, 216, 232, 240, 241, 251, 252; xix.

- 311, 329, 330, 341; Conference at his house, xviii. 270-273; unseated, 293; in Cromwell's First Parliament, 298, 420; against Law Reform, 489; on Committee of Kingship, xix. 138, 147; one of Cromwell's Lords, 236.
- Lentulus, General, vii. 376, 397, 401, 402; viii. 76; xi. 68, 86, 277, 308, 368.
- Lentulus, Lieut.-Colonel, ix. 494; x. 328.
- Lenz, President of East Friesland, x. 88.
- Leo X., the elegant Pagan Pope, i. 358; v. 183.
- Leon, Herr von, v. 408.
- Leopold, Archduke, at siege of Jülich, v. 255.
- Leopold, Richard's, Duke of Austria, a man with some stuff in him, v. 90.
- Leopold, Kaiser, v. 50, 281, 291, 296, 441.
- Leopold of Anhalt-Dessau, xvi. 381; v. 26, 75, 127, 300, 317, 391; vi. 35, 43, 419; a rugged practical man, of dreadful impetuosity, v. 318, 321; Fox's Daughter, 318; kills a Cousin of hers, and marries her, 319; inventor of modern military tactics, 320; vi. 314; General Fieldmarshal of the Prussian Armies, v. 321; at Blenheim, Bridge of Cassano, Lines of Turin, 321; vi. 244; at the Siege of Stralsund, v. 352; challenges Grumkow, vi. 16; leaves him and the Court in disgust, 17; at King August's Camp of Radewitz, 207; takes Mörs Castle, 271; favors Friedrich at Clastrin, 291, 303, 385; assists in his military studies, 395; sends the King tall recruits, 419; the Rhine Campaign, 475, 496; vii. 10; visits the French Camp, vi. 503; with the King at Belgard, vii. 116; at his death, 140; interview with King Friedrich, 144; reproved by Friedrich, 279; private consultations, 372; congratulated on his Son's success, 393; takes Camp at Gütlin, 394; at Brandenburg, viii. 128; meets Friedrich at Chrudim, 140; preferred before Schwerin, 142; neglect of orders, 145; sharp bantering of Walrave, 147; takes charge of the Silesian Army, 387; Friedrich's impatience, 388; repels Silesian invasion, 389-392; home with thanks, 422; just lost his wife, 422; his sick Daughter, 423; takes charge of a Camp of Observation against Saxony, 427, 478; his feu-de-joie for the Victory of Sohr, 501; home for the Winter, 503; new preparations for Saxony, 506; hard words from the King, 507; enters Saxony, ix. 3; marches against Rutowski, 6-9; Victory at Kesselsdorf, 9-13; his battle-prayer, 11; glorious in the last of his fields, 14; conducts the King over the battle-field, 15; death, 14.
- Leopold, the Young Dessauer, vii. 195; with Friedrich at Strasburg, 198; on the road to Silesia, 295; before Glogau, 324; skilful capture, 389; joins the King at Schweidnitz, 394; crosses Sargau Bridge, 402; at Mollwitz, 417, 421, 428; at Breslau, viii. 47; in the Glatz country, 79, 106, 109; at Chrudim, 140, 151; on march, 153; at Chotusitz, 155; on march to Prag, 345; towards Austria, 356; quarrels with Schwerin, 359; is for keeping hold of Prag, 374; near Kolin, 376; on retreat towards Silesia, 378; in Silesia, worn down with gout, 392; left to command in Silesia, 499; watching Prince Karl, 503; draws out his forces, 507.
- Leopold, Duke of Florence, afterwards Kaiser, xi. 223.
- Leopold, Prince of Brunswick, helps Miller Arnold to justice, xi. 430; gets drowned in struggling to save others, 431.
- Lepel, Major-General, vi. 232.
- Lepelletier, Section, for Convention, iv. 442, 448; revolt of, in Vendémiaire, 456-458. See St. Fargeau.
- Lesley, Alexander, Fieldmarshal, at Dunse Law, xvii. 101; Earl of Leven, enters England with Scots Army in 1644, 175; at Marston Moor, 181; cannonades the Hamilton Engagers from Edinburgh Castle, 346; entertains Cromwell at dinner, 375; at Alyth, and sent to the Tower, xviii. 258.
- Lesley, General David, extinguishes Montrose, xvii. 233; at head of Kirk Party, 246; General of Scots, xviii. 109, 232; his caution, 114; letter to Cromwell, 115; Cromwell's letters to, 116, 200; and the English soldier at Dunbar, 128.
- Lesley, Ludovic, Governor of Berwick, Cromwell's letter to, xvii. 355.
- Lessing, character of, viii. 485; xiii. 46; Tauentzien's chief clerk, x. 190; cited, 460 n.; mentioned also, 172, 460.
- L'Estoc, surgeon to Elizabeth of Russia, vii. 366.
- L'Estrange, Roger, xvii. 164.
- Lestwitz, General, surrenders Breslau to the Austrians, x. 40; with Friedrich at Torgan, 525, 526.
- Letter-writing, conventional, xv. 438; veracious, xvi. 175; vacuous and inane, 177.
- Lettres-de-Cachet and Parlement of Paris, iii. 91.
- Leuthen, battle of, v. 9; x. 50-67.
- Levasseur in National Convention, iv. 202; Convention Representative, in tide-water, 381.

- Levellers described, xvii. 282; Arnold shot, 285; remarks on, 426-428; routed at Burford, 432.
- Leven, Earl of. See Lesley, Alexander.
- Leverett, Captain Cromwell's Letter to, xix. 378.
- Lewin, vi. 424.
- Lexden Heath, Camp on, viii. 6, 187.
- Liancourt, Duke de, Liberal, iii. 142; not a revolt, but a revolution, 194; Royalist, in Normandy, iv. 116.
- Libberton, Lord, killed at Dunbar, xviii. 139.
- Liberty, iii. 304; tree of, 342; iv. 108, 123; and equality, 99; i. 352, 422; status of, iv. 329; what really meant by, xvi. 427; new definitions of, 445, 446; true meaning of, xii. 206, 210; of the people, xvii. 79; British, ii. 288; cause of, viii. 9. See Enfranchisement.
- Lichnowski, Colonel, at Landshut, x. 426.
- Lichtenau, Gräfin von, xi. 913.
- Lichtenberg, v. 222.
- Lichtenstein, Graf von, lodges King Friedrich, viii. 111.
- Lichtenstein, Prince von, vi. 492; vii. 9; viii. 63; ix. 402, 409; cited, 402 n.
- Lie, a, v. 11, 16; galvanized, 207. See Fiction, Mendacity.
- Liebertkühn, Dr., ix. 104, 175, 183.
- Liebstadt, review at, vii. 181.
- Liège, vii. 231. See Affair of Herstal.
- Liège, Bishop of, vi. 508.
- Liegnitz, Duke of, v. 189, 198, 203; Heritage-Brotherhood with Joachim II., 231; what comes of it, 291.
- Liegnitz, described, vi. 423; entered by Schwerin, vii. 322; x. 469; battle of, 468-470.
- Lies, French Philosophism on, iii. 16; to be extinguished, how, 39; cant, a double power of, 54; their doom, 220; "damned," ii. 388; every lie accused and the parent of curses, 407; diagnosis of a lie and a liar, 444; benevolent plan of reform, 452; subtle quintessence of lying, xii. 376.
- Lieschen, i. 19.
- Life, human, picture of, i. 17, 115, 130, 141; life-purpose, 102; speculative mystery of, 128, 181, 200; the most important transaction in, 130; nothingness of, 139; a means to an end, xiv. 346; infinite mystery of, xv. 162, 228; the life to come, xii. 161, 223; never a May-game for men, 203, 379. See Man.
- Light, the beginning of all Creation, i. 149; or lightning, a choice, ii. 376, 429.
- Ligne, Prince de, v. 167; viii. 240; his account of the battle of Leuthen, x. 59, 69; in Berlin, 497; at Burkensdorf, xi. 143; his account of Friedrich's visit to Kaiser Joseph, 377-389; visits Friedrich at Potsdam, 460, 461; hurries off to Petersburg, 471; death of, iv. 204; cited, xi. 278 n.
- Ligonier, ix. 41 n., 66; his Dragoons, 188, 239.
- Lilburn, Col. Robert, in Lancashire, xvii. 317; routs Earl Derby, xviii. 244; and Bear Park, 214; deputy Major-General, 19 n.
- Lilburn, John, account of, xvii. 107; his brothers, 244; accuses Cromwell, 296; his pamphlets, 421; death of, xix. 232.
- Lille, Colonel Rouget de, and Marseilles-Hymn, iv. 123.
- Lille, Abbé de, xi. 461.
- Lille city, besieged, iv. 212.
- Lincoln Committee, Cromwell's letter to, xvii. 142.
- Lincolnshire in 1643, xvii. 129, 141, 170-172.
- Lindauer of Sangerhausen, x. 31.
- Linden, Major, at Komerzdorf, x. 255, 261.
- Lindsay, Sir David, xii. 432.
- Lindsey's, Reverend Mr., Works on Poland, xi. 227 n., 219, 320.
- Linger, vi. 308.
- Lingnet, his "Bastille Unveiled," iii. 55; returns, 125; irascible, iv. 90.
- Linsenbarth's, Candidatus, interview with Friedrich, ix. 69, 100, 195.
- Lintz, or Linz, v. 262; Karl Albert at viii. 65.
- Lion. See Strirées.
- Lippe-Bückeburg, vii. 93, 98.
- Lippe-Bückeburg, Ordnance Master, x. 19; entertains a select dinner-party in his tent, 25; takes command of the English forces in Portugal, 92, 94.
- Lisbon, Earthquake of, ix. 268.
- Lisle, Lord Viscount, in Council of State, xvii. 415; xviii. 334 n., 385 n.
- Lisle, Mr., in Council of State, xvii. 415; Keeper of Great Seal, xviii. 489; a Installation, xix. 222.
- Lisle, Sir George, shot, xvii. 246.
- List of Cromwell family, xvii. 21, 26, 68; of the Eleven Members, 268 n., of Officers slain at Tredah, 466; of Little Parliament, xviii. 298, 299; of Council of State, 1653, 234 n.; 1654, 385 n.; of Long Parliament, 340-367; of Cromwell's First Parliament, 308; of Major-Generals, xix. 19 n.; of Cromwell's estates, 50 n.; of Cromwell's Lords, 236.
- Literary life, temptations, perils and heroisms of, xx. 42, 106, 196; Men, a perpetual priesthood, xiii. 87, 390, 482; xiv. 152, 341; xv. 107; de-

- strable to pay them by the quantity they do not write, 404; Hero as literary man, i. 377; in China, 391. See Newspaper-Editors.
- Literature, its influence on the Revolution, iii. 16; in France, in 1781-87, 55, 58, 98; wide arena of, xiii. 390; xiv. 349; diseased self-consciousness, 366; froth and substance, 397; xvi. 220; lies in domain of belief, xv. 84; literary shampoosings, 433, 456; its flesh-flies, 448; extempore writing, 457; subjective writing, xvi. 35; its rapid fermentations, 442, 443; chaotic condition of, i. 382; is not our heaviest evil, 392; noble and ignoble, xii. 102; true and sham, ii. 180, 414, 455; our crowded portal of, 435; highest problem of, xii. 350, 385; a chaotic haven, ii. 43; and last resource, 118, 135, 139; romantic appetite for, v. 420; literary fame, vi. 41; vii. 35; book-writing, of two kinds, vi. 44; vii. 33; something grander than all literatures, 57; Friedrich's literary attainments, 104. See Newspaper, Read, Review-articles.
- Lithuania, vii. 112.
- Liturgies, xii. 126; such as no God can hear, 348.
- Liverpool, xii. 66.
- Livingston, Rev. James, notice of, by Cromwell, xviii. 182; his descendants, 183.
- Llanblethian, a pleasant little Welsh village, ii. 16, 20.
- Lloyd, Captain, sent to Generals Blake and Montague, xix. 43.
- Lloyd, Major-General, ix. 341, 347 n., 348, 349; cited, viii. 103 n; ix. 341 n., 403 n.; x. 12.
- Loadstar, a, in the eternal sky, xii. 38.
- Loan, Successive, scheme of, iii. 88.
- Lobkowitz, Prince, joins with Grand-Duke Franz in Bohemia, viii. 100; at Iglau, 131; at Waidhofen, 135; near Frauenberg, 150, 165; takes Leitmeritz from the French, 222; to watch Belleisle at Prag, 222-224; with Prince Karl at Königgrätz, 484, 485; Hennenersdorf, 510; mentioned also, 235, 504.
- Lobowitz, battle of, ix. 341-351.
- Locke and his followers, xiii. 77; paved the way for banishing Religion from the world, 210, 469; wrote his Essay in a Dutch garret, 306; Tomb of, xvii. 97; vii. 46.
- Lockhart, William, Ensign, xvii. 254; Colonel, wounded at Preston, 332; Ambassador to France, xix. 109; notice of, 236, 237; commands at Dunkirk, 332; one of Cromwell's Lords, 236; Cromwell's letters to, 237, 239, 283. See Sewster.
- Lockhart, Sterling's admiring estimate of, ii. 223; his Life of Burns, xiii. 256; of Scott, xv. 403.
- Lockier, Rev., preaches at Cromwell's Installation, xviii. 337.
- Lockyer, Trooper, shot, xvii. 430.
- Loftus, Sir Arthur, notice of, xvii. 494.
- Logau, Silesian poet, vii. 294.
- Logic, the rushlight of, xiii. 479; and its limits, xiv. 348; xv. 186, 306; Logic-mortar and wordy air-castles, i. 41; underground workshop of, 52, 168. See Metaphysics.
- Logical utilities, xii. 155, 158.
- Loigie, Marquis de, at Strasbourg, vii. 206.
- Loiserolles, General, guillotined for his son, iv. 423.
- Loncarty, battle of, xix. 413, 414.
- London, siege of, by Svein and Tryggvesson, xix. 420; by St. Olaf, 442, 443.
- London houses and house-building, xvi. 450, 451; City petitions for Parliament, xvii. 103; for Reform of Bishops, 106, 118; helps Long Parliament to raise army, 120; fortified, 1043, 146; armies fitted out by, 189; petitions for peace, 249; new militia ordinance, 262; shops shut, 160, 270, 271; averse to Cromwell party, 304; lends money, 423; Preacher recommended to, xviii. 394; Cromwell entertained by, 434; will resist Cromwell's enemies, xix. 274.
- Longchamp, Intendant, and Madame Denis, ix. 115; cited, 77 n.
- Longchamp et Wagnière, cited, x. 390 n.; xi. 205 n.
- Longwi surrendered, iv. 164-167; fugitives at Paris, 167.
- Loo, Palace of, vii. 90.
- Lope de Vega, xv. 411.
- Lüper, M., ix. 138.
- Lords of the Articles, Jacobins, as, iv. 376.
- Lorraine, Fédérés and the Queen, iii. 336; state of (in 1790), 358.
- Lorraine, Leopold Joseph, Duke of, vi. 105; Charles, 105 n.; Franz Stephan, 106, 307, 382, 467; vii. 16; visits Potsdam, vi. 387, 391; at Kolitz, vii. 84; end of Turk War, 126; Karl of, vi. 106; Lorraine taken by the French, 468; vii. 16.
- Lossow, General von, xi. 371, 415.
- Lothar, Kaiser, v. 73, 76.
- Lottum, Colonel, xi. 143.
- Lottum, Count, v. 365.
- Loudon, Chancellor, in danger, xvii. 102; Cromwell's letter to, 369; character of, 363.

- Loudon, with Fieldmarshal Browne, ix. 372; near Leitmeritz, annoys the Prussian retreat, 469; attack by Seidlitz in Saxony, 508; "Commission of Major-General" taken by Seidlitz in Gotha, 517, 518; with Daun near Olmütz, x. 100, 102-106; attacks and ruins Mosel's convoy, 104-108; at Holitz, 109; captures Peitz, 144; with Daun in Saxony, 147; Hochkirch, 151, 153, 169; in the Lausitz, 214; to join with Soltikof, 217-230; arrives at Frankfurt, but without provisions, 247; battle of Kunersdorf, 249, 255, 258, 262; ends the battle, 265, 273; continues with Soltikof, 282, 319, 332; may go where he pleases, dismal march into Moravia, 333; to have a separate command and army of his own, 406; in Silesia, 406, 409; prepares to attack Goltz, 411; beaten off in every attempt, 412; threatens Silesia, 418, 420, 446; blockades Glatz, 421; ruins Fouquet at Landshut, 425, 426; captures Glatz, 444-446; on march for Breslau, 456; difficulties with Soltikof, 457; besieges Breslau, and threatens furiously, 458; moves off at the approach of Prince Henri, 459; joins with Daun and Lacy to intercept Friedrich, 465; at battle of Liegnitz, 469; tries to surprise Friedrich, and is himself surprised at the reception he gets, 473; behaves magnificently in his sudden peril, 474; sorely but not dishonorably beaten, 475; to try for a stroke on Kosel, 504; but without success, 529; retires to Bohemia, to prepare for a new campaign, xi. 39; to be joined by the Russians and reconquer Silesia, 40; skillfully effects junction, 43; gets beforehand with Friedrich at Kunersdorf, 44; astonished at his Camp of Bunzelwitz, 45, 46; earnestly urges Butturlin to join him in attacking, 48; Butturlin positively refuses, and returns homewards, 49, 50; he suddenly pounces upon Schweidnitz, and captures it in one night, 68-72; gets small thanks from Vienna, 73; no longer to command in chief, 133; he visits Friedrich, with the Kaiser, 269, 270; complimented by Friedrich, 285, 286; in the Bavarian War, 413.
- Loudon, Lord, commander of the forces in America, ix. 440, 441; recalled, x. 91; Cousin to the Austrian Loudon, 91 n.
- Louis Ferdinand, v. 440; ix. 139.
- Louis, Fort, vi. 480.
- Louis XIV., l'état c'est moi, iii. 11; booted in Parlement, 89; pursues Louvois with tongs, iv. 223; feats of, v. 281, 288, 289, 291, 300, 349, 360, 442; death of, 302; bankrupt condition of, 349; mentioned also, vii. 260, 439; viii. 247; ix. 80.
- Louis XV., ungodly age of, i. 123; xiii. 453; xv. 85, 120, 241; his amende honorable to God, 245; origin of his surname, iii. 1; last illness of, 1, 16, 18, 19, 23; dismisses Dame Dubarry, 5; Choiseul, 5; was wounded, has small-pox, 8, 17; his mode of conquest, 8; impoverishes France, 16; his daughters, 18; on death, 20; on ministerial capacity, 23; v. 128, 458, 459; vi. 459; changes his shirt, vii. 350, 352; is a poor demigod, 454; lame story for himself to the German Diet, viii. 261; declares war against England and Austria, 312; is in the Netherlands, 332; falls ill at Metz, 338; dismisses Châteauneux, 338; recovers, 341; besieges Freyburg, 360; not much taken with Voltaire, 361; ix. 43, 47; hastens to Tournay, viii. 432; at Fontenoy, 441, 442; help to Friedrich impossible, 476; evident pique, 477; ix. 5, 382; x. 365; tired of war, ix. 69; determines to aid Austria, 334, 371; death of (10 May, 1744), iii. 25; burial of, 26.
- Louis XVI., at his accession, iii. 26; good measures of, 30; temper and pursuits of, 32; his Queen (see Antoinette); difficulties of, 41, 94; commences governing, 63; and Notables, 77; holds Royal Session, 89-91; receives States-General Deputies, 129; in States-General procession, 131, 144; speech to States-General, 146; National Assembly, 160; unwise policy of, 162; dismisses Necker, 170; apprised of the Revolution, 194; conciliatory, visits Assembly, 194; Bastille, visits Paris, 197; deserted, will fly, 216, 236; languid, 237; at Dinner of Guards, 238; deposition of, proposed, 249; October Fifth, women deputies, 256; to fly or not? 259, 261; grants the acceptance, 262; Paris propositions to, 265; in the Château tumult (Oct. 6), 271; appears to mob, 273; will go to Paris, 274; his wisest course, 275; procession to Paris, 277-279; review of his position, 280; lodged at Tuileries, 281; Restorer of French Liberty, 282; no hunting, locksmith, 283, 283; schemes, 312; visits Assembly, 313; Federation, 324, 336, 339; Hereditary Representative, 393; iv. 8; will fly, id. 395; and D'Inisdal's plot, 396; his Aunts fly, 399; Mirabeau, 409; useless, 410; indecision of, iv. 3; ill of catarrh,

- 5; prepares for St. Cloud, 6; hindered by populace, 6; effect, should he escape, 6; prepares for flight, his circular, 11; flies, 15; letter to Assembly, 18; manner of flight, 21; loiters by the way, 22-24; detected by Drouet, 27; near Varennes, 31; captured at Varennes, 33; indecision there, 33-36; return to Paris, 37; reception there, 38; to be deposed? 41-43; reinstated, 47; reception of Legislative, 60; position of, 74; proposes war, with tears, 100; vetoes, dissolves Roland Ministry, 106; in riot of Twentieth June, 111; and Pétion, 115, 136; at Federation, with cuirass, 133; declared forfeited, 133, 152; last levee of, 133; Tenth August, 143, 151; quits Tuileries for Assembly, 145; in Assembly, 151; sent to Temple prison, 153; in Temple, 231; to be tried, 236, 242; and the locksmith Gamain, 241; at the bar, 243; his will, 245; condemned, 251-256; parting scene, 258; execution of, 259-261; his son, 404; xi. 226.
- Louis-Philippe (King of the French) Jacobin door-keeper, iii. 310; at Valmy, iv. 210; bravery at Jemappes, 235; and sister, 293; with Dumouriez to Austrians, 295; to Switzerland, 296; teaches Mathematics, 354.
- Louis-Philippism, the scorn of the world, ii. 264.
- Louisa Amelia of Brunswick betrothed, vii. 252.
- Louisa, Old Dessauer's eldest daughter, viii. 423.
- Louisa of Nassau-Orange, Wife of the Great Kurfürst, v. 289, 292.
- Louisa of Prussia, vii. 76.
- Louisa Ulrique, v. 363, 439.
- Louisburg, in Cape Breton, captured by Amherst, x. 113.
- Loustakot, Editor, iii. 297, 305.
- Louvet, his "Chevalier de Faublas" iii. 59; his "Sensinelles," 305; and Robespierre, iv. 96; in National Convention, 201; Girondin accuses Robespierre, 238, 279; arrested, 310; retreats (one of Eleven) to Bordeaux, 324, 335; escape of, 346; recalled, 430.
- Love, what we emphatically name, i. 103; pyrotechnic phenomena of, 104; not altogether a delirium, 110; how possible, in its highest form, 143, 162, 223; the beginning of all things, xiv. 396; xv. 27; method of, to command Scoundrels, ii. 311.
- Love, Dr., Cromwell's letter to, xvii. 414.
- Love, Rev. Christopher, notice of, xvii. 180, 414; his treason, xviii. 229; condemned, 232; executed, 245.
- Löwen, King Friedrich at, vii. 426.
- Löwendahl, Lieutenant, ix. 62.
- Lowestoff, affair at, xvii. 131.
- Lowry, John, notice of, xvii. 439, 440; xix. 306.
- Loyalty to Beelzebub, xii. 374.
- Loyola, Ignatius, xii. 360; a man not good by nature, 367; on the walls of Pampeluna, agonies of new-birth, 367; highest pitch of the prurient-heroic, war against Almighty God, 370. See Jesuitism.
- Lubomiraki, Princess, Friedrich lodges with, ix. 16, 17.
- Lucas, Sir Charles, shot, xvii. 246.
- Lucchini at Breslau, x. 47; Leuthen, 56, 59; death, 62.
- Lucchesini, Marchese, xi. 454, 467, 500.
- Lückner, Supreme General, iii. 246; iv. 104; and Dumouriez, 119; guillotined, 357.
- Lüderitz, General, ix. 350; xi. 524.
- Ludicrous, feeling and instances of the, i. 37, 137.
- Ludlow, General, Memoirs of Cromwell, xvii. 18; Cromwell's remark to, 262; notes Cromwell's ill-success, 203; at trial of Charles I., 400; of Council of State, 403; Deputy of Ireland, xviii. 56; Cromwell's conversation with, 99; and Cromwell, scene with, 274; Republican, lives in Essex, xix. 38, 296.
- Ludwig Eugen, Prince, of Würtemberg, viii. 124, 137.
- Ludwig IV., Bavarian Kaiser, v. 122, 157.
- Ludwig, Bavarian Kurfürst of Brandenburg, v. 130; marries Margaret Mauitache, 133; will not be turned out, 139; retires to Bavaria and the Tyrol, 140.
- Ludwig, King of Bavaria, xi. 402.
- Ludwig, Kanzler von, vi. 356.
- Ludwig, Kurfürst, the Roman, v. 140.
- Ludwig Ohne Haut, the last King of Hungary, v. 191, 231.
- Ludwig Rudolf, Duke of Brunswick Wolfenbüttel, vi. 370.
- Ludwig, Prince of Brunswick, viii. 472; wounded at Sohr, 496; mentioned also, x. 281.
- Ludwigsburg, vi. 248.
- Lulcius, of the One Razor, vii. 87.
- Luisse, Princess of Orange, v. 46.
- Lumaden, Colonel, killed at Dunbar, xviii. 129.
- Lunéville, Inspector Malsigne at, iii. 364.
- Lunsford, Colonel, described, xvii. 118.
- Lusinsky, General, with Stolberg, at Torgau, x. 290.

- Luther's birth and parentage, i. 353; hardships and rigorous necessity, death of Alexis, 354; becomes monk, 355; his religious despair, finds a Bible, deliverance from darkness, 355; Rome, 356; Tetzel, 357; burns the Pope's Bull, 358; at the Diet of Worms, 359; King of the Reformation, 363; "Duke Georges nine days running," 365; his little daughter's death-bed, 366; his solitary Patmos, 366; his Portrait, 366; his prose a half-battle, xiv. 124; love of music and poetry, 138; before the Diet of Worms, 140; his Psalm, 140; his Life the latest prophecy of the Eternal, vi. 281; xvi. 368; visited by Markgraf George, v. 195; by Hochmeister Albert, 205; opinion of the Teutsch Ritters, 206; visited by Elizabeth of Brandenburg, 223; his Bible, 316; Hymn, 322; at Coburg during the Diet of Augsburg, vi. 223; and Friedrich the Great in essential agreement, x. 365; mentioned also, xi. 11.
- Lutternberg, Fight of, x. 177 n.
- Lützen, vi. 232.
- Lützow, cited, viii. 451 n.
- Lux, Adam, on death of Charlotte Corday, iv. 819; guillotined, 352.
- Luxembourg, forges at, iv. 337; Palace, a prison, 358.
- Luxemburg Kaisers, v. 119, 123.
- Lydcot, Colonel, at Inverkeithing fight, xviii. 224.
- Lymfjord, xix. 409, 456.
- Lynar, Count, vii. 385; Convention of Kloster-Zeven, ix. 508, 510; mentioned also, xi. 274.
- Lynch law, xi. 313.
- Lyons, Federation at, iii. 322; disorders in, iv. 275; Chalier, Jacobin, executed at, 319; bombarded, powder tower of, 333; captured, 360; massacres at, 361, 362.
- Lyttelton, George (first lord), in Lorraine, vi. 104; at Solissons during the Congress, 106; in the Ministry, 109; in Opposition, 494; viii. 328.
- Lyttelton, Lord, his running off with Great Seal, xviii. 217.
- MAASEYK, General Borck occupies, vii. 240.
- Machiavel, vii. 108; his opinion of Democracy, xvi. 398.
- Mace, of the Commons, the, a bauble, xviii. 294.
- Machinery, age of, xiv. 465; xv. 133; supernatural, 390; exporting, xii. 177. See Mechanical.
- Mackenzie, James, viii. 322.
- Mackenzie, Sir George, viii. 322.
- Mackworth, Colonel, in Council of State, xviii. 385 n.; account of, xix. 54 n.
- Macmahon, Father, ix. 184.
- Macnamara, Mr., xi. 380.
- Macpherson, xiii. 379.
- M'Crie's Life of Knox, portrait in, xii. 422.
- Madeira, its beautiful climate and scenery, li. 140, 144.
- Madras, Lally's siege of, x. 243.
- Magdeburg, v. 113, 199, 273, 277, 288, 330, 402; camp of, viii. 427. See Christian Wilhelm of.
- Magi, Oriental, books of the, xv. 155.
- Magna Charta, i. 204; xvi. 91.
- Magnetic vellum, the, iii. 317; Mountains, the, pulling, v. 431.
- Magnus Barfod, xix. 481, 482.
- Magnus the Blind, xix. 484, 485.
- Magnus the Good, xix. 469; baptism, 472; succeeds Harda-Knut, 473; shares his kingdom with Harald Hardrade, 476; laws, death, 477.
- Maguire, at Reichenberg, ix. 393, 465; x. 361; besieges Pirna, 143; chased by Prince Henri, 202; re-enters Saxony, 293; Siege of Dresden, 297; successful negotiations, 298, 299; broken pledges, 306; besieged in Dresden by Friedrich, 437-443; at Freyberg, xi. 162.
- Mahlzahn, Prussian Minister, ix. 365, 276, 277, 324.
- Mahomet, xii. 276; xvi. 247; his birth, boyhood, and youth, i. 282; marries Kadijah, 284; quiet, unambitious life, 284; divine commission, 286; the good Kadijah believes him, Seid, 288; young Ali, 289; offences, and sore struggles, 289; flight from Mecca, 290; being driven to take the sword, he uses it, 291; the Koran, 294; a veritable Hero, 301; Seid's death, 301; freedom from Cant, 302; the infinite nature of duty, 305; his Koran, ix. 222.
- Maid of Orleans*, Schiller's, xx. 151; scenes, showing Joanna, Talbot, Lionel and others, 157.
- Maids, old and young, Richter's appeal to, xiv. 128.
- Maidston, John, on Cromwell, xvii. 18, 386.
- Maidstone fight, xvii. 317.
- Mailäth, cited, vii. 266 n.; viii. 70 n.
- Mailhe, Deputy, on trial of Louk, iv. 236.
- Maillard, Usher, at siege of Bastille, iii. 187, 189; Insurrection of Women, drum, Champs Elysees, 244, 251; entering Versailles, 251; addresses National Assembly there, 253; signs

- Déchéance petition, iv. 44; in September Massacres, 181.
- Maille, Camp-Marshal, at Tuileries, iv. 185, 187; massacred at La Force, 189.
- Maillebois, Marshal, vi. 470; marches to relief of Prag, viii. 206; small reverence for the Kaiser, 207; in the Middle Rhine Countries, 394, 398, 416; sent to Italy, 417; ix. 42; at Sceaux, 51, 53; mentioned also, viii. 55, 58, 71, 91, 189, 204, 210, 500.
- Mailly, Marshal, one of Four Generals (1790), iii. 346.
- Mailly Sisters, the, vii. 359.
- Maine, Zachary, notice of, xix. 380.
- Maine, Due du, ix. 50.
- Maine, Duchesse du, ix. 50.
- Mainwaring censured, xvii. 63.
- Mainz, Archbishops of, v. 98, 108, 121. See Albert, Archbishop of.
- Mainz, Kur-, Chairman of the Reichs Diet, x. 383; admonished by General Oldenburg, 429.
- Major-Generals, the, xviii. 488; xix. 81-83, 92; list of, 19 n.; abolished, 105, 121.
- Majorities, blockhead, xii. 322, 327.
- Malesherbes, M. de, in King's Council, iii. 86; remark by, 92; defends Louis, iv. 245, 254; Louis returns money to, 259; guillotined, 403.
- Maleverer, Colonel, Cromwell's letter in behalf of his family, xix. 352.
- Malevrier, Lord, Royalist, xviii. 485.
- Malmesbury, Earl of, x. 89.
- Malosa, M., at Strasburg, vii. 208.
- Malplaquet, battle of, v. 26; bloodiest of obstinate fights, 300.
- Malseigne, Army Inspector, at Nanci, iii. 362-365; imprisoned, 365; liberated, 369.
- Malthus's over-population panic, i. 172.
- Malthusian controversies, xvi. 113.
- Malton, Lord, ix. 101, 103.
- Malzahn, Fräulein von, afterwards Madame Münnich, vii. 364.
- Mammon, not a god at all, xii. 277; Gospel of Mammonism, 141, 184; Working Mammonism better than Idle Dilettantism, 143, 146, 200; getting itself strangled, 177; fall of Mammon, 260, 262; Mammon like Fire, 277. See Economics.
- Man by nature naked, i. 4, 44, 47; essentially a tool-using animal, 22; the true Shekinah, 50; a divine emblem, 56, 165, 167, 181, 201; two men alone honorable, 173; his rights and might, iii. 211, 219; iv. 79; the clearest symbol of the Divinity, xv. 21; the life of every man a poem and revelation of Infinity, 159, 228; the Missionary of - Order, xii. 91, 229; sacredness of the human Body, 122; a born Soldier, 186; a God-created Soul, 222. See Good, Great, Microcosm, Original, Thinking Man.
- Manasseh Ben Israel, learned Jew, xix. 37.
- Manchester, its squalor and despair not forever inseparable from it, xvi. 95; once organic, a blessing instead of an affliction, 113; Insurrection at, xii. 16; its poor operatives, 19, 49; in the twelfth century, 66; built on the infinite Abysses, 221.
- Manchester, Earl, Sergeant Major of Associated Counties, xvii. 159; and General Crawford, 176, 179; to reform Cambridge University, 176; quarrels with Cromwell, 189, 191; one of Cromwell's Lords, xix. 236.
- Mandat, Commander of Guards (August, 1792), iv. 135; death of, 140.
- Mandevil, Lord, dispute with Cromwell, xvii. 109. See Manchester, Earl.
- Manège, Salle de, Constituent Assembly occupies, iii. 284.
- Manhood, xiii. 291; suffrage, xvi. 424.
- Mann, Sir Horace, xi. 5.
- Mannheim, Karl Philip removes his Court to, v. 403.
- Manning, Mr., spy, xviii. 487; xix. 76.
- Manning, Mrs., "dying game," ii. 390.
- Mannstein, General, arrests Bieren, vii. 363; in Prussian service, ix. 77; at Potsdam, 180; at Battle of Prag, 411, 420; rash mistake at Kolin, 456, 457; death, 469; cited, v. 369 n.; vii. 363.
- Mansion-House, the, vii. 407.
- Manteufel, vi. 490.
- Manteufel, General, in Pommern, x. 81; battle of Zorndorf, 131; Züllichau, 222.
- Manton, Mr., preaches at Installation, xix. 222.
- Manuel, Jacobin, slow-sure, iv. 93; in August Tenth, 141; in Governing Committee, 162; haranguing at La Force, 188; in National Convention, 201; dubs D'Orléans, 203; motions in National Convention, 211; vote at King's trial, 253; in prison, 240; guillotined, 357.
- Marat, Jean Paul, horseleech to D'Artois, iii. 49; notice of, 133; against violence, 169; at siege of Bastille, 188; summoned by Constituent, not to be gagged, 227; astir, 241; how to regenerate France, 294, 381; police and, 303; on abolition of titles, 329; would gibbet Mirabeau, 332; bust in Jacobins, iv. 95; concealed in cellars, 129; pulls toe in rope, 137; in seat of honor, 162, 178; signs circular, 197;

- elected to Convention, 202; and Dumouriez, 217; oaths by, in Convention, 223; first appearance in Convention, pistol, 226; against Roland, 250; on sufferings of People, 267; and Girondins, 276; arrested, 298; returns in triumph, 300; fall of Girondins, 309; sick, his residence, 315; and Charlotte Corday, 315; honors to, 316, 439; Company of, 315.
 Marburg and its Teutsch Ritters, v. 100; Wolf finds shelter at, vi. 44.
 Mardike taken, xix. 231.
 Maréchal, Atheist, Calendar by, iv. 330.
 Maréchale, the lady, on nobility, iii. 14.
 Margaret Mauitache, v. 133.
 Marheineke, cited, v. 196 n.
 Maria Anna, Archduchess, Prince Karl's Wife, viii. 337, 341; her death, 389.
 Maria Eleonora, Wife of Albert Friedrich of Prussen, v. 241, 244, 246.
Maria Stuart, Schiller's tragedy of, xx. 150.
 Maria Theresa, v. 13, 447, 461; vi. 106, 307; rumor of marriage with Friedrich, 212, 368; to marry Duke of Lorraine, 352; at her Father's death, vii. 263; proclaimed Archduchess and Queen, 265; refuses Friedrich's Proposals, 316; she gets money from England, 384; viii. 5; her indignant protest against Friedrich, vii. 442; against Kur-Sachsen, 453; Coronation, viii. 28; a brave young Queen, 34; driven to despair, 69; at Presburg, 66; "Mori-mur," mythical and actual, 67; one stroke more for Silesia, 143; sorrowful surrender, 167; a true Sovereign Ruler, 227; Queen of Bohemia, 236; triumphant demands, 261, 266, 268; clutches Bavaria with uncommon tightness, 268; extraordinary Response to King Louis's Declaration, 269; high conduct towards the Reich, 272; Treaty of Worms, 296, 339; her indignation against Friedrich, and undaunted resolution, 346; again appeals to Hungary, 346; will have the Bohemian campaign finished, 375; very high exultation and hope, 384, 385; Silesian Manifesto, 385; a face-to-face glimpse, interview with Robinson, 479; at her Husband's Coronation, 483; will as soon part with her petticoat as with Silesia, her opinion of Friedrich, 484; urges Prince Karl to fight Friedrich, 484; a third and fiercer trial this Winter, 503; consents to peace, ix. 23; goes into the Italian War, 42; protests against the Treaty of Aix-la-Chapelle, 67, 68; high opinion of Kaunitz, 244, 286; flattering little Notes to the Pompadour, 245, 286; still hopes to re-conquer Silesia, 374; secret Treaty with Russia and Saxony, 279, 281; tries to deny it, 286; refuses to aid in defence of Hanover, 289; joins with France, 297, 298; gives audience to Klinggräf, 313; bent on relieving Saxony, 334, 352; flings open her Imperial studs, 336; courage in misfortune, 424; new order of Knighthood in honor of Kolin, 463; despatches Kaunitz to urge on Prince Karl, 499; bears of Leuthen, x. 70; thought to be disposed for peace, 76; substantial reasons for war, 182; anti-Protestantism, 365; urges Russia to attack Silesia, 407; welcomes Daun back to Vienna, 530; signs peace proposals, xi. 29; piqued at Loudon's secrecy about Schweidnitz, 73; consents to a separate peace between France and England, 88; horror at Czar Peter's peace with Friedrich, 111; prayers and tears, 115; grief at her husband's death, takes her son Joseph as Confidant, 223; enmity to the Czarina, 297, 304; indignant letter to Kaunitz on the Partition of Poland, 308; writes to Friedrich, 415; her beautiful death, 450; mentioned also, viii. 340; xi. 284, 295, 288, 422.
 Marie-Antoinette, Electress of Saxony, a bright lady, among the busiest in the world, xi. 230; left with the guardianship of her son, 231; correspondence with King Friedrich about the crown of Poland, 232-237; visits him at Berlin, 274; their pleasant correspondence, 274-276; interest in the Bavarian-Succession question, 402; mentioned also, 365, 390, 391.
 Marie-Antoinette, xv. 238, 249, 262, 284; writes to her Sister, xi. 498. See Antoinette.
 Marienburg, v. 95, 129.
 Marischal College, Aberdeen, x. 402.
 Marischal, Lord, ix. 63, 173; sorrow for his brother's death, x. 166; an excellent cheery old soul, honest as the sunlight, 167; sympathizing letter from Friedrich, 179; visited by Maupertuis, 368; goes to Spain on diplomatic mission, 400-403; calls at London on his way to look after the Earldom of Kintore, 402; important Spanish notices to Pitt, 403; a good deal in England, xi. 62; Cottage-villa near Sans-Souci, later epochs of his life, 217-220; entertains Conway and Keith, xi. 263-269; letter to Keith, 268; mentioned also, 380, 406 n.
 Markgrafs, origin of, v. 60.
 Marlborough, and the History of England, xvi. 444; his dexterous manage-

- ment, v. 302; how the English treated him, 303, 442; his last days, vi. 244; mentioned also, v. 25, 51, 254, 300, 321; viii. 190, 206; x. 44.
- Marlborough, Duchess of, vii. 384; viii. 190; ix. 438.
- Marlborough, Duke of, at Koesfeld, x. 176 n.
- Marquart, Captain, noticed by Friedrich, x. 330.
- Marriage, strange state of law of, in Germany, xiii. 125; covenant, xv. 141; by the month, xvi. 311; contracts, xii. 266, 268.
- Mars, Champ de. See Champ.
- Marschowitz, Prince Karl's Camp at, viii. 371.
- Marseilles, Brigands at, iii. 164; on Déchéance, the bar of iron, iv. 42 (see Barbaroux, Rebecqui); for Girondism, 300, 312, 320; guillotine at, 359.
- Marseillaise, March and Hymn of, iv. 120, 123, 164, 235; at Charenton, 130; at Paris, 130; Filles-St.-Thomas and, 131; barracks, 133; August Tenth, 139, 145-148.
- Marston Moor. See Battle.
- Marten, Henry, M.P., of Council of State, xvii. 404; character of, xviii. 264; a low liver, 293; his thoughts in Cheptow Castle, xii. 322.
- Martial Law the unseen basis of all laws whatever, xvi. 431.
- Martin, General San, and his march over the Andes, xvi. 207.
- Martin, Commodore, viii. 202; x. 402.
- Martyn, Sir Thomas, of Cambridge Committee, xvii. 129.
- Marwitz, Adjutant, at Hochkirch, x. 148.
- Marwitz's, General, recollections of King Friedrich, xi. 472-479.
- Marwitz, vii. 196; viii. 118, 147; his death, 390.
- Marwitz, Demoiselle, vi. 509; vii. 196; viii. 118, 390.
- Mary, Bloody, xii. 437, 440.
- Mary of Guise, xii. 439, 442, 443, 445.
- Mary, Queen of Scots, xii. 435; Knox's interviews with, 445-447.
- Mary, Queen, and Knox, i. 373.
- Mary, Princess, viii. 240.
- Maryland and Virginia, differences between, xviii. 451; Cromwell's letter to Commissioners of, xix. 18.
- Masham Family, notice of, xvii. 97.
- Masham, Sir William, in Cromwell's First Parliament, xviii. 398.
- Mass, Cromwell on the, xvii. 17.
- Massacre, Avignon, iv. 67; September, 180-194; numbers slain in, 194; corpse's hand, 195; compared to Bartholomew, 196; Convention on, 224. See Orléans, Nantes, Lyons.
- Massey, Gen., how to be employed, xvii. 241; forces disbanded, 244; character of, 244; enlists soldiers, 272; purged by Pride, 398; with Scots, xviii. 232; wounded at Worcester, 248.
- Masson, Minister von, xi. 202.
- Master, eye of the, xii. 91.
- Mastership and servanthip the only delivery from Tyranny and Slavery, xvi. 306, 310, 321.
- Mathews, Colonel, delinquent, xvii. 384, 386.
- Matilda, Queen of Denmark, rescued by Keith, xi. 365.
- Matinées du Roi de Prusse*, an impudent pamphlet of forgeries, v. 165; the author identified, x. 377-379.
- Maton, Advocate, his "Resurrection" (September), iv. 186.
- Matthews, Admiral, viii. 201.
- Mauconseil, section, on forfeiture of King, iv. 133; on Girondins, 286.
- Maud, Empress, v. 74.
- Mauduit, Dissenter, and his pamphlet on the German War, xi. 4-8.
- Maultasche, Margaret, v. 133.
- Maupeou, under Louis XV., iii. 4, 5; and Dame Dubarry, 5.
- Maupertuis, M. de, vii. 91, 224, 322; his Portrait, invitation from Friedrich, 157; arrives at Weasel, 211; quarrel with Madame du Châtelet, 212; taken prisoner at Mollwitz, 428; Letter from Voltaire, viii. 291; Perpetual President of the Berlin Academy, 304; quarrels with König for questioning his metaphysics, ix. 117-122; cannot help Voltaire "in a bad business," 125, 138; jealous of his favor with the King, 168; Voltaire's opinion of him, 181; flattered by La Beaumelle, 185; indignant correspondence with König, 205, 206; appeals to the Berlin Academy, 208-211; mercilessly quizzed by Voltaire, Dr. Akakia, 212-217; threatens him, and gets his reply, 223; his final pilgrimages, sicknesses and death, x. 366-368; his character defended by Friedrich, 398-400.
- Maurepas, Prime Minister, character of, iii. 82; government of, 40; against Voltaire, viii. 277; death of, iii. 62.
- Maurice, Prince, quits England, xvii. 235; drowned, 489.
- Maurice, Rev. F. D., a Cambridge companion of Sterling's, ii. 36; joins him in the Athenæum adventure, 43, 46; divergence of opinion, but kindly trustful union of hearts, 123, 244, 251; marries Sterling's sister-in-law, 136, 137.

- Maurice's, Mrs., affectionate solicitude for Sterling and his orphan family, ii. 244, 251.
- Maurice, Count, vi. 82.
- Maury, Abbé, character of, iii. 143; in Constituent Assembly, 213; seized emigrating, 276; dogmatic, 284, 293; efforts fruitless, 389; made Cardinal, iv. 53; and D'Artois at Coblenz, 81.
- Mauvillon, Major (Fils), on the character of English soldiers, xi. 58, 60; his Prussian statistics, 189; vii. 97 n.; viii. 472 n.; ix. 491 n., 510; x. 452 n.
- Mauvillon (Père), cited, v. 358 n.
- Max, Kaiser, v. 180, 188, 200.
- Max Joseph, Kurfürst of Baiern, death of, xi. 391.
- Max Joseph, first King of Bavaria, xi. 391.
- Maximilian I., viii. 113, 114.
- Maximilian, Kurfürst of Baiern, viii. 113, 114.
- Maximilian, Duke of Bavaria, v. 253, 256, 261, 267, 268, 272, 279.
- Maxwell, James, and his insolent sardonic ways, xvi. 332.
- Maxwell's Brigade at Warburg, x. 454.
- Mayer, Colonel, ix. 373; in Bohemia, 390; his exploits on the Reich, 425-429; order of knighthood from Wilhelmnia, 428; with Friedrich in Saxony, 506; x. 3; Rossbach, 12, 13, 18; with Prince Henri guarding Saxony, 96, 143, 144; Dresden, 172; dies of fever, a man of considerable genius in the sleepless kind, 204.
- Mayer, cited, xi. 387 n.
- Mayflower, sailing of the, xvi. 93; i. 368.
- Maynard, Mr., one of Cromwell's Lords, xix. 236.
- Mayor, Richard, Esq., character of, xvii. 291; letters from Cromwell to, 408, 411, 412, 416, 420, 422, 423, 424, 440, 443, 487; xviii. 51, 103, 148, 237, 288; in Little Parliament, 299; of Customs Committee, 333; in Council of State, 334 n., 383 n.
- Mazarin, Giulio, Cardinal, policy of, xix. 108; Cromwell's letters to, 109, 366, 368, 369; his opinion of Cromwell, 230.
- Mazis, Du, Engineer, viii. 432.
- Meagher, Chevalier, ix. 321, 322.
- Meat-Jack, a disconsolate, xii. 152.
- Mecca, i. 280.
- Mechanical Philosophy, xiii. 210; its inevitable Atheism, xv. 185. See Machinery.
- Mechanism disturbing labor, xvi. 58.
- Meckel's, Dr., great skill and kindness to Zimmermann, xi. 396, 397.
- Mecklenburg, v. 79, 271, 355; compelled to contribute to Friedrich's war ex-
- penses, x. 183; unparalleled Duke and Duchess of, v. 368; vi. 208, 244; ix. 87; the Duke's misgovernment and suspension, vi. 117, 137; their Daughter, vii. 97, 129.
- Mecklenburg-Schwerin, xi. 35 n.
- Mecklenburg-Strelitz, xi. 35 n.
- Méda, Robespierre's death and, iv. 424 n.
- Medea-caldron, the, xvi. 246.
- Medicine, profession of, ii. 432.
- Meditation, xiv. 347. See Silence.
- Meer, fight of, x. 176 n.
- Meg, Muckle, in Edinburgh Castle, xviii. 195 n.
- Meinecke, General, x. 23.
- Meiningen, Dowager Duchess of, vi. 358.
- Meissen, Friedrich and Duke of Weissenfels at, viii. 248.
- Melancthon, xi. 11.
- Members, the Five, xvii. 119; the Eleven, 256; accused by Army, 269; list of, 269 n.; last appearance of, 271.
- Memmay, M., of Quincey, explosion of rustics, iii. 222.
- Memoirs, value of, if honest, xv. 82; xvi. 4, 6, 176.
- Memory no wise without wise Oblivion, xv. 79; xvi. 291.
- Menads, the, iii. 242-245, 278.
- Menckenius, cited, v. 98 n.
- Mendacity, the feeblest sort of, v. 327, 376; vii. 77; viii. 21, 73. See Lie.
- Mendelssohn, author of Phædon, xiii. 47.
- Menin, viii. 333.
- Menou, General, arrested, iv. 456.
- Menou, Father, ix. 57.
- Mentz, occupied by French, iv. 217; siege of, 313, 437; surrender of, Goethe describes, 326.
- Mentzel, bloody, viii. 72, 104, 122, 132, 273, 274; death of, 335.
- Mentzel's History, cited, v. 90 n.
- Menus, Hall of the, iii. 129.
- Menzel and the Saxon state-papers, ix. 264-267, 275-278, 313, 324.
- Mephistopheles, v. 441.
- Meran, v. 102.
- Merchant Princes of Germany, xiv. 228.
- Mercier on Paris revolting, iii. 165; Editor, 228; the September Massacre, iv. 195; in National Convention, 201; King's trial, 253, 254; dancing (in 1795), 433; workmen dining, 452.
- Mercifulness, true, xiv. 463.
- Mercy, Graf von, vi. 471.
- Merit, Lord Palmerston's notion of, xvi. 455; men of, vii. 168.
- Merlin of Thionville, in Mountain, iv. 59; irascible, 90; at Mentz, 326.
- Merlin of Douai, Law of Suspect, iv. 337.

- Méropé*, triumphant success of the play, viii. 230.
- Méry. See St. Méry.
- Merriv, Mr. Henry, xii. 454, 455.
- Meamer, Dr., glance at, iii. 51.
- Meames, President de, ix. 50.
- Messina, Bride of*, Schiller's, xx. 169.
- Metaphors the stuff of Language, i. 55.
- Metaphysics inexpressibly unproductive, i. 41, 47; the disease of, perennial, xiv. 367; the forerunner of good, 381.
- Methodism, xii. 60, 66, 115.
- Metra, the Newsman, iii. 307.
- Metre, deluge of, xvi. 120.
- Metropolis, importance of a, iv. 321.
- Mettrie, La, Army Surgeon, viii. 444; finds refuge with Friedrich, ix. 170, 171, 175; quizzes Voltaire, 180; his death, 183, 184.
- Metz, Bouillé at, iii. 345; troops mutinous at, 354; siege of, v. 211; viii. 247; Louis XV. falls ill at, 338.
- Meudon tannery, iv. 389.
- Meuselwitz, vi. 232.
- Meyen, Kammer-Director, xi. 190.
- Michael Angelo, house of, li. 159.
- Michaelis, cited, v. 70 n.; ix. 78 n., 515 n.; xi. 107 n., 517, 518, 531.
- Michel, Herr, Secretary of Legation, ix. 245, 247.
- Microcosm, Man a, or epitomized mirror of the Universe, xiv. 414; xv. 87. See Man.
- Midas, xiii. 3, 8.
- Middle Ages, represented by Dante and Shakspeare, i. 324, 325, 329.
- Middleton, Gen., at Preston fight, xvii. 324; for Charles II., xviii. 174; Rebellion in Highlands, 258, 390.
- Might and Right, xvi. 40, 63, 88; meaning of, xii. 185; their intrinsic identity, ii. 185. See Rights.
- Mignon, Goethe's exquisite delineation of, xiii. 242.
- Milan, vi. 469.
- Mildmay, Sir Henry, quarrels with Lord Wharton, xvii. 349.
- Militair Lexikon*, v. 359 n.; xi. 460 n.
- Military Instructions*, &c., Friedrich's, viii. 143 n.; x. 408.
- Military tactics, modern, v. 320; military studies, vi. 325.
- Militia, Ordinance of, xvii. 121; new, 262.
- Millennium, French idea of, iv. 268; how to be preceded, xvi. 427.
- Miller Arnold's case, xi. 424-449; the Sans-Souci Miller, 447.
- Millocracy, our giant, xii. 137.
- Mill's, John, friendship for Sterling, ii. 83, 91; introduces him to Carlyle, 102; has charge of the London and Westminster Review, 102; is with Sterling in Italy, 174; inserts his Article on Carlyle, 184; with Sterling at Falmouth, 193; his work on Logic, 284.
- Milton, John, i. 125; xiii. 308; xv. 453; his "wages," xii. 20; pamphlets by, xvii. 106; appointed Latin Secretary, 415; Sir H. Vane, friend of, xviii. 264; blind, 284, 441; letter by, xix. 279; his burial, entry of, xvii. 47; mute Milton, xv. 417.
- Milton State Papers criticised, xvii. 74; xviii. 325 n.
- Minden, v. 402; vi. 406; battle of, x. 222-241.
- Ministers of Edinburgh and Cromwell, xviii. 152-163.
- Minneadger*, Manesse's, v. 107, 118.
- Minnesingers. See Swabian Era.
- Minorities down to minority of one, xvi. 304; xii. 317.
- Minuzzi, General, takes Peseau, viii. 36; mentioned also, 191, 233.
- Miomandre de Ste. Marie, Bodyguard (October Fifth), iii. 269; left for dead, revives, 270; rewarded, 326.
- Mirabeau, Marquis, on the state of France in 1775, iii. 35; and his son, 56; his death, 180.
- Mirabeau, Count, his pamphlets, iii. 69; the Notables, 71; Lettres-de-Cachet against, 71; expelled by the Provence Noblesse, 121; cloth-shop, 122; is Deputy for Aix, 122; king of Frenchmen, 124; family of, 135; wanderings of, 136; his future course, 137; groaned at, in Assembly, 149; his newspaper suppressed, 152; silences Usher de Brézé, 160; at Bastille ruins, 202; on Robespierre, 214; fame of, 214; on French deficit, 233; populace on veto, 233; Mounier, October Fifth, 248; insight of, defends veto, 265; courage, revenue of, 286; salable? 286; and Danton, on Constitution, 297; his female bookseller, 304; at Jacobins, 308; his countship, 329; on state of Army, 353; Marat would gibbet, 323; his power in France, 387; on D'Orléans, 388; on duelling, 390; interview with Queen, 397; speech on emigrants (the "trente voix"), 404; in Council, 409; his plans for France, 409; the probable career of, 411; sickness, yet works, 412; last appearance in Assembly, 413; anxiety of populace for, 414; last sayings of, 414; death of, 415; public funeral of, 416; burial-place of, 417; character of, 418-420; last of Mirabeaus, 420; bust in Jacobins, iv. 95; bust demolished, 241; his remains turned out of the Pantheon, 439; Memoirs of, xv. 302-376; by far the best-gifted of all the notables of the French Revolution,

- 311; his Father, the tough choleric old Friend of Men, 317; the Mirabeaus from Florence, 318; a notable kindred, exempt from blockheads but liable to blackguards, 318; talent for choosing Wives, 320; gruff courtiership, 321; at the Battle of Cassano, 322; of the whole strange kindred, no stranger figure than the Friend of Men, 324; his literary and other gifts and eccentricities, 325; his domestic difficulties, and Rhadamanthine struggles, 328; birth of Gabriel Honoré, last of the Mirabeaus, 331; education, the scientific paternal hand versus Nature and others, 334; sent to boarding-school, 336; banished to Saintes, fresh misdemeanors, Lettre-de-Cachet, and the Isle of Rhé, 338; fighting in Corsica, 340; the old Marquis's critical survey of his strange offspring, 341; the General Overturn, 344; the one man who might have saved France, 344; marriage, 347; banished to Marseilles, 349; in the Castle of If, 351; a stolen visit from his Brother, 352; at Pontarlier, 354; Mirabeau and Sophie Monnier escape into Holland, 356; in the castle of Vincennes, 361; before the Besançon and Aix Parlements, 363; the world's esteem now quite against him, 366; States-General, his flinging up of the handful of dust, 369; deputy for Aix, 371; victory and death, 372; and Friedrich, v. 4, 7, 13; his Grandfather, 331; Monarchie Prussienne, and advocacy of Free-Trade, ix. 157; xi. 189, 200; sees Friedrich, 497; carries news of his death, 509; cited, v. 4 n.; viii. 179 n.; xi. 504; mentioned also, 479, 490.
- Mirabeau, M. de, uncle of the above, ix. 479, 507.
- Mirabeau the younger, nicknamed Tonneau, iii. 143; in Constituent Assembly, breaks his sword, 162, 213; death of, 490.
- Miracles, significance of, i. 193, 196; the age of, now and ever, xiv. 382.
- Miranda, General, attempts Holland, iv. 280.
- Mirepoix, Bishop of (l'Ane de), vii. 52; viii. 277.
- Miroménil, Keeper of Seals, iii. 73.
- Mirow, Carl Ludwig Friedrich, Prince of, vii. 72, 76.
- Misery not so much the cause as the effect of Immortality, xv. 174; all, the fruit of unwisdom, xii. 28; strength that has not yet found its way, 280. See Wretchedness.
- Misnia, v. 59, 61.
- Mist's Journal, cited, vi. 100 n.
- Mistevoi, King of Wends, v. 69, 71.
- Mittheilung* of Prensen, v. 230.
- Mitchell, Colonel, Cromwell's letter to, xix. 365.
- Mitchell, Sir Andrew, ix. 310, 370; in consultation with Friedrich, 318, 319; urges Friedrich's cause, 383; personal intimacy and mutual esteem, 472, 473, 547; x. 414 n.; quizzes Gottsched, ix. 540; at Breslau, x. 74; subsidy treaty, 83; burning of Dresden suburbs, 172; his account of Friedrich's marches, 423, 424, 429, 463; at siege of Dresden, 438, 439, 440; at Seichau, burns all his papers, 468; battle of Liegnitz, 472, 476; with Friedrich at Leipzig, xi. 9; his respect for Collert, 12, 13; stroke of apoplexy on hearing of the English defection, 170; his death, 222; cited, ix. 423 n.; x. 422 n.; mentioned also, xi. 366.
- Mitschepfal, Lieutenant, at Grotkau, vii. 403; his daughter's gratitude to Friedrich, xi. 526.
- Mitton, Colonel, in Wales, xvii. 274.
- Mobs, on, iii. 242.
- Mockranowski, proposes Prince Henri as King of Poland, xi. 247; sent to look after Bar, 260.
- Mocu, Rittmeister de, in Sangerhausen, ix. 488.
- Moczinaka, Princess, ix. 322.
- Model, new, of the Army, xvii. 188, 188 n., 202, 204, 210; Prisons, ii. 304-329; London Prison of the model kind, 307.
- Moderation, and other fine names, xiv. 151. See Half-and-halfness.
- Moffat, the African Missionary, ii. 226.
- Mohacz, battle of, v. 192.
- Moleville, Bertrand de, Historian, iii. 102; iv. 73; Minister, his plan, 75; frivolous policy of, 76; and D'Orléans, 76; jesuitic, 92; in despair, 123; concealed, 164.
- Möllendorf, carries news of the victory of Sohr, viii. 500; leads an attack at Leuthen, x. 61; at Hochkirch, 161, 163; at Liegnitz, 474; turns the tide of battle in Friedrich's favor at Torgau, 525; at Burkersdorf, xi. 139-144; cited, 97 n.
- Mollwitz, battle of, vii. 406, 433; a signal-shot among the Nations, 432, 443.
- Moloch, our modern, ii. 454.
- Momoro, bookseller, agrarian, iv. 181; arrested, 391; guillotined, 396; his Wife, Goddess of Reason, 372.
- Monarchy, Fifth, described, xviii. 406; plot, xix. 139.
- Money, doomed to possess, ii. 448.
- Monge, Mathematician, in office, iv. 153; assists in New Calendar, 330.

- Moniteur, Editors of the, iii. 133, 228, 304.
- Monk, Colonel George, in the Tower, xvii. 181; in Ireland, 278; in Scots War, xviii. 102, 130, 138; at Edinburgh, 193; made Lieutenant-General of Ordnance, 224; sent to Stirling, 241; storms Dundee, 258; puts down rebellion in the Highlands, 258, 390; in Dutch War, 277, 289; Army mutinous, 452.
- Monks, ancient and modern, xii. 44; the old ones not without secularity, 60, 67; insurrection of, 99.
- Monmouth Street, and its "Ou' clo'" Angels of Doom, i. 182.
- Monopoly of soap, &c., xvii. 66.
- Monro, General, in Scots Army, xvii. 321; his motions, 347; rejected at Edinburgh, 355.
- Monsabert, G. de, President of Paris Parlement, iii. 96; arrested, 99-101.
- Montagu, Dr., censured, xvii. 63.
- Montague family, xvii. 64.
- Montague, Lord, a Puritan, xvii. 52.
- Montague (Earl of Sandwich), Colonel of the Parliament foot, xvii. 902; at Bristol siege, 217, 219; receives King at Hinchinbrook, 263; in Little Parliament, xviii. 299; of Customs Committee, 331; in Council of State, 334 n., 385 n.; in Cromwell's First Parliament, 398; made Admiral, xix. 25; Cromwell's letters to, 42, 45, 59, 223, 224, 230; on Committee of Kingship, 131; assists the French, 178, 223, 225; at Installation, 222; is one of Cromwell's Lords, 236.
- Montaigne's House, ii. 132; Sterling's Essay, 152.
- Montalembert, urges Sweden and Russia against Friedrich, x. 119, 223, 225, 283, 319, 330, 332, 406; xi. 457, 467; takes credit to himself for the Lacy vulture-swoop on Berlin, 501, 502; cited, x. 81 n., 501 n.
- Montaxet at Leuthen, x. 56; watching and messaging about, 223, 224.
- Montball, Dame de, v. 31, 312.
- Montcalm, Marquis de, Commander of Quebec, x. 242, 340; defeated by Wolfe, 235; letter to a cousin in France (spurious), particulars of his own defeat and death, and the coming revolt of America, 337-340.
- Montecuculi, M. de, xi. 286.
- Montélimart, covenant sworn at, iii. 290.
- Montemar, Duke of, vi. 470.
- Montenaro, Duke of, son-in-law of Madame du Châtelet, viii. 229.
- Montespan, Madame de, ix. 50 n.
- Montesquieu, vi. 169; vii. 38; ix. 29.
- Montesquieu, General, takes Savoy, iv. 217.
- Montgaillard, on Queen captive, iv. 152; on September Massacres, 193; on Paris ladies, 434.
- Montgolfier, invents balloons, iii. 51.
- Montgomery, Col. Robert, notice of, xvii. 375; Major-General in Scots Army, xviii. 106, 109, 181 n., 206.
- Montholieu, vi. 287.
- Montholon, cited, x. 20 n.; xi. 41 n.
- Montijos, Excellency, vii. 447; his sumptuosities, viii. 16.
- Montmartre, trenches at, iv. 165.
- Montmorency, vii. 450.
- Montmorin, War-Secretary, iii. 88; his Brother killed at La Force, iv. 183.
- Montrose, the Hero-Cavalier, i. 447; in Scots Army, xvii. 103; routed in Scotland, 233; taken and executed, xviii. 98.
- Moonshine, bottled, and belief in an incredible Church, ii. 89; diseased developments, 93; more perilous than any perdition, 101.
- Moor, Mr., death of, at Carthage, vii. 483.
- Moore, Doctor, at attack of Tuilleries, iv. 147; at La Force, 183; v. 6.
- Moral Sense, the, a perennial miracle, xvi. 446.
- Morality, xii. 158.
- Morande, De, newspaper by, iii. 55; will return, 133; in prison, iv. 170.
- Moravian foray, viii. 128-142.
- Moray House, Edinburgh, Cromwell at, xvii. 371.
- Mordington, Cromwell at, xvi. 363, 366; xviii. 105; incident at, 106.
- More's, Hannah, anti-German trumpet-blast, xiv. 308 n.
- Morellet, Philosophe, iii. 227.
- Morgan, Mr., to be taken, xvii. 314, 315.
- Moritz, Elector, his superior jockey-ship, xvi. 373.
- Moritz of Saxony, v. 210, 213, 225, 229; vi. 205.
- Moritz of Dessau, at Kesselsdorf, ix. 12, 14; in Saxony, 390, 365; at Eger, on march for Prag, 390; ill-luck at Prag, 413; with the King to meet Daun, 448; scene with the King at battle of Kolin, 458, 459; charge of the retreat, 462, 468; recalled, 470; in the Pirna country, 497, 506; Torgau, 519, 538; Leuthen, x. 58; Feldmarschall, thanks from the King, 64; badly wounded at Hochkirch, 160; mentioned also, ix. 14 n., 307.
- Moritz. See Comte de Saxe.
- Morris, Governor of Pontefract Castle, xvii. 379; Cromwell's letter to, 379.

- Morrison's Pill, xii. 24; men's "Religion" a kind of, 220.
 Möra, vi. 271.
 Mortaigne, x. 80 n.
 Mosel, Colonel, has charge of convoy to Olmütz, x. 108; clearest precautions and dispositions, 105; convoy attacked and ruined, 106, 107; made prisoner at Maxen, 355.
 Mosel, General, vi. 275.
 Moses, the Hebrew outlaw, xiii. 392; and the Dwellers by the Dead Sea, xii. 148.
 Mosheim, vi. 451: cited, 452 n.
 Moostroopers, Watt and Augustin, xviii. 177; routed by Colonel Hacker, 196.
 Mother's, a, religious influence, i. 76.
 Motive-Millwrights, i. 167.
 Moucheton, M. de, of King's Bodyguard, lii. 258.
 Moudon, Abbé, confessor to Louis XV., iii. 18, 23.
 Mounier, at Grenoble, iii. 103; proposes Tennis-Court oath, 158; October Fifth, President of Constituent Assembly, 248; deputed to King, 254; dilemma of, on return, 262; emigrates, 276.
 Mountain scenery, i. 117.
 Mountain, members of the, iv. 58; re-elected in National Convention, 201; Gironde and, 269-273; favorers of the, 273; vulnerable points of, 276; pre-vents, 279; Danton, Duperret, 297; after Gironde dispersed, 312; in labor, 320.
 Moyland, little Schloss of, and Voltaire's First Interview, vii. 221.
 Mühlberg, Camp of, vi. 168, 203.
 Mühldorf, fight of, v. 123.
 Mulgrave, Earl, xvii. 351; in Council of State, xviii. 385 n.; one of Cromwell's Lords, xix. 236.
 Müller, General, invades Spain, iv. 381.
 Müller, Friedrich, xiii. 151.
 Müller, Chaplain, and Lieut. Katte, vi. 297; waits on the Crown-Prince, 299, 304.
 Müller, on Rossbach, x. 4 n.
 Müller, Johann von, cited, x. 390; xi. 473.
 Müller, Jungfer, killed in Breslau, x. 459 n.
 Müller, Lieutenant, cited, x. 145 n.
 Müllner, Dr., supreme over all play-wrights, xiii. 374; his Newspaper qualifications, 386.
 Munch, xix. 395 n., 410, 473 n.
 München and its Kaiser, viii. 365.
 Münchhausen, Baron, vii. 149; viii. 400.
 Münchow, President, vi. 392.
 Münchows, the, vii. 165, 194, 196, 382.
 Mungo Park, xii. 204.
 Municipality of Paris, to be abolished, iv. 430. See Paris.
 Münnich, General, vi. 466, 494, 495; vii. 14, 81, 100, 276; arrests Duke Bieren, 363; is supreme in Russia, 365; withdraws from Court, 366; sent to Siberia, 368; at Oczakow, x. 119, 127; Münnich and Bieren refuse to be reconciled, xi. 118; would undertake to save Czar Peter, 129; his praises of Catharine, 132.
 Munster for Parliament, xvii. 502.
 Murat, in Vendémiaire revolt, iv. 457.
 Murdog, King, xix. 481.
 Murray, Regent, xii. 442.
Muse's Threnodie, The, xii. 443: cited, 444.
 Music, Luther's love of, xiv. 138; divi-nest of all the utterances allowed to man, xvi. 340; condemned to madness, 344.
 Musical, all deep things, i. 312; Enter-tainment at Cromwell's, xix. 118.
 Musselburgh, Cromwell at, xviii. 107, 114, 122; Cromwell's Army in, 224.
 Mutiny, military, nature of, lii. 347.
 Muy, du, Chevalier, at Warburg, x. 453, 454.
 Mylius, vi. 295: cited, ix. 92.
 Mystery, all-pervading domain of, i. 53; deep significance of, xiv. 388; mystical and intellectual enjoyment of an object, xv. 111, 220.
 Mysticism, xiii. 63; xiv. 24, 59.
 Mythologies, the old, once Philosophies, xv. 389. See Pan, Sphinx.
 NACHOD, vi. 424.
 Nadasti, in Prince Karl's Rhine Cam-paign, viii. 336; attacks Tabor, 363; with Prince Karl in Silesia, 440, 461; Hohenfriedberg, 469; back into Bo-hemia, 457, 459; Sohr, 493, 497; on march with Prince Karl to Branden-burg, 504; with Daun at Kolin, ix. 464; follows the Prince of Prussia, 485; surprised at Ostritz, 496; attacks Winterfeld at Jäkelsberg, 500; be-sieges Schweidnitz, x. 37; at Lauthen, 56; receives the Prussian attack, 58; in a bad way, 59; skillfully covers the retreat, 59; mentioned also, xi. 465.
 Nadir Shah, vii. 127; ix. 102.
 Nahorzan, Camp of, viii. 473.
 Naigeon's Life of Diderot, xv. 86.
 Nakedness and hypocritical Clothing, i. 43, 50; a naked Court-ceremonial, 47; a naked Duke, addressing a naked House of Lords, 47.
 Names, significance and influence of, i. 67, 196; inextricable confusion of

- Saxon princely, xvi. 366; Mirabeau's expressive Nicknames, xv. 363.
- Namslau, Prussian siege of, vii. 334, 335.
- Nanci, revolt at, lii. 200, 358, 360, 363; town described, 358; deputation imprisoned, 361; deputation of mutineers, 365; state of mutineers in, 366, 368; Bouillé's fight, 368; Paris thereupon, 371; military executions at, 373; Assembly Commissioners, 373.
- Nanke, cited, v. 174 n.
- Nantes, after King's flight, iv. 20; massacres at, 359; noyades, 365; prisoners to Paris, 413, 429; Edict of, v. 286, 312, 315.
- Napier, General Sir Charles, x. 409 n.
- Naples, Sterling at, li. 219; eminent ignorance of the Neapolitans, 221; in the wind for Carlos, vi. 469.
- Napoleon, and his Political Evangel, i. 125; studying mathematics, iii. 105; pamphlet by, 352; democratic, in Corsica, 395; August Tenth, iv. 147; under General Cartaux, 320; at Toulon, 333, 363, 364; was pupil of Pichegru, 388; Josephine and, at La Cabarus's, 432, 433; Vendémiaire, 457, 458; was a portentous mixture of Quack and Hero, i. 456; his instinct for the practical, 457; his democratic faith, and heart-hatred of anarchy, 457; apostatized from his old faith in Facts, and took to believing in Semblances, 458; this Napoleonism was unjust, and could not last, 459; his figure titanic, v. 8, 16; Napoleon and Sham-Napoleon, vi. 454; his Opinion of Rossbach, x. 20; of Leuthen, 71; of Prince Henri's Saxon Campaign of 1761, xi. 41; Code Napoleon, 425; mentioned also, 231, 249, 453.
- Narbonne, Louis de, assists flight of King's Aunts, lii. 400; to be War-Minister, iv. 77; demands by, 84; secreted, 164; escapes, 168.
- Narratives, difference between mere, and the broad actual History, xiv. 65; the grand source of our modern fictions, 277; mimic Biographies, 386; narrative the staple of speech, xv. 77.
- Naseby described, xvii. 205, and App. xix. 321. See Battle.
- Nassau, General, viii. 426; on march through Bohemia, 356, 358; seizes Kolin, 372, 373; in retreat towards Silesia, 375; despatched to relief of Einsiedel, 382; with Friedrich in Silesia, 451, 452, 473, 509.
- National characteristics, xlii. 28, 234, 284; xv. 419; suffering, xlii. 343; misery the result of national misguidance, xii. 28; baptism, ix. 424; a Nation's diseases and its fashions, v. 327; dry-rot, xi. 177; economics, 328, 337; drill-sergeants, 335; Assembly, — see Assembly.
- Nationality, xii. 125.
- Nature, the God-written Apocalypse of, i. 41, 51; not an Aggregate but a Whole, 54, 116, 185, 195; alone antique, 79; sympathy with, 115, 136; the "Living Garment of God," 143; Laws of, 193; statue of, iv. 328; not dead matter, but the living mysterious Garment of the Unseen, xiv. 30, 346; xv. 230, 283; Book of, xiv. 67; eternal, xvi. 225; successive Revelations, xiv. 70; all one great Miracle, i. 241, 298, 366; a righteous Umpire, 292; not dead, but alive and miraculous, xii. 30.
- Natzmer, Captain, the Prussian Recruiter, vi. 65; Natzmer Junior and the young Duke of Lorraine, 307.
- Nauen, vi. 417.
- Navigation Act, xviii. 277.
- Navy, Louis XV. on French, lii. 45; rots, iv. 75.
- Nawaub, Europe one big ugly, xii. 392.
- Nayler, James, worshipped, xviii. 448; xix. 20; punished, 122, 123.
- Neal, on Cromwell, xix. 48.
- Necessity brightened into Duty, i. 75; the mother of Accuracy, xvi. 127; submission to, 40, 62.
- Necker, and finance, account of, lii. 46; dismissed, 47; refuses Brienne, 107; recalled, 109; difficulty as to States-General, 116; reconvoques Notables, 117; opinion of himself, 132; popular, 161; dismissed, 170; recalled, 195; returns in glory, 223; his plans, 232; getting unpopular, 289; departs, with difficulty, 372.
- Necklace, Diamond, lii. 56, 68.
- Needlewomen, distressed, li. 265; vii. 153; xvi. 309, 405.
- Negro population, our, up to the ears in pumpkins, xvi. 295; need to be emancipated from their indolence, 300, 318; li. 321; the Negro alone of wild men can live among men civilized, xvi. 302; injustice of negro slavery, 303; how to abolish, 313, 320; Black Adscripti glebae, 323; Slavery and White Nomadism, xii. 267; Slaves, unfit for freedom, li. 76; their devotion to a good Master, 81. See Slavery.
- Nelle, Bishop, and Popery, xvii. 64; Parliament about to accuse, 66.
- Neipperg, vii. 236, 348; hastens to save Neisse, 397, 399, 400; quits Neisse, 402; at Mollwitz, 406; much at his ease, 412; news of the Prussian Army, 413; battle, 419; back to Neisse, 431;

- glad to be quiescent, 438; marches towards Braslau, viii. 45; then to Schweidnitz, but again retires, 51; vigilant manœuvring, 52; meeting with Friedrich at Klein-Schnellendorf, 76; withdraws his Army, 79; joins the Grand-Duke, 94; not a Eugene, 101; at Dettingen, 253.
- Meisse, bombardment of, vii. 341; pretended siege of, viii. 79.
- Neitsche, Excise-Inspector, x. 33.
- Nepomuk. See Johann of.
- Nerwinden, battle of, iv. 287.
- Nessus'-shirt, our poisoned, ii. 409.
- Netherlands, occupied by French, iv. 235; wars in the, xvi. 334.
- Neuchâtel, vii. 232; exchanged for Orange, v. 292.
- Neumann, Regierungs-Rath, xi. 432.
- Neumark, v. 76, 111, 148, 170, 174.
- Neustadt, Prussian Army at, vii. 398.
- New, growth of the, xvi. 77; Eras, 85; all new things strange and unexpected, 95; Era, our heavy-laden long-eared, ii. 269, 303, 304; introduction of, vii. 161, 173, 423.
- New Testament, xii. 183, 280.
- Newark, designs on, xvii. 141, 145.
- Newbury. See Battle.
- Newcastle, Earl, helps the King, xvii. 120; his Popish Army, 141; besieges Hull, 163, 166; retires disgrusted, 185.
- Newcastle, Mayor of, Cromwell's letter to, xix. 108.
- Newcastle, Duke of, viii. 265; ix. 154, 241, 246-248, 256; jealous of the Duke of Cumberland, 301-305; influence in Parliament, 382; quite insecure, 431; imbecility and futility, 431, 439; Newcastle and the clack of tongues, x. 342; mentioned also, xi. 91.
- Newhall estate, xix. 50.
- Newmarket rendezvous. See Army.
- Newport, Negotiations at, xvii. 370, 382.
- Newspaper Editors, i. 34; Russian notion of, xi. 499, 500; our Mendicant Friars, i. 191; xiii. 482; their unwearied straw-thrashing, xv. 452; editing, vi. 47; rumor, 414; what, in 1789, lii. 228; in 1790, 303, 307, 398. See Fourth Estate.
- Newton, v. 429; vii. 46; Voltaire's high opinion of, xi. 361.
- New Year's Day, when. See Year.
- Nibelungen Lied, the, xiv. 194-249; an old German Epos of singular poetic interest, 210; extracts from, and condensed sketch of the Poem, 214; antiquarian researches into its origin, 242.
- Nicholas, Captain, at Chepstow, xvii. 101.
- Nicholas, Czar, xi. 452 n.
- Nichols, cited, xi. 5 n.
- Nicolai, vi. 144, 300, 306 n., 328; ix. 171; his account of La Mettrie's death, 183; defence of Friedrich, 198; cited, vi. 146 n., 306 n.; vii. 165 n., 217 n.; ix. 38 n., 539 n.
- Nièvre-Chol, Mayor of Lyons, iv. 275.
- Nigger Question, the, xvi. 293-296, 424-428.
- Nikolai, Professor, of Frankfurt, x. 372.
- Nimburg, vi. 427.
- Nimwegen, Peace of, v. 291.
- Nineteenth Century, our poor, and its indestructible Romance, xv. 229; at once destitute of faith and terrified at scepticism, 427, 432; an age all calculated for strangling heroisms, xvi. 345; intellect of, ii. 376. See Present Time, European Revolution.
- Ninon de l'Enclos, v. 285.
- Nivernois, Duc de, ix. 298.
- Noailles, Maréchal, vi. 472; viii. 231, 236, 239; at siege of Philippsburg, vi. 481; at Dettingen, viii. 245, 256; prepared for the worst, 262, 273, 332, 335, 444.
- Nobility, fg, ii. 451; xii. 298; xiii. 305; xvi. 303.
- Noble, young, true education of the, ii. 423. See Aristocracy.
- Nobleness, old, may become a new reality, xiii. 486; meaning of, xii. 174. See Aristocracy.
- Noble's Memoirs criticised, xvii. 17.
- Nobles, state of the, under Louis XV., iii. 13; new, 15; join Third Estate, 162; Emigrant, errors of, iv. 82.
- Noltanius, v. 412.
- Nomadism, xvi. 308, 311; uglier than slavery, ii. 299.
- Nördlingen, vi. 407.
- Norham, situation of, xvii. 366.
- Normans and Saxons originally of one stock, xvi. 89; invasion, the, 421.
- Norris, Admiral, vi. 277; viii. 315.
- Norroy, v. 61.
- North, Mr. Henry, of Mildenhall, xvi. 269.
- North, Sir Dudley, Cromwell's letter to, xix. 325.
- Northern Archaeology, xiv. 194.
- Norton, Colonel Richard, serves under Earl Manchester, xvii. 159; notice of, 291, 297; Cromwell's letters to, 291, 296, 298; purged by Pride, 406; in Little Parliament, xviii. 299; in Council of State, 334 n.
- Nostitz, General, at Kolln, ix. 460, 465; wounded at Leuthen, x. 50.
- Notables, Calonne's convocation of, iii. 68; assembled, 22d Feb. 1787, 70; members of, 70; organized on, 77; effects of dismissal of, 78; reconvoed

- (6th November, 1788), 117; dismissed again, 117.
 Nothingness of life, i. 138.
 Nottingham, Charles I. erects his standard at, xvii. 114; xviii. 245.
 Nova Scotia, ceded to the English, ix. 251; occupied for Cromwell, xix. 378.
 Novalis, on Man, i. 244; Belief, 287, 288; Shakespeare, 335; his perplexity with Wilhelm Meister, xiii. 228; xiv. 44; speculations on French Philosophy, xiii. 456; account of, xiv. 3-59; parentage and youth, 11; death of his first love, 13; literary labors, 20; illness and death, 21; his Idealism, 29; extracts from his Lehrlinge zu Sais, &c., 31; Philosophic Fragments, 42; Hymns to the Night, and Heinrich von Ofterdingen, 48; intellectual and moral characteristics, 56.
 Novels, Fashionable, xiv. 387; partially living, 391; what they must come to, xv. 84; Scott's Historical Novels, 456.
 Noverre, M., Ballet-composer, xi. 280.
 Noy, Attorney, conduct of, in 1632, xvii. 71; his advancement, death and dissection, 73.
 Noyades, Nantes, iv. 365.
 Nugent, General, at siege of Dresden, x. 442.
 Nürnberg, v. 86, 88; vi. 238, 409. See Friedrich Burggraf of.
 Nüssler, vi. 140, 355; vii. 401; viii. 106; makes survey of Silesia, 145; settles the Silesian Boundaries, 178; successfully appeals to the King on behalf of his ruined neighbors, xi. 190-192; mentioned also, x. 500.
OAK, fat manure the ruin of the, xvi. 124.
 Oath, of the Tennis-Court, iii. 158; National, 313, 339.
 Obedience, the lesson of, i. 76, 189; duty of, xvi. 103; value of, xii. 88; wise, ii. 418; true and false, xii. 374, 394; all called to learn, vi. 292.
 Oberg, Baron von, vii. 95, 123.
 Oberg, General, beaten by Soubise, x. 177.
 Obermayr, Johann Euchar von, manages at München the instalment of Karl Theodor, xi. 398.
 Oblique Order, the, x. 51, 56.
 Oblivion, the dark page on which Memory writes, xv. 79; a still resting-place, xii. 181; and remembrance, xvii. 9. See Memory.
 O'Brien, Barnabas, notice of, xvii. 436.
 Obscene wit, xv. 125.
 Obsecrations, hankering for, ix. 187.
 Obstnacy, female, viii. 480.
 O'Connell on the wings of blarney, ii. 232.
 October Fifth (1789), iii. 244-248.
 Oczakow, siege of, vii. 82.
 Odin, the first Norse "man of genius," i. 254; historic rumors and guesses, 255; how he came to be deified, 257; invented "runes," Hero, Prophet, God, 260.
 O'Donnell succeeds Deville, x. 318.
 Oehlenschläger, Palnatoke of, xix. 411.
 Oerzen, General, ix. 350.
 Officers, one hundred, remonstrate with Cromwell on Kingship, xix. 126; petition of, on Kingship, 213.
 Oge, condemned, iv. 72.
 Ogilvy, General, defends Prag, viii. 98; Commandant at Prag, 348, 350.
 Ogle, Sir Chaloner, in the Carthagena Expedition, vii. 479, 481.
 Ohlau, description of, vii. 332.
 Okey, Colonel, taken at Bristol siege, xvii. 218; at Inverkeithing fight, xviii. 234; Republican, 393.
 Olaf, King, and Thor, i. 372.
 Olaf the thick-set (called also Saint), xix. 440-468; London Bridge broken down by, 442, 443; engineering skill, 444, 456; beaten by Knut, has to hide, 460; returns to Norway, Snorro's account of, 465-467; dream, death at Sticklestad, 467; "Saint" ever after, 468.
 Olaf the Tranquil, xix. 480.
 Olaf Tryggveson, xix. 416-434; in Dublin, 418; King of Norway, 418; conversion to Christianity, 420; at Andover, 422; Thor's gold collar sent to Sigrid, 427; marries Ironbeard's daughter, 428; marries Thyri, splendor of his ships, last fight, death, 430-434.
 Old age, reverence for, ii. 267.
 Old-clothes, heaps of, ii. 5.
 Oldenburg, Duke, his present to Cromwell, xviii. 449.
 Oldenburg, General von, enters Erfurt, ix. 429; cited, 429 n.
 Oliva, the Demoiselle d', xv. 273; xi. 498.
 Oliva, Peace of, v. 285.
 Olmütz, an ancient pleasant little city, x. 95; besieged by Friedrich, 98, 109.
 O'Neil, Henry, joins Ormond, xvii. 485.
 O'Neil, Hugh, Governor of Clonmel, xvii. 55.
 O'Neil, Owen Roe, character of, xvii. 463.
 Onalow, Sir Richard, in Kingship Committee, xix. 169.
 Onund, xix. 455, 457.
Ongs Ring, the, Sterling's Tale of, ii. 122, 145; still worth reading, 147.
 Opera, the, xii. 393; xvi. 340-346.

- Opitz, Silesian poet, vii. 293.
 Oppeln, v. 193, 234; vii. 426; Duke of, beheaded at Neisse, v. 342.
 Opportunity, miraculous, vii. 293.
 Orange, Princess of, v. 45; Prince of, vi. 505, 509; vii. 90, 92; viii. 119; assists Guichard, x. 210; Principality of, vii. 282.
 Oranienburg, v. 292.
 Oratory and Rhetoric, xiv. 349.
 Order to Keeper of St. James's Library, xvii. 410; of Merit, Friedrich's, vii. 150. See Estate, Third.
 Ordinance, Self-denying, xvii. 189, 194; of Militia, — see Militia.
 Ordinances of Cromwell, xviii. 385, 386.
 Organizing, what may be done by, xii. 252, 261.
 Original Man, difficulty of understanding an, xliii. 243, 251, 270; xiv. 4, 146; xv. 302, 375; the world's injustice to, xliii. 814, 892; xiv. 434; uses of, xv. 9, 13, 15, 28; xvi. 253; no one with absolutely no originality, xiv. 424; an original scoundrel, xv. 166; the world's wealth consists solely in its original men, and what they do for it, 304; is the sincere man, i. 276, 351. See Man.
 Originality, xii. 128. See Path-making.
 Orlamünde, vi. 224.
 Orléans, High Court at, iv. 88; prisoners, massacred at Versailles, 197-199.
 Orléans, a Duke d', in Louis XV.'s sick-room, iii. 19; another, disbelieves in death, 20.
 Orléans, Philippe (Égalité), Duke d', Duke de Chartres (till 1785), iii. 70; waits on Dauphin, father, with Louis XV., 19; not Admiral, 45; wealth, debauchery, Palais-Royal buildings, 50; balloons, 51; in Notables (Duke d'Orléans now), 70; looks of, Bed-of-Justice (1787), 90, 91; arrested, 91; liberated, 94; pseudo-author, 115; in States-General Procession, 142; joins Third Estate, 162; his party, in Constituent Assembly, 213; Fifth October and, 276; shunned in England, 302; to be Regent? Mirabeau, 388; cash gone, how, 388; use of, in Revolution, 388; accused by Royalists, 407; at Court, insulted, iv. 76; in National Convention (Égalité henceforth), 203; decline of, in Convention, 226, 277; vote on King's trial, 253, 255; at King's execution, 260; arrested, imprisoned, 296; condemned, 352; poiteness, and execution, 353; his son, — see Louis-Philippe.
 Orléans, Duke of, x. 373.
 Orléans, Duchess of, x. 13.
 Orléans, Regent d', v. 436, 456; vii. 42, 43; ix. 50 n.
 Orlich, cited, vii. 5 n., 279 n., 247 n.; viii. 349 n.; ix. 476 n.
 Orlof, Alexei, xi. 129; in the Russian-Turk War, 292.
 Orlof, Gregory, Czarina's lover, xi. 127, 129, 211; helps in the murder of Czar Peter, 128, 131.
 Ormesson, d', Controller of Finance, iii. 64; his Uncle, on States-General, 81, 94.
 Ormiston, Laird of, xii. 410, 426, 428.
 Ormond, Earl, Irish levied by, xvii. 243; character of, 276; strong in Ireland, 408; routed by Jones, 440; at Wexford, 478; at Ross, 480; plotting in England, xix. 245, 267, 273.
 Orpheus, i. 199.
 Orseln, Werner von, v. 129.
 Orthodoxy and Heterodoxy, iv. 10.
 Orzelska, Countess, vi. 73, 80, 208, 209, ix. 24.
 Osiander, Dr., v. 204, 208.
 Osnabrück, Ernst August, Bishop of, v. 37; vi. 59; his death, 117.
 Ostein, Graf von, viii. 248, 259.
 Ostend East-India Company, Karl VI.'s, v. 451.
 Ostermann, Russian Statesman, vii. 365.
 Ost-Friesland, Friedrich takes possession of, viii. 325.
 O'Sullivan, viii. 600.
 Oswestry, Cromwell's letter to, xix. 384.
 Otes, described, xvii. 97.
 Otho, King of Greece, xi. 402.
 Otley, Colonel, at disbanding of Rump, xviii. 294.
 Ottomachan, Prussians take, vii. 326.
 Otto, Duke of Meran, alain, v. 102.
 Otto III., last of "Saxon Kaisers," v. 65, 68.
 Otto III., Elector of Brandenburg, v. 96.
 Otto of Stettin, Duke, burial of, v. 175.
 Otto, last Bavarian Elector of Brandenburg, v. 140.
 Otto with the Arrow, v. 112.
 Ottocar, King of Bohemia, v. 95; scandalous plight before Rudolph of Hapsburg, 109.
 "Ou' clo'," the fateful Hebrew Prophecy, ii. 291, 320, 324; xii. 265.
 Ouse River, xvii. 85.
 Overbury poisoned, xvii. 41.
 Overend-Gurney bankruptcies, xvi. 452.
 Overton, Colonel, Governor of Hull, xvii. 280; in Scots War, xviii. 102, 128; at Inverkeithing, 223, 224; Republican, 293; sent to the Tower, 463.
 Overton, Richard, a Leveller, xvii. 421.
 Over-population, i. 172; xvi. 112; "preventive check," 112; infanticide, 115; emigration, 116.
 Over-production, charge of, xii. 165, 197.

- Owen, Colonel, Sir John, in Wales, xvii. 274; delinquent, 383, 385.
- Owen, Dr., in Cromwell's First Parliament, xviii. 398; preaches to Second Parliament, xix. 68.
- Owa, conservation of a man's, i. 151.
- Oxenstiern, v. 274.
- Oxford, Charles I. at, xvii. 136; surrendered, 234; Cromwell, &c., feasted at, 435; University reformed, xviii. 309; Cromwell Chancellor of, 309; Cromwell and, xix. 362, 383. See Eton.
- PACHE, Swiss, account of, iii. 298; Minister of War, iv. 228; Mayor, 304; dismissed, reinstated, 305; imprisoned, 402.
- Pack, Sir Christopher, motion by, xix. 123.
- Packer, Lieutenant-Colonel, notice of, xvii. 176, 178.
- Paganism, Scandinavian, i. 237; not mere Allegory, 239; Nature-worship, 241, 262; Hero-worship, 244; creed of our fathers, 249, 268, 278; Impersonation of the visible workings of Nature, 250; contrasted with Greek Paganism, 262; the first Norse Thinker, 254; main practical Belief, indispensable to be brave, 264; hearty, homely, rugged Mythology, Balder, Thor, 267; Consecration of Valor, 272.
- Paine, "Common Sense," iii. 299; that there be a Republic (1791), iv. 19; naturalized, 160; in National Convention, 203; escapes guillotine, 423.
- Palais-Royal, change in use of, iii. 50; spouting at, 153, 165, 196, 234.
- Pally, Count, viii. 28, 69, 246.
- Pallandt, General, Friedrich's sympathy for, viii. 166.
- Palmbach, General, tries to get Colberg, x. 139.
- Palmerston's, Lord, notion of merit, xvi. 456.
- Pamphlets on Civil War, King's, xvii. 4, 5, 105.
- Pan, Mallet du, solicits for Louis, iv. 75.
- Pan, the ancient symbol of, xiv. 414.
- Pandarus Dogdraught, xii. 237, 245.
- Pandora's box, iii. 291.
- Pandour, vii. 377 n., 396.
- Panin, Grand-Duke Paul's tutor, xi. 125, 130.
- Panis, Advocate, in Governing Committee, iv. 162; and Besumarchais, 171; confidant of Danton, 178.
- Panis-Briefe, xi. 452.
- Pannwitz, Colonel, vi. 275.
- Pantheism, ii. 119.
- Pantheon, first occupant of, iii. 417.
- Panzendorf, v. 412.
- Panzern, Widow, vii. 427.
- Paoli, General, friend of Napoleon, iii. 396.
- Paper, Age of, uses of, iii. 30; blotting, not in use, xvii. 260 n.; rag-, invention of, xiv. 291.
- Papist Army, Newcastle's, xvii. 141; Monuments destroyed, 146.
- Papistry, v. 377, 404; the Catholic Bull taken by the tail and taught manners, 401; a Papist conversation, 444; absolution, vi. 467. See Popes.
- Papists, to be hanged, xvii. 136; cruelties in Ireland, 476; xviii. 6; against Protestants, xix. 250, 251.
- Paradise and Fig-leaves, i. 30; prospective Paradises, 103, 110; the dream of, xiv. 369; to all-and-sundry, ii. 320, 334.
- Paraguay and its people, xvi. 228, 239.
- Paralysis, spiritual, of the Age, i. 363.
- Parchments, venerable and not venerable, xii. 168, 175.
- Pardubitz, Pandours try to get into, viii. 372.
- Parera, Curate, renounces religion, iv. 368.
- Paris, origin of city, iii. 9; polles in 1750, 15 (see Parlement); ship Ville-de-Paris, 45; riot at Palais-de-Justice, 85; beautified (in 1788), 96; election (1789), 120; troops called to, 151; military preparations in, 163; July Fourteenth, cry for arms, 172, 181; search for arms, 175; Bailly, mayor of, 195; trade-strikes in, 229; Lafayette patrols, 234; October Fifth, propositions to Louis, 265; illuminated, 266, 314; Louis in, 279; foreigners flock to, 398; Journals, 304, 305, 381, 398; bill-stickers, 305, 381; undermined, 333, 402; after Champ-de-Mars Federation, 342; on Nanci affair, 372; on death of Mirabeau, 415; on Flight to Varennes, iv. 17-21; on King's return, 38; Directory suspends Pétion, 115; enlisting (1792), 124; on forfeiture of King, 132; Sections, rising of, 135 (see Sections); August Tenth, prepares for insurrection, 135-139; Municipality, supplanted, 138; statues torn down, King and Queen to prison, 153; Prisons (see Prisons); September, 1792, 192; names printed on house-door, 289; in insurrection, Girondins (May, 1793), 306; Municipality in red nightcaps, 376; brotherly supper, 405; like a Mahlestrom (Thermidor), 423; Sections to be abolished, 430; brightened up (1795), 431-433; Gilt Youth, 434.
- Paris, Guardsman, assassinates Lepelletier, iv. 256.
- Paris, friend of Danton, iv. 397.

- Paris, Abbé, vii. 360.
 Park, cited, vii. 121 n.
 Parker, Sir Philip, xvi. 269.
 Parker, Mr., Cromwell's letter to, xviii. 296.
 Parlement, Douai, will alone register Edicts, iii. 103; of Paris, re-established, 80; is patriotic, 61, 82; on registering Edicts, 80; against Taxation, 80, 82; remonstrates, at Versailles, 82; arrested, 84; origin of, 84; nature of, corrupt, 84; at Troyes, yields, 86; Royal Session in, 89-91; how to be tamed, 95; oath and declaration of, 98; firmness of, 98-103; scene in, and dismissal of, 100; reinstated, 109; unpopular, 114; summons Dr. Guillotin, 123; abolished, 288.
 Parlements, provincial, adhere to Paris, iii. 83, 91; rebellious, 94, 103; exiled, 103; grand deputations of, 104; reinstated, 109; abolished, 288.
 Parliament, insufficiency of, xvi. 38; during the last century, 82; fighting by Parliamentary eloquence, 94; on Parliamentary Radicalism, 99; an Election to the Long, 264-292; Samuel Duncon's affidavits concerning the election for Suffolk, 273; "short and true relation" of the same by Sir Simonds D'Ewes, 280; his valuable Notes of the Long Parliament, 290; Penny-Newspaper, 463; and the Courts of Westminster, xii. 11, 248; a Parliament starting with a lie in its mouth, 244.
 Parliament, Third, of Charles I., xvii. 56; is Puritan, 57; its Petition of Right, 57; doings of, 58; Alured's letter about, 58; prorogued, 63; dissolved, 65; holds down the Speaker, 66; conduct after, 67; Short, summoned 1640, 102; dissolved, 102; Long, summoned 3d Nov. 1640, 103; sketch of, 103; votes against Bishops, 106; secures the Militia, 112; grand Petition of, 117; Charles I. attempts to seize Five Members, 119; goes to City for refuge, 119; how it raises army, 120; affairs in July, 1643, 159; takes the Scots Covenant, Sept. 1643, 165; affairs in 1644, 188; disagreement of Generals, 189; affairs prosper, 236; new Members elected (Recruiters), 236; Army turns on it, 255, 256; declares against Army, 260; votes lands to Cromwell, 292; number of Members in 1648, 299 (see Members); purged by Pride, 397 (see Rump); new one to be elected, xviii. 268, 283; difficulties in choosing, 289; Little, summons for, 297; members of, 299; meets 4th July, 1653, 299; failure of, 328; doings and resignation of, 332-336; Long, List of, 340-367; First Protectorate assemblies 3d Sept. 1654, 398-400; unsuccessful, 420; signs the Recognition, 446; doings of, 447, 448; dissolved, 449; Second Protectorate assemblies 17th Sept. 1658, xix. 62; action in Sindercomb's Plot, 113; doings of, 114-117; offers Cromwell title of King, 125, &c.; presses him to accept it, 134; second session of, 235; Two Houses disagree, 247; dissolved, 272.
 Parliament, modern recipe of, ii. 274; the English Parliament once a Council of actual Rulers, 288; xii. 288, 301; now an enormous National Palaver, ii. 352, 438; xii. 292; what it has done for us, ii. 373; kind of men sent there, 390; xii. 298; Parliamentary career, ii. 433; Parliamentary bagpipes, 443, 450.
 Parliaments, xii. 287-322; origin of our English Parliaments, 288; the Long Parliament, 291, 300; position of Parliament become false and impossible, 292; with a Free Press the real function of Parliament goes on everywhere continually, 294; Adviser of the Sovereign, or Sovereign itself, 296, 308; Newspaper Reporters in a Parliament and Nation no longer in earnest, 297; the French Convention all in deadly earnest, 302; Chartist Parliament, 304; a Parliament indispensable, 310; condensed Folly of Nations, 311; superseded by Books, i. 287; Cromwell's, 449; reduced to its simplest expression, vi. 31, 32; Constitutional, 33; English, 33, 185, 257; Female, vii. 54; compact, 154, 172; Parliamentary sleeping dogs, 178, 469; Mr. Viner in, 464; Ost-Friesland Parliament reformed, viii. 326.
 Pascal and Novalis, resemblances between, xiv. 58.
 Pascopol, the, ix. 339, 340.
 Pass, form of, in 1649, xvii. 408.
 Passau, Peace of, v. 211; viii. 26, 244.
 Passivity and Activity, i. 75, 122.
 Past, the, inextricably linked with the Present, i. 130; forever extant, 197; and Fear, iv. 232; the fountain of all Knowledge, xiv. 66; xv. 74; the true Past never dies, xiv. 379; xvi. 201; sacred interest of, xiv. 395, 418; the whole, the possession of the Present, i. 273; Present and Future, xii. 26, 231, 240, 258.
 Path-making, xii. 124.
 Patrons of genius and convivial Macenases, xiii. 299; patronage twice cursed, 304; ditto twice blessed, xiv. 437.

- "Paul and Virginia," by St. Pierre, iii. 59.
- Paul, Czarowitch, vi. 429; ix. 294; parentage, xi. 108; night of his father's murder, 130, 304; his second wife, 107 n., 278, 377; his first wife, 343, 349; he visits Berlin, 378.
- Paul's, St. Cross described, xvii. 64; Cathedral, a horse-guard, 430.
- Pauli, cited, v. 70 n.; ix. 373 n., 425 n.
- Paulmy, Marquis de, ix. 206.
- Pauperism, xvi. 141.
- Paupers, what to do with, i. 174; our Irish and British, ii. 294; address to, 296; Pauperism, our Social Sin grown manifest, 405, 411.
- Pauw, Cornelius de, xi. 454.
- Peace, keeping the, the function of a policeman, ii. 385; something more sacred than "peace," xii. 343; Era, the much-predicted, i. 134.
- Peak, Sir Robert, taken at Basing, xvii. 226.
- Peasant Saint, the, i. 173.
- Pedant, the, ii. 349.
- Pedantry, xii. 48.
- Pedants, learned, v. 378; vi. 38.
- Peel, Sir Robert, the one likely or possible Reformer of Downing Street, ii. 344; his "eleventh hour," 416; and Wellington, Edward Sterling's admiration of, 227, 231; note of thanks from Sir Robert Peel, 229.
- Peetage, the English, once a noble reality, xvi. 401, 402; past and present, xii. 351. See Aristocracy.
- Peitsch, Professor, xi. 17.
- Pelham, and the Whole Duty of Dandies, i. 210.
- Pelham, ix. 67; Pelham Parliaments, 434, 438.
- Pellegrini, Count de, xi. 286.
- Peltier, Royalist Pamphleteer, iv. 169.
- Pembroke besieged by Cromwell, xvii. 311, 322.
- Pembroke, Earl, sent to Charles I., xvii. 242; Chancellor of Oxford, xviii. 209.
- Penalties, v. 216.
- Penn, Admiral, sails with the fleet, xviii. 451; sent to the Tower, xix. 16, 18-23.
- Penn, Quaker, xix. 18.
- Penny, Mr., Engraving of the Torphichen Knox, xii. 419.
- Penruddock, Colonel, in arms, xviii. 486; beheaded, 486; Cromwell's letters relative to, App. xix. 373, 374.
- Penthièvre, Duc de, ix. 50 n.
- Pentland Firth, Jarl Hakon wrecked in, xix. 464.
- Peoples'-Books, xiv. 306.
- "Père Duchesne," Editor of, iii. 81; iv. 374.
- Pereyra, Walloon, account of, iii. 298; imprisoned, iv. 293.
- Periodical Windmills, xiii. 467.
- Permanence the first condition of all fruitfulness, xii. 266-269.
- Permanency in human relations the basis of all good, xvi. 311.
- Perruques blondes, iv. 389.
- Perry, Alderman, vii. 103.
- Perseverance, law of, i. 179.
- Person, mystery of a, i. 50, 100, 103, 181.
- Perth surrenders, xviii. 241 n.
- Pertz, cited, vii. 257 n.
- Perusa, Karl Albert's Ambassador at Vienna, vii. 444, 445.
- Pesne's Portraits, v. 337, 360, 362; vi. 413; at Reinsberg, vii. 27; his portrait of King Friedrich, viii. 139.
- Peter's, St., in masquerade, ii. 172.
- Peter's, St., Church at Berlin burnt down, vi. 201.
- Peter, Czar, v. 432; visits Friedrich Wilhelm at Berlin, 364; the strangest mixture of heroic virtue and brutish Samoedic savagery, 367; at Magdeburg, 368; his physiognomy, 371; mentioned also, xi. 107, 459.
- Peter Federowitz, Czar, viii. 306, 307; ix. 289, 291, 394, 395; becomes Peter III. of Russia, xi. 104, 105; genealogy and tragical career, 106-110; ardent profession of friendship for Friedrich, 118, 120, 125; tries to reconcile Bieren and Münnich, 119; magnanimous improvements, 121; always in a plunge of hurries, 124; fetches Colonel Hordt from the Czarina, 124; turning-point in his history, 124; brutally murdered, 129; his funeral, 130.
- Peterborough, Earl, notice of, xvii. 437.
- Peterloo, xii. 18.
- Peters, Rev. Hugh, chaplain of train, xvii. 201; secretary to Cromwell, 225; his narrative of Basing, 227; at Putney, 273; at Pembroke, 312; in Ireland, 443; Cromwell to be King, xviii. 256.
- Petersburg, Treaty of, ix. 281; resolution at, to reduce the House of Brandenburg to its former mediocrity, 284, 285, 291; Hanbury Williams's Treaty signed at, 291; Colonel Hordt released from the citadel of, at the accession of Peter III., xi. 117; presented at Court, 117; Bieren and Münnich home from Siberia, 118; Pastor Büsching assists in the Homagings to Peter III., 119; Czarina Elizabeth lies in state, 122; her funeral, 124; Catharine's evening parties, 124; plots and riots, ending in murder

- of the Czar, 197-130; Prince Henri sumptuously entertained by the Czarina, 300-303; Subm there ready to transact loans, vii. 119; Anton Ulrich's wedding at, 139.
- Peterswalde, viii. 343.
- Pétion, account of, iii. 139; Dutch-built, 284; and D'Espréménil, 407; to be mayor, 409; Varennes, meets King, iv. 38; and Royalty, 40, 136; at close of Assembly, 52; in London, 54; Mayor of Paris, 92; in Twentieth June, 111; suspended, 115; reinstated, 123; welcomes Marseillaise, 130; August Tenth, in Tuileries, 136; rebukes Septemberers, 192; in National Convention, 201; declines mayorship, 229; and his violin, 285; against Mountain, 298; retreat of, to Bourdeaux, 332-336; end of, 346.
- Pétion, National-Pique, christening of, iv. 103.
- Petition of famishing French, 1775, iii. 35; on capture of Kings, iv. 42; at Fatherland's altar, 43-45; of the Eight Thousand, 104; for deposition, &c., 132; of Washerwomen, 206; of Right, xvii. 63; altered, 66; London, 105, 261; Buckinghamshire, 116; Surrey, 316; of Officers, xviii. 283; and Advice of Parliament, xix. 126, 212, 213, 219, 231.
- Petitot, cited, vi. 468 n.
- Peyrau, Dr., xi. 470.
- Peyssonnel, cited, xi. 319 n.
- Pezay, Campagnes de Maillebois, cited, viii. 199 n.
- Pezzi, cited, ix. 372 n.; xi. 285 n.
- Pfalz, Kur, in subsidy of France, x. 27.
- Pfalz-Neuburg, Wolfgang Wilhelm, v. 249, 252; claims the Cleve Heritage, 250, 257; face slapped, 259; conference with the Great Kurfürst, 283; his Grandson Karl Philip, 397.
- Pfanner, cited, v. 259 n.
- Pfan, General, at Kunsradorf, x. 271.
- Pätzner, viii. 112.
- Phayr, Colonel, at execution of Charles I., xvii. 400; at Cork, 488; Cromwell's letter to, xix. 349.
- Phélippeaux, purged out of the Jacobins, iv. 393.
- Philanthropy, indiscriminate, ii. 306; threatening to drown human society as in deluges, 320.
- Philip II., King of Spain, vii. 447.
- Philip, Kur-Pfalz, viii. 104, 117, 300.
- Philip's, Don, claim on the Milanese, viii. 188; ix. 20, 42, 61, 70 n.; x. 400.
- Philip of Hessen, v. 100, 101, 197, 225; entrapped by Karl V., 226.
- Philip, Theodor, viii. 300.
- Philippina Charlotte, v. 439; vi. 312, 448; wedded to Karl of Brunswick, 373, 454; their Sons, vii. 96.
- Phillips, the English Groom, vii. 137.
- Philipsburg, siege of, vi. 473, 479; viii. 334.
- Phillimore, cited, vi. 110 n.
- Phillips, Captain, in battle of Minden, x. 238, 239.
- Philosopher in office, iii. 31.
- Philosophies, Cause-and-Effect, i. 28; French, iii. 31, 32, 302; xv. 83, 110.
- Philosophische Briefe*, character of Schiller's, xx. 50.
- Philosophism, influence of, on Revolution, iii. 15; what it has done with Church, 37; with Religion, 57; disappointment on succeeding, 302.
- Philosophy teaching by experience, xiv. 62, 366. See Kant.
- Phocion and Demosthenes, xvi. 406.
- Phoenix Death-birth, i. 180, 183, 203.
- Phosphorus, Werner's parable of, xiii. 105.
- Piacenza, Battle of, ix. 42 n.
- Piast Dukes, the, vii. 291.
- Picard, Voltaire's servant, ix. 131, 136.
- Piccadilly, derivation of, xix. 213 n.
- Piccolomini, Graf von, defends Brieg, vii. 459; mentioned, ix. 325, 336.
- Pichegru, General, notice of, iv. 333; in Germinal, 442.
- Pickering, Colonel, at Bristol siege, xvii. 221; at Basing, 226; his death and funeral, xix. 324.
- Pickering, Sir Gilbert, in Council of State, xviii. 334 n., 385 n.
- Pictures, v. 360, 361.
- Piedmont, persecution in, xviii. 490; xix. 6, 7, 278.
- Pierpoint, Mr., xvii. 349; Cromwell at his house, xviii. 245; and Cromwell on Kingship, xix. 151.
- Pierre, Abbé St., vii. 242.
- Pig-philosophy, xii. 381.
- Pikes, fabricated, — see Arms; Feast of, iii. 343; in 1793, iv. 327-329.
- Pilate, xii. 15.
- Pilgrimage of Grace in 1536, xvii. 29.
- Pillau, vi. 319; vii. 117.
- Pilnitz, Convention at, iv. 80.
- Pin, Latour du, War-Minister, iii. 361, 372; dismissed, 398.
- Pinchbeck invented by Prince Rupert, xviii. 489.
- Pine, John, the English Engraver, vii. 107.
- Pinkerton's stories of Cromwell, value of, xviii. 173.
- Pinkie, battle of, xix. 434, 441.
- Pinto, Major Graf von, xi. 455, 467, 500.
- Pipin, King, vii. 231.

- Pirch, Page von, at siege of Schweidnitz, xi. 153, 164 n.
- Pitra, bookseller, xi. 117.
- Pitt, William, against France, iv. 80; and Girondins, 267; inflexible, 437; on Spain, vii. 128; his life-element, viii. 9; ix. 69; eyes bent on America, 257, 262, 272; anxious to treat with Friedrich, 292; the one hope of England, 302; tries to help Friedrich, 383; impatient of the Duke of Newcastle, 432, 433, 439; depth of sad conviction about England, 432; his speeches full of genius, 433-436; like Friedrich, a born King, 436; x. 342; stages of his course, ix. 438-442; thinks America may be conquered in Germany, 511; assists Friedrich against France, 547; x. 24, 25; subdies, 84; descent on Rochefort, 90; better hopes of America, 91, 113; at his zenith in public reputation, 183; sends Wolfe against Quebec, 241; a despotic sovereign, though a temporary one, 242, 275; resources and promptitudes, 291; reply to Parliamentary congratulations, 341; America and India both to be his, 344; important Spanish notions from Lord Marischal, 402; increases Ferdinand's army, 451, 537; consequence to him of George II.'s death, xi. 4, 8; his peace-negotiations with Choiseul suddenly explode into war with Spain, 61, 62, 90; his last Cabinet Council, 91; Bute's shameful peace, 170; English America due to Pitt, 177; Friedrich's esteem for, 381; Smelfungus's memoranda on, 382.
- Pitt, Mr., at Berlin, xi. 379.
- Pittsburg, ix. 261 n.; taken by Forbes, x. 175.
- Pity, xii. 55.
- Placard Journals, iii. 305.
- Plague, Army escapes, in 1645, xvii. 221.
- Plantagenet Kings, Mother of our, v. 73; their family name, 79; worth to England, 336.
- Plassenburg, Castle of, v. 83, 102, 183, 213.
- Plate fleet, prize of, xix. 106.
- Platen, Adjutant von, death of, ix. 490.
- Platen, General von, vii. 116; in Hinter-Pommern, x. 96, 111; in Poland, 197; despatched after Butturlin, xi. 51; marches to Colberg, 53, 68, 85.
- Plauen Canal, viii. 303.
- Playfair, cited, x. 335 n.
- Playwrights, German and English, xiii. 351; tricks of the trade, 357, 364, 379.
- Pleasure, personal, xiii. 454, 484; xiv. 170.
- Plebe, wild horse of a, xvi. 464.
- Plenary Court. See Court.
- Plessmann, Prussian Secretary, ix. 265, 324.
- Ploschke, Friedrich's Guide at Mollwitz, vii. 410.
- Plottho, Baron von, and his Reich's pleadings, ix. 384, 479; will not be served with Citatio, 544, 545; gathers documents concerning the French invasion, x. 27, 34; offers peace or war to the Reich's Princes, xi. 166.
- Plot, Gunpowder, xvii. 38; of Army, 103, 114; Waller's, 153; by Rev. C. Love, &c., xviii. 230; Anabaptist, 381, 382; Royalist, 383, 393, 483; xix. 234, 246, 275; various Republican, xviii. 393-402, 469; Gerard's, 393, 396; in the North, 452; Penruddock's, 483; Sexby's, xix. 56; Sindercomb's, 112; Venner's, 139; Hewitt and Slingsby's, 274, 275.
- Plots, of Louis's flight, iii. 236, 395, 397, 398; iv. 13-16; various, of Aristocrats, October Fifth, iii. 241, 253; Royalist, of Favras and others, 292, 390, 391; cartels, Twelve bullies from Switzerland, 392; D'Inisdal, will-o'-wisp, 396; Mirabeau and Queen, 397; pontards, iv. 37-75; Mallet-du-Pan, 76; Narbonne's, 77; traces of, in Armoire de Fer, 241; against Girondins, 255; Desmoulins on, 303; by Pitt? 392, 406; prison, 402, 409-412.
- Plötz, vi. 417.
- Plingson of Undershot, xii. 183, 200.
- Plunket, Thomas, x. 286.
- Podewils, vii. 171, 189, 268; viii. 19, 22, 38, 83, 420, 428, 503; ix. 1; interview with D'Arget at Dresden, 17; cited, 226 n.
- Post, the, and Prophet, i. 309, 337, 338; what he should be, xii. 333, 356; the highest, fittest Historian, v. 20.
- Poetic culture, xiii. 38, 53, 232, 269.
- Poetry, the true end of, xiii. 65, 268; xiv. 44, 150, 315, 349; xvi. 341; English and German Poetry mutually illustrative, xiii. 66; Poetry can never die, 83; not a mere stimulant, 211, 263, 480; our theories and genetic histories of, xiv. 339; poetry as Apologue, 276; what implied by a nation's Poetry, 315; Epic, xv. 339; present condition of, xvi. 120; the ê/o of each man a Poem, xv. 152; what, xvi. 442, 443; and Prose, distinction of, i. 311, 319; Poetry musical thought, 312; or Prose? a parting of the ways for Sterling, ii. 187, 195; Poems, 309, 241, 255.
- Poitiers, x. 18.
- Poland, edging itself into the territories of Prussia, v. 171, 173; Partition of,

- 174, 235; vi. 443; an "Aristocratic Republic," v. 241; vi. 457, 459; Polish Chivalry, v. 235; a Polish Election, vi. 480; early troubles in, vii. 290; Polish Republic, anarchic every fibre of it, x. 197; xi. 182, 237; Partition of, 225; Rulhière's History, 225, 227; Nis pozwolam, 239; Right of Confederation, 240; little or no national business transacted, 241; the door-mat of Russia, feels itself to be in a most halcyon condition, 242; Jesuit fanaticism, 242; the Czarina thinks to do something handsome in regard to Poland, 243, 244; makes Poniatowski King, 245-249; Confederation of Radom, 249-253; of Bar, 254-258; last glimmer of Confederation extinguished, 260; a specimen of each class hung on a tree, 260; the Polish Patriots apply to the Turks, 262; two Campaigns quite finish them off, 264; Austria takes forcible possession of Zips, 298, 299; the Czarina proposes dismemberment, 303; Friedrich's negotiations thereupon, 305, 306; and final agreement between the Three Partitioning Powers, 308; a case of Lynch law, upon which no spoken word of approval or apology is permissible, 313, 314; early condition of Polish Prussia, 315-318; Lindsey's Letters on, 319, 320.
- Poland, King of. See August III., Casimir Stanislaus.
- Poland, Queen of, viii. 414; tries to defend the Dresden Archives, ix. 323, 324; civilities and difficulties with Friedrich, death, 372.
- Polastron, Count, viii. 94, 98, 128, 133.
- Polignac, Duke de, a sinecurist, iii. 63; dismissed, 196; at Bâle, 216; younger, in Ham, 216.
- Polignac, Cardinal de, vii. 360.
- Politeness, Johnson's, xiv. 466; who invented, ii. 440.
- Political Economy, and its small "law of God," ii. 302; ix. 156. See Dismal Science.
- Politics and Religion in 1642, xvii. 125; English, restless whirl of, ii. 161; a social mine below, 174.
- Pöllnitz, vi. 27, 36; vii. 84, 115, 133, 259; viii. 18, 304; receives a Testimonial, 318; cited, v. 44 n., 306 n.; vi. 141 n.
- Pomerania, v. 79, 174, 271, 363; divided by Sweden, 282, 291.
- Pomfret. See Pontefract.
- Pommern Regiment, the, x. 44, 411, 412, 520.
- Pompadour, v. 136; helps Voltaire to Court, ix. 44; becomes indifferent to him, 48; compliments to Friedrich not accepted by him, 101, 237; flatteries from Maria Theresa, 244; in Committee at Babiole, 297, 299; backs Austria at the French Court, 334; enmity to Friedrich, 380, 447; x. 26, 76; very fell and feminine, 182; her death, xi. 221.
- Pompeii and its Fresco Paintings, ii. 221.
- Pompignan, President of National Assembly, iii. 179.
- Poniards, Royalist, iii. 396; Day of, 406.
- Poniatowski, Andreas, xi. 249.
- Poniatowski, Casimir, xi. 249.
- Poniatowski, Joseph, perished fighting for Napoleon, xi. 249; mentioned also, 320.
- Poniatowski, Stanislaus, at Petersburg, ix. 290; xi. 109, 233; becomes King of Poland, and is crowned without loss of his hair, 243-250; a good deal of gallantry on his hands, 252; summons Russian troops, 255, 260.
- Ponikau, ix. 266.
- Pontefract, Cromwell at, xvii. 379, 380.
- Poor-Law Amendment Act, xvi. 46, 47; laudable as a half-truth, damnable as a whole, 49; whoever will not work ought not to live, 52.
- Pope Pius VI. excommunicates Talleyrand, iv. 9; effigy of, burned, 9.
- Pope, the old, with stuffed devotional rump, xii. 135.
- Pope Alexander VII., Cromwell's opinion of, xix. 76.
- Pope, incomparable Mr., vii. 46.
- Pope, a reforming, and his huge war-formable Popedom, ii. 262; a glance at, through Sterling's eyes, 189; a lie in livery, 170; candid confession about him, 179.
- Popery, i. 261; in 1623, xvii. 49; images of, destroyed, 146; Cromwell on, xviii. 12; Cromwell to suppress, 18.
- Popes, the Avignon, v. 118, 120, 125; the Pope prays for a good quarrel among the Heretics, vi. 135. See Boniface, Hildebrand, Leo X., Papistry.
- Popish States, war with, xix. 68-72; Superstition, or Creed of Incredibilities, xi. 183, 251.
- Popularity and Originality, xiii. 248; xiv. 72; xv. 411; fell poison of popular applause, 224, 430. See Fame.
- Porbus, Francis, xii. 453, 455.
- Porta, Baptista, v. 262 n.
- Porto-Bello, vii. 237, 476.
- Portraits, Project of a National Exhibition of Scottish, xvi. 346-354.
- Portugal involved in the Spanish-English war, xi. 92-95.

- Portuguese Treaty, xviii. 388, 397; Ambassador's brother, 397; King, xix. 45.
- Posadowsky, Colonel, vii. 182; at Breslau, 328, 327; at Mollwitz, 420; in the Moravian Foray, viii. 134; on march from Prag towards Austria, 356, 358.
- Posterity, appealing to, xii. 217. See Fame.
- Potsdam Giants, Friedrich Wilhelm's, vi. 4, 396; their last service, vii. 143.
- Potter's Wheel, significance of, xii. 191.
- Pottery-Apotheosis, English, of Friedrich, x. 72.
- Potts, Sir John, letter to, xvii. 133.
- Poverty, the lot of many poets and wise men, xlii. 308; advantages of, 310; i. 329; Richter's victory over, xiv. 94, 96; Christian-Orthodoxy's dread of, 406.
- Powel, Anabaptist, against Cromwell, xviii. 381.
- Powel, Presbyterian-Royalist Colonel, xvii. 310, 414.
- Power, love of, xvi. 246; definition of, xviii. 338. See Ambition.
- Powick possessed by the Scots, xviii. 249, 250.
- Pownal, Governor of New England, his Despatch to Pitt, x. 342.
- Pownel, Major, at Preston fight, xvii. 326.
- Poyer, Colonel, his doings in Wales, xvii. 310, 313; shot, 414.
- Poyntz, General, enlists soldiers, xvii. 272; slashes the mob, 272.
- Poyntz, Stephen, vi. 100.
- Practice, the Man of, xii. 155.
- Prades, Abbé de, ix. 187, 220, 221, 268, 272; x. 72, 74.
- Prætorius, General, vii. 74; account of Friedrich's new government, 189.
- Prag, v. 261, 274; vi. 425, 427, 430; French scalade of, viii. 97; Austrian siege of, 196, 203; siege raised, 209; Belleisle's retreat from, 222; preparations for resisting siege of, 247, 250; taken by Friedrich, 253; left under Einsiedel, 256, 278; his difficult retreat from, 278; battle of, ix. 395-420; siege of, 442-446.
- Pragmatic Sanction, Karl VI.'s, v. 448; vi. 100, 264, 327; vii. 388, 426, 440; downbreak of, 442, 450.
- Prairial First to Third (May 20-22), 1795, iv. 448-449.
- Prasse, Sieur, ix. 282.
- Prayer, faithful unspoken, xii. 222; praying by working, 224.
- Prayer-meeting, Windsor Castle, 1643, xvii. 306, &c.
- Prayers for the Parliament Army, xvii. 200; an English troop interrupted at, xviii. 122; Cromwell's last, xix. 297.
- Preachers, triers of. See Triers.
- Preaching, Cromwell on, xviii. 59, 198; xix. 197.
- Précý, siege of, Lyons, iv. 324, 360.
- Predestination, vi. 227, 334.
- Premier, what a wise, might do, xii. 250; mad methods of choosing a, ii. 351, 431; a more unbecomingly class never raked out of the coze, 332; one wise Premier the beginning of all good, 290. See King, Windbag.
- Presburg, Maria Theresa at, viii. 69, 246.
- Presbyterianism, Charles I. averse to, xvii. 181; and schism, 209; adopted by Parliament, 252; overthrown, 272. See Independents.
- Present, the, and Fear, iv. 222; Time, the, xlii. 463; xiv. 260, 269; in pangs of travail with the New, 273; the living sum-total of the whole Past, 330; xv. 19; youngest-born of Eternity, ii. 261-303. See Nineteenth Century.
- Presentation, Cromwell's, to Rectory of Houghton Conquest, xix. 370.
- Prestige, xvi. 453.
- Preston, Dr., Fame of, xvii. 51.
- Preston. See Battle.
- Pretender, the Young, in Edinburgh, viii. 500.
- Pretech, action of, x. 234.
- Preuss, a meritoriously exact man, v. 314 n.; account of Friedrich's domesticities, ix. 193, 196; cited in notes, v. 22; vi. 2; vii. 151, 173, 186, 190, 199, 216; viii. 448; ix. 379.
- Preussen, East, taken possession of by Russia, x. 77; keeps quiet, and hopes for better days, 119.
- Pride, Colonel, summoned by Commons, xvii. 260; at Preston battle, 333; purges the Commons, 297; xvi. 239; in Scots War, xviii. 102, 138; would hang up the Lawyers' gowns, 139 n.; one of Cromwell's Lords, xix. 226.
- Pride of place, the last thing that deserts a sinking house, v. 202.
- Priest and Philosopher, old healthy identity of, xiv. 358, 470; the true, a kind of Prophet, i. 341; the noble, xii. 223.
- Priesthood, costumes thrown off (Bishop Tordé), iv. 90; costumes in Carmagnole, 269. See Religion.
- Priesthoods, xvi. 75.
- Priestley, Dr., riot against, iv. 79; naturalized, 160; elected to National Convention, 203.
- Priests, dissident, fugitated, iv. 4; marry in France, 88; Anti-national, hanged, 117; thirty killed near the

- Abbaye, 181; number slain in September massacre, 194; to rescue Louis, 266; drowned at Nantes, 365; four hundred at anchor, 418.
- Primogeniture, Law of, v. 186, 238; vi. 432.
- Prince, Thomas, Leveller, xvii. 421.
- Prince, Mr., of Boston, cited, viii. 445 n.
- Printing, invention of, xiv. 292; consequences of, i. 337.
- Prinzen, v. 360.
- Prinzenraub, the, xvi. 355-367; Little Albert of the, v. 251.
- Priort, vi. 441.
- Prisons, Paris, in Bastille time, iii. 176; full (August, 1792), iv. 170; number of in Paris and in France, 358; state of, in Terror, 411-414; thinned after Terror, 429.
- Prittwitz, Captain, saves the King at Kunersdorf, x. 206; mentioned also, xi. 456.
- Prittwitz, Silesian magnate, viii. 83.
- Private judgment, i. 350.
- Probst, Lieutenant, xi. 617.
- Procession, of States-General Deputies, iii. 131; of Necker and D'Orléans busts, 171; of Louis to Paris (October), 277-279; again, after Varennes, iv. 38; of Black Breeches, 107-112; of Louis to Trial, 243; at Constitution of 1793, 328.
- Proclamation by Cromwell, 1648, xvii. 364; after Dunbar fight, xviii. 133; Edinburgh, 164.
- Professions, the learned, hateful, not lovable, ii. 40.
- Progress of the species, i. 344.
- Proly, Jacobin missionary, iv. 268.
- Promethean conquests, v. 197.
- Prometheus, x. 415.
- Property, i. 151; what is, xvi. 78; none eternal but God the Maker's, 89.
- Prophecy and prodigies, iii. 316.
- Prose, good, better than bad rhyme, xvi. 147. See Poetry.
- Proselytizing, i. 8, 222.
- Protestant Refugees, v. 247, 286; Protestant Germany, 266; "enlightened Protestantism," 314, 418; the Heidelberg Protestants, 394; Birthplace of Protestantism, vi. 231; the Salzburg Protestants, 317, 399; sympathy with Friedrich, viii. 378, 467, 514; Heroism, x. 365. See Reformation.
- Protestantism, modern, xlii. 127; the root of modern European History, i. 349; not dead yet, 362; its living fruit, 367, 419; proper and improper, xii. 573.
- Protestants emancipated in France, lii. 88, 94.
- Protestation of Commons, 1641, xvii. 115; and App. xix. 306-308.
- Provence Noblesse expel Mirabeau, iii. 123.
- Prudhomme, Editor, iii. 305; on assassins, 392; turncoat, iv. 367; on Cavaignac, 381 n.
- Prussia, early condition of, v. 63; a vehemently Heathen Country, 64; attempts at conversion, 64; brought to terms by the Teutach Ritters, 94, 129; West Prussen cut away by the Polish sword, 173; how East Prussen came into the Hohenzollern Family, 301; Mübelkammer, 330; a troublesome Aristocracy, 240; tamed down by George Friedrich, 244; possessions in the Rhine Country, 264, 283; freed from Homage to Poland, 284, 285; invaded by the Swedes, 289; Kingdom of Prussia contrasted with Westphalia, 301 (see Friedrich I.); dawning of a new day for Prussia, 324, 376; Salzburg Protestants in, vi. 404; population and revenue, vii. 173; preparedness for war, viii. 331; discipline in storm of battle, 463, 494; devoutness of heart, 515; ix. 78; Prussia during ten years of peace, 29, 156, 169; the Nation of Teutschland, 30; Prussian Free-Corps, 373; Prussia to be divided amongst the Great Powers, 377; resources to meet the general attack, militias, x. 84, 106; noble conduct of young recruits at Dremstadt, 108; Prussian loyalty towards the King, 108; surrounded by enemies, 184; army becoming exhausted, 184; exchequer ditto, 187; Prussian expenditure of life on the Seven-Years War, xi. 175; Fire-Baptism, and rank among the Nations, 176; the Prussian Clio, 185; what Prussia owes to its Hohenzollern Kings, 186; ruined condition at close of the war, 190-202; dissatisfaction at Friedrich's Excise-system, 206-211; acquisition of West-Prussen, 308, 314, 316. See Brandenburg.
- Prussia, Frits of, iii. 275; against France, iv. 80 (see Brunswick, Duke); army of, ravages France, 164-166; King of, and French Princes, 210.
- Prussia, Prince of. See August Wilhelm.
- Prussian Monarchy, founder of, xix. 260 n.
- Prynne, William, first appearance of, xvii. 64; his Histriomastix, 64; in pillory, in 1633, 73; again in 1637, 93; speech in pillory, 93; purged by Pride, 398; assists Dr. Hewit, xix. 275.

- Public Opinion, force of, vii. 148; xiii. 415, 484.
- Publishing Societies, what they might do towards a real History of England, xvi. 291.
- Pückler, Reichsgraf, and Colonel Mayer, ix. 496.
- Puebla, Excellency, ix. 277, 291.
- Pufendorf, cited, v. 259 n., 287 n.
- Puffery, the deluge of, xv. 109; all-deafening blast of, xii. 138.
- Puisaye, Girondin General, iv. 312, 321; at Quiberon, 438.
- Pulawski, Fort, in Charleston Harbor, xi. 259.
- Pulawskis, the Polish, and their efforts for Freedom, xi. 258; defence of Cloister Czenstochow, 259, 260.
- Purgatory, noble Catholic conception of, i. 323.
- Puritanism, importance of Scottish and English, xii. 448.
- Puritan Revolution, the, xvi. 396, 397; Sermons, xvii. 10; history, 14; demands at Hampton-Court Conference, 87; characteristic, 51; leaders, 52.
- Puritanism, xvi. 92; founded by Knox, i. 368; true beginning of America, 368; the one epoch of Scotland, 369; Theocracy, 376; Puritanism in England, 424, 426, 444; giving way to decent Formalism, xii. 162; our last heroism, xvii. 4; faded, 10; Dryasdust on, 11; nature of, 78.
- Puritans, English and Scots, xvii. 103; become formidable, 112.
- Puseyism, xii. 115, 283; ii. 408, 435; begotten by Coleridge from his own fantasies, ii. 60, 101.
- Putney Church, Army-meeting at, xvii. 273.
- Putrescence and social decay, xv. 173.
- Putter, cited, v. 403.
- Pütter, Professor, talks with King Friedrich, xi. 168.
- Puttkammer, General, escorts convoy, ix. 485; killed at Kunersdorf, x. 265.
- Pym, John, xvi. 264; a Puritan, xvii. 52; speech by, 57; lives at Chelsea, 116.
- Pytheas, v. 55, 64.
- QUACK, unforgivable, iii. 418.
- Quackery, portentous age of, xv. 173; dishonesty the raw material alike of Quackery and Dupery, 175; deception and self-deception, 197, 202; portentous age of, xvi. 66; Quacks and Dupes, i. 435; and sham-heroes, xii. 27, 52, 137, 145, 216; originates nothing, i. 228, 275; age of, 397.
- Quadt, the, vii. 290.
- Quadt, Colonel, assists in losing Glatz, x. 445.
- Quakerism, germ of, xvii. 429.
- Quaker's, a manufacturing, care for his workmen, xii. 268, 281.
- Quakers, first Scotch, xviii. 201. See Fox, Naylor, Penn.
- Quandt, preaches before King Friedrich, vii. 182.
- Quantz, the Saxon Music-master, vi. 144; ix. 33, 81; his death, xi. 376.
- Quast, Kriegerath von, xi. 523, 524.
- Quebec, besieged by General Wolfe, x. 241, 242; captured, 305-307; decision that America is to be English and not French, 340.
- Quedlinburg, vii. 184.
- Queen of Charles I., doings by, xvii. 141.
- Queen of France, Stanislaus's daughter becomes, vi. 462, 469; vii. 352, 354.
- Queen Regnant, ix. 202. See Elizabeth Christina of Brunswick-Bevern.
- Queen Mother. See Sophie Dorothea.
- Queen. See Antoinette, Marie.
- Queens, the average of, vii. 76.
- Queret-Démery, prisoner in Bastille, iii. 192.
- Queries to Edinburgh clergy, xviii. 162; of Scotch Western Army, 175.
- Quiberon, debarkation at, iv. 438.
- Quietest, the greatest by nature also the, xv. 426. See Silence, Wholeness.
- Quintus Icilius, otherwise Guichard, ix. 428; with Friedrich at Breslau, x. 74; how he got his new name, 208, 209; sketch of his career, 210, 211, 424; at siege of Dresden, 428; in Leipzig, 508; xi. 9; his respect for Gellert, 12; brings him to the King, 13, 15, 17; undertakes the sacking of Hubertsburg, 21, 173; with Prince Henri in Saxony, 108; his troops paid off at close of the war, 172; his death, 276; mentioned also, 331 n.
- Quitow, Dietrich von, v. 161.
- Quixote, Don, x. 532.
- RABAUT, St. Etienne, French Reformer, iii. 139; in Commission of Twelve, iv. 301; hides between two walls, 325; guillotined, 357.
- Rabenau, Rittmeister, xi. 82, 83.
- Rabener of Berlin, xi. 12.
- Racine's Atthalis, Friedrich's high opinion of, xi. 206.
- Racknitz, Countess, ix. 24.
- Radewitz, Camp of, vi. 168, 203.
- Radicalism, speculative, i. 12, 24, 48; parliamentary, xvi. 99; paralytic, 106; Sterling's early, ii. 86, 60; tottering for him, and threatening to crumble,

- 62; fallen to wreck, 88; the opposite extreme, 101.
 Radom, Confederation of, xi. 252, 254.
 Radzivil, Prince, at Radom, xi. 252-254.
 Radzivil, Princess, elopes with Karl Philip, v. 397.
 Ragland Castle besieged, xvii. 241; surrenders, 236.
 Ragnarök, i. 271.
 Rahel Varuhagen von Ense. See Ense.
 Railway Promoters, xvi. 452.
 Railways, how, are shifting all towns of Britain into new places, xii. 335; stupendous railway miracles, 345.
 Rainsborough, Colonel, at Bristol siege, xvii. 217; deserted by the Fleet, 233; assassinated, 380.
 Raleigh, Sir Walter, his fine mantle, i. 37; execution of, xvii. 46; History, Cromwell's opinion of, xviii. 53.
 Ramadhan, the English, xii. 362.
 Rambonet, employed in the Herstal Affair, vii. 224, 226, 231, 236.
 Ram-dass the Hindoo man-god, xv. 413.
 Rameau, ix. 44.
 Ramen betrays Queen Sophie Dorothee's confidence, vi. 154, 158.
 Ramin, Governor of Berlin, xi. 338, 386.
 Ramrods, iron, v. 320.
 Ramsay, Rev. Robert, preaches before Cromwell, xviii. 225.
 Ramsay, Chevalier, vii. 360.
 Rane, the Far-travelled, xix. 440.
 Ranft, cited, vi. 271 n.
 Ranke, viii. 26, 269, 420, 429, 476; cited, 299 n., 307 n., 362 n.; ix. 380 n.
 Rannleben, Judge, and the Miller-Arnold case, xi. 434-447.
 Rapin, xix. 391, 438 n.
 Räsfield, vii. 225; Prussian Ambassador in Holland, viii. 18, 23.
 Rasomowski, Count, xi. 128.
 Rastadt, v. 303.
 Rathenau, v. 288.
 Rathenow's, Captain von, interview with Friedrich, xi. 515, 516.
 Ratibor, v. 193, 234.
 Raumer, cited, vii. 296 n.; viii. 35 n., 480 n.
 Rauter, General, at Zorndorf, x. 35.
 Ravailac, the distracted Devil's-Jesuit, v. 256.
 Rawlins, Captain of Parliament horse, xvii. 202.
 Raynal, Abbé, Philosophe, iii. 55; his letter to Constituent Assembly, 227; xi. 479.
 Read, what it is to, an author, xiii. 145, 261; xiv. 3, 54; xvi. 177.
 Readers, good, xvi. 393.
 Ready-Reckoner, strange state of our, xii. 159.
 Real, the, always respectable, xii. 368.
 Reality, deep significance of, xiv. 329, 394; xv. 84, 220, 231, 284; xvi. 240; worth of, v. 329. See Fact.
 Reason, Goddess of, iv. 371, 372. See Feast.
 Rebecca, the, boarded by the Spaniards, vi. 323.
 Rebecqui, of Marseilles, iv. 69; in National Convention, 202; against Robespierre ("Moi"), 227; retires, 274; drowns himself, 330.
 Rebeur, President von, xi. 436.
 Recruiters, new Members of Parliament, xvii. 236.
 Redbank, fight at, xvii. 323. See Preston.
 Reding, Swiss, massacred, iv. 185.
 Reece, Mr., Sterling's early schoolmaster, ii. 23, 26.
 Reform, xiv. 259; not joyous but grievous, xvi. 246; Ministries, Benthamite, 103; strange meaning of the new Reform measure, 428, 439; like Charity, must begin at home, xii. 36; poor old Genius of, ii. 324; administrative, v. 324. See Administrative Reform, Downing Street.
 Reformation, era of the, xiv. 229; in Scotland, 420; the Markgraf George in the great business of, v. 194; the Event of the Sixteenth Century, 215, 228; fatal consequences of rejecting, 217; symptoms of the Thirty-Years War, 253; George Wilhelm's perplexities, 265.
 Reformation, Knox's History of the, xii. 441.
 Reformer, the true, i. 241; xvii. 80.
 Rége, Major de, killed at Ottmachten, vii. 337, 339.
 Regensburg, vii. 377; viii. 245.
 Rehback, Jakob, v. 131.
 Reichartsbrunn, Abbey of, v. 99.
 Reichenbach, vi. 165; his Cipher Correspondence with Grumkow, 176, 184, 189; his recall, 197.
 Reichenbach, battle of, xi. 148-150.
 Reichenberg, battle of, ix. 393, 394.
 Reichs-Kammergericht, vii. 236; Holy Roman Reich, 439, 451; Reich thunder, ix. 369, 383, 386; Execution Army to be got on foot, 442, 476; Citatio Fiscalis, 544, 545; Army all gone to wreck, x. 19; placed under command of Zweibrück, 101; in Saxony, 140, 141; tries to capture Leipzig and Torgau, 171; driven from Erfurt, 195; chased by Prince Henri, 200; again enters Saxony, 286, 293; at Maxen, 356; repulsed by Hülben, 423; has temporary possession of Saxony, 503; rapidly retreats before Friedrich,

- 506; driven from Leipzig, 508; makes its exit from the world, xi. 166.
- Reid, Dr., xiv. 25.
- Reinbeck, Herr, writes to Wolf, vii. 155.
- Reinhart, Count, x. 876.
- Reinsberg, vi. 366, 456; vii. 24; Friedrich's Mansion at, 22, 26; given to Prince Henri, xi. 513.
- Reklam, Herr, Berlin Jeweller, ix. 135.
- Religion, dead letter and living spirit of, i. 89; weaving new vestures, 182, 208; Christian, and French Revolution, iv. 348; abolished (Curé Parens, Revolutionary Army), 368-370; Clootz on, 368; a new, 371, 407; utilitarian, xiii. 211, 482; heroic idea of, xiv. 95; self-conscious, 365; how to teach, xvi. 109; a man's, the chief fact with regard to him, i. 236; based on Hero-worship, 245; propagating by the sword, 291; cannot succeed by being "easy," 300; a great heaven-high Unquestionability, xii. 60, 66, 114; gone, 133; all true work is, 195; foolish craving for a "new," 218, 224; inner light of a man's soul, 219, 397; not the many things a man tries to believe, but the few he cannot doubt, 379; cannot be made up of doubts, ii. 94, 101; teaching, v. 412. See Christian, Church, Clergy, Education, Prayer, Priests, Worship.
- Rembrandt, xi. 168.
- Remonstrance, against Buckingham, xvii. 62; against Laud, 66; and Petition of Ministers, 106; Grand, of Long Parliament, 117; of Scotch Western Army, xviii. 174, 179, 182.
- Remy, Cornet, at Clermont, iv. 30.
- Rénault, Cécile, to assassinate Robespierre, iv. 406; guillotined, 410.
- Réné, King, bequeathed Avignon to the Pope, iv. 63.
- Renner, the. See Hugo von Trimberg.
- Rennes, riot in, iii. 102.
- Rentsch, cited, v. 81 n.
- Rentzel, v. 380; xi. 407 n.
- Renunciation, the beginning of Life, xiv. 16; one harmonious element of the highest, xv. 142.
- Renwick, last of Cameronians, iv. 269.
- Repaire, Tardivet du, Bodyguard (Fifth October), iii. 269; rewarded, 396.
- Repentance, sacredness of, xii. 368.
- Repin, Prince, ix. 63; at Congress of Teschen, xi. 423.
- Representation, double, of Tiers État, iii. 117.
- Representative, Hereditary, ii. 393. See Louis.
- Representatives, Paris, Town, iii. 296 (see Club, Electoral); Convention,—see Commissioners.
- Republic, French, first mention of, iv. 21: first year of, 201, 330; established, 211, 218; universal (Clootz's), 229; Girondin, 286; one and indivisible, 296; its triumphs, 435-439.
- Republic of Literature, xiii. 196. See Literary Men, Literature.
- Republica, ancient and modern, ii. 277.
- Resolutioner, Protester, xviii. 183, 202.
- Respectability, xv. 157; baleful influence of, 228, 407; how generated, 293. See Gignamity.
- Resson, Sieur, reports Lafayette to Jacobins, iv. 114.
- Retzow, Colonel, at Pardubitz, viii. 168; on commencement of Seven-Years War, ix. 311, 312; on battle of Prag, 414, 415; Friedrich's speech before Leuthen, x. 42; on Zorndorf, 129; Hochkirch, 155, 164; Prussian army losing its best men, 183, 330: cited also, vii. 368 n.; ix. 277 n., 415 n.; x. 436.
- Retzow, Major-General, in conference with Friedrich, ix. 311, 312; under Prince of Prussia, 484; Leuthen, x. 49, 63; at Leutomschl with Fouquet, 110; at Hochkirch, 148; put under momentary arrest, 149; occupies Weissenburg, 152, 153, 163; in battle of Hochkirch, 163, 164; death at Schweidnitz, 169.
- Reusch, Colonel, at Tein Bridge, viii. 268.
- Rauss, Counts von, v. 102.
- Reuss, Graf von, at Versailles, vii. 352, 359.
- Réveillon, first balloon at house of, iii. 51; house beset, destroyed, 198.
- Revenge, duty of, xvi. 61; mournful twaddle about, ii. 328; sacred duty of, 332.
- Reverence, early growth of, i. 76; indispensability of, 190; worth of, xiii. 232; not sycophancy, xiv. 415; xvi. 142; need of enlightenment, xv. 26; reverence for the Highest, in ourselves and in others, 163; our want of, xii. 328; xvi. 207; Goethe on, 411; what it means, viii. 365.
- Review-article, v. 97. See Literature.
- Reviewers, duty of, xiii. 338; two methods of what is called reviewing, xiv. 7, 366; the trade well-nigh done, 312; Smelfungus's despair, xvi. 190. See Read.
- Revolt, Paris in, iii. 175; of Gardes Françaises, 177; becomes Revolution, 194; military, what, 349; of Lepelletier section, iv. 455-458.
- Revolution, French, causes of, iii. 15, 36, 56, 95; Lord Chesterfield on, 16; not a Revolt, 194; meaning of the - term, 204; whence it grew, 205; general commencement of, 219; editors, 227; prosperous characters in, 236; Philosophes and, 302; state of army in, 350; progress of, 378, 386; duelling in, 389; Republic decided on, iv. 19; European powers and, 79-82; Royalist opinion of, 82; cardinal movements in, 158; Danton and the, 199; changes produced by the, 218; and Atheism, 248; effect of King's death on, 264-266; Girondin idea of, 273, 286; suspicion in, 303; like Saturn, 346; Terror and, 348; and Christian religion, 348; Revolutionary Committees, 288, 337, 358; Government doings in, 386; Robespierre essential to, 427; end of, 459; a European, rapidly proceeding, xv. 28; English, our great, xvi. 176, 264; Civil-War Pamphlets, 266, 267; Pride's purge, 289; French, meaning of the, xiii. 486; masses of Quackism set fire to, xv. 176; a greater work never done by men so small, 305; the Event of these modern ages, 377; Parliamentary History of, 377-399; Thiers's History, Mignet's, and others, 379; curious collections of revolutionary books, pamphlets, &c., 383; death of Foulon, 386; the Palais-Royal, white and black Cockades, the Insurrection of Women, 389; the Jacobins Club, in its early days of moral-sublime, 392; the September Massacre, 394; the South-American and set of Revolutions, xvi. 305; history of the French, i. 418, 419, 455.

- Revolutionary Horologe, ii. 63.
- Reward and Punishment, ii. 329, 334.
- Reynard the Fox, Apologue of, xiv. 250; researches into its origin, 294; analysis of, 298; an extract, showing the language of our old Saxon Fatherland, 303.
- Reynolds, Colonel, at Ferns, xvii. 468; surprises Carrick, 497; in Cromwell's First Parliament, xviii. 398; assists the French, xix. 178, 221, 225; death of, 232.
- Reynolds's Portrait of Lord Granby, x. 455.
- Rhadamanthus, not so well informed as he might be, vi. 287; his post long vacant, ii. 234.
- Rheims, in September Massacre, iv. 197.
- Rhenitz of Dresden, ix. 265.
- Rhyn, the, a little river near Reinsberg, vii. 24; xi. 513.
- Ribble Bridge, fight at, xvii. 330. See Preston.
- Rich, Colonel, in Scotland, xviii. 241, 243.
- Rich, Mr., and Frances Cromwell, xix. 51-54, 234; death of, 288.
- Richard Cœur-de-Lion and the Siege of Acre, v. 90, 98.
- Richard of Cornwall, sham Kaiser, v. 106; death, 108.
- Richardson's clearness of sight, xiii. 274.
- Richardson's account of Prince Henri's visit to Petersburg, xi. 300-303; cited, 366.
- Richelieu, at death of Louis XV., iii. 19, 25; death of, 112.
- Richelieu, Duc de, viii. 442; ix. 48; takes Minorca, 303, 304, 478; supersedes D'Estrées, 497, 504, 508; one of the most magnificent marauders, 504, 518; Letter from Friedrich, 507; Convention of Kloster-Zeven, 509, 510; superseded by Prince de Clermont, x. 24.
- Richmond, Duke, present to, xvii. 285.
- Richter, Jean Paul Friedrich, i. 26; xiii. 2-25; leading events of his life, 8; his multifarious works, 11; extract from Quintus Fixlein, 24; poverty, 310; brief sketch of his life and writings, xiv. 68; J. P. F. Richter again, 72-137; his peculiar style, 73; a true literary man, heroic and devout, 75; interesting fragment of Autobiography, 78; birth and pedigree, 80; his good Father and early home, 81; self-vision, 87; education and extreme poverty, 88; his first productions, 94; this too a Spartan Boy, 98; his Costume controversy, 99; dares to be poor, 104; triumphant success of Heperus, 110; his marriage, 112; unwearied diligence, 113; blindness and death, 115; intellectual and literary character, 116; extracts, 123; on Daughter-full houses, 128; his vast Imagination, 130; his Dream of Atheism, 131; Varnhagen's pleasant visit to, xvi. 9; can escape out of hearsays, i. 243.
- Ridicule not the test of truth, xiii. 406.
- Ried, General, at Torgau, x. 515.
- Riedesel, at Himmelskron, x. 202.
- Riesbeck, cited, v. 84 n.; vi. 401 n.
- Right and Wrong infinitely different, xiv. 447; xv. 144; the question of, only the second question, 158; as Heaven is to Hell, i. 305, 326; silent awful sense of, ii. 306; xii. 398; dim oblivion of, ii. 334.
- Rights, vii. 278; American Rights of Man, xi. 180.
- Rights and Might, xvi. 61; the final "rights" of man an abstruse inquiry, 68. See Evil, Might.
- Riot, Paris, in May, 1750, iii. 15; Cornwall (in 1775), 35; at Palais-de-Justice (1787), 85; (see Grenoble, Bears.

- Rennes); triumphs, 110, 111; of Rue St. Antoine, 125-128; of July Fourteenth (1789) and Bastille, 171-194; at Strasbourg, 223; Paris, on the veto, 233; Versailles Château, October Fifth (1789), 243-273; uses of, to National Assembly, 296; Paris, on Nanci affair, 371; at De Castries' Hotel, no theft, 392; on flight of King's Aunts, 400; at Vincennes, 402; on King's proposed journey to St. Cloud, iv. 6; in Champ-de-Mars, with sharp shot, 45; Avignon, — see Avignon; Birmingham, — see Birmingham; Paris, Twentieth June (1793), 111; August Tenth (1793), 136-153; Grain, 229; Paris, at Théâtre de la Nation, 249; selling sugar, 267; of Thermidor (1794), 419-426; of Germinal (1795), 442; of Prairial, 445; final, of Vendémiaire, 455-461.
- Riots. See Apprentices.
- Riouffe, Girondin, iv. 323; to Bordeaux, 323; in prison, 335; on death of Girondins, 344; on Mme. Roland, 355.
- Ripon, Countess de Grey, and Viner, ancestor of the, vii. 467 n.
- Ripperda, Duke de, v. 457; vi. 54, 108.
- Yiquettis, the, iii. 134. See Mirabeau.
- Ritter, Doria, vi. 286.
- Rivarol, staff of genius, iv. 75.
- Robber-Towers and Free-Towns of Germany, xiv. 287.
- Robbers, the, Schiller's play, xx. 15; not an immoral work, 24; consequences to its author of its publication, 25; remodelled for the stage, 292.
- Robert de Montfort, xii. 107.
- Robertson's History of Scotland, xiv. 420.
- Robespierre, Maximilien, account of, iii. 138; derided in Constituent Assembly, 214; Jacobin, 308, 387; incorruptible, on tip of left, 387; elected public accuser, 409; after King's flight, iv. 20; at close of Assembly, 52; at Arras, position of, 54; plans in 1793, 85; chief priest of Jacobins, 96; invisible on August Tenth, 137; reappears, 162; on September Massacre, 184; in National Convention, 201; accused by Girondins, 227; accused by Louvet, 238; acquitted, 239; on Mirabeau's bust, 241; at King's trial, 242, 252; Condorcet on, 279; at Queen's trial, 341; in Salut Committee, 376; and Paris Municipality, 376; embraces Danton, 392; Desmoulins and, 394; and Danton, 396; Danton on, at trial, 399; his three scoundrels, 399; supreme, 402; to be assassinated, 406; at Feast of Être Suprême, 407-409; apocalyptic, Théot, 409; on Conthon's plot-decree, 410; reserved, 415; his schemes, 415; fails in Convention, 417; applauded at Jacobins, 418; accused, 420; rescued, 422; at Town-hall, declared out of law, 422; half-killed, 424; guillotined, 425; essential to Revolution, 427; his scraggiest of prophetic discourses, xv. 306; an atrabilious Formula of a man, nearly two years Autocrat of France, 307; once an Advocate in Arras, xvi. 251.
- Robespierre, Augustin, is decreed accused, iv. 420; fall of, guillotined, 424, 426.
- Robinson, Luke, sent to Charles I., xvii. 243; turncoat, xix. 247.
- Robinson, Rev. Mr., Cromwell's letter to, xvii. 405.
- Robinson, Sir Thomas, vi. 100, 293, 297, 436; difficulties at Vienna, viii. 29, 34, 50, 55, 59; Audiences of King Friedrich, 37; King refuses to see him, 60; Letter to Hyndford, 61; interview with Maria Theresa, 479, 480; mentioned also, vii. 249, 260; viii. 12, 84, 144, 396; ix. 191, 439.
- Robison, Professor, x. 335.
- Rochambeau, one of Four Generals, iii. 346; retires, iv. 104.
- Roche-Aymon, Grand Almoner of Louis XV., iii. 18, 24; cited, xi. 484 n.
- Rochefoucauld, Duke de la, Liberal, iii. 142; President of Directory, iv. 116; killed, 197.
- Rochester, Earl. See Wilmot.
- Rochow, Lieutenant-Colonel, vi. 231, 242, 246; prevents Friedrich's Flight, 260, 278; Commandant of Berlin, ix. 542; x. 492.
- Rockingham, Marquis of, ix. 108.
- Rodeu, mentioned to the King by Duke Ferdinand, xi. 195; royal dialogue with him, 196-198; second audience, and standing appointment, 199, 317 n.
- Rödenbeck, cited, v. 396 n; vi. 258 n.; vii. 154 n.; viii. 368 n.; ix. 464 n.; x. 443 n.
- Rödenskjöld, Swedish Ambassador, viii. 308.
- Röder, General, vi. 477.
- Rodney attacks Havre-de-Grace, xi. 224.
- Rodolf II., Kaiser, v. 254, 256.
- Roderer, Syndic, Feuillant, iv. 108; "Chronicle of Fifty Days," 110; on Fédérés Ammunition, 136; dilemma at Tuileries (August Tenth), 137, 144.
- Röel, Lieutenant-General, ix. 8, 13.
- Roghill, xviii. 26.
- Rognwald (Reginald) of Möre, xix. 394; murdered, 397.
- Rohan, Cardinal, Diamond Necklace and, iii. 56; and Cagliostro, xv. 207; what he was, 240; how he bore his dismissal from Court, and what came of

- it, 246-300; and Voltaire, vii. 43; xi. 508.
- Rohdich, Commandant, xi. 506.
- Rohr, Captain, ix. 419.
- Rohwedel, vi. 307.
- Roi, M., ix. 45.
- Rokewood, Mr., xii. 43.
- Roland, M., notice of, iii. 322; in Paris, iv. 70; Minister (no buckles), 97; letter, and dismissal of, 106; recalled, 153; decline of, 159; on September Massacres, 192; and Pache, 228; doings of, 228; resigns, 261; fled, 310; suicide of, 366.
- Roland, Madame, notice of, at Lyons, iii. 322; narrative by, 323; in Paris, after King's flight, iv. 21; and Barbaroux, 70; public dinners and business, 97; character of, 98; misgivings of, 229; accused, 250; Girondin declining, 279; arrested, 310; in prison, condemned, 354; guillotined, 355.
- Roland of Roncesvalles, xv. 229.
- Rolf, Major, accused, xvii. 349.
- Rolf, the Ganger, infatuation of Normandy, xix. 395; surname, 396.
- Rollin, vii. 38.
- Roloff, Provost, vii. 182, 184.
- Roman Angura, Cicero's, ii. 408; conquests, xii. 158; xvi. 63; Emperors, era of the, xiii. 453; Romans out, English in, xvi. 86; history, 394, 395; the Dictatorship, 398.
- Romance, the age of, can never cease, xv. 226; none ever seemed romantic to itself, 229.
- Romanzof sent by Soltikof to Daun, x. 319.
- Romanzow besieges Colberg, xi. 63-66, 85; sent against the Turks, 265, 291-294.
- Romanzow junior, xi. 487.
- Rome, a tour to, in the twelfth century, xii. 70; Sterling at, ii. 162, 168.
- Römer, General, at Mollwitz, vii. 413; killed, 417.
- Romme, in National Convention, iv. 202; in Caen prison, 313; his new Calendar, 330, 331; in riot of Prairial (1795), 447; suicide, 449.
- Romouf, pursues the King, iv. 21; at Varennes, 36.
- Ronsin, General of revolutionary army, iv. 358, 373; arrested, 391; guillotined, 395.
- Rooksby, Major, killed at Dunbar, xviii. 129.
- Roquesfeuille, Admiral, viii. 313, 315.
- Rose, Medicinal-Assessor, ix. 100.
- Rosière, Thuriot de la, summons Bastille, iii. 183; in First Parliament, iv. 59; in National Convention, 247; President at Robespierre's fall, 420.
- Roskowski, symbolical Polish Nobleman, xi. 315.
- Ross Town, besieged, xvii. 439; taken, 486.
- Rossbach, battle of, v. 9; x. 3; the country round, 8-11; Napoleon's opinion of, 21.
- Rossignol, in September Massacre, iv. 187; in La Vendée, 353.
- Rossold of Sangerhausen, x. 31.
- Rostock, v. 272.
- Rotch, of Boston, loses his tea, xi. 350, 351.
- Roth, Count von, vii. 301; defends Neisse, 343; Brünn, viii. 134, 136.
- Roth, Lieutenant-General, taken prisoner at Freyberg, xi. 163.
- Rothenburg, Count, and his French fashions, v. 341.
- Rothenburg, at Mollwitz, vii. 412, 420; at Chotusitz, viii. 158, 161; despatched to Paris, 299; sent with reinforcements to Prag, 376; at Hohenfriedberg, 463; at Dresden, ix. 18; much esteemed by Friedrich, 172, 173; his death, 179; mentioned also, vi. 242; vii. 167, 360; viii. 332, 383, 507; ix. 32, 64, 175.
- Rothes, Earl, taken at Worcester, xviii. 253.
- Rothschloss, affair of, vii. 489.
- Rottembourg, Count de, properly von Rothenburg, vi. 503.
- Rottotreddo, battle of, ix. 42 n.
- Roucoules, Dame de, v. 31, 312.
- Roucoux, battle of, ix. 41 n., 59.
- Rough, John, xii. 432.
- Rouillé, M. de, ix. 298.
- Rous, Sir Francis, and the Barebones Parliament, xvi. 399.
- Rouse, Francis, Translator of the Psalms, xvii. 100; in Little Parliament, xviii. 299; Speaker of Little Parliament, 335; of Council of State, 385 n.; in Cromwell's First Parliament, 398; one of Cromwell's Lords, xix. 236.
- Rousseau, Jean Jacques, Contrat Social of, iii. 53; Gospel according to, 315; burial-place of, 417; statue decreed to, iv. 51; was half sage, half maniac, xiii. 411, 439; xiv. 389; xv. 112; xvi. 227; not a strong man, his Portrait, egoism, i. 406; his passionate appeals, 407; his Books, like himself, unhealthy, the Evangelist of the French Revolution, 409; unveiling himself, viii. 45; is Legation Secretary, ix. 298; finds refuge with Lord Marischal, and writes to Friedrich, xi. 218.
- Rousset, cited, viii. 481 n.; xi. 178 n.
- Rovigo, Duc de, x. 377.
- Rowe, Scoutmaster, character of, xvii. 357.

- Royalists, Club of, extinguished, iii. 311; named "blacks," 390; duelling, 389-393; plot for King's flight (see Plot); poniards, 396, 405; staff of genius of, iv. 75, 76; preparations at Coblenz, 81.
- Royalty, signs of, demolished, iv. 19, 153; abolished in France, 311.
- Royou, King's friend, editor of "Ami du Roi," iv. 83.
- Royston, Rendezvous. See Army.
- Ruamps, Deputy, against Couthon, iv. 410.
- Rübezahl, viii. 345; ix. 394.
- Rücker, Dr., of Frankfurt, ix. 229.
- Rudenskjöld (or Rüdenskjöld) reveals Brühl's scheme to Friedrich, viii. 64; mentioned also, 505.
- Rüdiger von Manesse, cited, v. 113 n.
- Rudolph of Hapsburg, xiv. 253; v. 96, 157; elected Kaiser, 107; humiliation of King Ottocar, 109; unlovely posterity, 117.
- Rüffer, citizen of Landshut, viii. 85, 89.
- Rügen, Isle of, v. 353.
- Ruhl, notice of, iv. 59; in riot of Prairial, 447; suicide, 449.
- Rulhière, M., cited, xi. 116; his book on Poland, 225, 236, 241-245, 255.
- Rump, doings of the, xviii. 263-266; must be dissolved, 290; dismissed by Cromwell, 292.
- Rupert, Prince, his father dies, xvii. 71; plunderings of, in 1643, 127; nicknamed Bobber, 160; relieves York, 181; routed at Marston Moor, 181; at Worcester, in 1645, 196; at Naseby battle, 206; at Bristol, 215; manner of his leaving Bristol, 222; quits England, 236; in Irish seas, 489.
- Rupert, Kaiser Kur-Pfalz, v. 150, 157.
- Ruppin, vi. 365, 395.
- Rushworth, John, in danger at Naseby, xvii. 217; Cromwell's letter to, 244; with Cromwell in Scotland, xviii. 102; reporter of Cromwell's Speech, xix. 266.
- Rushworthian chaos, xvii. 11, 51; xviii. 102.
- Ruskin, John, "Who is best man?" xix. 492; Fora Clavigera, cited, 493.
- Russel, Francis, Henry Cromwell's father-in-law, xvii. 184, 237; purged by Pride, 405.
- Russian project of partition of Prussia, viii. 23; Russians hired by England, ix. 60, 66, 290; resolutions against Friedrich, 284, 293; share in the partitioning of Prussia, 379; invasion of Preussen, 474, 480, 520, 534; forcible possession, x. 77; the regular Army shares the common horror felt against the Cossacks, 118; Russian soldiery, 123, 138; Russian Army in possession of Frankfurt, 247, 248; the regular Russians civil and orderly, 247; their honorable treatment of Major Kleist, 271; joy at Petersburg for the victory of Kunersdorf, 273; Army threatens Silesia, 419, 420, 447; advances towards Neisse, to join Loudon, xi. 39; junction near Liegnitz, 40; Russian Grenadiers at Schweidnitz, 71; Russian obedience and steadfastness, 135, 241; satire on Prince Galitzin, 265; war with Turkey, 277, 290-295; Partition of Poland, 306-309.
- Russians, the silent, worth something, xii. 154, 156; the Czar of Russia, 175.
- Rutowaki, vi. 75; viii. 94, 98, 130, 132, 133, 502; his grand scheme against King Friedrich, 504; is beaten at Kesselsdorf, ix. 9-13; vanishes into Bohemia, 15; disastrous management at Pirna, 354-356, 360-364.
- Ryswick, Peace of, v. 399.
- SA, DON PANTALEON, beheaded, xviii. 397.
- Saale River, x. 5.
- Sabatier de Cabre, at Royal Session, iii. 90; arrested, 91; liberated, 94.
- Sachs, Hans, a literary contemporary of Luther, xiii. 32.
- Sachsen-Gotha. See Gotha.
- Sachsen-Meiningen, Duchess of, vi. 361.
- Sack, Baron de, ix. 283.
- Sackville, Lord George, viii. 444; x. 176 n.; in charge of Münster country, 198; disgraceful conduct at Minden, 237, 241.
- Sadler, Adjutant, in Ireland, xviii. 48.
- Sadler, John, Cromwell's letter to, offering him Chief Justiceship in Münster, xix. 346.
- Saffron Walden. See Army.
- Sagas, value of the, Snorro's History mainly made out of, xix. 391.
- Sahara, Desert, iv. 158.
- Sahay, skirmish of, viii. 165.
- St. Abb's Head described, xviii. 123.
- St. Albans, Commission of Array at, xvii. 131. See Army.
- St. Andrews, futile siege of, by Arran, xix. 431; oubliette of, 429, 431; surrenders to the French, 433.
- St. Antoine (see Riot), to Versailles, iii. 250, 251; War-horse supper, 260; closes shops (Nanci affair), 363; at Vincennes, 402; at Jacobins, iv. 102; and Marseillaise, 180; August Tenth, 143.
- St. Cloud, Louis prohibited from, iv. 6.
- St. Denis, Mayor of, hanged, iii. 296.

- St. Domingo, Insurrection in, iii. 290; iv. 72.
- St. Fagan's, fight at, xvii. 311.
- St. Farjeau, Lepelletier, in National Convention, iv. 203; at King's trial, 253; assassinated, 256; burial of, 262.
- St. George's Hill, Levellers at, xvii. 427.
- St. Huruge, Marquis, cracked, iii. 197; bull-voice, 229; imprisoned, 234; at Versailles, 256; and Pope's effigy, iv. 9; at Jacobins, 102; on King's trial, 249.
- St. Ives described, xvii. 83, 84.
- St. James's Fields, scene in, xvii. 271; House, bestowed on Cromwell, xviii. 30.
- St. John, Oliver, character of, xvii. 95; xviii. 347; related to Cromwell, xvii. 97; is Solicitor-General, 107; Cromwell's letters to, 163, 347; with Cromwell at Aylesbury, xviii. 266; character of, 264; at Conference at Speaker's, 270, 271; ambassador to Holland, 277.
- St. John, Mrs., Cromwell's letter to, xvii. 97.
- St. Johnston (Perth) surrenders, xviii. 241.
- St. Johnston's ribbons, xii. 444.
- St. Just, in National Convention, iv. 202; on King's trial, 242; in Salut Committee, 275; at Strasburg, 378; repels Prussians, 383; on Revolution, 390; in Committee-room (Thermidor), 418; his report, 419; arrested, 420.
- St. Louis Church, States-General procession from, iii. 131.
- St. Marie. See Miomandre.
- St. Méard, Journiac de, in prison, iv. 170; his "Agony" at La Force, 185-191.
- St. Manebould, alarms at, iv. 24, 26, 29; Prussians at, 208.
- St. Méry, Moreau de, 3000 orders, iii. 193; prostrated, iv. 132.
- St. Neot's, fight at, xvii. 321.
- St. Nicholas, Thomas, Cromwell's letter to, xvii. 389; account of, 389.
- St. Olaf. See Olaf the Thick-set.
- St. Pierre's "Paul and Virginia," iii. 59.
- Saint-Simonian Portent, the, ii. 47, 133.
- Sainte-Beuve, M., x. 379 n.
- Saints, living Communion of, i. 187, 192; and Sinners, xii. 54.
- Saldern, General-Adjutant, at Mollwitz, vii. 410; in battle of Liegnitz, x. 477; of Torgau, 625; dialogue with the King at Leipzig, refuses to act contrary to his honor and oath, xi. 18-20; in favor with the King, 21.
- Salisbury, Levellers at, xvii. 431; insurrection at, xviii. 486.
- Salles, Deputy, guillotined, iv. 346.
- Salm, regiment, at Nanci, iii. 355.
- Salmon, cited, vi. 55 n.
- Saltpetre, digging for, iv. 379.
- Salut Publique. See Committee.
- Salzburg Protestants, the, Friedrich Wilhelm's interest in, vi. 317; vii. 112; Emigration of, vi. 399; the Salzburg Country, 400; vii. 244, 402.
- Salzdahlum, vi. 451.
- Salzwedel, v. 59, 61, 76.
- Sam-Slicks, vagrant, homeless, rest nowhere, xii. 270.
- Samson, Monk, teacher of the Novices, xii. 61; his parentage, dream and dedication to St. Edmund, 69; sent to Rome, 70; home-tribulations, 72; silence, weariness, 73; though a servant of servants, his words all tell, 77; elected Abbot, 81; arrival at St. Edmundsbury, 83; getting to work, 86, 89; his favor for fit men, 23; not unmindful of kindness, 94; a just clear-hearted man, 95; hospitality and stoicism, 96; troubles and triumphs, 98; in Parliament, 103; practical devotion, 109; Bishop of Ely outwitted, 111; King Richard withstood, 113; zealous interest in the Crusades, 114; a glimpse of the Body of St. Edmund, 117; the culminating point of his existence, 122; contemporary of Albert the Bear, v. 80.
- Samson Agonistes, v. 7.
- Sandershausen, fight of, x. 177 n.
- Sandilands of Caldar, xii. 428.
- Sanitary Reform, xii. 254.
- Sansculottism, apparition of, iii. 205; what it effects, 223; growth of, 281, 296; at work, 291; origin of term, 396; and Royalty, iv. 111; above theft, 193; a fact, 201; French Nation and, 219; Revolutionary Tribunal and, 291; how it lives, 291; consummated, 347, 351, 366, 379; fall of, 427; last rising of, 444-448; death of, 449.
- Sans-Souci, ix. 36-38; the Neue Palais of, xi. 216, 217, 220.
- Santa Cruz, Blake beats Spanish at, xix. 177.
- Santerre, Brewer, notice of, iii. 133; at siege of Bastille, 187; at Tuileries, 396; June Twentieth, iv. 110; meets Marseillaise, 130; Commander of Guards, 141; how to relieve famine, 230; at King's trial, 243; at King's execution, 259; fails in La Vendée, 332; St. Antoine disarmed, 443.
- Sarcasm, the panoply of, i. 100.
- Sardinia, King of, vi. 468-471; Victor Amadeus, 352.
- Sartor Resartus, genesis of, i. 9; its purpose, 202; Sterling's letter on, ii. 104.
- Satan, Milton's, xiii. 312.

- Satanas, the true, that now is, xii. 234; his Invisible-World, v. 357.
- Saturn or Chronos, i. 99.
- Sauerteig, on the significance of Reality, xiv. 389; on Life, xv. 169; on National suffering, 174; on the Eras of England, xvi. 86; on Reforming a Nation, 246; on Nature, xii. 29; our reverence for Death and for Life, 122; the real Hell of the English, 142; fashionable Wits, 147; symbolic influences of Washing, 225; on Pig-philosophy, 381; on Ideal History, v. 18; on Purity in the relation of the Sexes, vi. 77; on Friedrich and Voltaire, vii. 39; on Wars not memorable, 436; on Diplomatic Veracity, viii. 18.
- Saul, Legation-rath von, ix. 264.
- Saunders, Colonel, notice of, xvii. 314; Cromwell's letter to, 314; in Scotland, xviii. 246, 241.
- Saups, Herr, Schiller and his Father's Household, xx. 208-278.
- Sausse, M., Procureur of Varennes, iv. 33; scene at his house, 35; flies from Prussians, 173.
- Savage, the aboriginal, i. 30.
- Savage, Mr., his Complete History of Germany, v. 281 n.
- Savonnières, M. de, Bodyguard (October Fifth), temple gives way, iii. 257.
- Savoy, occupied by French, iv. 217; passes, viii. 199, 200.
- Savoy, Duke, persecutor, xviii. 490.
- Saxe, Chevalier de, viii. 94, 110, 180, 138; waylays Einsiedel, 381, 382; mentioned also, ix. 24.
- Saxe, Maréchal de, vi. 82, 359, 480; xvi. 379; quarrels with Valori, viii. 132; to command under the Young Pretender, 314; made Maréchal, 332; in the Netherlands, 338, 395; ix. 41, 59, 62; at siege of Tournay, viii. 432; at Fontenoy, 433-443; nearly dead of droopy, 443; marches upon Maestricht, ix. 66; visits Friedrich at Sans-Souci, 72; diligent service of the Devil, and death, 73, 74; favored of the Devil, x. 35; his reveries, xi. 273; mentioned also, viii. 57, 72, 92, 94, 97, 107, 131, 133, 206, 237; ix. 24.
- Saxon Chronicle, xix. 395 n., 408, 438 n., 469 n., 470 n., 478.
- Saxon Heptarchy, the, xv. 82; xvi. 87; its character, 56; race, 86-99; savage, xii. 14.
- Saxon Switzerland, ix. 326-329, 359.
- Saxony, Kings of, xvi. 374, 376.
- Saxony, the Prussian Army marches through, viii. 343, 345; Saxony's broken back, 410, 412; antipathy to Friedrich, 409, 415, 460; in secret league with Austria, 410; the Saxon army at Striegau, 460, 462, 466; at Hennesdorf, 512, 513; a Nation governed by Brühl, ix. 8; Steuer-Scheine, 23; invaded by Friedrich, 321; Saxon army blockaded in Pirna country, 325-335; gets out on dismal terms, 352-365; Capitulation of Struppen, 363; Prussia takes possession, 367; the Saxon share in the proposed partitioning of Prussia, 381; resentment against Friedrich, 461, 463; forced contribution to the expenses of the war, x. 183, 189.
- Saxony, Elector of, claims Cleve, v. 351, 357.
- Saxony, Kur-Prince of. See Friedrich Christian.
- Sav and Sele, Lord, a Puritan, xvii. 52; in Church Commission, xviii. 387.
- Scarecrow, significance of the, i. 48.
- Sceptical goose-cackle, i. 53.
- Scepticism, the sourness of the new fruit of growing knowledge, xiv. 380; the Sceptic's viaticum, xv. 132; a spiritual paralysis, i. 393-399, 428; so rife in our day, ii. 7; French, v. 39. See Doubt.
- Schaffgotsch senior, vii. 329, 331.
- Schaffgotsch, Cardinal, of Breslau, vii. 329; x. 40, 68.
- Schaper, cited, x. 24 n.
- Schellenberg, v. 254; vi. 243.
- Schenkendorf, General, in battle of Liegnitz, x. 478.
- Schidlo, toll of, ix. 23.
- Schilda, its absurd celebrity, x. 510.
- Schiller, Friedrich, born in Würtemberg, xx. 5; character and condition of his parents, 5, 6; boyish caprices and aspirations, 7; intended for the clerical profession, 8; first poetry, 9; the Duke of Würtemberg's School, 10; intolerable constraint, 10-14; publication of the Robbers, 15, 22; consequent persecution, 25; is encouraged by Dalberg, 28; escapes from Stuttgart, 29; finds refuge at Bauerbach, 30; settles in Mannheim, 40; his lofty striving, 45; removes to Leipzig, 56; proposal of marriage, 57; goes to Dresden, 60; crowned with laurels, but without a home, 80; lyrical productions, 81; tires of fiction, 83; habits at Dresden, 86; visits Weimar, 87; meets the Fräulein Lengefeld, 88; first acquaintance with Goethe, 89; appointed Professor of History at Jena, 96; marriage, 97; study of History, 98; sickness, 103; influence of Kant, 107; epic projects, 116; returns to the Drama, 117; connection with Goethe, 119; visits his parents, 122; removes to Weimar, 149; enthusiastic recep-

- tion of the Maid of Orleans, 167; his last sickness and death, 185; his personal aspect and mental gifts, 188; his Letters, 290; specimen of his historical style, 307; intends an Epic on Friedrich, v. 19, 21; and Duke of Württemberg, vi. 439; ideal of the true Artist, xiii. 55; perfection of pomp-prose, xiv. 194; general survey of, 143-193; Correspondence with Goethe, 146; his cosmopolitanism, 148; his high aims, 152; literary life and struggles, 152; connection with Goethe, 184; illness and quiet heroism, 186; his character and mode of life, 171; intellectual gifts, 175; contrast between the Robbers and the Maid of Orleans, 181; Song of the Alps, 189; his philosophy, 191. See Madame de Staël.
- Schimmelmann, Herr, and his false Danish coining, xi. 7.
- Schlecker, Advocate, xi. 428.
- Schlegel, Friedrich, xiv. 21, 373.
- Schlegenberg, Count and Countess von, of Breslau, vii. 330, 332.
- Schleiermacher, xvi. 8.
- Schlesien, vii. 237; Historical Epochs of, 299, 305; provisions for the Prussian Army in, 312; reformations in, under Friedrich, viii. 85, 178, 180; is guaranteed to Prussia, 171. See Silesia.
- Schlichtling at Camp of Staudenz, viii. 498.
- Schlötzer, cited, ix. 62.
- Schlözer, cited, vi. 806 n.
- Schlubhut, hanged for theft, vi. 317; vii. 134.
- Schmalkaldic War, the, v. 224, 236.
- Schmettan senior, in the Austrian service, vi. 504; ordered home to Prussia, vii. 167; sent to urge Karl Albert, viii. 66; at escalade of Prag, 98; mission to the French, 341; could make nothing of it, 360; urges the Hanoverians, ix. 382; at Prag, 468; with Prince of Prussia, 483, 486; defends Dresden against Daun, x. 170, 171; letter from the King authorizing capitulation, 299; outlooks becoming very grim, 293; does not receive the King's second letter promising relief, 295; summoned to surrender, 296; hot preparation for defence, 297; helpless uncertainty, and Council of War, 299; high-toned negotiations, 300; feeble haste and blindness to symptoms, 300; Dresden disastrously lost, 301; capitulation scandalously ill kept, 306-308; Schmettan's ill-fortune much pitied by all men, 308; his good Wife a constant sunshine to his declining days, 309.
- Schmettau junior, vi. 504; vii. 167; viii. 134, 153, 466; ix. 370; x. 310; xi. 100; on the Bavarian War, 142; cited, ix. 483 n.; xi. 142 n.
- Schmettau, Major Graf von, Landlord of Miller Arnold, xi. 427, 428.
- Schmidt, Curatus, of Siebenhuben, xi. 78, 79; curious disappearance from the upper world, 82.
- Schmidt, Hofrath, of Frankfurt, ix. 228; his Wife's treatment of Voltaire, 233.
- Schmidt, Lieutenant, in Sangerhausen, x. 31.
- Schmidt, President, in Cleve, x. 27.
- Schmucker, present during Zimmermann's interview with the King, xi. 328-332.
- Schnüßpel, the distinguished Novelist, xii. 55.
- Schöll, cited, v. 399 n.; viii. 24 n., 344 n.; ix. 383 n.
- Schölke. See Ploschke.
- Schönfeld, Herr von, viii. 450.
- Schöning, Madam, vi. 341.
- Schöning, cited, x. 164 n., 419 n.
- Schönwitz, Christopher, vii. 410.
- School education, insignificance of, i. 78, 81; tin-kettle terrors and incitements, 79; need of Soul-Architects, 81.
- Schoolmasters, when useful, ii. 423.
- Schools, non-vocal, xvi. 410; and vocal, 456-459.
- Schren, Magister, is insulted by the French, x. 324.
- Schröck, viii. 336.
- Schubart, Daniel, account of, xx. 279-289.
- Schuhmacher, Prussian Secretary, vii. 171, 404.
- Schulenburg, Fieldmarshal, vi. 62; Lieutenant-General, 294, 353, 422, 430, 477; vii. 130; his account of Friedrich at Cüstrin, vi. 339; pockets an affront, vii. 163; in the Silesian enterprise, 295; his dragoons, 379; at Mollwitz, 415; death, 416; mentioned also, x. 331; xi. 385.
- Schulenburg, Graf von, ix. 546.
- Schulze, David, butcher, viii. 83.
- Schumacher, Danish Legation Secretary, xi. 130.
- Schuwalofo, the, of Russia, ix. 294; xi. 122.
- Schwartz, Monk, v. 135.
- Schwartzburg, Princess of, vii. 72, 75.
- Schwartzzenberge, the, of Austria, v. 273.
- Schwedt, Margraves of, v. 392; vi. 16, 87, 314; the Mother Margravine, 159, 314, 361; Heinrich, 398.
- Schweichelt, Hanoverian Excellency, viii. 55.
- Schweidnitz, besieged by the Austrians, x. 37; capitulation, 38; recaptured by

- Friedrich, 93, 94; suddenly captured by General Loudon, xi. 68-72; retaken by Friedrich, 147-187.
- Schweinfurt, v. 288.
- Schwerin, Colonel von, vi. 119, 138, 285, 303; vii. 268, 295, 330; on march towards Liegnitz, 309, 312; sudden entry, 322; takes Ottmachau, 327; bombards Neisse, 345; to command in chief, 348; at Breslau, 381, 383; in Jägerndorf Country, 396, 398; at Mollwitz, 417, 420, 426; manages Breslau, viii. 47, 82; entertains Bielfeld, 80; takes Olmütz, 106; Moravian Foray, 134; home in a huff, 142; on march to Prag, 345; takes Ziesaberg battery, 351; on march towards Austria, 356; quarrels with Leopold of Deasau, 359; takes Beneschau, 369; once more home in a huff, 373; lays down his plough again, ix. 306; in conference with Friedrich, 311; through the Glatz Mountains, for Bohemia, 325, 336; retires to Silesia, 367; on march to Prag, 389, 394; junction with the King, 397; battle of Prag, 404; expostulates with the King, 405; attacks the Austrian army, 408; desperate struggle, 408; "On, my children!" 408; death, 409, 416, 418; monument near Sterbohol, 420, 421; statue in Berlin, x. 112.
- Schwerin, Reichsrath Graf von, xi. 337.
- Schwiebus, Circle of, v. 297.
- Science, the Torch of, i. 8; the scientific head, 52.
- Sciences, the, or Technologies, vi. 394.
- Scot of Scotstarvet, notice of, xvii. 364; xviii. 201 n.
- Scotch metaphysics, xiii. 76, 469 (see Mechanical Philosophy); national character, xv. 419; xvi. 332; Covenanters, xii. 217; Highlanders in Hanover, x. 177; at Emsdorf, 452.
- Scotland awakened into life by Knox, i. 370; destitution in, xii. 5; united to England, xviii. 259.
- Scots Committee of Estates, Cromwell's letters to, xvii. 358, 365, 372; xviii. 171, 204; extinguished at Alyth, 259.
- Scots affairs in 1637, xvii. 93; Covenant, 94; affairs in 1639, 102; motions of their Army, 103; Declaration and proceedings of, in England, 103; demands, 106; assist English Parliament, 165; Army enters England, 1644, 176; at Marston Moor, 181, 183; Commissioners and Cromwell, 193; Army returns home, 222; Negotiations concluded, 248; proclaim Charles II., 478; assist Charles II., 304; their Covenant in 1650, xviii. 95, 96, 170, 171; call in Charles II., 97; prepare to repel Cromwell, 106; Army skirmishes with Cromwell, 108, 109; how officered, 110; their poverty, &c., described, 114; their Covenant commented on by Cromwell, 116; skirmish with Cromwell, 120; routed at Dunbar, 131, 132; Clergy and Cromwell, 151, 164; Committee of Estates, Cromwell's letters to, xvii. 354, 358, 372; xviii. 171, 204; divisions among, 182, 204; at Stirling, levying forces, &c., 195; intrenched at Torwood, 222; invade England, 240, 244; routed at Worcester, 248-254; Cromwell's opinion of, xix. 262.
- Scots-Greys, Royal, viii. 189, 260.
- Scott, Sir Walter, xv. 400-466; great man, or not a great man? 410; one of the healthiest of men, 415, 429; an old Borderer in new vesture, 417; early environment, 418; infancy and young manhood, 421; Metrical Romances, and worldly prosperity, 427, 432; his connection with the Ballantynes, 430; influence of Goethe, 434; the Author of Waverley, 437; not much as a letter-writer, 438; dinner with the Prince Regent, 438; birth-eve of a Waverley Novel, 441; life at Abbotsford, 443; literary value of the Waverley Novels, 452; extempore writing, 456; bankruptcy, 462; a lonely, brave, impoverished man, 463; on the Apennines, xii. 269.
- Scott, Major Thomas, report by, xvii. 408; Cromwell's letter to, 428; Republican, xviii. 387; does not sign the Recognition, 447; in Cromwell's Second Parliament, xix. 62; excluded, 103; death of, 246.
- Scoundrel is scoundrel, ii. 310, 314; not to be commanded by mere love, 311; supreme scoundrel, 442; hero and scoundrel now almost indistinguishable, xii. 354.
- Scoundrelism, significance of, xv. 292; one of the crowning summits of, v. 120.
- Scoutmaster, office of. See Rows.
- Scroope, Colonel, pursues Scots, xvii. 240.
- Sea-kings, the old, and Saxon Pirates, ii. 355.
- Sea-robbery, distinguished career of Norse gentlemen, xix. 395.
- Seals, great, new, &c., xviii. 207, 208. See Commonwealth.
- Secchia, surprisal of the, vi. 471.
- Séchelles, Hérault de, in National Convention, iv. 221; hat on, leads Convention out, 309; and new Feast of Pikes, 327; arrested, 397; guillotined, 401.
- Séchelles, M. de, viii. 108, 206, 310, 396.

- Seckendorf, v. 333, 351, 360; arrives at Berlin, 467; vi. 18 (see Grumkow); a stiff-backed, petrified, inscrutable old Intriguer, 25, 136; an offence to Queen Sophie, 50, 136; present at Friedrich's attempted flight, 261, 268, 271; negotiates his Marriage, vi. 376; letter from Friedrich, 420; negotiates Friedrich Wilhelm's visit to the Kaiser, 421; the visit, 435; tries to resuscitate the Double-Marriage, 435, 450; a ride with the King, 441; vii. 7; at the Rhine Campaign, vi. 496; vii. 4, 11; quits Berlin, 4; Commander-in-Chief against the Turks, 83; a prisoner in the Fortress of Grätz, 100; Commander of Bavarian forces, viii. 194, 206, 209, 225, 232, 236; makes terms for himself, 237; Hungarian Majesty refuses to confirm them, 269; garrisons Philippsburg, 334; to sit on Prince Karl's skirts, 360; loudly blamed by the French, 361, 362; reconquers Bavaria, 361; reduced to nothing again, 393, 394, 402, 417; as ill-treated as could be wished, 397; diplomatizing, 404; in questionable capacity at Füssen, 419; cited, v. 222 n.; vi. 22 n.; mentioned also, vii. 266; viii. 121, 184.
- Seckendorf junior, vii. 5.
- Secrecy, benignant efficacies of, i. 165.
- Secret, the open, i. 309.
- Sections of Paris, iv. 263; denounce Girondins, 301; Committee of, 301, 304, 336. See Paris.
- Sedan Municipals and Lafayette, iv. 154.
- Sedgwick, Major-General, in Jamaica, xix. 26; in America, 378; death of, 34.
- Seehausen, vi. 413.
- Segebusch, cited, xi. 449 n.
- Ségur, Comte de, viii. 97, 103, 111, 129, 394; at Pfaffenhofen, 418; xi. 479; sees Friedrich, 490.
- Seid, Mahomet's slave and friend, i. 233; death, 301.
- Seidlitz (or Seydlitz), Rittmeister, viii. 464; at Hohenfriedberg, 462; at Prag, ix. 398, 414; with Friedrich in Saxony, 506, 508, 513; frightens "La Dauphine" out of Gotha, 516, 517; at Rossbach, x. 12, 14; plunges down upon "La Dauphine," 15, 18; is wounded, 23; at Zorndorf, beyond praise, 131, 132; publicly thanked by the King, 136; Statue, in Berlin, 167; Kunersdorf, 257, 258, 263; seriously wounded, 264; ill at Berlin, 321; assists in defending Berlin, 493; with Prince Henri in Saxony, xi. 41, 103; greatly distinguishes himself at Freyberg, 162-166; his visit to Gotha with the King, 168; his death, 376; the Achilles of the Prussians, 513.
- Seigneurs, French, obliged to fly, iii. 230, 380.
- Selborne, Natural History of, xiv. 399.
- Selchow, viii. 142 n.
- Selden, John, imprisoned, xvii. 66.
- Self-activity, i. 22.
- Self-annihilation, i. 141; xii. 369.
- Self-forgetfulness, Werner's notion of, xiii. 113; how good men practise it, 308. See Renunciation.
- Self-interest, political systems founded on, xiii. 454, 455, 473.
- Self-worship, xiv. 27.
- Selfishness, xii. 30, 35.
- Seligenstadt, viii. 250.
- Selle, Dr., attends Friedrich in his last illness, xi. 496, 508; cited, 496 n.
- Selwyn, George, ix. 191.
- Seneca our niceliest-proportioned half-and-half, xv. 132.
- Senning, Major von, v. 280; vii. 30.
- Senses, the outward and inward, iii. 8, 16.
- Sentimentalist, the barrenest of mortals, xiv. 352; Goethe's opinion of him, xv. 52; puking and sprawling, 416.
- September, — see Massacre. Septemberers, the, iv. 194.
- Serbelloni, beaten by Prince Henri, xi. 103.
- Sergeant, Agate, Engraver, in Committee, iv. 162; nicknamed "Agate," 193; signs circular, 197.
- Serle, Daniel, Governor of Barbadoes, xix. 26; Cromwell's letter to, 30.
- Servan, War-Minister, iv. 97, 100; plans of, 104.
- Servants "hired for life," xvi. 311, 322.
- Servantship, nomadic and permanent, xvi. 425.
- Settlements, early Norse, in Normandy, xix. 395.
- Seven-Years War, results of the, xi. 165-177.
- Seventy-four, an English, and its inarticulate traditions, ii. 356.
- Seville, Treaty of, vi. 101, 325.
- Sèvres Potteries, Lamotte's "Mémoires" burnt at, iv. 89.
- Sewster, Robina, family of, xvii. 254; married to Lockhart, xix. 237.
- Sexby, Edward, Trooper, examined, xvii. 260; £100 voted to, 342; his plottings, xvii. 455; xix. 56, 80, 112; his death, 233.
- Sexton's Daughter, Sterling's, ii. 135; still in the shadows of the surplice, 139.

- Seyfarth, cited, vi. 488 n.; vii. 137 n., 304 n., 407 n.; viii. 344 n.; ix. 501 n.; x. 426 n.
- Shakespeare, Schiller's first impression of, xx. 13; his learning and insight, xvi. 126; and the Elizabethan Era, i. 329; v. 20; his all-sufficing intellect 330, 333; his Characters, 333; his Dramas a part of Nature herself, 335; his joyful tranquillity and overflowing love of laughter, 335; his hearty patriotism, 337; glimpses of the world that was in him, 337; a heaven-sent Light-Bringer, 338; a King of Saxondom, 340; his humor, xiii. 18; no sectarian, 247; depth of insight, 264; xv. 67; bombast, xiii. 267; Novalis's thoughts on him, xiv. 44; good taste, 211; compared with Goethe, xv. 67; his education, xvi. 126; compared with Scott, xv. 432; not an easy writer, 458; beautiful human soul, xvi. 92; what he might have made of the History of England, 444; scattered tones of a National Epos, xii. 391; his death, xvii. 41.
- Shame, divine, mysterious growth of, i. 31; the soil of all virtue, 166.
- Shams, utter damnability of, ii. 272, 280.
- Sheep, significant resemblances between men and, xiv. 23, 424; xv. 401.
- Sheffield Assassination Company Limited, xvi. 426, 453.
- Shekinah, Man the true, i. 244.
- Shelley, xiv. 372.
- Sherland, Parson, apprehended, xix. 36.
- Sherlock's, Reverend Mr., account of his visit to Voltaire, xi. 356-360; visits Berlin, 378; cited, 356 n.
- Shilbourn, Colonel, in Ireland, xviii. 46.
- Ship-money, Writ of, xvii. 73. See Hampden.
- Shoebuckle, a thrice-memorable, v. 31.
- Sibylla, Wife of Johann Friedrich, v. 241, 251.
- Sicard, Abbé, in prison, iv. 170; in danger near the Abbaye, 181; account of massacre there, 188.
- Sicilian Insurrection, ii. 264; Vespers, v. 106.
- Side, Right and Left, of Constituent Assembly, iii. 218, 231; Tip of Left, Jacobins, 387; Right and Left in conflict, 389; Tip of Left, popular, 409; Right after King's flight, iv. 18; Right quits Assembly, 48; Right and Left in first Parliament, 68; Delilah kiss, 62.
- Sidney, Colonel Algernon, in Parliament Army, xvii. 202; in Rump Parliament, xviii. 292.
- Siegfried, the hero of old Northern Tradition, xiv. 207, 216.
- Siets, Col di, Pass of, ix. 60.
- Sieyès, Abbé, account of, iii. 141; Constitution-builder, 141, 208, 284; in Champ-de-Mars, 336; in National Convention, iv. 202; of Constitution Committee (1790), 230; vote at King's trial, 263; making new Constitution, 454.
- Sigismund I., King of Poland, v. 203, 206, 230.
- Sigismund, Kurfurst of Brandenburg and King of Hungary, v. 143, 144, 145, 149, 187; becomes Kaiser, 151; Council of Constance, 152, 154, 156, 191; how he pledged Zips to the Polish Crown, xi. 238; referred to in the Bavarian-Succession War, 394.
- Sigrid the Proud, xix. 426; sets fire to her lovers, 428.
- Sigurd, Jarl of Lade, xix. 403; father of Hakon-Jarl, 408.
- Sigurd Svr, St. Olaf's stepfather, xix. 440, 441; amongst his reapers, 444.
- Sigurd the Crusader, xix. 432-435.
- Sigwald, Jarl, xix. 432-434.
- Silence, i. 126; the element in which all great things fashion themselves, 165; the grand epitome and sum-total of all harmony, xiv. 358; out of, comes strength, 422; significance and sacredness of, 139, 142; xv. 444; the great empire of, i. 223, 442; invaluable talent of, xii. 93, 157, 231; unassumed depth of, 194, 196; two Silences of Eternity, 221; nature of, xvii. 7; excellent, or good work with lips closed, ii. 420; what silence means in the Nineteenth Century, 436; a life in silence, 453; silent work, and silent suffering, 455; greatness and fruitfulness of, 185; value of, vii. 106; viii. 460.
- Silesia, Prussian claims on, v. 273, 291, 296, 460; vi. 422; vii. 267; revenue of, in 1742, viii. 180 n. See Schlesien.
- Silesian War, Third, sources of the, ix. 273.
- Silhouette, M. de, French Controller-General of Finance, x. 182; suspension of payment, 374; Dictionary Immortality, 375.
- Sillery, Marquis, notice of, iii. 302. See Genlis.
- Simes, Major, shot, xviii. 45.
- Simon, Cordwainer, Dauphin committed to, iv. 404; guillotined, 425.
- Simon's, Saint, aphorism of the golden age, i. 179; a false application, 234.
- Simoneau, Mayor of Etampes, killed, iv. 71; festival for, 102.
- Simplon Pass, the, ii. 157.
- Sincere, with Daun at Marmen, x. 380, 353.

- Sincerity, the grand secret for finding readers, xiv. 83; xv. 431; the most precious of all attainments, xiv. 340; xv. 187; xvi. 67, 129, 176, 341; better than gracefulness, i. 263; the first characteristic of heroism and originality, 376, 385, 351, 353, 379; deep awful divine quality of, xii. 376. See Original Man, Truthfulness, Wholeness.
- Sinclair, Major, vii. 370.
- Sinclair, Sir George, xi. 457 n.
- Sindercomb, Miles, character and plot of, xix. 112-114; poisons himself, 118 n.
- Sinnott, Colonel David, Governor of Wexford, his negotiations with Cromwell, xvii. 469-475.
- Sinzendorf, Hof-Kanzler Count von, vi. 429; vii. 330, 337, 344; viii. 32, 84, 178.
- Sirach, Jesus, xi. 17.
- Skippon, Major-General, conveys Scots money, xvii. 250; in Council of State, xviii. 385 n.; in Cromwell's First Parliament, 19; a Major-General, 398 n.; one of Cromwell's Lords, xix. 236.
- Skreya fights with Hakon the Good, xix. 406.
- Skjalgeon Erling, xix. 460, 462.
- Slap, a remarkable, v. 256.
- Slave, etymology of, v. 57.
- Slavery Question, Sterling's notions on the, ii. 102. See Negro Slaves.
- Slaves, authentic, to be treated as such, ii. 299. See Mastership, Negro.
- Sleep, curious to think of, xv. 369.
- Slepe Hall described, xvii. 85.
- Sleswick thunder-horse badly ridden, ii. 353, 399.
- Sliding Scales, xii. 173, 179. See Corn-Laws.
- Slim-Deacon, xix. 485.
- Slingsby, Sir Henry, in arms, xviii. 485; plot and execution of, xix. 374-376.
- Sluggard-and-Scoundrel Protection Society, xvi. 294; ii. 321.
- Smectymnuus pamphlets, xvii. 405.
- Smelfungus on Tobacco-smoking, vi. 29; on Modern Diplomacy, 218; on the Biographers of Voltaire, vii. 46; on Contemporary Influences, 174; on Friedrich's Biographers, 176; on Maréchal de Saxe, ix. 73, 74; on Voltaire as Friedrich's Supreme of Literature, 114; Editorial Ignorances about him, 162; Voltaire's Speech better than his Silence, 166, 179; La Beaumelle, 185-187; Abbé de Prades, 187; Voltaire's "Dr. Akakia," 215; end of his connection with Friedrich, 236; on Kaunitz and his diplomacies, 243, 244; on Friedrich's Lamentation Psalms, 521; the Prussian Dryadust's treatment of Friedrich, x. 45, 46; an English Pottery Apotheosis, 72; on old Marshal Münnich, xi. 131; Pitt, 383, 383; Voltaire, 420.
- Smelfungus Redivivus, xvi. 120.
- Smoke, advantage of consuming one's, i. 115.
- Smollett, Tobias, vii. 479; viii. 202; horrors of the Carthage Expedition, vii. 485: cited, 485 n.; ix. 268 n.
- Smyth, Hon. Mrs. Ralph, xii. 449, 451.
- Snorro Sturleson, xix. 391, 404, 420, 441, 448; Homeric element in, 465; murder of, 491; noble task to distil a book from the Heimskringla, 493.
- Soap-and-water, gospel of, viii. 164.
- Sobieski, King, v. 387.
- Sobieski, James, v. 396.
- Societies, Printing. See Dryadust.
- Society founded upon cloth, i. 39, 43, 48; how becomes possible, 163; social death, and new-birth, 164, 179, 184, 203; as good as extinct, 175; machine of, xiii. 471, 479; miraculous power of association, xiv. 354; a second all-embracing life, 355; wholeness and healthy unconsciousness, 357; burning up of, xv. 85; vital lungs of, ii. 381, 428; no Society, but a lost horde, xii. 353; Fraternelle, iv. 301.
- Sohr, country about, viii. 489, 493; battle of, 493-498.
- Soirées, Lion, the crowning phenomenon of modern civilization, xv. 400.
- Soissons, camp to be formed at, iv. 117; bread poisoned at, 129; Congress of, vi. 90.
- Soldier, the, xii. 250.
- Soldiers at sack of Basing, anecdotes of, xvii. 223.
- Solecisms, top-heavy, iii. 200.
- Solitude of soul, vi. 364; vii. 195, 267, 374. See Silence.
- Söllil, cited, v. 266 n.
- Solomon's Temple, x. 47.
- Soltikof, General, prisoner at Zorndorf, x. 140; placed over Fermor at Posen, 215; advancing towards Brandenburg, 217; battle of Züllichau, 220-222; marches towards Frankfurt, 223; seizes the town, 243-245; not an altogether bad man, 249; battle of Kunersdorf, 249, 254; a dearly bought victory, 272; doubtful what next to do, 278; will not consent to do all the fighting for Austria, 283-284, 310; disgusted at Daun's inaction, 318; only terms on which he will continue the war, 319; intercepted by Friedrich, 324, 330; angry at Daun, 331; marches home in sulphurous humor, 332; pre-

- pares for a new campaign, 407; with Loudon, threatens Silesia, 447; consents to join Loudon at Breslau, 457; indignant at finding Loudon gone, and Prince Henri there, 460; will not be made a cat's-paw again, 467, 487; retires towards Poland, 488; falls sick, and is succeeded by Fermor, 491.
- Sombrenil, Governor of Hôtel des Invalides, iii. 180; examined, iv. 89; seized, 169; saved by his daughter, 184; guillotined, 410; son of, shot, 439.
- Somers Tracts criticised, xvii. 74, 210 n.; xix. 194.
- Somerville, Lord, xii. 452, 453.
- Somerville Portrait of Knox, xii. 422, 448, 453.
- Somnauth, idol of, xii. 338.
- Songs and their influence, xiii. 282; divine song, xvi. 340.
- Sonsfeld, Madam, v. 435; vi. 154, 273, 279, 310.
- Sophie Albertine, Princess, xi. 240.
- Sophie Charlotte, Friedrich's Grandmother, v. 37; her love for Friedrich Wilhelm, 35; her death-bed, 36; she and her Mother shrewd, noticing, intelligent women, 38; her philosophical reunions, 39; in Paris, 43; her symbolic pinch of snuff, 53.
- Sophie Dorothee, Friedrich's Mother, v. 27, 29, 32, 305, 351; her husband's confidence in her, 350, 395; vi. 15, 290; her reception of the Czarina Catherine, v. 368, 370; her love for Fritz, 417; vi. 144; Double-Marriage scheme, v. 418, 427, 432; her English pension, 430; secret correspondence with her poor Mother, 437; vi. 52; unexpected birth of Princess Amelia, v. 437; surrounded by intrigues and treachery, vi. 15; Seckendorf an offence to her, 50; difficulties becoming insuperable, 50; visit of August of Saxony, 80; persistence in the Double-Marriage scheme, 87, 113, 166; a pressing message from the King, 151, 157; her Female Parliament, 154; bed of sickness the one refuge left her, 158, 167; proposes Friedrich of Baireuth for Wilhelmina, 160; not a perfectly wise Mother, 162; Dr. Villa sent express to England, 164; joyful news about the Double-Marriage, 173; grievous disappointment, 200, 225; news of her Son's arrest, 272; receives his writing-desk from Katte, 273; delivers it to the King, filled with fictitious letters, 279; terror for her Son's life, 304; will not give up the English Marriage, 310; anger at Wilhelmina, 312, 313, 315, 360, 364, 447; her opinion of the Prince of Wales, 315; interest in the Salzburg Protestants, 412; contempt for her Son's bride, 447, 451; the King's death, vii. 140; Queen Dowager, viii. 182, 185; Friedrich's affection for, vii. 168; entertains Count Henkel, 169; receives Wilhelmina, 255; Demon News-writer's account of, ix. 301; her last visit from Friedrich, 374, 376; letter from Friedrich, 422; death, 471; mentioned also, viii. 182, 184, 468, 500; ix. 84, 106, 421.
- Sophie Dorothee Maria, Friedrich's Sister, v. 439; vi. 478, 485.
- Sophie Dorothee of Hanover, v. 27; thirty-years imprisonment, 29; half-frantic in Castle of Ahlden, 428, 437; vi. 53; her Will, 116.
- Sophie, Electress, v. 22, 304, 422; vi. 117.
- Sophie Frederika, Princess, of Anhalt-Zerbst, viii. 306.
- Sophie Louisa, third Wife of King Friedrich I., v. 306; her dreary orthodoxy, 305; madness and death, 306, 307.
- Sophocles, tragedies of, xvi. 395.
- Sorbonne, the, decay of, iii. 13.
- Sorrows of Teufelsdröckh, pangs of self-deliverance, i. 115, 121, 123; divine depth of sorrow, 143; worship of, 146; xii. 149; sanctuary of, xiii. 240, 449; xv. 263; defined, xvii. 50.
- Soubise, Prince de, vii. 253; viii. 444; reinforces the Reichs Army, ix. 381, 477; pique against D'Estrées, 477; near Erfurt, 496; Merseburg, x. 3, 7; Rossbach, 13, 16, 17; to Nordhausen, 21; tries to assist Clermont against Ferdinand, 26; profligate rapacity of his Army, 28; to assist Contades, 113, 176-178; seizes Frankfurt-on-Mayn, 193, 194; Invasion of England, 224, 372; to be co-General with Broglie, xi. 53; quarrel and defeat at Vellinghausen, 55-58; Wilhelmsthal, 146; Amöneburg, 158.
- Soul and conscience, need for some, xii. 25, 77, 184, 224; to save the expense of salt, 49; man has lost the soul out of him, 135, 148; a lost, vii. 446.
- Souls'-Overseers. See Bishops.
- South-Sea Island Queen, anecdote of, xvii. 402.
- Southwark declares for Army, xvii. 372.
- Sovereignities, empty, viii. 11. See Kings.
- Space and Time, the Dream-Canvas upon which Life is imaged, i. 42, 50, 192, 197.
- Spaen, Lieutenant, vi. 282, 286; vii. 165, 223; xi. 198.

- Spain against France, iv. 80, 263; invaded by France, 381; alliance with, broken by England, xvii. 48; war with, 48; issue of, 50; war with, again, xix. 25, 28, 55; reasons for, 66-70.
- Spandau, Commandant of, v. 280.
- Spanish-English controversy, ix. 68, 69; xi. 62, 92-94, 160. See English, Don Blas.
- Spanish Refugees, ii. 63, 65, 83; Protestantism, v. 217; Spaniards in Holland, 262; in Cleve, 260, 264; Spanish quarrel with Karl VI., 406 (see Elizabeth Farnese); ill-treatment of Captain Jenkins, vi. 323; vii. 103.
- Sparrowbill and M'Pastehorn, ii. 322.
- Spartan wisdom, i. 174; humanity, ii. 298; an original North-German, v. 342, 344.
- Speak, ability to, no evidence of ability to work, ii. 366, 419, 438; speech and sham-speech, 419, 423, 437; eloquent unperformed speech, horrible, 426; human speech no longer true, xii. 377. See Stump-Orator.
- Speaking, difference between, and public-speaking, xv. 196. See Conversation.
- Speculative intuition, i. 42. See German.
- Speech, great, but not greatest, i. 166; and jargon, difference between, xii. 26; invention of articulate speech, 127; insincere speech, 148; the Speaking Man wandering terribly from the point, 234; Oliver Cromwell's first, xvii. 65; speech and the thing spoken, ix. 435, 436. See Silence.
- Speeches, how to read Cromwell's, xvii. 75; fragments of, against Earl Manchester and present Parliament commanders, 190-193.
- Speldhurst Living, xviii. 332, 333.
- Spener, Herr T., viii. 86; installation speech, 88, 90.
- Speyer, viii. 235.
- Sphinx-riddle, the Universe a, i. 98; xiv. 256; of Life, the, xii. 8, 15; ours, 19.
- Spinelli, Conte di, viii. 314.
- Spinning Dervishes, xii. 248.
- Spirits of men become pure from errors by suffering for them, xvi. 124.
- Spiritual, the, parent of the Visible, xiv. 254, 264; rudiments of a new era, 318, 341, 378; xv. 12, 143.
- Spiritual paralysis of the age, i. 393.
- Spitzler, cited, vi. 252 n.
- Spon, Baron de, ix. 80 n.
- Spörken, General, in Münster country, x. 196; Langensalza, xi. 26.
- Sports, Book of, burned, xvii. 146.
- Spreeker, Captain, surrenders Brecken to Friedrich, x. 67.
- Sprigge's Anglia Rediviva, xvii. 196 n.
- Spura, Night of, iv. 29-36.
- Staal, Dame de, on liberty, iii. 304.
- Staal, Madame de, friend of Madame du Deffand, ix. 50.
- Stadion, Count, xi. 324.
- Staal, Mme. de, at States-General procession, iii. 133; intrigues for Narbonne, iv. 77, 98; secretes Narbonne, 164, 168.
- Stahrnberg, Graf von, ix. 323.
- Stainville, Comte de, x. 182; at Wilhelmsthal, xi. 145.
- Stair, Lord, viii. 7, 189, 238, 240, 316; at Dettingen, 248, 257.
- Stamford, Earl, defeated, xvii. 158.
- Stamford taken by Cromwell, xvii. 148.
- Stamford Bridge, battle of, xix. 479, 481.
- Stampach, General, at battle of Kolin, ix. 462.
- "Standard set up," Pamphlet, xix. 120, 169, 172.
- Stände, vii. 178, 183.
- Stanhope and Price, their club and Paris, iii. 299.
- Stanislaus Leszcynsky elected King of Poland, vi. 458, 461; flight from Dantzic, 488; protected by Friedrich Wilhelm, 494; visited by Crown-Prince Friedrich, vii. 18; to be Titular King for life, 16; quits Königsberg for Dukedom of Lorraine, 18; his idle life and Titular Army, ix. 57; x. 381; death, xi. 221.
- Stanislaus, King. See Poniatowski.
- Stanley, Hans, Pitt's Envoy to Choiseul, xi. 61.
- Stapleton, Bryan, notice of, xvii. 251.
- Stapleton, Sir Philip, Presbyterian, xvii. 250, 357. See Members, Eleven.
- Stapylton, Rev. Robert, xvii. 357, 410; preaches in Edinburgh High Church, xviii. 158.
- Stars gone out, ii. 39, 94, 124.
- States-General, first mooted, iii. 78, 81, 88; meeting announced, 105; how constituted, 113 (see Estate, Third); one or three orders in? 116; kind of Representatives to, 117; Parliaments against, 123; Deputies to, in Paris, 125; number of Deputies, 126; place of assembling, 129; procession of, 131-145; installed, 146; hats on, hats off, 146; union of orders? 149-155.
- Statistic Tables are beautifully reticulated, but hold no knowledge, xvi. 42; personal observation the only method, 44, 57.
- Staudenz, camp of, viii. 492, 493.
- Steal, thou shalt not, xvi. 78.

Stealing, i. 181, 173; generically includes the whole art of scoundrelism, xv. 165; xvi. 178.

Steinau, near Neisse, vii. 400.

Steinfurth, vi. 258.

Stellter, Cabinets-Rath, xi. 438.

Stenzel, cited, v. 159 n.; vii. 168 n.; viii. 393 n.; ix. 378 n.; x. 421 n.

Sterling, Anthony, born, ii. 15; early memories, 17; a steady, substantial boy, 29; enters a military life, 32; letter to, 47; at home on a visit, 136; meets his Brother in Italy, 174; quits the army, 242; at his Brother's dying bed, 251.

Sterling, John, born in Isle of Bute, ii. 8; early life in Wales, 16; at Passy, 25; London, 27; runs away from home, 29; sent to Glasgow University, 32; life at Cambridge, 32; a secretaryship, 41; the Athenaeum, 43; attendance on Coleridge, 53; his intimacy with the Barton family, 62, 65; connection with Torrijos, 64; engaged to Miss Barton, 70; Marriage, 73; illness, 73; at the Island of St. Vincent, 75; news of the Spanish Catastrophe, 83; returns to London, 90; meets Mr. Hare at Bonn, 92; Curate at Herstonceux, 96; quits the Church, 100; life in London, 102; at Baywater, 116; another serious illness, 128; at Bordeaux, 129; Madeira, 140; literary efforts, 149; journey to Italy, 154; at Rome, 162; at Clifton, 176; Article on Carlyle, 184; at Falmouth, 190; Clifton again, 194; Torquay, 196; Falmouth, 200; Naples, 216; home again, 223; a dangerous accident, 233; Mother and Wife both taken from him, 237; removes to Ventnor, 240; his last sickness and death, 247.

Sterling's Letters to his Father, ii. 179, 186, 194, 205, 215, 223; to his Mother, 24, 76, 136, 135, 158, 161, 178, 182, 189, 211, 214, 218, 235, 236; to both, 162, 171, 191; to his Brother, 47; to his Son, 165, 249; to T. Carlyle, 104, 130, 141, 178, 180, 202, 219, 244, 250; to Charles Barton, 69, 143, 197, 217; to Mr. Hare, 170, 212; to Mrs. Charles Fox, 197, 198; to W. Coningham, 198, 199; to Dr. Carlyle, 199; to Dr. Symonds, 201, 214, 223, 237.

Sterling's Classical attainments, ii. 33; unusual likeness between his speech and letters, 113; pulpit manner of reading, 139; worth as a Writer, 150, 165, 248; superior excellence in prose, 188; the Election, a Poem, 196; undeniable success, 209; Cæsar-de-Lion, 240; literary remains, 257.

Sterling's Character need not be judged in any Church-court, ii. 4; a Guy-Faux likeness, 7; lucky to have had such parents as his, 14; nomadic tendencies, 26; a headlong Boy of twelve, 29; a voracious reader and observer, 31; gifts, generousities and pieties, 33; a young ardent soul, 36; a kingly kind of man, 38; nomadic desultory ways, 40; able to argue with four or five at once, 41; a brother to all worthy souls, 46; not given to lie down and indolently moan, 72; rich in the power to be miserable or otherwise, 87; the talent of waiting, of all others the one he wanted most, 93; generous ardor for whatever seemed noble and true, 96; bright ingenuity and audacity, 103; candor and transparency, 113; cheery swift decision, 114; not intrinsically a devotional mind, 120; too vehement, fatally incapable of sitting still, 149; a certain grimmer shade came gradually over him, 151; beautiful and pathetic adjustment to his hard conditions, 177; a strange effulgence through the ice of earnest pain and sorrow, 234, 243; a central inflexibility and noble silent resolution, 241; perfect courage, and valiant simplicity of heart, 247; serene, victorious, divinely sad, 248; spiritual portraiture, 253.

Sterling's personal aspect, ii. 102, 122, 252; his Life an expressive emblem of his Time, 8, 101, 257.

Sterling's Wife, her beautiful character and early troubles, ii. 78; a perilous situation, 77; her weakly constitution, 175, 194; illness, 237; sudden death, 238; an affectionate loyal-hearted Wife, 238.

Sterling's Father, early career of, ii. 11; his restless striving, 23; connection with the Times Newspaper, 24, 32; a private gentleman of some figure, 98; the Magus of the Times, 103; abundant jolly satire, 138; his house a sunny islet and ever-open port for Sterling, 225; the Times Newspaper his express emblem, 228; England listened to the voice, 228; Note of thanks from Sir Robert Peel, 229; loyal admiration for Peel and Wellington, and ditto contempt for O'Connell, 231; pleasant half-bantering dialect between Father and Son, 233; a fatal eclipse, 233; alone in the world, 237; closing days, 242.

Sterling's Mother, delicate pious character of, ii. 14; affectionate care for him, 26; troubled days, 30; friendship for Madam Torrijos, 64; for Mrs. Carlyle, 103; a pleasant home, 233;

- fatal illness, 233; Sterling's reverent affection for her, 234, 238; news of her death, 237.
- Sternberg, Count von, his mansion of Klein-Schnellendorf, viii. 75.
- Sternberg, Graf von, ix. 323.
- Sterne, xlii. 18; his Father, v. 454.
- Stettin, Duke Otto's Burial in the High Church of, v. 175, 271, 282; Friedrich Wilhelm's possession of, 348, 363, 365; vi. 354.
- Steuer-Scheine, Saxon, ix. 28; Voltaire's attempts to traffic in, 124, 125, 146.
- Steward, Sir Thomas, Kt., death of, xvii. 90.
- Stewart of Allertoun, xviii. 227, 228.
- Stewart of Blantyre, duel with Lord Wharton, xvii. 350.
- Stewart, Dugald, xlii. 77; his opinion of Burns, 274; of Idealism, xiv. 25.
- Stickelstad, battle of, eclipses of the sun, xix. 469.
- Stieler's Maps, vii. 223 n.
- Stille, Major von, vii. 31, 195, 196; viii. 110, 199, 449, 459, 492: cited, 449 n.
- Stillings's, Jung, experience of Goethe, xv. 50.
- Stockholm Blutbad, v. 220.
- Stockings, anecdotes of, xvii. 43.
- Stockstadt, French army at, viii. 334.
- Stoffeln, General, with Fermor at Cüstrin, x. 121; in the Russian-Turk war, xi. 291.
- Stofflet, of La Vendée, iv. 438.
- Stolberg, Prince von, at Torgau, cannot out-general Wolfersdorf, x. 288-291; attacks Prince Henri, xi. 157; defeated at Freyberg, 162; end of the war, 166: mentioned, 103.
- Stollhofen, Lines of, vi. 479.
- Stone, Mr., of the Newcastle Parliament, ix. 439.
- Stonyhurst, Cromwell at, xvii. 326.
- Storie, Mr., notice of, xvii. 89; Cromwell's letter to, 87.
- Stormont, Lord, ix. 324, 332.
- Strachey, Mrs. Edward, ii. 177, 181.
- Strafford, Earl, passages in the impeachment and trial of, xvi. 190; subscribes £20,000 to the King, xvii. 102; in the Tower, 107; trial, execution and character, 114, 115.
- Strafford*, Sterling's tragedy of, ii. 196, 224, 241.
- Strahan, Major, notice of, xvii. 263; in Scots Army, xviii. 108, 109, 118, 171; at Glasgow, 166; Remonstrance by, 174, 175, 179; Cromwell's letter to, 175; joins Cromwell, 183; is excommunicated, 223.
- Stralsund, v. 272; Friedrich Wilhelm's siege of, 345, 351.
- Strasburg, riot at, in 1789, iii. 222; St. Just, shoes and beds, iv. 378; v. 277; Friedrich at, vii. 197.
- Strauss, ii. 180, 202, 214.
- Straw sentry, a Prussian, xiii. 473.
- Strehlen, camp of, viii. 13.
- Strelitz, Karl Ludwig of, vi. 413; vii. 72, 75.
- Strength. See Silence, Wisdom.
- Stricker, the, an early German writer, xiv. 261.
- Strickland, Walter, of Council of State, xviii. 385 n., 399; xix. 106.
- Striegau, viii. 455.
- Strode, William, imprisoned, xvii. 66.
- Struensee, Danish Prime Minister, xi. 365.
- Strützki, with Friedrich at his death, xi. 508.
- Struve, xi. 168.
- St. Stephen's, the new, xii. 396.
- Stuart, Mary, xiv. 421.
- Stump-orator, ii. 417-455; a mouth-piece of Chaos, 421, 442, 449; supreme in the lawyer department, xii. 322.
- Stump-oratory at zero, v. 329; hideous nightmare of, vi. 33.
- Stupidity, blessings of, i. 124; our one enemy, ii. 350, 357, 364.
- Stusche, Tobias, Abbot of Kamenz, vii. 377, 378; viii. 430, 446.
- Stutterheim, left in charge of Schmütselfen, x. 314; in the Lausitz, seizing Austrian magazines, 317.
- Stuttgart, vi. 250.
- Style, varieties of, i. 55; every man has his own, xiii. 20; pictorial power, xiv. 396; eccentricities of, xv. 21.
- Subscription, Irish act of, xvii. 21 n.
- Suffolk, Cromwell's letters to Deputy Lieutenants of, xvii. 180, 202.
- Suffolk, Earl, sent to Charles I., xvii. 242.
- Suffren, Admiral, notice of, iii. 45.
- Sugar, why scarce, iv. 72; the remedy, 73.
- Suhm, Baron von, vi. 56, 65, 70, 492; dies on his way home, vii. 162.
- Suicide, i. 127.
- Suir River, castles on, xvii. 32.
- Sulkowski, General, prisoner at Zorn-dorf, x. 140; declares war against the King of Prussia, 193; extinguished by General Wobersnow, 194; in the Polish troubles, xi. 257.
- Sulleau, Royalist editor, iv. 83; massacred, 140.
- Sulli, Duc de, vii. 44.
- Sulzer, M., and Friedrich, ix. 190, 191; in the König-Maupertuis controversy, 211; at Berlin on arrival of the news of Kanersdorf, x. 270; xi. 326: his death, 338.

- Summons, Parliamentary, xviii. 297.
 Sumptuary Laws, xii. 210.
 Sun, eclipse of, in 1652, xviii. 276.
 Sunset, i. 71, 117.
 Superville, Dr., ix. 182.
 Supply and demand, our grand maxim of, xii. 181; xiii. 256.
 Surnames, Hénault on, iii. 3.
 Surrey petition and riot, xvii. 316.
 Suspect, Law of the, iv. 337; Chaumette jeered on, 392.
 Suspicion, in France, 1788, iii. 123; in Revolution, iv. 302.
 Sutton's Hospital. See Charter House.
 Svein Estrithson, xix. 458; King of Denmark, 458, 472, 473, 478.
 Svein Forkbeard vows to conquer England, xix. 413, 414; siege of London by, 420; marries Sigrid the Proud, 429; possessions in England, 436; death, 438, 439.
 Svein of Jomsburg, Knut's bastard son, xix. 469-471.
 Svein founds a new dynasty in Norway, xix. 486; Birkebein leader, 487, 488.
 Swabian Era, the, xiv. 251; birth of German Literature, 252, 317.
 Swallows, migrations and co-operative instincts of, i. 73.
 Swarmery, the gathering of men into swarms, xvi. 423-427.
 Swashbuckler age, xvi. 235.
 Sweden, King of, to assist Marie Antoinette, iv. 11; shot by Ankarström, 80; Whitlocke concludes treaty with, xviii. 388; without a King, v. 355; vii. 369; war with Russia, 370; viii. 56; joins the general combination against Friedrich, ix. 380, 480; Army put to flight by five postillons, x. 79; commanded by nobody in particular, 81, 82. See Charles XII., Gustaf Adolf, Karl Gustaf.
 Swedenborgians in questionable company, xv. 172.
 Swedish Ambassador, audience of, xix. 15, 16; takes leave, 61.
 Swieten, Van, xi. 374, 379.
 Swift, xiii. 18.
 Swindlership, vii. 442.
 Swineherd, the, i. 72.
 Swinton, Laird, joins Cromwell, xviii. 183; in Little Parliament, 299; in Cromwell's First Parliament, 308.
 Swiss (see Guards), at Brest, liberated, feasted, iv. 101-103; prisoners at La Force, 182.
 Sword-Brothers, Livonian, v. 97.
 Syberg, vi. 438.
 Syburg, General, at Langensalza, xi. 26; his recruiting commission, 28.
 Sydenham, Colonel, in Council of State, xviii. 335 n., 488.
 Sydow, Captain, at surrender of Dresden, x. 301.
 Syler, Colonel, at Inverkeithing fight, xviii. 234.
 Symbols, i. 165; wondrous agency of, 166; extrinsic and intrinsic, 169; superannuated, 171; of the God-like worn out, xiv. 372.
 Symonds, Mr., engraver, xviii. 206-208.
 Synott, Colonel. See Sinnott.
 TAAFF, FATHER, killed, xvii. 463.
 Taaff, Lucas, Governor of Ross, Cromwell's letters to, xvii. 479, 481, 482, 483.
 Taaff, Lord, his intrigues, xix. 82, and 82 n.
 Tabor, viii. 356.
 Tacitus, cited, v. 56 n.
 Tailor-art, symbolism of the, xii. 309.
 Tailors, symbolic significance of, i. 218.
 Tait, Mr. Robert, xii. 421, 450.
 Talk, Coleridge's, ii. 54.
 Tallard, viii. 400.
 Talleyrand-Perigord, Bishop, notice of, iii. 143; at fatherland's altar, gives his blessing, 340; excommunicated, iv. 9; in London, 53; to America, 263.
 Talleyrand, Marquis de, viii. 432.
 Tallien, notice of, iii. 296; editor of "Ami des Citoyens," iv. 83; in Committee of Town-hall (August, 1792), 162; in National Convention, 201; at Bordeaux, 345; and Madame Cabarus, 359; recalled, suspect, 415; accuses Robespierre, 419; Thermidorian, 431.
 Talma, actor, his soirée (Marat and Dumouriez), iv. 217.
 Tamerlane, xiii. 393.
 Tancred of Hauteville, xix. 396.
 Tangermünde, v. 112, 142, 163; famine, 276.
 Tannenberg, battle of, v. 151, 171, 200, 202.
 Tannery of human skins, iv. 389.
 Tanning, improvements in, iv. 396.
 Tardivet. See Repaire.
 Target, Advocate, declines King's defence, iv. 245; his Memoir, xi. 498.
 Tassin, M., and black cockade, iii. 240.
 Taste, true poetic, not dependent on riches, xiii. 39; German authors, 46; gift of Poetry presupposes taste, xiv. 211; dilettante upholstery, xv. 55.
 Tate, Zouch, M.P., introduces Self-denying Ordinance, xvii. 193.
 Tanzenzin defends Neustadt, viii. 485; Army-Treasurer, x. 190; defends Breslau against London's fiery bombardment and threat, 458, 459; a brave man, true to the death, 460; at siege of Schweidnitz, xi. 147, 154, 155;

- severe letter from the King on the Silesian Army, 485; mentioned also, 270.
- Tauler, Johann, xiv. 283.
- Tax, ascending, iv. 291.
- Taxation, spigot of, xiv. 68, 418.
- Taxes, where to lay the new, xii. 236.
- Taylor's Historic Survey of German Poetry, xiv. 307-343.
- Tears, beautifullest kind of, xii. 55.
- Tebay, John, his account of Keith's death, x. 159, 166; on sick-list, 168.
- Teinitz, Elbe, passage of, viii. 375, 377.
- Telegraph invented, iv. 386.
- Tell, v. 118.
- Teme river, near Worcester, xviii. 249.
- Tempelhof's criticisms and account of the battle of Prag, ix. 403, 411, 412; Kolin, 462; Leuthen, x. 54; Zorndorf, 133, 134; Hochkirch, 157, 158; Soubise, 177; Kunersdorf, 259, 263; Prince Henri's march of Fifty hours, 329; and manœuvring in Saxony, 334; on Friedrich's marches, 423, 456, 463, 494, 498; siege of Dresden, 428; seizure of Berlin, 427; Camp of Bunzelwitz, xi. 45; Reichenbach, 151; cited, ix. 347 n., 393 n.
- Tempest, Sir Richard, Royalist, in Lancashire, xvii. 317.
- Templars, Knights, end of the, v. 93.
- Temple, Pitt's brother-in-law, xi. 91.
- Temple. See Prison.
- Temptations in the wilderness, i. 139.
- Tencin, Cardinal, viii. 314, 332; ix. 237, 523; xi. 204 n.
- Tennis-Court, National Assembly in, iii. 158; Club of, and procession to, 327; master of, rewarded, iv. 51.
- Tentzel, cited, v. 118 n.
- Termagant of Spain, vii. 447; viii. 198, 200; ix. 70 n.
- Terray, Abbé, dissolute financier, iii. 5; x. 375.
- Terror, consummation of, iv. 347; reign of, designated, 349; number guillotined in, 450.
- Teschen, Congress of, xi. 422, 488.
- Teschen, Duke of, xi. 270.
- Tessin, Count, xi. 336.
- Tessin, Swedish Ambassador, viii. 308.
- Testimonies of Authors to Sartor Resartus, i. 226.
- Tetschen, viii. 348, 349.
- Tetzel, v. 183.
- Teufelsdrückh's Philosophy of Clothes, i. 6; he proposes a toast, 12; his personal aspect, and silent deep-seated Sanaculotism, 13; thawed into speech, 15; memorable watch-tower utterances, 16; alone with the Stars, 18; extremely miscellaneous environment, 18; plainness of speech, 22; universal learning, and multiplex literary style, 24; ambiguous-looking morality, 25; one instance of laughter, 26; almost total want of arrangement, 26; feeling of the ludicrous, 27; speculative Radicalism, 48; a singular Character, 58; Genesis properly an Exodus, 62; unprecedented Name, 65; infantine experience, 67; Pedagogy, 77; an almost Hindoo passivity, 77; school-boy jostling, 80; heterogeneous University-Life, 83; fever-paroxysms of Doubt, 88; first practical knowledge of the English, 90; getting under weigh, 92; ill success, 95; glimpse of high-life, 97; casts himself on the Universe, 102; reverent feeling towards women, 103; frantically in love, 104; first interview with Blumine, 107; inspired moments, 109; short of practical kitchen-stuff, 112; ideal bliss, and actual catastrophe, 118; sorrows, and peripatetic stoicism, 118; a parting glimpse of his Beloved, on her way to England, 117; how he overran the whole earth, 118; Doubt darkened into Unbelief, 123; love of Truth, 125; a feeble unit, amidst a threatening Infinitude, 126; Baphometic Fire-baptism, 129; placid indifference, 129; a Hyperborean intruder, 137; Nothingness of life, 138; Temptations in the wilderness, 139; dawning of a better day, 141; the Ideal in the Actual, 148; finds his true Calling, 151; his Biography a symbolic Adumbration, significant to those who can decipher it, 153; a wonder-lover, seeker and worker, 157; in Monmouth Street, among the Hebrews, 163; concluding hints, 221; his public History not yet done, perhaps the better part only beginning, 224; on the Greatness of Great Men, xv. 19; on Democracy, xii. 208.
- Teutsch Ritters, the, v. 89; origin of the Order, 90; removal from Palestine to Venice, 91; conversion and settlement of Prussia, 93; for more than a century a bright beacon in those Northern Countries, 97; the stuff they were made of, 98; degenerating into idleness and riches, 129; a Grand-Master assassinated, 129; pride tripped into the ditch at Tannenberg, 151; sinking steadily into final extinction, 171; new false hopes, 201; the end, 206. See Albert Hochmeister.
- Teutschland not to be cut into four, xi. 176.
- Thackeray, cited, ix. 263 n., 431 n.; xi. 58.
- Thadden at Colberg, xi. 67, 85.

- Thangbrand, xix. 424, 425.
 Theatins Church granted to Dissidents, iv. 5.
 Theatre, German estimation of the, xx. 46.
 Theatrical Reports, a vapid nuisance, xiii. 354.
 Theauro John, a kind of Quaker, xviii. 448.
 Thémicoud. See Demikof.
 Theocracy, a, striven for by all true Reformers, i. 377, 445.
 Theodore of Deux Ponts, viii. 117, 120.
 Theological Metaphysics, Sterling's interest in, ii. 121, 125; decidedly abating, 134.
 Theory, the Man of, xii. 155.
 Théot, Propheteas, on Robespierre, iv. 408, 414.
 Thermidor, Ninth and Tenth (July 27, 28), 1794, iv. 419-426.
 Théroigne. Mdlle., notice of, iii. 132; in Insurrection of Women, 246; at Versailles (October Fifth), 256; in Austrian prison, iv. 38; in Jacobin tribune, 95; accoutred for Insurrection (August Tenth), 136, 140; keeps her carriage, 281; fustigated, insane, 302.
 Thersites, xii. 274.
 Thiébault, always incorrect, and the prey of stupidities, viii. 259, 312; ix. 184, 215; xi. 334.
 Thielcke, Mrs., killed at Frankfurt, x. 245.
 Thierry, M., xvi. 88.
 Thinkers, how few are, xv. 227; intellectual thrift, xvi. 25.
 Thinking Man, a, the worst enemy of the Prince of Darkness, i. 92, 150; true Thought can never die, 186.
 Thionville besieged, iv. 167; siege raised, 209.
 Thirty-nine Articles, xii. 218.
 Thirty-Years War, v. 253, 260, 267; hunger the grand weapon, 275.
 Thomond, Earl. See O'Brien.
 Thomont, Milord, x. 372.
 Thompson, Captain, Leveller, xvii. 431; shot, 433.
 Thompson, Cornet, Leveller, xvii. 431; shot, 433.
 Thompson, Captain, boards one of Friedrich's ships, ix. 154.
 Thomson, viii. 328.
 Thor, and his adventures, i. 231, 267-269; his last appearance, 272.
 Thor's collar, xix. 423.
 Thorarin, xix. 453.
 Thorð Potbelly, xix. 450.
 Thormod, xix. 425.
 Thorn, town of, v. 129; hurls out the Teutsch Ritters, 173; Jesuit tragedy, at, vi. 64.
 Thornhaugh, Major, slain at Preston, xvii. 331, 338.
 Thöring, Feldmarschall, viii. 191, 397.
 Thought, how, rules the world, xiii. 390; xv. 9, 272, 284; miraculous influence of, i. 254, 261, 387; musical, 311.
 Thouret, Law-reformer, iii. 285; dissolves Assembly, iv. 52; guillotined, 403.
 Thouvenot and Dumouriez, iv. 175.
 Thrift, value of, xvi. 45; no great empire ever founded without, v. 342
 Incalculable value of, vii. 25, 27. See Economics.
 Thugut at Congress of Braunau, xi. 416
 Thulmeyer, vi. 311; vii. 171, 189.
 Thunder. See Thor.
 Thüringen, vi. 410.
 Thuriot. See Rosière.
 Thurloe, Secretary to Cromwell, xviii. 384; Cromwell's letter to, xix. 12; and Cromwell on Kingship, 151.
 Thyri, Tryggveson's wife, xix. 430.
 Ticonderoga attacked by Abercromby, x. 175.
 Tielcke, Captain, on the Schweidnitz Sieges, x. 93; escapes from Prussian bondage, with Fernor at Cüstrin, 117, 121; Zorndorf, 123, 124; on the Camp of Bunzelwitz, xi. 47; cited, x. 93 n.; xi. 46 n.
 Tillinghurst, Rev. Mr., and Cromwell, xix. 8, 10.
 Tilson, George, vi. 155.
 Time-Spirit, life-battle with the, i. 66, 98; Time, the universal wonder-hider, 199; and Space, quiddities not entities, xiii. 161; xiv. 28; the outer veil of Eternity, 417; xvi. 135; the great mystery of, i. 242.
 Times, signs of the, xiii. 461-487.
 Times Newspaper, xii. 294. See Sterling's Father.
 Tindal, cited, vi. 416 n.; vii. 464 n., 479 n.
 Tinois, Voltaire's clerk, ix. 123 n., 148.
 Tinville, Fouquier, revolutionist, iii. 297; Jacobin, 308; Attorney-General in Tribunal Révolutionnaire, iv. 289; at trial of Queen, 340; at trial of Girondins, 343; brutal, at trial of Mme. Roland, 355; at trial of Danton, 388, 390; and Salut Public, 400; his prison-plots, 402, 412; his batches, 410; the prison under mock doom of, 411-413; at trial of Robespierre, 425; accused, guillotined, 443.
 Tipperary county fined, xviii. 29.
 Tissot, Dr., xi. 329, 342.
 Titchborne, Alderman, of Customs Committee, xviii. 331.
 Tithes, titles, &c., abolished, iii. 212, 329.

- Titius, Professor, xi. 254.
 Titles of Honor, i. 187.
 Titus, Captain, £50 voted to, xvii. 363; with Charles I., 301; "Killing no Murder," xix. 118 n.
 Tobacco, good and bad influences of, vi. 83.
 Tobacco - Parliament, Friedrich Wilhelm's, v. 391; description of, vi. 29; a strange Session, 438; the last, vii. 133.
 Tobago, Island of, ix. 298.
 To-day, the conflux of two Eternities, xiii. 465.
 Toland describes Sophie Charlotte, v. 42; his account of Prussia and Westphalia, 301; cited, 43 n.
 Tolerance, xiii. 399, 458; xv. 181; true and false, i. 363, 374.
 Toleration, vii. 158.
 Tollendal, Lally, pleads for his father, iii. 85; in States-General, 142; popular, crowned, 195.
 Tongue, watch well thy, xiv. 423; xvi. 233; miraculous gift of, xv. 78, 459; human talent all gone to, ii. 417, 431, 436; how to cure the evil, 436, 452. See Eloquence.
 Tongue-fence, Sterling's skill in, ii. 41, 119.
 Tonnage and Poundage disputed, xvii. 63.
 Tooka, cited, xi. 109 n.
 Tools, influence of, i. 32; the Pen, most miraculous of tools, 150; and the Man, xii. 239, 240.
 Toope and Sindercomb, xix. 112.
 Torgau, beautifully defended by Wolfersdorf, x. 287-290; town and its environs, 509-512; battle of, 512-529.
 Torné, Bishop, and Costumes, iv. 90.
 Torphichen, Lord, portrait of Knox, xii. 419; reproduced in woodcut, 421.
 Torrijos, General, the main stay of his fellow Exiles, ii. 64, 65; they leave England, 71; difficulties at Gibraltar, 72; a catastrophe, 83; death, 86.
 Torrington, Lord, ix. 303.
 Torstenson's siege of Brieg, vii. 460.
 Torture, vii. 154.
 Toryism an overgrown Imposture, ii. 135; the Pope a respectable old Tory, 169; English Toryism not so bad as Irish, 215; goes a long way in this world, viii. 31.
 Tosti, xix. 478.
 Tottleben, at Kunersdorf, x. 273; in Pommern, 407; marches, with Czernichef, on Berlin, 491; tries bombardment, 492; is reinforced by Lacy, 492; grants favorable capitulation, 494; is himself under obligations to Friedrich and Berlin, 495; will not sanction Lacy's ferocity, 495; marches off at the approach of Friedrich, 500; in Eastern Pommern, xi. 40; Colberg, 63; in the anti-Turk war, 291.
 Touche, Ritter de la, ix. 153.
 Toul, viii. 247.
 Toulon, Girondin, iv. 299; occupied by English, 333; besieged, 363; surrenders, 364.
 Toulangeon, Marquis, notice of, iii. 285; on Barnave triumvirate, iv. 41; describes Jacobins Hall, 94.
 Toulouse, Comte de, ix. 50.
 Tour and Taxis, Princess, vii. 320.
 Tournament, the, ix. 105.
 Tournay, Louis, at siege of Bastille, iii. 185.
 Tournay, siege of, viii. 432.
 Tourzel, Dame de (see Korff, Baroness de), escapes, iv. 170.
 Townshend, Lord, vi. 123, 136, 187, 193; quarrel with Walpole, 169.
 Trade, Committee of, xix. 38.
 Trades Union, in quest of its "Four eights," xvi. 449.
 Tragedy, Sterling's high notions of, ii. 216.
 Trakehnen, the stud of, vii. 182.
 Traun, Marshal, viii. 333, 366, 370; Friedrich's Schoolmaster in the art of War, 370, 371, 384; encamps at Marschowitz, 371; gets Beneschau, 372; follows Friedrich to Silesia, 385, 389, 390; retires to Moravia, 391; sent to the Frankfurt countries, 426; drives Prince Conti across the Rhine, 474, 475; death, 502 n.; Friedrich acknowledges his obligations to, xi. 281, 286.
 Trautenau burnt down, viii. 491.
 Trautschke saves General Fouquet at Landshut, xi. 426.
 Travenol Lawsuit, summary of the, ix. 45.
 Treasury, Commissioners of, xviii. 490; state of the, in 1656, xix. 95.
 Treaties, Cromwell's, xviii. 388; xix. 15, 26.
 Treaty, Ripon, xvii. 103; at Oxford, 135, 145; Uxbridge, 180; with the King, 241, 249, 261, 283, 370.
 Tredah, garrison of, xvii. 455; stormed, 457, 458, 464; list of officers slain at, 466.
 Trefurt, Pastor, at Petersburg, x. 120.
 Trenck, Baron, in Paris, iii. 299; loud-spoken braggart, v. 438; at Berlin Carnival, viii. 229; arrested for breaking orders, 472; extensively fabulous blockhead, 472; a convicted liar, 496; x. 444, 446; cited, viii. 495 n.
 Trenck, Pandour, and his Tolpatches, viii. 208, 209, 275; in Prince Karl's

- Rhine Campaign, 336, 365; gets his head broken at Kolin, 374; Sohr, viii. 493, 497.
- Treskau, Captain, at siege of Schweidnitz, x. 93 n.
- Treskow, General, defends Neisse against the Austrians, x. 170.
- Trevor, Colonel, and Venables, xvii. 492; xix. 86.
- Trevor, Excellency, viii. 19.
- Tribunal Extraordinaire, iv. 289; Révolutionnaire, doings of, 338; extended, 409.
- Tricolor cockade, iii. 174.
- Trier, Kurfürst of, vi. 268.
- Triers of preachers, xviii. 386, 492; xix. 88.
- Triglyph, god of the Wends, v. 70.
- Triller, der, xvi. 363, 365, 386.
- Trimberg, Hugo von, xiv. 263, 275; his Renner a singular clear-hearted old book, 265.
- Trimmers and truckers, xiv. 372; xv. 309.
- Tronchet, Advocate, defends King, iv. 245, 264.
- Troopers, three, present Army-letter, xvii. 261, 262.
- Troubadour Period of Literature, xiv. 251, 258.
- Truth, individual, the beginning of social good, xvi. 54; and Falsehood, iii. 906.
- Truthfulness, xiii. 417; xv. 77; xvi. 351. See Sincerity.
- Tryggve, Olaf's father, xix. 407, 440.
- Tryggve Olafson, xix. 471.
- Tryggveson. See Olaf.
- Tuileries, Louis XVI. lodged at, iii. 281; a tile-field, 284; escape from, to Varennes, iv. 12-16; Twentieth June at, 110, 111; tickets of entry, "Coblentz," 128; Marceillaise chase Filles-Saint-Thomas to, 132; August Tenth, 135, 143; King quits forever, 145; attacked, 146; captured, 148; occupied by National Convention, 299.
- Tulchan Bishops, account of, xvii. 42.
- Tunis, Dey of, brought to reason, xix. 4.
- Turenne, his sayings full of sagacity and geniality, i. 308; killed by a cannon-shot, xi. 281, 286.
- Turf, Einar, invents peat, xix. 396; cuts an eagle on back of Fairhair's son, 398.
- Turgot, Controller of France, iii. 31; on Corn-law, 35; dismissed, 42; death of, 86.
- Turin, Lines of, v. 300.
- Turks, the, vi. 263 n.; attacked by Russia and Austria, vii. 81, 101; ruin put off till a better time, 126; they begin to take interest in the Polish-Russian quarrel, xi. 254-262; declare war against Russia, 264; the Blind against the Purlind, 264, 265; getting scattered in panic rout, 273; darkening the fairest part of God's creation, 274; some glances into the extremely brutish phenomenon, 280, 294; they solicit Friedrich to mediate a peace for them, 296.
- Turner, Rev. Mr., Cromwell's opinion of, xviii. 395.
- Turner, Sir James, narrative by, xvii. 324; wounded by his own men, 332, 334; prisoner, 348.
- Turpin, Hussar, ix. 506, 517.
- Tweeddale, Earl of, on Committee of Kingship, xix. 131.
- Tweeddale, Marquis of, Letter to, on Fontenoy, viii. 439 n.; cited, ix. 441 n.
- Twistleton, Colonel, at Dunbar, xviii. 138.
- Two Hundred and Fifty Years ago, a Fragment about Duels, xvi. 327-329; Holles of Haughton, 328; Croydon Races, 331; Sir Thomas Dutton and Sir Hatton Cheek, 334.
- Tyll, Eulenspiegel, adventures of, xiv. 379.
- Tyndale, William, xix. 415.
- Tyrants, French people risen against, iv. 336, 379; so-called, v. 326.
- Tyrawley, Lord, at Portugal, xi. 92.
- Tyrconnell, Excellency, ix. 113; at Potsdam, 172, 173, 176, 182, 192.
- UCKERMUNDE, v. 176.
Ulm, vi. 411.
- Ulf, Jarl, helps Knut, death, xix. 457, 459.
- Ulrich von Hutten, cited, v. 182 n.
- Ulrique Eleonora, Queen of Sweden, v. 363.
- Ulrique, Princess Louisa, v. 363, 439; vii. 373; Letter to Friedrich, viii. 227; Marriage, 307, 311; becomes Queen of Sweden, ix. 149; chagrins and contumacies, Senators demand sight and count of the Crown Jewels, xi. 239; she visits Berlin, 333; Büsching's account of her, 234-237; her death, 341.
- Ulster pikes, xvii. 502.
- Umminger, J. J., of Landshut, viii. 85, 89.
- Unanimity in folly, xii. 140.
- Unbelief, era of, i. 87, 124; Doubt darkening into, 123; escape from, 140.
- Unconscious, the, the alone complete, xii. 114.
- Unconsciousness, the first condition of health, xiv. 344, 358; the fathomless domain of, xv. 139.
- Underwood, Captain, Cromwell's letter to, xix. 325.

- Unertl, Baron von, passionately warns Karl Albert against the French alliance, vii. 481; viii. 235.
- Unhappy sugary brethren, ii. 320; happiness not come, xii. 400.
- Uniformity in religion, xvii. 104, 251.
- Union of Frankfurt, viii. 340.
- United States assert liberty, iii. 9; embassy to Louis XVI., 44; aided by France, 44; of Congress in, 215.
- Universe, general high court of the, xii. 11, 26, 176; a great unintelligible Perhaps, 133; become the humbug it was thought to be, 148; a beggarly Universe, 182; is made by Law, 221; a monarchy and hierarchy, ii. 280; the vesture of an invisible Infinita, xii. 345, 363; M'Croudy's notion of, 350; all things to all men, 398; "open secret" of, 399. See Laws.
- Universal suffrage, xix. 491.
- Universities, i. 85; value of, xvi. 391-393; endowments, 404-406; of Prague and Vienna, xiv. 290; disputed seniority of Oxford and Cambridge, xvi. 299; necessity for, in earlier days, i. 384; the English, ii. 34.
- Unruh, Herr von, killed by the Poles, xi. 315.
- Unruh, Major, at Glatz, xi. 445.
- Unseen, the, xii. 199.
- Untamability, xv. 254, 286.
- Unveracity, xvi. 345, 351. See Sincerity.
- Unwisdom, infallible fruits of, xii. 32.
- Urrey, Colonel. See Hurry.
- Ursula, St., vi. 270.
- Ushant, sea-fight, iii. 45.
- Utilitarianism, i. 124, 177; xiii. 54, 80, 211, 454, 478; xiv. 171, 332, 382; Bentham's utilitarian funeral, 32.
- Utrecht, Treaty of, v. 302, 347, 443; ix. 251.
- Uttoxeter, capture of Scots at, xvii. 334.
- VACH, affair at, ix. 439.
- Vacuum, and the serene blue, xii. 183.
- Vaensoun, Adrianc, xii. 412.
- Valadi, Marquis, notice of, iii. 133; Gardes Françaises and, 166; guillotined, iv. 346.
- Valazé, Girondin, iv. 57; on trial of Louis, 236; plots at his house, 304; trial of, 343; stabs himself, 344.
- Valenciennes besieged, iv. 313; surrendered, 326.
- Valet, the, theory of heroes, xiv. 145.
- Valets and heroes, xii. 26, 82, 145, 213, 281; London valets dismissed annually to the streets, 287. See Flunkies.
- Valfons, Marquis de, cited, viii. 438 n.; ix. 509 n.
- Valmy, action at, iv. 208.
- Valori drops a diplomatic note, viii. 23, at Gros Neundorf, 54, 76, 78; re siege of Neisse, 80; goes to Belleisle, 96; at Dresden, 107; with the French Army at Trebitach, 130; nettled with Comte Maurice, 132; with Friedrich in his Saxon troubles, 138; with Belleisle at Prag, 195; suspicions of Voltaire, 281; informs Friedrich of Belleisle's capture, 40; his mission to Dresden, 413-415; with Friedrich in Silesia, 446; at Hohenfriedberg battle, 457, 459, 463, 464, 467; falls into disgrace with Friedrich, 476; saved from Pandours by D'Arget, 486; quits the army for Breslau, 491; tries to prevent the Peace of Dresden, ix. 17; blames Friedrich in regard to Pompadour, 287; conversation with the Prince of Prussia, 308, 309; quits Berlin, 334; letter from Prince of Prussia, 351; mentioned also, vii. 171, 227, 373, 457; viii. 22, 129, 168, 362, 396, 397, 408, 416; cited, 395 n.
- Valor, the basis of all virtue, i. 264, 267; Norse consecration of, 272; Christian valor, 354.
- Vampire-bats, ecclesiastic, xvi. 213.
- Vandals. See Wends.
- Van Druske, General, taken, xvii. 339.
- Vane, Sir Henry, sen., in Cromwell's First Parliament, xviii. 398.
- Vane, Sir Henry, jun., of Committee of Both Kingdoms, xvii. 197; of Council of State, 403; character of, 264; a juggler, xviii. 394; a rejected M.P. candidate, xix. 58.
- Vansomer, xii. 412.
- Varenne, Maton de la, Advocate, his experiences in September, iv. 170.
- Varennes described, Louis near, iv. 29-34 (see Sausse); Prussians occupy, 178.
- Varigny, Bodyguard, massacred (October Fifth), iii. 269.
- Varlet, "Apostle of Liberty," iv. 249, 267, 284; arrested, 304.
- Varney, Sir Edmund, in Tredah, xvii. 453, 459.
- Varney, Sir Ralph, his Notes, xvii. 106.
- Varnhagen's account of Voltaire's arrest, ix. 228; cited, v. 25 n.; ix. 81 n.; x. 110 n.; xi. 93 n. See Ensee.
- Varnish, conservative, xvi. 438.
- Vates and Seer, the true Poet a, xv. 2, 431; xvi. 841.
- Vaticination, xiii. 462.
- Vattel, of Droit des Gens, at Berlin, viii. 136.
- Vaudreuil, M. de, loses Montreal, xi. 343.

- Vaugrenaud, M. de, ix. 17, 18.
 Vehse, cited, xi. 345 n.
 Vellinghausen, battle of, xi. 53-55.
 Venables, Colonel, at Derry, xvii. 465, 491, 493; made General, sails with the fleet, xviii. 451; sent to the Tower, xix. 16, 22-25.
 Vendée, La, Commissioners to, iv. 71; state of, in 1792, 86; insurrection in, 166; war, after King's death, 232, 333; on fire, 358; pacificated, 438.
 Vendémiaire, Thirteenth (Oct. 4), 1795, iv. 456-459.
 Vengeur, sinking of the, iv. 384; xvi. 160-167.
 Venner, Cooper, rising by, xix. 139, 140.
 Veracity, the one sanctity of life, ii. 102; small still voices, 134; clear and perfect fidelity to truth, 254. See Unveracity.
 Verbs, Irregular, National Assembly at, iii. 208.
 Verdun to be besieged, iv. 167, 172; surrendered, 173; viii. 247.
 Vere family, Fairfax's wife of the, xviii. 99.
 Vere, Sir Horace, v. 268.
 Vergennes, M. de, Prime Minister, iii. 62; in Turkey, trying to kindle war with Russia, xi. 262, 290; death of, iii. 73.
 Vergniaud, notice of, iv. 57; too languid, 91; during August Tenth, 112; orations of, 159; President at King's condemnation, 254; in fall of Girondins, 306; trial of, 343; at last supper of Girondins, 344.
 Verheiden, xii. 416.
 Vermond, Abbé de, Queen's reader, iii. 73.
 Vermuyden, Colonel, notice of, xvii. 202.
 Vernon, Admiral, vii. 247, 267; attacks Porto-Bello, 476; Carthage, 477, 478; quarrel with Wentworth, 483; miserable consequences, 485.
 Versailles, death of Louis XV. at, iii. 4, 26; Tennis-Court, 158; in Bastille time, National Assembly at, 179, 194; troops to, 236; march of women on, 246; of French Guards on, 250; halt of women near, 251; insurrection scene at, 254; the Château forced, 268; (Orléans) prisoners massacred at, iv. 198.
 Vesuvius, eruptions of, xi. 184.
 Veto, question of the, iii. 233; iv. 38, 108; eluded, 117.
Vetus, Letters of, ii. 24.
 Vlard, Spy, Mme. Roland and, iv. 250.
 Vickers's relation of Winceby fight, xvi. 170.
 Victor Amadeus King of Sardinia, vi. 362.
 Victor Leopold of Anhalt-Bernburg, viii. 422.
 Vienna, Congress of, v. 264; Karl VI's Treaty of, 459; vi. 426; what Friedrich thought of the Vienna Court, 433.
 View-hunting and diseased self-consciousness, i. 117; xiv. 365.
 Vigo, descent on, v. 454.
 Vilate, jurymen, guillotined, iv. 443; book by, 444.
 Villa, Dr., vi. 164, 170.
 Villaret-Joyeuse, Admiral, beaten by Howe, iv. 384.
 Villars, Marshal, vi. 469.
 Villars, Duchess de (Daughter-in-law of the above), immortalizes Voltaire with a kiss, viii. 231.
 Villarmes, milliners, their patriotic gift, iv. 165.
 Villebois, General, xi. 128.
 Villemain, M., criticised, xvii. 211.
 Villequier, Duke de, emigrates, iii. 406.
 Villiers, Mr., viii. 84; Sir Thomas, ix. 3, 16, 23, 84.
 Vilshofen, viii. 417.
 Vincennes Castle to be repaired, iii. 401; riot at, 402; saved by Lafavette, 406.
 Vincent, of War-Office, iv. 378; arrested, 391; guillotined, 395.
 Vincent, St., Island of, Sterling's residence in, ii. 75.
 Viner's, Mr., Speech in Parliament, vii. 474.
 Vioménil makes bad worse in Poland, xi. 262.
 Virgil's Æneid, xiv. 391.
 Virginia and Maryland, differences between, xviii. 451.
 Virnsperg, v. 89.
 Virtue, healthy and unhealthy, xiv. 350; synonym of Pleasure, xv. 142; raw materials of, ii. 819.
 Vitus, St., prayers to, viii. 348, 407.
 Vladislaus King of Hungary and Bohemia, v. 180, 192, 231.
 Voghera, Marquis de, xi. 465.
 Vohburg Family, the, v. 84.
 Voigt, cited, v. 66 n., 101 n.
 Voigtland, Duke of, v. 102, 128.
 Volney, Jean Jacques and Company, xvi. 227.
 Voltaire, i. 146; the Parisian divinity, 190; at Paris, iii. 42; last dictator among the French, xiii. 187, 211, 380-461; contrasted with Goethe, 247-249; the man of his century, 395; adroitness and multifarious success, 400; rectitude, 403; essentially a mocker, 405; petty explosiveness, 408; vanity his ruling passion, 411; visit to the Café de Procope, 412; lax morality, 416; greatest of persifleurs, 418; visit to Frederick the Great, 420; his trouble

- with his women, 421; last triumphal visit to Paris, 429; xv. 22; his death, xiii. 436; his intellectual gifts, 438; criticisms of Shakspeare, 444; opposition to Christianity, 448; of all Frenchmen the most French, xv. 111; burial-place of, iii. 417.
- Voltaire, and his scandalous Life of Friedrich, v. 14; vi. 281, 287; his Life of Charles XII., v. 355; vi. 263; vii. 49; his first renown, v. 407; sees the Congress of Cambrai, 456; his Henriade, vi. 57; vii. 51; his Name, vi. 63; vii. 46; Friedrich's admiration of, vi. 418; vii. 53, 59; their correspondence, 38, 58, 91; Saurteig's estimate of, 39; no proper History of Voltaire, 40; his parentage and youth, 41; insulted by the Duc de Rohan, 45; challenges him, and flies to England, 46; English influences and associates, 47; his stereotype Englishman, 48; a shrewd financier, 49; returns triumphant to France, 60; lions and dogs in his path, 52; Madame du Châtelet, 54; life at Cirey, 55; his first letter to Friedrich, 62; his account of Luiscius, difference between a witty satire and a prose fact, 88; edits Friedrich's Anti-Machiavel, 108; receives a keg of wine from Friedrich, 150; printing the Anti-Machiavel, 190; Friedrich's pressing invitations, 191; account of the Strasburg adventure, 198, 200; Voltaire and Maupertuis, 201; first interview with Friedrich, 219; what he thought of the Heratal affair, 241; first visit to Berlin, 274; at Lille, 423; quizzes Maupertuis, 428; "Frédéric le Grand," viii. 173; visits Friedrich at Aachen, 182, 216; getting Mahomet on the boards, 214; home to Cirey again, 221; vacancy in the Academy, 230; made immortal by a kiss, 231; fourth visit to Friedrich, 185; differences with Madame du Châtelet, 278, 291; his secret Diplomatic Commission, 279; on slippery ground, 280; hands in a "Memorial" to Friedrich, 281, 285; end of his diplomacy, 290; Three Madrigals, 291. Letters: to Maupertuis, vii. 215, 227; viii. 292; to Cideville, vii. 239; viii. 216; to D'Argenson, 216; Fleury, 217; Amelot, 238. First seen by Louis XV. at Freyburg, 361; celebrates the victory of Fontenoy, 444; a gleam in him from the Eternities, ix. 40; makes way at Court, 43; no favorite with Louis XV., 44, 48; gets into the Academy, 45; Travenol lawsuit, 45, 47; on a visit at Sceaux, 49-56; tremulous anxiety about his manuscripts, 56; his account of Ma-
- dame du Châtelet's lying-in, 76; singular emotion at her death, 77; grand reception at Berlin, 101; seen by Colini at the Carrusel, 108; not yet sunset with him, 112; coolness towards him at the French Court, 112; every precaution that his Berlin visit should be no loss, 113; his own account of his Berlin festivities, 113; Friedrich's Supreme of Literature, 114; spiteful rumors, 115; really attached to Friedrich, 117; visited by König, 121; gets D'Arnaud dismissed, 123; shameful Jew-lawsuit, 123-145; illegal stock-jobbing, 125; clutches Jew Hirsch by the windpipe, 137; calls on Formey, 137; a fraudulent document, 140-143; left languishing in Berlin, 146, 147; cosy little dinners, 147; tries to keep up appearances, 148, 163; strives to forget there ever was a Hirsch, 160; sure enough a strange Trismegistus, 161; occasional flights to Paris, 162; ill-health, discontent, misery driven into meanness, 163; his Louis Quatorze goes steadily on, 164; honest literary help to Friedrich, 165; little bits of flatteries, 166, 167; can keep patience with Maupertuis no longer, 168, 181, 182; a certain jealous respect for Rothenburg, 172; fractions of letters to Friedrich, 174; Louis Quatorze published, and pirated, "all Prussia to the rescue," 179; the "orange-skin" and "dirty-linen" rumors, 180, 181; La Mettrie's death, 182; enmity of La Beaumelle, 184; testifies to Friedrich's conversational powers, 191; obscene scandals about Friedrich, 196; takes part in the König-Maupertuis quarrel, 212; letter on the subject, quizzing Maupertuis, 212; Friedrich indignantly replies, 214; Doctor Akakia, 215, 217; published in spite of his promise to the King, 218; sick, and in disgrace, 217, 220; outward reconciliation, 219-223; last interview with Friedrich, 223; goes to Dresden, 224; receives a threatening letter from Maupertuis, and replies to it, 224; at the Court of Sachsen-Gotha, 225; is arrested at Frankfurt, 226-227; strikes Van Duren, 231; wanders about for several years, 237; Wilhelmina very kind to him, 238, 239; writes to Friedrich, 268; at Colmar, visit from "the Angels," 238; his successive lodging-places, 238 n.; indifferent Epigram on Kings Friedrich and George, 266; Wilhelmina urges him to help in her peace-project, &c., 523, 526-531; renewed correspondence with Friedrich, 524, 529, 535; x. 322, 356; a good word

- for Soubise, 177; verses on Wilhelmina, 185 n.; peace-expectations, 320, 322, 381; last touch to Maupertuis's life-drama, 388, 389, 393, 394; was not the publisher of Œuvres de Philosophie de Sans-Souci, 376; characteristic correspondence with and about Friedrich, 385-400; "Lion and Mouse," 388, 389; "Luc" his nickname for Friedrich, 389; case of Widow Calas, 396; hatred of a fanatic Popedom, xi. 182; has no anticipation of the coming French Revolution, 182, 183; his interest in the expected liberation of Greece, 291; writes to Friedrich of the visit of Wilhelmina's Daughter, 342-344; longs to do battle on L'Infâme, 346; Dr. Burney's account of him at Ferney, 352-355; Mr. Sherlock's 355-361; his gay costume, 356; his high opinion of Newton, 361; anæsthesia at Paris, and death, 405, 406; Smelfungus on, 419, 420; mentioned also, vii. 148, 181, 176, 259, 321, 384; ix. 23, 27; x. 200; xi. 245, 291, 388, 395, 406 n.: cited, v. 14 n.; vi. 63 n.; vii. 194 n., 199 n.; viii. 438 n.; ix. 581 n.; x. 480 n.
- Voltaire-worship, i. 247.
- Volto Santo*, chief of relics, ii. 160.
- Voluntary principle, xvii. 251.
- Vota, the famous Jesuit, v. 40.
- Votes did not carry Columbus to America, vii. 148.
- Voting, foolish unanimity of, ii. 374; large liberty of "voting" in God's Universe, but under conditions inexorable, 280, 306, 310, 343, 446; what to do with the "fool's vote," 309, 314, 381; the "votes" of all men worth knowing, 311; the horse's "vote," 316; the slave's, 320; the man worth taking the vote of, 322.
- Vowle's plot, xviii. 393, 396; App. xix. 369.
- Vyner, Sir Thomas, Lord Mayor of London, Cromwell's letter to, xviii. 394.
- WACKERBART, Fieldmarshal, vi. 70, 207.
- Wade, General, viii. 259, 314, 317, 332, 338, 342; his helplessness, 431.
- Wages, fair day's for fair day's work, xii. 21, 198; no index of well-being, xvi. 69.
- Waghäusel, vi. 492.
- Wagram, Napoleon at, xvi. 17; not such a beating as Rossbach, v. 9, 109.
- Wagstaff, Sir Joseph, in arms, xviii. 486; xix. 78. See Penruddock.
- Wahistadt, x. 469.
- Wakefield, Lord Fairfax at, xvii. 146.
- Wakenitz, General, at Zornsdorf, x. 136.
- Walch, ix. 97.
- Waldau, Colonel, vi. 230, 422.
- Waldburg, Colonel Truchsess von, vi. 138; vii. 149; viii. 142 n.; and the Pandours, 379; his death, 462.
- Waldeck, at Fontenoy, viii. 434, 441.
- Waldenses, notices of the, xviii. 490.
- Wales, tumults in, xvii. 310.
- Wales, Prince of, Fleet revolts to, xvii. 323; at Yarmouth, 323; ostrich-plume, v. 138; ancestors, vi. 236.
- Walker, Clement, M.P., described, xvii. 293; purged by Pride, 398.
- Wallace, Scotland's debt to, xii. 14.
- Wallenstein, v. 266, 371, 374, 352; vi. 431.
- Wallenstein*, Schiller's, brief sketch of, xx. 126; scene of Max Piccolomini and his Father, 134; of Max and the Princess Thekla, 139; of Thekla's last resolve, 141.
- Waller, Post, his plot, xvii. 153; Cromwell's letter to, App. xix. 376.
- Waller, Sir Hordres, at Bristol siege, xvii. 219; wounded at Basing, 296.
- Waller, Sir William, in high repute, xvii. 146; beaten at Lansdown heath, 158; his army deserts, 188; is Presbyterian, 259; deputed to Army, 260; purged by Pride, 398.
- Wallis, vii. 266, 299; at Breslau, 300; strengthens Glogau, 301; will resist to the utmost, 312, 389; surrenders, 392; at Habelschwert, viii. 391.
- Wallis, Colonel, conspires with traitor Warkotach for the betrayal of Friedrich, xi. 79-82.
- Wallop, Robert, M.P., notices of, xvii. 468 n.; in Cromwell's First Parliament, xviii. 398.
- Walpole, Horace, Memoirs of, xvi. 82; is a collector of letters, xvii. 406; describes a royal mistress, v. 430; vi. 100; ix. 84; on the fight of Kloster Kampen, x. 536; on Dissenter Maucluit, and the German War, xi. 4-6; "Letter to Jean Jacques," 379; friendship for Conway, 392; his "George the Second," ix. 423, 424; cited, v. 429 n.; vi. 63 n.; ix. 112 n., 423 n.; x. 536 n.
- Walpole, Robert, v. 429; vi. 56; vii. 81, 103, 128, 384; the phenomenon of, in England, 468, 472, 478, 485; ix. 84; his talking apparatus, 432; cited, 111 n.
- Walpole, Home Secretary, bursts into tears, xvi. 431.
- Walpot von Bassenheim, v. 80.
- Walrave, Engineer, vii. 395, 459; viii. 82, 145; sulky at the Old Dessauer's

- bantering, 147; is a brutish polygamist, 148; prisoner for life, ix. 308.
- Walter the Penniless, xvi. 432.
- Walton, Colonel, Cromwell's letters to, xvii. 183, 187; account of, 184; at trial of King, 400.
- Walton, Dr., Cromwell's letter to, xix. 365.
- Walwyn, William, Leveller, xvii. 421.
- Wangenheim, Major von, and her Polish Majesty, ix. 323, 324.
- Wangenheim, General, in battle of Minden, x. 235, 238.
- War, i. 132; civil, manual and lingual, iii. 293; French, becomes general, 370; the Thirty-Years, xvii. 71; with Scots, 101; the Bishops', 102; Civil, commenced, 110; exciting cause of, 114; in 1643, 135; Second Civil, 310; art of, v. 9; vii. 251; Wars not memorable, 436; needless ditto, viii. 11; not a school of pity, 371; omnipotence of luck in matters of, ix. 18, 36; not an over-fond Mother to her sons, x. 432. See Army, Battle, Dutch, Girondins, Spain, Welsh.
- Warkotsch, Baron von, entertaining Friedrich at Schönbrunn, xi. 76; traitorously betrays him to the Austrians, but his plot discovered, 78-81; arrested and escapes, 82-84.
- Warnery, ix. 410.
- Warrington, Scots surrender at, xvii. 339, 344.
- Warriston. See Johnston, Archibald.
- Warsaw, battle of, v. 284; Kalkstein kidnapped at, 294; Election at, vi. 462; "Union" and "Treaty" of, viii. 410, 412; ix. 275, 279, 280.
- Wartburg and its immortal remembrances and monitions, xvi. 368; romantic old hill-castle, v. 98.
- Wartensleben, Captain, vii. 96, 97; Adjutant-General, 294, 405.
- Warwick, Earl, notice of, xix. 52; at Installation, 222; one of Cromwell's Lords, 236; letter to Cromwell, 288.
- Warwick, Sir Philip, his opinion of Cromwell, xvii. 96, 108.
- Washing, symbolic influences of, xii. 225.
- Washington, George, key of Bastille sent to, iii. 202; formula for Lafayette, 142; iv. 155; is Colonel of a regiment in Ohio, ix. 254; early war-passages with the French, 257, 258; mentioned also, x. 176.
- Waser, Austrian Minister at Paris, viii. 84.
- Watch and Canary Bird, Mrs. Carlyle's, ii. 143.
- Waterford besieged, xvii. 497; Cromwell's correspondence at, App. xix. 342-344.
- Waterhouse, John, recommended by Cromwell, xviii. 212.
- Watigny, battle of, iv. 382.
- Watt, James, xvi. 97; ii. 189.
- Watt, Moustrooper, xviii. 177.
- Waugh, Rev. John, at Dunbar battle, xviii. 138; description of, 202, 203.
- Wealth, true, xii. 269, 282.
- Weber, Queen's foster-brother, in Insurrection of Women, iii. 266, 278; in National Guard, iv. 106; Queen leaving Vienna, 342.
- Weber, cited, v. 206 n.; vii. 372 n.
- Wedell, General, at Leuthen, x. 58; Saxony, 171; is sent against Soltikof, 218; foiled in the battle of Züllichau, 220-223; marches towards Frankfurt, 231; at siege of Dresden, 442; becomes War-Minister, 202.
- Wedell, Leonidas, at Elbe-Teinitz, viii. 377, 378; x. 220.
- Wegführer, cited, v. 46 n.
- Wehla, General, enters Saxony, x. 292; at siege of Dresden, 297; captured by Prince Henri at Hoyerswerda, 327.
- Wehlau, vi. 319.
- Weibterweue, vi. 259.
- Weimar, Bernhard of, in Thirty-Years War, xvi. 383; xvii. 71.
- Weimar, Duke of, assists Schiller, xx. 149; beneficent to men of letters, xvi. 382; what he did for the culture of his nation, xii. 278.
- Weimar and its intellectual wealth, xv. 58.
- Weingarten, senior and junior, ix. 277.
- Weinheim, vi. 499.
- Weinsberg, siege of, v. 251 n.; vi. 259.
- Weissenbourg, lines of, iv. 383.
- Weissenberg, battle of, v. 268, 278; vi. 431.
- Weissenborn, ix. 196.
- Weissenburg, lines of, viii. 336.
- Weissenfels, x. 6.
- Weissenfels, Johann Adolf, Duke of, vi. 86, 93, 150, 159, 206, 410, 411, 466; viii. 342; interview with Friedrich, 349; marches to join the Austrians, 366, 376; sends Saxe to waylay Einsiedel, 381; help to Prince Karl in invasion of Silesia, 426, 446; in junction with the Austrians, 450, 453, 454; Hohenfriedberg, 456, 458, 462, 468.
- Weiss, Theresa. See Heyne.
- Welden, Colonel, at Bristol siege, xvii. 317.
- Welf Sovereigns, the, viii. 252.
- Welfs, the, vi. 375.
- Wells, Rev. Mr., notice of, xvii. 90.
- Welmia, near Lobositz, ix. 341.
- Welser, Philippine, xiv. 269.
- Welsh war, xvii. 310; ended, 323; disturbances, xix. 332; villages, ii. 12.

- Wenck, cited, xi. 175 n.
 Wenda, settling in Europe, v. 56, 64; converted to Christianity and civilization, 69, 71, 78.
 Wentworth, Sir John, fined £1000, xviii. 134.
 Wentworth, Sir Peter, in the Rump, xviii. 293.
 Wentworth, General, at Carthage, vii. 481, 483, 484.
 Wenzel (or Wenzel), the young Bohemian King, v. 118, 132; killed in Olmütz, x. 96.
 Wenzel, Kaiser, v. 141, 144, 149, 151-157.
 Werben, vi. 413.
 Verner, Life and Writings of, xiii. 84-141; drama of the Söhne des Thals, 21; glimpses of hidden meaning, 110; prophetic aspirations, 118; his mother's death, 115; intercourse with Hoffmann, 117; Kreuz an der Ostsee, 118; Martin Luther, oder die Weihe der Kraft, 121; his repeated divorces, 125; his dislike for modern Protestantism, 127; becomes a Catholic, 130; death, 132; questionable character, 133; melancholy posthumous fragment, 138.
 Werner, General, ix. 428; at Landshtut, x. 314, 333; rescues Colberg, 490; defends Belgard, xi. 40; again at Colberg, 63; taken prisoner and carried to Petersburg, 65; liberated, returns home, 128.
 Werthern, Herr Graf von, ix. 90.
 West, Colonel, at Inverkeithing fight, xviii. 234.
 West, Gilbert, viii. 328.
 West-Indian Colonies sinking into ruin, xvi. 294; whose the "proprietaryship" of them, 316, 320; Tornado, ii. 76.
 Westermann in August Tenth, iv. 143; purged out of the Jacobins, 393; tried, guillotined, 398.
 Westminster Hall, riots in, xvii. 118, 317.
 Weston, Henry, Cromwell's Letter to, xviii. 333.
 Westphalen's, Herr, Leitmeritz Journal, ix. 468, 469; cited, 467 n.
 Westphalia, Treaty of, v. 282; vi. 402; savage condition of, v. 301; hams, 301.
 Westrow, Tom, notice of, xviii. 246, 247.
 Wettin line of Saxon Princes, xvi. 356.
 Wexford besieged, xvii. 468; propositions for surrender of, 478; stormed, 476.
 Whalley, Captain, at Cambridge, xvii. 129; Major, commended, 150, 161; meets the King, 264; guards him, 293; at his trial, 400; Commissary-General in Scots War, xviii. 102; skirmishes with the Scots, 107, 108; wounded at Dunbar, 139; his letter to Governor Dundas, 152; in Fife, 240; at Conference at Speaker's, 270-273; removes the Mace, 421; Major-General, xix. 19 n.; on Committee of Kingship, 131; in favor of Kingship, 217; one of Cromwell's Lords, 236.
 Wharton, Duke, character of, xvii. 352.
 Wharton, Lord, a Puritan, xvii. 197, 288; his character, 349, 505; Cromwell's letters to, 350, 505; xviii. 149, 246; xix. 364.
 Wharton manor-house, xvii. 350.
 Whelocke, Abraham, the Orientalist, App. xix. 307.
 Whiggamore raid, xvii. 246, 355.
 Whitaker, Historian, mistake by, xvii. 26 n.
 White, Major, at Dunbar, xviii. 128.
 White of Selborne, xiv. 398.
 Whitehall, Cromwell removes to, xviii. 889.
 Whitfield, Rev. Mr., x. 85.
 Whitlocke, Balstrode, of Council of State, xvii. 404; Cromwell's present to, xviii. 256; at Conference at Speaker's, 271-274; Cromwell consults with, 285; goes to Sweden, 389 (and App. xix. 369); in Cromwell's First Parliament, 399; his quarrel with Cromwell, 490; in Cromwell's Second Parliament, xix. 103; on Committee of Kingship, 130, 138; and Cromwell on Kingship, 161; at Installation, 222; one of Cromwell's Lords, 236; Cromwell's letter to, 367.
 Whole, only in the, can the parts be truly seen, xiv. 67.
 Wholeness and healthy unconsciousness, xv. 15, 143, 158, 344, 358.
 Wickliffe, /com of, xii. 404; Beza's article on, 405; Fuller on disinterment of, 407.
 Widdrington, Sir Thomas, at Conference at Speaker's, xviii. 271-274; Keeper of Great Seal, 489; elected Speaker, xix. 114; at Installation, 221.
 Wied, General, with Friedrich at Burkerdorf, x. 137-144; sent with reinforcements into Saxony, 156, 164.
 Wieland, xiii. 45.
 Wiesensthal, vi. 483.
 Wieskau, Camp of, viii. 437.
 Wigan Moor, Scots Army at, xvii. 331.
 Wight, Charles I., at Isle of, xvii. 284, 288.
 Wiga, Friedrich Wilhelm's taxes on, v. 341.
 Wilde, Chief Baron, notice of, xix. 373; Cromwell's letter to, 378.
 Wilderspin, xvi. 459.

- Wildman, Mr., in Cromwell's First Parliament, xviii. 398; opposed to Cromwell, 447; seized plotting, is put in Chepstow Castle, 484.
- Wilhelm, Bishop of Riga, v. 198.
- Wilhelm of Hessen, v. 286, 276.
- Wilhelm of Meissen, xvi. 367.
- Wilhelm Meister's Apprenticeship and Travels*, xiii. 290-299; Travels, extract from, xvi. 410.
- Wilhelm Tell*, Schiller's, truthfulness of, xx. 170; scene of Gessler's death, 174.
- Wilhelm, Viceroy of Hessen, viii. 119, 237, 240, 263, 300; and his Hessians, 263, 416; ix. 301; entertains Belleisle at Cassel, viii. 398; consents to be neutral, 416; in Fyrmont, ix. 32; death of his Brother, 149; lodges Voltaire, 239.
- Wilhelm the Rich, Markgraf of Meissen, v. 149.
- Wilhelm, Prince Margraf, death of, viii. 352.
- Wilhelmina, Frederika Sophie, v. 22, 32, 88, 187, 303, 439; her Book, with its shrill exaggerations, yet earnest veracity, 310, 328; vi. 27, 509; her Portrait as a child, v. 360; her account of Czar Peter's visit, 366, 370; recollections of Wusterhausen, 389; love for her Brother, 393; proposed marriage with the Prince of Wales, 427, 466; vi. 80, 173; interview with George I., v. 433; her notion of Grumkow and the Old Dessauer, vi. 16; account of Franke the Pietist, 66; her Brother's visit to King August, 72; August's visit to Berlin, 80; Wilhelmina's several ineffectual Suitors, 83, 128, 150; illness, 97, 112, 142; her sister Louisa's marriage, 110; her Father's violent ill-usage, 112, 125, 147; anxiety about her Brother, 149; is to be married out of hand, 150; worn down by agitations, 159; Friedrich of Baireuth, 160, 309; troubles with her mother, 163, 447; Dr. Villa, 164; her Brother talks of flight, 166; prematurely saluted as Princess of Wales, 174; Katte's unwise worship, 226; no marriage with England, 226; her Brother's attempted flight, and arrest, 272; his letters burnt, and fictitious substitutes written, 274; her Father's furious rage, 279; close prisoner in the Berlin Palace, 284, 310; her pity for poor Katte, 296; to marry the Prince of Baireuth, 309; her distracted consent, 311; preparations for betrothal, 312; the Prince Introduced, 314; a Bride these six months, 354; her magnificent wedding, 357; meeting with her Brother, 361; opens her heart to her Father, 364; a grand problem coming for her, 381, 434; letters from her Brother, 388, 451, 484, 486, 490; helps the Salzburg Protestants, 409; her Father's visit, 434; her inauspicious visit to Berlin, 447, 452; meetings with her Brother and his Bride, 447, 453; difficult meeting with him on his way to Philipsburg, 484; he visits her at Baireuth, strangely altered, 507; vii. 195; disappointed with his manner, 197; return-visit to Berlin, 254; truest of magnetic needles, but so sensitive and liable to deflection, 255; Karl Albert's passage through Baireuth, viii. 116; account of his Coronation, 118, 124; receives Madame de Belleisle, 121; meets the new Empress, 123; receives the Duchess of Württemberg, 124, 362, 389; visits Friedrich, ix. 49; her daughter married, 77; at the Berlin Carrousel, queen of the scene, 103; returns home, 129; serious illness, 150; letters from Friedrich, 182; kindness to Voltaire, 238, 239; in the neighborhood of war, 427, 477; x. 202; confers Knighthood on Colonel Mayer, ix. 428; letters from Friedrich, 478, 479, 515, 532-534; x. 22; hopes for peace, ix. 508; a noble sisterly affection in her, vehemently trying the impossible, 522; correspondence with Voltaire, 523, 528, 530; Friedrich's Eptre à ma Sœur, 524, 528; her answer, 534; frantic letter to her Brother, 540; visited by Prince Henri, x. 101; Friedrich's esteem and love for her, 115; his grief at her death, 164, 185; cited, v. 23 n.
- Wilhelmthal, battle of, xi. 145.
- Wilke, vi. 322.
- Wilkie, Sir David, portrait of Knox, xii. 417.
- Wille's Engraving of Friedrich, vii. 151 n.
- Willelmus Conqueror, xii. 65, 187; a man of most flashing discernment and strong lion-heart, 207; not a valorous fighter, but a valorous governor, 234.
- Willelmus Sacrista, xii. 50, 63, 72, 80, 92.
- William Conqueror's Home Office, ii. 355; what England owes to him, v. 336.
- William the Conqueror, xix. 395.
- William Count of Holland, "Pope's Kaiser," v. 105.
- William, Dutch, ii. 393; v. 46, 49, 50, 292, 295; vii. 232; xi. 383.
- William Rufus, xii. 234, 238; the quarrel of, and Anselm a great one, 239; and his Parliaments, 239.

- Williams Archbishop of York, xvii. 118; notice of, 373; in Wales, 374; Cromwell's letter to, 375.
- Williams, Sir Trevor, to be taken, xvii. 314, 315.
- Williams, Sir Hanbury, his first audience with Friedrich, ix. 83; bits of acrid testimony, but with fatal proclivity to scandal, 85, 89; knows his Cicero by heart, 114; his opinion of Prussia, 157; wandering continental duties, 239, 242; negotiations and bribings at Petersburg, 290, 291; all his intriguing come to nothing, 293, 294; his account of the Czarina, 294, 295; mentioned also, 473.
- Willich, Pastor, killed by the Poles, xi. 315.
- Willingham, Mr., letter to, xvii. 104.
- Willis, Sir Richard, notice of, xviii. 396; spy, xix. 359.
- Willoughby of Parham, Lord, at Gainsborough, xvii. 148; letter to Cromwell, 155; complained of, 175.
- Wilmanstrand, siege of, vii. 371.
- Wilmington, Lord, ix. 438.
- Wilmot, Earl Rochester, escapes, xviii. 487; xix. 76.
- Wilson's, Professor, generous encouragement of Sterling, li. 146.
- Wimpfen, Girondin General, iv. 312, 321.
- Winceby. See Battle.
- Winchester, Cromwell's summons to, xvii. 234; taken, xix. 338.
- Winchester, Marquis of, taken at Basing, xvii. 236, 231.
- Windbag, Sir Jabesh, xii. 130, 215.
- Windebank, Colonel, shot, xvii. 199.
- Windebank, Secretary, flies, xvii. 107.
- Windsor Castle, Army-council at, xvii. 304.
- Windsor, Parliament Army at, xvii. 135.
- Winkelmann, Johann, xiii. 348; vi. 413.
- Winkler, Professor, xi. 10.
- Winram, Laird, and Charles II., xvii. 473, 504.
- Winstanley, Leveller, xvii. 427.
- Winter Campaigns, xvii. 143.
- Wintfield goes to Russia, vii. 276, 362; how he got his wife, 367; at Mollwitz, 419; at Bothschloss, 489; on march through Saxony, viii. 842; in Silesia, 425; skilfully defends Landshut, brilliant effectuality shining through all he does, 449; with Friedrich as vanguard, 451, 454; Hohenfriedberg, 458, 462; Hohenersdorf, 510, 511; hastens after Prince Karl, 515; does not shine in learned circles, ix. 173; discovers the Saxon intrigues, and gains access to their state-documents, 276, 277; eager to attack, 305, 307; high hopes for Prussia, 308; in conference with Friedrich, 311; takes a tour in Bohemia, 312; interview with Polish Majesty, 333; negotiates terms with the Saxon Army, 363, 364; with Schwerin at Prag, 398, 404-419; badly wounded, 407; account of the battle, 416-419; with the Prince of Prussia, 483-485; received with honor by the King, 492; attacks Nadasti at Hirschfeld, 496; with Bavern watching the Austrians, 497; posted at Jäkeleberg, 500; suddenly attacked by Nadasti, 500; vigorous defence and death, 501; except Friedrich, the most shining figure in the Prussian army, 502; statue in Berlin, x. 167; mentioned also, ix. 64, 194.
- Winwood, M.P. for Windsor, xviii. 256.
- Wisdom, i. 51; one man with, stronger than all men without, xiii. 480; xiv. 342; xv. 7; how it has to struggle with Folly, xii. 72, 73, 77, 129, 306; the higher, the closer its kindred with insanity, 199; a wisest path for every man, 211; the Wise and Brave properly but one class, 232-236, 285; the life of the Gifted not a May-game, but a battle and stern pilgrimage, 278; can alone recognize wisdom, li. 363, 368, 389; intrinsically of silent nature, 439.
- Wise man, the, alone strong, xvi. 64, 76.
- Wiseest man at the top of society, xvi. 306; xii. 638; he and not a counterfeit, under penalties, 269; ii. 231.
- Wish, the Norse God, i. 251; enlarged into a heaven by Mahomet, 306.
- Wishart, George, Emery Tylney's Biography of, Knox's intercourse with, xii. 425; Knox on last days of, 428; death, 429.
- Wither, Poet, notice of, xviii. 246.
- Wit, modern, v. 166, 217; Hanbury's London, ix. 83.
- Wits, fashionable, xii. 147; Friedrich's Colony of French, ix. 189.
- Wittelsbach, Graf von, viii. 114.
- Wittenberg, siege of, v. 236; viii. 342, 348.
- Woberanow, General, seizes Sulkowski and his Polacks, x. 196, 197; with Dohna against the Russians, 216; his portable field-bakery, 218; urges an attack, 273; at battle of Züllichau, 221; his death, 222.
- Wogan, Colonel, his maraudings, xvii. 502, 503; xix. 345.
- Wolden, vi. 307, 332, 337, 343, 379; vii. 30.
- Wolf, irascible, great-hearted man, xvi. 8; and the Halle University, vi. 42; what Friedrich thought of him, vii. 60, 68.

- quits Marburg for his old place at Halle, 156, 320; ix. 96.
- Wolf, Pater, Kaiser's Confessor, v. 51.
- Wolfe, General, worth of, discerned by Pitt, x. 91; at capture of Louisbourg, 113; unsuccessful attempt on Quebec, 248, 249; descends the St. Lawrence for one more attempt, 335; captures Quebec, and with it Canada, 338; the proudest soldiering among the English for several generations, 336; excitement in England at the news of his victory and death, 340.
- Wolferstedt, Colonel von, beautifully defends himself in Torgau, and beautifully withdraws too, x. 287-290; on march for Dresden, 304, 308; captures a party of Austrian horse, 303; with Wunsch before Dresden, 304; they drive Kleeefeld from Torgau, 305; made prisoner at Maxen, 306.
- Wolfgang Wilhelm. See Pfalz-Neuburg.
- Wolfskierna, Swedish Envoy at Dresden, viii. 505.
- Wolmar, Melchior, xix. 414.
- Worseley, Sir Charles, in Council of State, xviii. 385 n.; on Committee of Kingship, xix. 148, 151. See Worseley.
- Woman's influence, i. 103.
- Women, patriotic gifts by, iii. 232; revolutionary speeches by, 240; insurrection of, 243; at Hôtel-de-Ville, 243; march to Versailles, 246 (see Mailland, Versailles); deputation of, to Assembly, 253; to King, 254, 256; corrupt the Guards, 255; would hang their deputy, 257; in fight, at Versailles, 268; selling sugar, cry of soap, iv. 266; "Megrease," 301; Héroult and Heroines, 329; are born worshippers, xii. 55; xv. 28.
- Women, First Blast against the monstrous Regiment of, xii. 428, 429.
- Wonder the basis of Worship, i. 51; region of, 204.
- Worcester, picture of the battle of, xvi. 352; Charles II. at, xviii. 245; state of, after battle, 254; xix. 357.
- Worcester, Marquis, his lands given to Cromwell, xvii. 292; author of Century of Inventions, 293; xviii. 221.
- Words, slavery to, i. 41; word-mongering and motive-grinding, 123.
- Wordsworth, ii. 129; xx. 172.
- Work, man's little, lies not isolated, stranded, xv. 239; how it clutches hold of this solid-seeming world, 284; the mission of man, xvi. 50; world-wide accumulated, xii. 130, 149; endless hope in, 143, 190; all work noble, 150; and eternal, 152; the work he has done, an epitome of the Man, 154, 191; work is worship, 195, 225; all work a making madness sane, 200; is for all men, ii. 300, 302; a human deer the most complex and inarticulate of Nature's facts, 429; desirability of work, xii. 330; a captain of, vi. 8. See Labor.
- Workhouses in which no work can be done, xii. 4.
- Working Aristocracy, xii. 168, 172, 261, 265; getting strangled, 264; classes uneducated, and educated unworking, xvi. 126; genuine condition of the, 36, 65; perfect understanding equivalent to remedy, 40; statistics hitherto of little avail, 49; what constitutes the well-being of a man, 43, 50, 59; the poor man seeking work and unable to find it, 52; the best-paid workman the loudest in complaint, 59; need of government, 71; man, true education of the, ii. 322.
- Workmen, English, unable to find work, xii. 4, 20; intolerable lot, 202.
- Workshop of Life, i. 150. See Labor.
- World much of a bedlam, viii. 482.
- Worms, the venerable city of, xiv. 281; Luther at, i. 259; Treaty of, viii. 276, 294.
- Woronow, Countess of, Czar Peter's Mistress, x. 128.
- Woronow, Grand-Chancellor of Russia, xi. 233.
- Worseley, Colonel, a Major-General, xix. 19 n.
- Worship, transcendent wonder, i. 243; forms of, xii. 128; æsthetic theory of, 136; apolike, 149; the truest, 195, 224; practical, 226; many phases of, 344, 365, 389. See Hero-worship, Religion.
- Worth, human, and worthlessness, xii. 82; practical reverence for, ii. 239; xi. 187; the essence of all true "religions," ii. 357, 362. See Intellect, Pandarus.
- Wotton, Sir Henry, v. 257 n., 262, 267.
- Wrath, a background of, in every man and creature, xvi. 237.
- Wraxall, cited, vi. 60 n.; xi. 212.
- Wray, Sir John, notice of, xix. 212; Cromwell's letter to, 213.
- Wreche, Colonel, vi. 128, 236; his Wife and Friedrich at Cüstrin, 241, 246.
- Wretchedness, xiii. 306; xiv. 369.
- Writing Era, v. 12.
- Wulfstan, Archbishop, sermon on the state of England, xix. 427.
- Wunsch, of the Prussian Free-Corps, ix. 428; he distinguishes himself under Prince Henri, x. 203; Kunersdorf, 261, 266; marches into Saxony, 280, 290-294, 298; hastens to relief of Dresden, 302, 303; hears that Schmettau has capitulated, 304; delivers Torgau, and

- is lord of the Northern regions, 308; seemingly a high career before him, 309; with Finck at Maxen, 348, 348, 360, 364; tries to get the Cavalry away, but is obliged to surrender, 353; defends Glatz, xii. 431.
- Würbitz, fight of, viii. 426.
- Würmser burns Habelschwert, xi. 421.
- Württemberg, the Duke of, employs Schiller's Father, xx. 8; undertakes the education of Schiller, 10; not equal to the task, 28, 298.
- Württemberg, Duchess Dowager of, Wilhelmina's account of her at Frankfurt, viii. 118; and at Baireuth, 124; her reception bedroom at Berlin, 126; quarrels with D'Argens, 136; demands her son of King Friedrich, 289.
- Württemberg, Eberhard Ludwig, Duke of, vi. 248, 475; matrimonial and amatory iniquity, 248; is moved to repentance, 264, 313.
- Württemberg, Karl Alexander Duke of, vi. 254, 428, 475; vii. 10.
- Württemberg, Friedrich Eugen, viii. 137; ix. 77; he raises his arm against Excellency Broglio, 334; is at Hochkirch, x. 162; watching Loudon and Haddick, 226; at Sagan, 227; battle of Kunersdorf, 237, 266; wounded, 265; ill at Berlin, 321; at the Castle of Schwedt, seized by the Cossacks, 407; hastens to the assistance of Berlin, 408; marches into Saxony, 503, 506; despatches Colonel Kleist upon his brother, the reigning Duke, 506; at Rostock, xi. 38 n.; with Heyde defending Colberg, 63-67, 85, 86; gives his poor Wife great trouble, 276; becomes reigning Duke, 276, 377; mentioned also, x. 74; xi. 35 n., 108 n.
- Württemberg, Karl Eugen, Duke of, boyish gallantries, viii. 124; under the guardianship of Friedrich, 124, 289; Schiller's Duke, 127; parting letter from Friedrich, 318; marries Wilhelmina's Daughter, ix. 77; impossible to live with him, 77; xi. 345; at Kolin, ix. 464; his poor Wife, x. 202; his bitter enmity to Friedrich, 363; driven headlong out of Fulda, 364, 365; frightened homeward and out of the Wars altogether, 507.
- Würzburg, Bishop of, viii. 288.
- Wusterhausen, description of, v. 388; Treaty of, vi. 23, 80, 115; vii. 446; Tabagie at, vi. 34.
- Wyatt, Sir Dudley, notice of, xvii. 285, 286.
- Wylich, Captain, vii. 31; ix. 322, 323.
- Wyndham, Henry, x. 86.
- Wyndham, Miss Barbara, ix. 153; subsidy to Friedrich, x. 86-90.
- XXAVIER, Prince, his profane reveling during the siege of Prag, ix. 446; at the burning of Zittau, 467; with Broglio, x. 453; in Saxony, xi. 101; mentioned also, 237.
- Xenies, a German Damsel by Goethe and Schiller, xi. 119.
- YANKEE Transcendentalists, xii. 283; Nation, vii. 478.
- Yarmouth, Countess of, vii. 186.
- Year's-day, new, difference of style, xvii. 36 n.
- York city, relieved by Prince Rupert, xvii. 181; captured by Parliament Army, 186.
- York, Duke of, besieges Valenciennes, iv. 313; at Dunkirk, 362; xix. 292; escapes, xvii. 280; at Breslau, xi. 404.
- York House, meeting at, xix. 267.
- Yorke, Hon. Mr., papers burned, xvii. 283.
- Yorkshire, the Civil War in, xvii. 188.
- Young Men and Maidens, i. 109.
- Young, Arthur, at French Revolution, iii. 216-220.
- Young, Peter, tutor to James VI., xix. 408.
- Youth, Gift, iv. 434, 448.
- Youth and Manhood, xiii. 267; mud-bath of youthful dissipation, 280; vi. 75, 76. See Education.
- Ysenburg, Prince von, beaten by Soubise, x. 177; near Frankfurt-on-Mayn, 193; battle of Bergen, 196; death, 199.
- ZAMOISKI, xi. 249.
- Zanchy, Colonel, relieves Passage, xvii. 602; wounded, xviii. 32.
- Zastrow, Commandant, makes poor defence of Schweidnitz, which is captured by Loudon, xi. 70; letter from the King, who leaves him well alone for the future, 73, 75; at Amöneburg, 189.
- Zastrow, General, killed, ix. 330; xi. 75.
- Zedlitz, Minister of Public Justice, xi. 339; cannot pronounce sentence, as enjoined by the King, 444-446.
- Zeiller, Beschreibung des Boheim, cited, vii. 400 n.
- Zeitz, vi. 410.
- Zelle, v. 402.
- Zelter, cited, xi. 9 n.
- Zemzem, the sacred Well, i. 290.
- Zentha, battle of, vi. 263.
- Zero, the Right Honorable, ii. 282.
- Ziethen, Captain, vii. 9; at Rothschesse, 489; rises rapidly in favor, 490; in Moravia, viii. 134; at siege of Prag, 363; repulses Pandours at Tein Bridge, 367; decidedly a rather likable man, 368; at Elbe-Tointz, 375, 377; is with the Old Dessauer in Silesia, 390; takes message to Margraf Karl at Jägerndorf, 448; at Hohenfriedberg, 464; at Hennesdorf, 511; at Pirna, ix. 357; on march for Prag, 391; in battle, 410, 412; at Kolin, 454, 462; with Prince of Prussia, 483; with Bevern at battle of Breslau, x. 38; takes command of the Bevern wreck, 42; joins the King at Parchwitz, 42; Leuthen, 54, 59, 63; chases Prince Karl from Breslau, 70; Troppau, 94, 97; Olmütz, 102; meets Mosel's convoy, 103, 106; no efforts can save it, 107, 108; following Daun into Saxony, 142; at Hochkirch, 155, 158, 159, 161; nearly captured at Sorau, 316; reports the approach of Reichsfolk on Finck, 350; court-martial on Finck, 358; in battle of Liegnitz, 474, 475; has command of half the force at Torgau, 513, 514; takes a wrong road, 516; recovers it only not too late, 525, 526; with Friedrich in Silesia, xi. 42; at Camp of Bunzelwitz, 47; winter in Breslau, 87; once took the King sharply at his word, 372; in his old age the King tenderly compels him to sit down in his presence, 372, 373; a kind of demigod among the Prussians, 513; lives at Wusterau, Friedrich's friendly interest for him, 519, 520; mentioned also, 455.

Kiethen, Rittmeister von, xi. 515.

Zimmermann, Dr., vii. 69; viii. 321 n.; ix. 198; at Sans-Souci, xi. 321, 322; sketch of his life, 323-327; Dialogue with King Friedrich, 327-331; attends him in his last illness, 502; his unwise book, 502; can do no good and takes himself away, 505; cited, 323 n.

Zimmermann, Herr, the poor kidnapped carpenter, vi. 12.

Zinnow, Finance Manager, x. 307.

Zinzendorf, Count, viii. 506 n.

Zipa is pledged by Sigismund to the Polish Crown, xi. 298; taken back again by mere force, 299.

Ziaca, risen out of the ashes of murdered Huse, v. 145, 156; vi. 431; viii. 109; birth and burial-place of, 164; Tabor built by, 267.

Ziskowitz with Daun near Olmütz, x. 102, 103; Mosel's convoy ruined, 104, 105.

Zittau burnt by the Austrians, ix. 487.

Zöllner, v. 288; cited, 390 n.; vii. 335 n.; viii. 487 n.

Zorndorf, vi. 341, 346; environs, x. 125, 126; battle of, 127, 138.

Zuckmantel, a Moravian town, vii. 390.

Zweibrück, Reichs General, x. 101; pushes across the Metal Mountains, 141; in Pirna country, 141, 146; chased by Prince Henri, 203; again enters Saxony, 286; besieges Dresden, 295, 296-302; hurries off for Töplitz, 302; broken faith, 306; with Daun at Bautzen, 319; quits Dresden on the approach of Friedrich, 437.

